A SPOKESMAN FOR GEN.SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY COMMENDED THE U.S. NIGHT AIR FORCE THUNDERBOLT FIGHTER-BOMBER GROUPS FOR CONSTANT SUPPORT TO BRITISH-AMERICAN ARMIES ON THE BEACHES OVER THE CRITICAL 16-HOUR PERIOD ON TUESDAY. THE GROUPS ARE COMMANDED BY COLLANCE CALL, GAINESVILLE, TEX., AND GILBERT WERTENBACKER, JR., CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.

THE EIGHTH AIR FORCE'S HEAVY BOMBERS CUT MANY STRATEGIC RAILWAYS BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES IN THE FIRST THREE DAYS.

RECONNAISSANCE PICTURES SHOWED PARTICULARLY SEVERE DESTRUCTION AT FLERS, LAIGLE, ARGENTAN, LISIEUX, LAVAL AND NOIR.

A LARGE DOUBLE TRACK RAIL BRIDGE ACROSS THE LOIRE RIVER AT NANTES RECEIVED A DIRECT HIT IN THE CENTER AND ONE APPROACH WAS CUT. THREE LARGE DOUBLE TRACK BRIDGES AT FILLIERE, LA RICHE, AND CINQ MARS NEAR TOURS WERE HIT. A LARGE HIGHWAY BRIDGE OVER THE RIVER AT MONTJEAN RECEIVED SEVERAL DIRECT HITS. THE LATTER WAS DESTROYED IN 1940 BY RETREATING FRENCH ARMIES AND THEN REBUILT.

THE MAIN LINE DOUBLE TRACK BRIDGE AT ORLEANS WAS DEMOLISHED, THE CHIEF SPAN FALLING IN THE RIVER.

TWO AIRFIELDS ALSO WERE ATTACKED IN THE SAME PERIOD. FIVE DISPERSAL AREAS, A HANGAR, AND A BARRACKS WERE STRUCK ON A LARGE COMPARATIVELY NEW FIELD FOR TWIN-ENGINED CRAFT NEAR LORIENT. FIRES WERE STARTED IN AN AMMUNITION STORAGE AREA AND AT A REFUELLING POINT.

THE OTHER AIRFIELD WAS AT LEMANS WHERE TWO LARGE CONCENTRATIONS OF BOMBS WERE UNLOADED.

ON THE NORMANDY BEACHHEAD, (DELAYED)-(AP)-THE PRISONERS TAKEN HERE ARE AN UNIMPRSSIVE LOT AND OBVIOUSLY NOT UP TO THE STANDARD OF THE BEST RUSSIA-HARDENED GERMAN DIVISIONS, ALTHOUGH THEY'RE FIT ENOUGH AND SOME OF THE YOUNGER ONES MAKE AN EFFORT AT SHOWING A BIT OF NAZI ARROGANCE.

THE CAPTURED INCLUDED SEVERAL FOREIGNERS, FORMER PRISONERS IN GERMANY WHO HAD SEIZED NAZI OFFERS TO GET BETTER TREATMENT AND PAY AS SOLDIERS OF THE REICH. THEY WERE BY NO MEANS RELUCTANT TO SURRENDER PROMPTLY.

THIS WEAKNESS IS WELL-KNOWN TO THE NAZIS AND THEY TRY TO PUT THESE MEN IN SPOTS WHERE THEY CAN NOT DO MUCH HARM.

SOME CLAIMED THE GERMAN COMMAND HAD BEEN EXPECTING AN ATTACK IN THIS AREA RIGHT ALONG.

THAT THEY HAVE BEEN EXPECTING IT OVER THE PAST FEW MONTHS, OR AT LEAST WERE TRYING TO STRENGTHEN AN OBVIOUSLY WEAK POINT IN THEIR ARMOR, WAS EVIDENCED BY THE FACT THAT MANY OF THE MINES WERE NEWLY LAID, AND MOST OF THE BEACH STRONG POINTS THAT BEDEVILED OUR FORCES HAD BEEN PUT UP QUITE RECENTLY.

BY ROGER GREENE

ADVANCE ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, JUNE 7-(DELAYED)-(AP)-AS I WRITE IN THE LIVING ROOM OF A FRENCH CHATEAU A STEALTHY MAN HUNT IS GOING ON IN THE ROSE GARDENS AND BUSHES IMMEDIATELY OUTSIDE.

A FEW MINUTES AGO ONE OF OUR SOLDIERS CAME TO THE CHATEAU DOOR AND THEN STARTED BACK ON THE FRONT PATH. A SNIPER'S BULLETS KICKED UP DUST AROUND HIS FEET AND HE FELL PRONE IN A SHALLOW DITCH.

FROM A FRONT WINDOW A BRITISH CORRESPONDENT AND I WATCHED THE SOLDIER CRAWL DOWN THE PATH A SCANT DOZEN YARDS AWAY WITH THE SNIPER'S SHOTS TRAILING HIM UNTIL HE REACHED THE BRICK WALL AT THE END OF THE PATH.

NOW SCORES OF TROOPS ARE COMBING THE THICK BRUSH AROUND THE CHATEAU AND BULLETS ARE CRACKING LIKE POP CORN ALL AROUND.

LAST EVENING AFTER UNDERGOING 12 HOURS OF TERRIFIC ARTILLERY AND AERIAL BOMBARDMENT ON THE BEACH WHERE WE LANDED I CROUCHED ON A ROAD BETWEEN A BRICK WALL AND A JEEP FOR NEARLY TWO HOURS WHILE GERMAN SNIPERS WHO HAD LAIN DOGGO ALL DAY SENT TRACER BULLETS CRACKLING AROUND US. I GOT OUT IN AN ARMORED CAR PARKING MYSELF ON THE STEEL TOP PLATES AS WE RAN THE GANTLET THROUGH THE SHELL-BESPATTERED VILLAGE.

I SLEPT IN A SLIT TRENCH IN THE GARDEN OF THIS CHATEAU.

ONE OF THE GERMAN SNIPERS APPARENTLY LAY HIDDEN WITHIN WISPERING DISTANCE DURING THE NIGHT FOR HE BEGAN HIS SHOOTING FROM A NEARBY CLUMP OF BUSHES THIS MORNING.

FOR BREAKFAST THE KINDLY, GREY HAIRED WOMAN WHO OWNS THE CHATEAU BREWED US HOT TEA FROM OUR FIELD RATIONS AND APOLOGETICALLY PROVIDED US WITH A SLICE OF BLACK GERMAN BREAD WHICH THE NAZIS HAD LEFT BEHIND IN THEIR PANICKY FLIGHT LATE YESTERDAY.

EXCEPT FOR A DEEP-BURNING HATRED AMONG THE FRENCH IN THIS VILLAGE, THE GERMANS HAVE LEFT LITTLE ELSE.

"THEY TOOK MY EGGS, BUTTER, MEAT--EVEN FURNITURE," SHE SAID. "BUT THAT IS--HOW YOU SAY IN AMERICA--HOKAY? WE ARE SO HAPPY YOU HAVE COME, SO GLAD THE DREADFUL BOCHES HAVE GONE THAT NOTHING ELSE MATTERS."

SHE SAID THE GERMANS, 85 OF WHOMWERE BILLETED IN HER CHATEAU, ERE FILLED WITH FEAR WHEN THEY HEARD THE ALLIED INVASION GUNS HUNDERING YESTERDAY. THEY JABBERED, SHOUTED AND CURSED AND LEFT N A GREAT HURRY.

THIS DISPATCH IS WRITTEN ON THE GERMAN COMMANDANT'S DESK WITH HALF EMPTY BOTTLE OF NAZI RUM, A GAS MASK, A CIGARET, A HUNK OF LACK SAUSAGE AND SIGNS OF HASTY DEPARTURE IN EVIDENCE. CABINET RAWERS ARE PULLED OPEN, PAPERS LITTER THE FLOOR AND THE WHOLE ROOM OOKS AS THOUGH IT HAS BEEN RANSACKED BY A GANG OF BURGLARS.

EVEN THE RUM, TEMPTING AS IT IS TO OUR DRY THROATS AND WEARY BONES, S LEFT CAREFULLY UNTOUCHED. WE HAVE BEEN FULLY WARNED ON THE BOCHE'S NOTORIOUS TRICKS WITH BOOBY TRAPS.

THE MAN HUNT IS OVER. A STOCKY, BRONZED SERGEANT STRIDES INTO HE ROOM AND POINTS SIGNIFICANTLY TO THE WOODS OPPOSITE THE HATEAU WHENCE THE SNIPER'S BULLETS HAVE BEEN COMING.

"GOT HIM, THE BLIGHTER," HE SAYS, AND THEN WITH A GRIN, "WELL WHAT'S COOKING WITH YOU, YANK?"

BY WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

HEADQUARTERS 21ST ARMY GROUP, SATURDAY, JUNE 10-(AP)-FOUR TYPES OF GERMAN OFFSHORE OBSTACLES WHICH FIELD MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL INSISTED ON PLANTING OFF THE FRENCH COASTS WERE DESCRIBED IN DETAIL HERE TODAY.

THEY INCLUDED FOUR-FOOT-HIGH STEEL PYRAMIDS, STAKES OF SIX-INCH STEEL FOUR FEET HIGH, "HEDGEHOGS" MADE OF THREE TREE-TRUNKS DRIVEN DEEP INTO THE SAND AND COMING TO A MUTUAL POINT ABOUT EIGHT FEET ABOVE THE SEA-BED, AND SEVEN-FOOT STEEL GATES, WEIGHING A TON EACH, TAKEN FROM CAPTURED BELGIAN FORTIFICATIONS.

ALL THESE OBSTACLES WERE BELTED WITH MINES.

JUN 10 1944

ON SHORE THE DEFENSES CONSISTED NOT OF A REAL "WALL" BUT OF A SERIES OF MUTUALLY-SUPPORTING STRONG-POINTS.

SAPPERS, PERFORMING BRILLIANTLY, DISPOSED OF THOUSANDS OF THE SUBMERGED OBSTACLES, WHILE PRE-INVASION NAVAL AND AIR BOMBARDMENTS WERE SO SUCCESSFUL THAT THE SHORE DEFENSES WERE BEATEN DOWN AT MUCH LESS COST THAN HAD BEEN ANTICIPATED. ONLY A SMALL FRACTION OF THE TOTAL NUMBER OF GERMAN BATTERIES ON THE SELECTED COASTS WERE ABLE TO FIRE WHEN THE ALLIED TROOPS CAME WITHIN RANGE.

ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA THE GERMAN COASTAL OBSTACLES WERE IN BELTS 1,000 TO 2,000 YARDS DEEP, BACKED UP BY INUNDATED AREAS.

GERMAN PLANS APPARENTLY WERE BUILT ON THE BELIEF THAT THESE WOULD DELAY THE ALLIES SUFFICIENTLY TO PIN THEM UNDER SUCH HEAVY SHORE FIRE THAT THE ASSAULT COULD BE BEATEN OFF.

ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN PRESS

ON THE BEACH AT NORMANDY, JUNE 8-(DELAYED)-MEN AND SUPPLIES FOR THE FINAL SHOWDOWN ON SOME EUROPEAN BATTLEFIELD FLOWED SWIFTLY IN A MOUNTING STREAM TODAY ACROSS THE BEACHES BOUGHT AND PAID FOR WITH AMERICAN LIVES AND SKILL IN THE PAST TWO DAYS.

WHILE THE ARMY FOUGHT ITS WAY INLAND, THE NAVY AND ENGINEERS HAD THEIR FIRST REAL CHANCE TO ORGANIZE SUPPLY LINES ACROSS THE SHORES THAT WERE BATTLEGROUNDS RIGHT UP TO TODAY.

"THIS IS THE FIRST CHANCE WE'VE HAD TO WORK, BUT IT'S STARTED NOW AND I THINK WE CAN PUT THE STUFF IN AS FAST AS IT'S NEEDED AND CAN BE USED," A COMBAT SUPPLY OFFICER SAID THIS AFTERNOON.

MOST OF THE BEACH OBSTACLES HAVE BEEN CLEARED AWAY, ALTHOUGH DETONATION CHARGES STILL ARE COMPETING WITH THE BANG AND CLATTER OF THE FIELD ARTILLERY. IN THE BLUFF BEYOND BULLDOZERS HAVE CUT SEVERAL NEW EXITS FROM THE BEACH SO THAT ORIGINAL ROADS NOW BECOME MORE THAN A DOZEN.

OLD ROADS UP TO THE BLUFF HAVE BEEN IMPROVED AND SOME NEW ONES CUT, SO THE ARTILLERY AS WELL AS TANKS AND THE HEAVIEST CONSTRUCTION AND SUPPLY VEHICLES ARE ABLE TO ROLL IN FROM THE LSTS AND RHINO FERRIES.

MEN WORKING AT CLEARING THIS BEACH ARE SNIPED AT ONLY RARELY NOW, AND THERE HAS BEEN NO SHELL FIRE FOR HOURS. ALTHOUGH MINES STILL ARE A MENACE, THERE ARE PLENTY OF PATHS THROUGH THEM.

THE TRAFFIC ISN'T ALL ONE WAY--THE WOUNDED COME BACK BY LITTER OR ON FOOT TO TESTIFY TO THE QUALITY OF THE GERMAN RESISTANCE.

ONE BATCH OF SIXTY GERMAN PRISONERS TOLD OF KILLING THEIR COMMANDER IN ORDER TO SURRENDER, BUT THERE'S BEEN NO SIGN THAT WAS ANYTHING BUT AN ISOLATED CASE.

JUN 10 1944

PRISONERS STILL ARE COMING IN--IN SIZEABLE BUNCHES--AND SOME CLAIM THAT THE RESISTANCE AT THIS PARTICULAR POINT IS PARTICULARLY ROUGH BECAUSE THEY KNEW THREE DAYS AGO WHEN WE WERE COMING.

BUT IT SEEMS MORE LIKELY THAT THE DIVISION WHICH HELD THIS SECTOR HAPPENED TO BE ENGAGED IN MANEUVERS, WHICH HELPED THEIR DEFENSES, SINCE THEIR WEAPONS AND MEN WERE IN POSITION FOR THAT. FURTHER EXAMINATION OF THE BEACH DEFENSES TESTIFIES TO THEIR NEWNESS, AS DID THE PRESENCE OF A CONCRETE MIXER AND STEEL RODS IN STACKS RIGHT DOWN BY THE SHORE, WHERE APPARENTLY THEY HAD BEEN USED TO FASHION STILL MORE REINFORCED PILLBOXES AND CASEMENTS.

THERE ARE A GOOD MANY FRENCH CIVILIANS REMAINING IN THE VILLAGES AND ON THE FARMS, EVEN SOME YOUNG MEN. A BRITISH MAJOR DROPPED IN ON ONE OLD WOMAN SWEEPING GLASS FROM THE FLOOR OF HER SHELL-DAMAGED COTTAGE AND ASKED HER HOW THE GERMANS BEHAVED. SHE SAID "VERY WELL, UNTIL THEY HEARD THE AMERICANS WERE COMING. THEN THEY BECAME ARROGANT."

THE GERMANS' EXTENSIVE USE OF SNIPERS IS COPIED FREELY FROM THE JAPANESE BOOK. THEY LEFT THE SNIPERS BEHIND IN TUNNELS, HIDDEN IN HOUSES OR DITCHES OR IN TREES. THOSE KILLERS LAY QUIET UNTIL THE FIRST TROOPS PASSED AND THEN SHOT INTERMITTENTLY, OFTEN CLAIMING SEVERAL LIVES BEFORE BEING FERRETED OUT. SOMETIMES AFTER A DOZEN OR SO HAD BEEN CLEARED OUT FROM ORCHARD OR HILLSIDE POCKETS, OTHERS WOULD BEGIN TO SHOW UP LATER.

THE GERMANS CONTINUED TO USE ARTILLERY AND MORTARS ALONG THE FRONT LINES, ALTHOUGH THEY ARE NO LONGER HITTING THE BEACHES. ONE POSITION WAS PLASTERED BY A FIERCE BOMBARDMENT FROM 88S LAST NIGHT, A FEW HOURS AFTER THE TROOPS MOVED IN, AND CASUALTIES RESULTED. THE CASUALTIES WERE HIGHER AMONG THE OFFICERS BECAUSE THE SNIPING NATURALLY WAS CENTERED ON THEM.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE 21ST ARMY GROUP, JUNE 9-(AP)-AMERICAN TROOPS HAVE CUT THE CHERBOURG-CARENTAN BROAD GAUGE RAILWAY IN A STEADY BUILDUP OF THE BRIDGEHEAD, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY.

THEY ALSO CROSSED THE CARENTAN-CHERBOURG ROAD, AND GAINS HAVE BEEN MADE SOUTHWEST OF BAYEUX.

IN THE AREA WHERE THE BRITISH ARE BITTERLY ENGAGED, VIOLENT FIGHTING IS RAGING AND THE GERMANS ARE MAKING AN ALL-OUT EFFORT TO THROW OFF BRITISH ATTACKS.

ENEMY STRONGPOINTS PREVIOUSLY BY-PASSED HAVE BEEN WIPED OUT.

IN THE BAY OF SEINE, FRANCE, JUNE 8 (DELAYED)-REAR ADMIRAL JOHN L. HALL JR., COMMANDING THE AMPHIBIOUS ASSAULT FORCE WHICH LANDED TROOPS IN THE TOUGHEST SECTION OF THE WHOLE NORMANDY INVASION FRONT SAID TODAY THAT "THINGS ARE GOING PRETTY WELL, NOW."

COMING FROM THE WHITE-HAIRED ADMIRAL, A CONSERVATIVE VIRGINIAN, THIS STATEMENT ALMOST APPROACHES OPTIMISM REGARDING A SOMEWHAT CONFUSED SITUATION.

THE ADMIRAL CITED A CASE WHERE 60 GERMANS SURRENDERED AFTER SHOOTING THEIR COMMANDING OFFICER WHO HAD REFUSED TO SURRENDER, AND SAID IT WAS A GOOD SIGN OF A BREAK IN GERMAN MORALE.

HALL, RETURNING FROM AN INSPECTION OF THE ASSAULT ARMADA, TOLD CORRESPONDENTS HERE HE WOULD NOT DELAY REINFORCEMENTS BECAUSE THINGS WERE "TOUGHER THAN IT HAD BEEN THOUGHT THEY WOULD BE,", BUT ADDED HE NEVER HAD ANY IDEA THAT THE AREA ASSIGNED TO HIM WOULD NOT BE A TOUGH JOB.

A STUDY OF THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE COASTLINE, HE SAID, INDICATED THE TOUGHNESS, AS THE HILLS AND CLIFFS GAVE THE GERMANS AN OPPORTUNITY TO BUILD THICK CONCRETE PILLBOXES.

"BECAUSE OF THE ANGLE OF FIRE IT WAS HARD FOR OUR GUNS TO GET THESE PILLBOXES DESPITE RECONNAISSANCE PHOTOGRAPHS," HE SAID.

"WE RAN INTO A SITUATION WORSE THAN IMAGINED AND WORSE THAN ANYTHING PREVIOUS IN THIS WAR," HE SAID.

"WE LOST MEN, A LOT OF TANKS WERE KNOCKED OUT BUT A GOOD MANY OF THEM GOT ASHORE AND WE ARE DOING ALL RIGHT NOW."

THE ADMIRAL SAID THE TRANSPORTS AND OTHER SHIPS HAD GOTTEN IN FARTHER THAN HE HAD HOPED. AT SALERNO, HE SAID, HE SAW HIS SHIPS HIT FARTHER OUT IN DARKNESS THAN THEY WERE HERE IN DAYLIGHT. HE GAVE THE CREDIT FOR THIS TO THE AERIAL AND SURFACE BOMBARDMENT OF THE FRENCH COAST.

THE ADMIRAL SAID HE HAD EXPECTED A LOT MORE TROUBLE FROM MINES, AND ADDED THAT THE GERMAN AIR REACTION WAS LESS THAN HE ANTICIPATED. HE SAID IT WAS EVEN LESS THAN THAT EXPERIENCED AT THE SALERNO AND SICILIAN LANDINGS.

WITH CANADIAN FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 8-(DELAYED)-IT IS A SLUGGING MATCH WITH TANKS SHOOTING UP EACH OTHER FROM 200 YARDS AND LESS AND INFANTRY BATTLING OVER FIELDS AND THROUGH WOODS ALONGSIDE THE TANKS.

IT IS THE BIGGEST ARMORED BATTLE ON THIS FRONT SO FAR AND THESE CANADIAN TANK CREWS AND INFANTRYMEN PROVED THEIR METTLE IN THE FIRST STERN TEST OF BATTLE. A BRITISH COLONEL SAID TODAY THAT THE CANADIAN CHAPS WERE BATTLING LIKE MADMEN.

SEVERAL MORE GERMAN POCKETS WITHIN THE BEACHHEAD HAVE BEEN CLEANED AND CONCENTRATED ATTACKS BY ARTILLERY AND NAVAL GUNS ARE BEING MADE UPON OTHERS.

BRITISH WARSHIPS ARE BEING USED LIKE FIELD GUNS AS THIS COMBINED OPERATION MOVES TO A NEW CLIMAX WHILE GUNS FLAME AND ROAR ALONG THE FRONT.

A REGULAR GUERRILLA WAR IS GOING ON IN SOME TOWNS AND FARMS IN THE BEACHHEAD AS SOME LURKING SNIPERS ARE FOUND AND DRIVEN FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE.

LITTLE TOWNS ARE IN A TURMOIL AS THE CANADIANS GO TO WORK WITH GRENADES, TOMMYGUNS AND RIFLES.

with british and canadian forces in france, june 9--(delayed)--a tense game of thrust and counter-thrust, of shrewd maneuver at the front and a build up of reinforcements in the rear, continued today in the area of our bridgehead between the sea and [redacted] bayeux-caen road.

no large-scale attack has been attempted by either side. for the first time since our landing the battle area is comparatively quiet.

sudden hush has the quality of overpowering drama.

our troops this morning pushed a limited wedge across the caen-bayeux road in one sector and in another they were forced to make a slight retirement leaving the tactical situation largely unchanged.

the enemy is maintaining steady pressure all along the front prob for weak spots with battle groups of several tanks. these tanks decline battle, their job obviously being reconnaissance.

in the area of caen the situation is static. the enemy has manned the defenses of this ancient town. expertly constructed field emplacements representing many months of work abound in the fields sur ounding the place indicating that the germans have long regarded it as a key point in their defense plan for france.

meanwhile on our side of the line the pace of the buildup of men and equipment is most satisfactory. beach crews are working like beavers in some sectors under long-range enemy fire, but nothing seems to matter to these men except that the tanks and funs roll off and up to the front.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE LONDON BUREAU OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS LEARNED TODAY FROM HENRY B. JAMESON, AP WAR CORRESPONDENT WITH THE ALLIED FORCES, THAT HE HAD BEEN SLIGHTLY WOUNDED DURING THE LANDING OPERATIONS.

(TO THE FOLLOWING DISPATCH JAMESON APPENDED THIS NOTE: "THESE TWO TAKES ARE ALL I HAD TIME TO WRITE BEFORE I TRANSFERRED TO ANOTHER SHIP BRINGING ME TO PORT. MY INJURIES ARE NOT SERIOUS, BUT HAVE INCAPACITATED ME FOR FURTHER CARRYING OUT MY ASSIGNMENT AT THE PRESENT TIME. WILL CONTACT OFFICE QUICKEST WITH MORE COPY." NO FURTHER WORD HAS BEEN RECEIVED FROM HIM, LONDON SAID.

ABOARD ADMIRAL HALL'S FLAG SHIP, JUNE 8-(DELAYED)-(AP)-I WATCHED THE FIRST 14 HOURS OF THE ALLIED INVASION OF FRANCE FROM CLOSE RANGE ABOARD A FLAT-BOTTOMED RHINO FERRY THAT HAD TO MAKE FOUR RUNS FOR IT BEFORE BEING ABLE TO LAND ON THE MOST BITTERLY CONTESTED BEACH.

BECAUSE OF SHOULDER AND SLIGHT LEG INJURIES I WAS FORCED TO LEAVE THE CRAFT AFTER THE THIRD ATTEMPT, WHICH BROUGHT US UNDER BLISTERING FIRE FROM THE ENEMY'S CAMOUFLAGED COASTAL BATTERIES BEFORE THEY WERE KNOCKED OUT BY THE TERRIFIC NAVAL BOMBARDMENT.

THROUGHOUT THE INITIAL STORMING OF THE BEACHES WE FLOATED AND MANEUVERED IN A WATER "NO MAN'S LAND" BETWEEN THE ALLIED BATTLESHIPS FIRING STEADILY OVER OUR HEADS AND THE COAST.

THREE TIMES DURING THE FIRST EIGHT HOURS OF THE INVASION WE PULLED TOWARD THE BEACH BUT EACH TIME WERE FORCED TO PULL BACK. ON THE THIRD TRY WE ACTUALLY HIT THE BEACH UNDER GERMAN FIRE AND LOST SOME EQUIPMENT NECESSARY FOR UNLOADING THE BARGE SO WE AGAIN PULLED OUT TO SAFER TERRITORY.

THERE WERE FOUR CASUALTIES--ONE FATAL--ON THE THIRD TRIP.

THIS TIME WE WERE CLOSE ENOUGH TO GET A CLEAR PICTURE OF THE BATTERED BEACH AND THE GERMAN CEMENT DEFENSE INSTALLATIONS BURIED IN THE HILLSIDES.

THE BARGE FINALLY WAS BEACHED WITH MOST OF ITS EQUIPMENT THE NEXT DAY.

WITH THE GLIDER MEN RETURNED TWO CREW MEMBERS OF A TOW PLANE WHICH WAS FORCED DOWN IN NORMANDY--LT.LEONARD BAER OF NEENAH, WIS.. AND SGT.JOSEPH KOZIK OF UNION CITY,N.J.

OTHER GLIDER PILOTS WHO RETURNED INCLUDED FLIGHT OFFICERS KENNETH

MCINTYRE OF WASHINGTON, D.C., LEON ROUNDS OF LAWTON, OKLA., AND AUSTIN PERKINS OF WEATHERFORD, TEX., AND LT. THOMAS BROWN OF SANGER, TEX.

A C-47 WITH BOTH MOTORS SHOT OUT BY GERMAN SNIPERS RELEASED A GLIDER OVER A LANDING ZONE AND THEN CRASHLANDED INTO THE CENTER OF A PITCHED BATTLE BETWEEN AMERICAN PARATROOPERS AND THE ENEMY CONCEALED IN A FOREST.

JUN 10 1944

BAER AND KOZIK TOLD THE STORY. WHEN THE PLANE LANDED, THE CREW FOUND UNITED STATES TROOPS BLAZING AWAY A DOZEN FEET ON EITHER SIDE OF THE PLANE.

"A PARATROOPER CAME UP AND BORROWED THREE FLAK SUITS," BAER SAID. "HE PUT ONE ON AND WRAPPED TWO OTHERS AROUND HIM, THEN WALKED TOWARD THE AREA. WHEN THE ENEMY FIRED, HE DROPPED BUT GOT UP ALMOST IMMEDIATELY AND DASHED WITH OTHER PARATROOPERS TO A NEW POSITION. THEY CLEANED OUT THE AREA."

KOZIK SAID HE "NEVER SAW GUYS LIKE THOSE PARATROOPERS. THEY'RE SO FULL OF GUTS THEY CAN'T BE BEATEN."

THE INCIDENT OCCURRED ON THE SECOND MISSION IN TWO NIGHTS FOR BAER OVER THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

RUTBERG, 28 YORK ST., WORCESTER,MASS., SAID A BURST OF FLAK CAUGHT THEIR PLANE RIGHT UNDER THE CHIN, KNOCKED OUT ONE ENGINE, AND RIDDLED THE GAS TANK. THEY MADE A FORCED LANDING IN THE CHANNEL ABOUT 10 MILES OFF CHERBOURG PENINSULA AND PILED INTO THE DINGHY WHICH THE CREW CHIEF, SGT.JACK L.BRECKENRIDGE, 97 COLUMBUS ST., GROVE CITY, OHIO, HAD IN THE WATER BY THE TIME THEY REACHED THE BACK DOOR. THE PLANE STAYED AFLOAT ABOUT 20 MINUTES.

THE CO-PILOT WAS LT.EMMETT GAULDING OF WINTER PARK, FLA., AND THE RADIO OPERATOR WAS SGT.HAROLD WORTH, 5520 CONCORD AVE., LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

"THE WAVES WERE ABOUT 20 OR 25 [illegible] WE A L G SICK AFTER ABOUT AN HOUR," RUTBERG SAID. "WE HAD RADIOED OUR POSITION AND SENT UP FLARES, BUT NOBODY WAS WATCHING OR LISTENING, I GUESS. ABOUT 3 A.M. THE BLACK HULK OF A WARSHIP WAS SIGHTED. WE WERE SO SICK AND WEAK AND COLD IT TOOK ALL OUR STRENGTH TO LOAD THE FLARE PISTOL AND PULL THE TRIGGER. WHEN WE DID THIS THE SHIP STARTED TO RAM US. THE COMMANDR LATER TOLD US HE THOUGHT WE WERE A GERMAN E-BOAT. WE SHOT ANOTHER FLARE AND SHOUTED 'AHOY' AND THEY LET DOWN THEIR LADDERS AND TOOK US ABOARD."

JUN 10 1944

TWO OTHER CREWS FIRST LISTED AS LOST IN TUESDAY NIGHT'S GLIDER LANDINGS HAVE BEEN RESCUED IN THE CHANNEL.

THEY WERE CAPT.E.G.OURS, JR., PILOT, OF ARSONS, W.VA.; LT.DAVID C.ADAMS, NAVIGATOR, 1469 GRAPE AVE., LAKEWOOD, OHIO; SGT.JAMES P. LONDON, JUNE 9-(AP)-THE MEN OF THE U.S. FIRST INFANTRY DIVISION AND HE BRITISH FIFTIETH NORTHUMBRIAN DIVISION WHO SPEARHEADED THE ALLIED NVASION FROM THE SEA INTO FRENCH NORMANDY WERE MEASURING UP TODAY TO HEIR GREAT TRADITIONS OF GALLANTRY.

FIGHTING IN THE VAN WAS NO NEW EXPERIENCE FOR THESE TROOPS. IT AS BEEN THEIR CUSTOM TO LEAD THE WAY. HEADQUARTERS HAS OFFICIALLY NNOUNCED BOTH NOW HAVE MADE EXCELLENT PROGRESS ON THE FIELDS OF FRANCE FTER SMASHING GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS.

THREE TIMES THE TWO DIVISIONS HAVE FOUGHT SIDE BY SIDE. THEY DID T BEFORE IN THE DESERTS OF NORTH AFRICA AND THEN IN THE MOUNTAINS OF ICILY. THE FIRST INFANTRY DIVISION FORMERLY WAS PART OF THE AMERICAN IFTH ARMY AND THE NORTHUMBRIANS PART OF THE BRITISH EIGHTH ARMY.

ORIGINALLY MOST OF THE BOYS IN THE FIRST CAME FROM THE EAST, HUNDREDS F THEM FROM BROOKLYN, BUT IT HAS HAD SO MANY REPLACEMENTS IT NOW IS N ALL-AMERICAN OUTFIT.

THE NORTHUMBRIAN DIVISION CONSISTS OF STURDY FIGHTERS FROM THE IND-SWEPT PASTURES OF ENGLAND'S NORTH LAKE COUNTRY.

(THE GERMAN CONTROLLED CALAIS RADIO, IN A BROADCAST RECORDED BY THE INISTRY OF INFORMATION, SAID LAST NIGHT THAT THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND AD NAMED THESE ALLIED FORMATIONS AS PARTICIPATING IN THE NORMANDY IGHTING: VIRE ESTUARY AND EAST COAST--U.S. FIRST, FOURTH AND 29TH NFANTRY DIVISIONS AND THE 506TH PARACHUTE REGIMENT; CAEN--BRITISH IXTH AIRBORNE DIVISION; ARROMANCHES--UNITS OF THE THIRD BRITISH AND HIRD CANADIAN INFANTRY).

MEN OF THE FIRST DIVISION ARE DETERMINED TO EQUAL THE RECORD OF THEIR REDECESSORS OF THE LAST WAR. IT'S A MAN-SIZED AMBITION, FOR THE FIGHTING FIRST" OF WORLD WAR I WAS THE FIRST AMERICAN DIVISION TO O INTO ACTION IN FRANCE. IT TOOK EVERY OBJECTIVE ASSIGNED TO IT URING 1917 AND 1918, AND CAPTURED 100 GERMAN PRISONERS FOR EVERY MAN HE GERMANS TOOK FROM THE DIVISION.

IN THIS WAR THE FIRST DIVISION LANDED IN NORTH AFRICA NOV. 8, 1942 ND TOOK ORAN. FOR MANY WEARY BATTLES IN TUNISIA IT WAS THE ONLY NFANTRY FORCE ON THE AMERICAN FRONT TO PREVENT A NAZI BREAK-THROUGH. HEN IT HELPED IN THE BATTLES WHICH BROKE THE GERMAN HOLD ON MATEUR ND BIZERTE AND ENDED HITLER'S NORTH AFRICAN HOPES.

IN SICILY LESS THAN TWO MONTHS AFTERWARD, THE DIVISION STOPPED HE HERMANN GOERING DIVISION BARELY 1,000 YARDS FROM THE LANDING EACHES AND THEN CAPTURED 18 TOWNS IN THE NEXT 37 DAYS.

IT LANDED IN ENGLAND NOV. 7, 1943. ITS TOTAL BATTLE CASUALTIES EFORE THE PRESENT ENGAGEMENT WERE LISTED AT 6,885.

THE NORTHUMBRIANS FOUGHT STUBBORNLY AT ARRAS AND ALONG THE YPRES-OMINES CANAL IN 1940, BUYING TIME FOR OTHER BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS ITHDRAWING AT DUNKERQUE.

IT BACK-STOPPED THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE SOUTH AFRICANS DURING FIELD ARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL'S LAST GREAT PLUNGE IN LIBYA, AND THEN BROKE HROUGH GERMAN LINES TO REJOIN THE EIGHTH ARMY ON EGYPT'S BORDERS. ATER IT HELPED PURSUE THE GERMANS ACROSS AFRICA, SICILY AND INTO TALY.

LONDON, JUNE 9-(AP)-TWO NINTH AIRFORCE GLIDER PILOTS WHO SCRAMBLED BACK WEDNESDAY OVER 12 MILES OF BATTLE-TORN FRANCE SAID TODAY THEY WERE CONVINCED THAT THE GERMANS DIDN'T HAVE THEIR BEST TROOPS GUARDING THE NORMANDY SECTION OF THE ATLANTIC WALL.

"THE GERMAN TROOPS WE SAW WERE VERY INSIGNIFICANT LOOKING," SAID CAPT.ROBERT STUBBS, 28, OF 1210 EAST 36TH ST., CHARLOTTE, N.C.

"THAT'S RIGHT," AGREED FLIGHT OFFICER AUSTIN PERKINS, 23, OF WEATHERFORD, TEXAS, "EVEN THEIR UNIFORMS WERE BAD."

JUN 10 1944

STUBBS TOLD THE STORY OF A SIX-FOOT AMERICAN WHO WENT BY GUARDING A GROUP OF NAZI PRISONERS, NONE MORE THAN FIVE FEET, FIVE INCHES TALL.

"SUPERMEN, AIN'T THEY," THE BIG SOLDIER SAID WITH A GRIN.

PERKINS AND STUBBS TOOK OFF SHORTLY AFTER DAWN WEDNESDAY TO FLY MEN AND SUPPLIES BEHIND THE BEACHHEADS IN GLIDERS. STUBBS LOAD WAS A TRAILER WITH GRAVE REGISTRATION BLANKS, LITTLE WHITE CROSSES AND SOME AMMUNITION. THEIR GLIDERS WENT OVER NORMANDY AT ABOUT 600 FEET WITH THE GERMANS FIRING SMALL ARMS AT THEM. STUBBS GLIDER WAS HIT TWICE, PERKINS' THREE TIMES.

JUN 10 1944

THEY BROUGHT THEIR GLIDERS IN ABOUT 12 MILES INLAND IN ROLLING PASTURE LAND, BUT STILL UNDER GERMAN MACHINE-GUN FIRE, AND WITH AT LEAST ONE 88-MILLIMETER GUN FIRING AT THEM.

"THE GERMANS SEEMED TO HAVE ALL THOSE FIELDS PRETTY WELL BRACKETED. THE BULLETS KNOCKED PLASTER OFF THE HOUSES AND BROKE TILES AS WE WALKED ALONG," STUBBS RELATED. "BUT IT DIDN'T SEEM TO BOTHER THE FRENCHMEN, WHO WAVED AT US, CALLED "BON JOUR" AND WENT ABOUT THEIR REGULAR WORK.

STOCKHOLM, JUNE 9-(AP)-A GERMAN REPORT, BEARING THE EARMARKS OF FANTASY, CLAIMED TODAY PLANS FOR GEN. EISENHOWER AND HIS STAFF MEETING IN A VILLA OUTSIDE BAYEUX, FRANCE, WERE UPSET WHEN A NAZI RADIO OPERATOR INTERCEPTED A SECRET MESSAGE ALLEGEDLY ASKING A SPECIAL ALLIED DETACHMENT IF EVERYTHING WERE SECURE FOR THE GENERAL'S ARRIVAL.

THE STORY, RELATED IN A BERLIN DISPATCH TO THE STOCKHOLM AFTONBLADET, WAS THIS:

EARLY WEDNESDAY MORNING A GERMAN LIEUTENANT TUNING A RADIO PICKED UP A CRYPTIC MESSAGE SAYING "SECURE LANDING FOR SPECIAL SHIP CARRYING ALLIGATOR." THE LIEUTENANT IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE REPLIED "IF ALLIGATOR CANNOT SWIM WE CAN'T GUARANTEE LANDING. RABBIT."

LATER IN THE DAY, THE STORY WENT, A NAZI TANK DETACHMENT PASSING A VILLA NEAR BAYEUX DISCOVERED AND CAPTURED AN AMERICAN FIELD RADIO OPERATOR, A SERGEANT, WHO SAID HE HAD ORDERS TO "AWAIT THE ARRIVAL OF SEVERAL HIGH STANDING PERSONS." IN MIDAFTERNOON ANOTHER MESSAGE WAS INTERCEPTED, SAID THE STORY, ASKING A LANDING GUARANTEE FOR "CHIEF," AND THE GERMAN REPLY WAS "SITUATION SAME. IF HEADQUARTERS PERSON CAN'T SWIM LANDING NOT GUARANTEED."

THE GERMANS SAID EISENHOWER FAILED TO VISIT THE BAYEUX VILLA.

LISBON JUNE 9-(AP)-THE NAZIS ARE COUNTING HEAVILY ON THE CZECHOSLOVAKIAN ARMS INDUSTRY TO MAINTAIN AN UNINTERRUPTED FLOW OF MUNITIONS TO THE WESTERN FRONT, JUDGING FROM ARTICLES APPEARING IN GERMAN PUBLICATIONS REACHING PORTUGAL.

NAZI PROPAGANDISTS ARE TAKING PAINS TO ASSURE THE GERMAN PUBLIC THAT ALL IS WELL AND THAT FACTORIES ARE HUMMING IN THE GREAT ARSENAL OF CENTRAL EUROPE--PARTICULARLY IN VIEW OF THE WIDESPREAD DESTRUCTION OF FACTORIES INSIDE GERMANY ITSELF.

AN ILLUSTRATED BROCHURE CIRCULATED THROUGHOUT GERMANY PICTURES CONDITIONS IN THE PROTECTORATE OF BOHEMIA AND MORAVIA, WHERE THE GREAT SKODA ARMS FACTORIES AND MOST CZECHOSLOVAKIAN INDUSTRY IS LOCATED, AS HIGHLY SATISFACTORY. FREEDOM FROM ALLIED BOMBING HAS LEFT THIS AREA "AN ISLAND OF PEACE IN WAR-TORN EUROPE," THE BROCHURE SAYS.

IT STRESSES THAT CZECHS ARE NOT CALLED ON FOR MILITARY SERVICE, THEREFORE WORKERS OF ALL AGES ARE CARRYING ON NORMAL OCCUPATIONS, LIVING IN UNBOMBED CITIES AND FINDING RECREATION IN UNBOMBED THEATERS AND CAFES.

THE BROCHURE ADMITS THERE WAS "SOME TROUBLE" IN WITH STUDENT DEMONSTRATIONS LATE IN 1939 AND AGAIN AFTER START OF THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN WAR, BUT INSISTS THINGS HAVE SETTLED DOWN NOW.

ILLUSTRATIONS SHOW PUPPET PRESIDENT EMIL HACHA AND MEMBERS OF HIS CABINET FUNCTIONING, NEW OFFERINGS OF CZECH PLAYERS IN UNDAMAGED BUILDINGS, NUMEROUS EXHIBITS AND SIMILAR EXAMPLES OF PEACETIME LIVING.

ALTOGETHER IT IS A PICTURE SO ATTRACTIVE MILLIONS OF GERMANS MUST WISH THEY COULD LIVE THERE INSTEAD OF IN THE MIDST OF THE RUINS OF SHATTERED CITIES. HOW MANY GERMANS HAVE BEEN EVACUATED IN THAT DIRECTION IS UNDISCLOSED, BUT A RECENT DECREE AUTHORIZING FACTORY MANAGERS TO MOVE NOT ONLY FACTORIES BUT THEIR ENTIRE PERSONNEL TO OUTSIDE POINTS, "INCLUDING THE PROTECTORATE," WOULD INDICATE MUCH GERMAN INDUSTRY HAS BEEN TRANSFERRED THERE.

IMPORTANCE OF THIS UNDAMAGED ARMS PRODUCING AREA IS EMPHASIZED BY FINANCIAL ARTICLES IN GERMAN NEWSPAPERS. THE DEUTSCHE ALLGEMEINE ZEITUNG, RATHER SARDONICALLY DISCUSSING THE NEW GERMAN "RUIN INDUSTRY," OUTLINES THESE ASPECTS:

A LIVELY NATIONWIDE BUYING AND SELLING OF RUINS HAS DEVELOPED. OWNERS, DISCOURAGED BY EXTENSIVE DAMAGE TO THEIR PROPERTIES, FREQUENTLY ARE WILLING TO SELL THEIR BUILDINGS AS WELL AS THEIR RIGHTS TO WAR DAMAGE COMPENSATION. DEALERS ARE IN THE MARKET FOR SALVAGE MATERIALS FROM COMPLETELY WRECKED STRUCTURES.

A NEW INDUSTRY IS ARISING BASED ON VARIOUS PROCESSES FOR TRANSFORMING RUBBLE INTO BUILDING BLOCKS OR PAVING MATERIAL.

A WHOLE NEW LEGAL CODE GOVERNING THE COMPLEXITIES OF THE VARIOUS KINDS OF WAR DAMAGE IS NOW IN EXISTENCE, WITH THOUSANDS OF LAWYERS HANDLING ONLY SUCH CASES.

A HUGE NEW SECTOR OF THE GERMAN BUREAUCRACY IS OCCUPIED EXCLUSIVELY WITH DETAILS OF EVACUATION, COMPENSATION, EMERGENCY LIVING ALLOWANCES, EMPLOYMENT AND TRANSFERS.

WASHINGTON, JUNE 9-(AP)-THE TEXT OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S CABLEGRAM TO AMBASSADOR MURPHY IN ALGIERS REGARDING EUROPEAN WAR REFUGEES AND HIS MEMORANDUM TO HEADS OF FIVE FEDERAL AGENCIES: (ABOUT 880)

THE CABLEGRAM:

"INFORMATION AVAILABLE TO ME INDICATES THAT THERE ARE REAL POSSIBILITIES OF SAVING HUMAN LIVES BY BRINGING MORE REFUGEES THROUGH YUGOSLAVIA TO SOUTHERN ITALY. I AM ALSO INFORMED THAT THE ESCAPE OF REFUGEES BY THIS ROUTE HAS FROM TIME TO TIME BEEN GREATLY IMPEDED BECAUSE THE FACILITIES IN SOUTHERN ITALY FOR REFUGEES HAVE BEEN OVERTAXED. I AM ADVISED THAT THIS IS THE SITUATION AT THE PRESENT MOMENT AND THAT ACCORDINGLY POSSIBILITIES OF INCREASING THE FLOW OF REFUGEES TO ITALY MAY BE LOST.

JUN 101944

"I UNDERSTAND THAT MANY OF THE REFUGEES IN SOUTHERN ITALY HAVE BEEN AND ARE BEING MOVED TO TEMPORARY HAVENS IN AREAS ADJACENT TO THE MEDITERRANEAN AND THAT EFFORTS ARE BEING MADE TO INCREASE EXISTING REFUGEE FACILITIES IN THESE AREAS. I AM MOST ANXIOUS THAT THIS EFFORT TO TAKE REFUGEES FROM ITALY TO AREAS RELATIVELY CLOSE BY BE INTENSIFIED.

JUN 101944

"AT THE SAME TIME I FEEL THAT IT IS IMPORTANT THAT THE UNITED STATES INDICATE THAT IT IS READY TO SHARE THE BURDEN OF CARING FOR REFUGEES DURING THE WAR. ACCORDINGLY, I HAVE DECIDED THAT APPROXIMATELY 1,000 REFUGEES SHOULD BE IMMEDIATELY BROUGHT FROM ITALY TO THIS COUNTRY, TO BE PLACED IN AN EMERGENCY REFUGEE SHELTER TO BE ESTABLISHED AT FORT ONTARIO NEAR OSWEGO, NEW YORK, WHERE UNDER APPROPRIATE SECURITY RESTRICTIONS THEY WILL REMAIN FOR THE DURATION OF THE WAR. THESE REFUGEES WILL BE BROUGHT INTO THIS COUNTRY OUTSIDE OF THE REGULAR IMMIGRATION PROCEDURE JUST AS CIVILIAN INTERNEES FROM LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRIES AND PRISONERS OF WAR HAVE BEEN BROUGHT HERE. THE EMERGENCY REFUGEE SHELTER WILL BE WELL EQUIPPED TO TAKE GOOD CARE OF THESE PEOPLE. IT IS CONTEMPLATED THAT AT THE END OF THE WAR THEY WILL BE RETURNED TO THEIR HOMELANDS.

"YOU MAY ASSUME THAT THE EMERGENCY REFUGEE SHELTER WILL BE READY TO RECEIVE THESE REFUGEES WHEN THEY ARRIVE. I WILL APPRECIATE IT THEREFORE IF YOU WILL ARRANGE FOR THE DEPARTURE TO THE UNITED STATES AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE, CONSISTENT WITH MILITARY REQUIREMENTS, OF APPROXIMATELY 1,000 REFUGEES IN SOUTHERN ITALY. YOU MAY CALL UPON REPRESENTATIVES OF THE WAR REFUGEE BOARD IN ALGIERS TO ASSIST YOU IN THIS MATTER. THE FULL COOPERATION OF OUR MILITARY AND NAVAL AUTHORITIES SHOULD BE ENLISTED IN EFFECTING THE PROMPT REMOVAL AND TRANSPORTATION OF THE REFUGEES.

"IN CHOOSING THE REFUGEES TO BE BROUGHT TO THE UNITED STATES, PLEASE BEAR IN MIND THAT TO THE EXTENT POSSIBLE THOSE REFUGEES SHOULD BE SELECTED FOR WHOM OTHER HAVENS OF REFUGE ARE NOT IMMEDIATELY AVAILABLE. I SHOULD HOWEVER LIKE THE GROUP TO INCLUDE A REASONABLE PROPORTION OF VARIOUS CATEGORIES OF PERSECUTED PEOPLES WHO HAVE FLED TO ITALY.

"YOU SHOULD BEAR IN MIND THAT SINCE THESE REFUGEES ARE TO BE PLACED IN A CAMP IN THE UNITED STATES UNDER APPROPRIATE SECURITY RESTRICTIONS, THE PROCEDURE FOR THE SELECTION OF THE REFUGEES AND ARRANGEMENTS FOR BRINGING THEM HERE SHOULD BE AS SIMPLE AND EXPEDITIOUS AS POSSIBLE, UNCOMPLICATED BY ANY OF THE USUAL FORMALITIES INVOLVED IN ADMITTING PEOPLE TO THE UNITED STATES UNDER THE IMMIGRATION LAWS.

JUN 101944

"HOWEVER, PLEASE BE SURE THAT THE NECESSARY HEALTH CHECKS ARE MADE TO AVOID BRINGING HERE PERSONS AFFLICTED WITH ANY LOATHSOME, DANGEROUS OR CONTAGIOUS DISEASE.

"IF YOU ENCOUNTER ANY DIFFICULTIES IN ARRANGING FOR THE PROMPT DEPARTURE OF THESE REFUGEES PLEASE LET ME KNOW."

THE MEMORANDUM SENT YESTERDAY TO THE SECRETARIES OF WAR, NAVY, INTERIOR, THE DIRECTOR OF THE BUDGET, AND EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE WAR REFUGEE BOARD:

JUN 101944

"THERE IS ATTACHED A CABLE WHICH I HAVE DISPATCHED TO ROBERT MURPHY IN ALGIERS, REQUESTING THAT HE MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE DEPARTURE TO THE UNITED STATES AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE OF APPROXIMATELY 1,000 REFUGEES NOW IN SOUTHERN ITALY.

"THESE REFUGEES WILL BE BROUGHT INTO THIS COUNTRY OUTSIDE OF THE REGULAR IMMIGRATION PROCEDURE AND PLACED IN FORT ONTARIO NEAR OSWEGO, NEW YORK. WHILE THE WAR REFUGEE BOARD IS CHARGED WITH THE OVERALL RESPONSIBILITY FOR THIS PROJECT, THE ARMY SHALL TAKE THE NECESSARY SECURITY PRECAUTIONS SO THAT THESE REFUGEES WILL REMAIN IN THE CAMP AND THE ACTUAL ADMINISTRATION OF THE CAMP IS TO BE IN THE HANDS OF THE WAR RELOCATION AUTHORITY.

"ACCORDINGLY, THE FOLLOWING STEPS SHOULD BE TAKEN AS EXPEDITIOUSLY AS POSSIBLE:

"(1) THE WAR DEPARTMENT AND THE NAVY DEPARTMENT SHALL SEND WHATEVER INSTRUCTIONS ARE NECESSARY TO THE MILITARY AUTHORITIES IN ITALY AND NORTH AFRICA TO EXPEDITE THE TRANSPORTATION OF THESE REFUGEES TO THE UNITED STATES.

JUN 101944

"(2) THE WAR DEPARTMENT SHALL ARRANGE TO FURNISH AND PROPERLY EQUIP FORT ONTARIO TO RECEIVE THESE REFUGEES; SHALL ARRANGE FOR THEIR TRANSPORTATION FROM THE PORT OF ARRIVAL TO THE CAMP; AND SHALL ARRANGE FOR THE NECESSARY SECURITY PRECAUTIONS.

"(3) THE WAR RELOCATION AUTHORITY SHALL MAKE ARRANGEMENTS TO HANDLE THE ACTUAL ADMINISTRATION OF THE CAMP, WHICH WILL BE DESIGNATED AS AN EMERGENCY REFUGEE SHELTER.

"(4) UNTIL UNRRA IS IN A POSITION TO ASSUME THE FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITIES INVOLVED, THE BUREAU OF THE BUDGET SHALL MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR FINANCING THE PROJECT; USING TO THE EXTENT POSSIBLE ANY AVAILABLE FUNDS OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT, THE WAR RELOCATION AUTHORITY, AND THE WAR REFUGEE BOARD, AND FROM THE FOREIGN WAR RELIEF APPROPRIATION, AND IF NECESSARY DRAWING UPON THE PRESIDENT'S EMERGENCY FUND."

American Troops 15 Miles From Cherbourg, Smashing a Third of Way Across Peninsula; 6,000 Planes Hit Foe; French Fields in Use

GERMANS REPORT WITHDRAWAL TO 'SHORTEN LINES'

Enemy Claims Yanks Near Montebourg, 15 Miles from Cherbourg.

TWO TOWNS CAPTURED

Heavy Fighting Rages at Carentan, Nazis Flood Terrain.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, June 11.—(AP) U. S. troops smashed a third of the way across the Normandy peninsula yesterday in a drive to seal off the prize port of Cherbourg and captured two towns and a handful of villages under cover of Allied fighters striking from newly-seized airfields in France.

A German broadcast placed the Americans near Montebourg, only 15 miles southeast of Cherbourg, after the Germans had withdrawn to "shortened defense lines."

Allied Progress Continues

Allied headquarters bulletin No. 10 issued just before midnight said "Allied progress continues along the whole of the beachhead."

This meant that the American, British and Canadian troops now were attacking heavily along a 50-mile stretch between Caen in the east and Montebourg in the northwest.

A dispatch from the front disclosed that the Americans, with artillery support, had begun striking inland Friday after using the first three days to secure their beachheads and establish contact with the British-Canadian forces in the Bayeux sector, east of the expanded 35-mile-wide American front. The Americans gained six miles in their first smash inland from the sea, and veteran troops were spearheading the attack, the dispatch said.

Improving weather which found Allied fighters now hitting from France for the first time in four years aided the Allied forward movement. Heavy bombers attacked German airfields in Normandy and Brittany, behind the battle line, and fighters strafed the enemy's armored and transport movements.

The Americans under Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley captured the small but valuable port of Isigny, 32 miles southeast of Cherbourg, toppled Trevieres eight miles east of Isigny, closed in from both sides on Carentan, six miles west of Isigny, and slashed "in several places" the main railway leading into Cherbourg.

Heavy fighting raged at Carentan, the late Allied bulletin said. The Germans had flooded the terrain in that sector, causing difficulties, a spokesman said.

Severe Fighting Continues

Severe fighting with strong enemy armored units also flamed through the fifth day in the Caen area of the British-Canadian sector. A front dispatch said Allied artillerymen had taken up positions in a struggle for a ridge commanding Caen, and that engineers had been partly successful in the setting of a tank trap against reinforced Nazi panzer units there.

"In the Cherbourg peninsula our advance patrols are west of the main railway in several places," the Allied communique said.

The apparent immediate objective of the American troops striking in the Montebourg area, a Vichy broadcast said, was Valognes, the communications key to Cherbourg. Valognes is only 10 miles southeast of the big port.

With more than 5,000 German prisoners now taken, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Allied ground commander, has established advance headquarters in France and has visited the troops in the front lines. He was reported well satisfied with developments.

The Eighth and Ninth U. S. Air forces flew nearly 2,000 sorties during the day in their relentless battering of German positions throughout Normandy and beyond. German troops and tanks moving up to the battle area were prime targets for these planes, some of which loosed their explosives from a height of only 400 feet.

There was German fighter opposition, but the Nazis still avoided a sky showdown. The two U. S. forces listed 16 German planes destroyed, while 27 American craft were missing.

At sea an Allied cordon of warships protected both sides of the channel sea lane to the beachheads. Friday night light Allied forces chased off and damaged a number of Nazi E-boats and also dispersed enemy patrol ships near Jersey island. An Allied convoy beat off a German glider-bombing attack without damage to itself. One enemy glider-bomber was shot down by the gun crew on the U. S. Merchantman, J. B. Weaver.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, overall commander of the American, British and Canadian ground forces, now has established advance headquarters in France, a headquarters statement said.

Montgomery already has visited the troops in front-line action and is reported well satisfied with their progress.

Berlin broadcasts said the Americans were attacking their withdrawing units just south and east of Montebourg, 15 miles from Cherbourg on the Carentan-Valognes highway.

The Germans previously had reported the dropping of American parachutists in the Lessay and

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 10 (AP)—American troops—supported by Allied planes operating from French soil for the first time since 1940—fought through German-flooded battlegrounds today toward strategic Cherbourg, cutting the railway below the port in several places, and seizing two important towns.

The powerful United States attack, hampered by flood waters inches to seven feet deep, hammered north toward Cherbourg, west in a push to snip off the peninsula tip, and developed a two-way squeeze on Carentan guarding the narrowest neck of the peninsula.

Berlin broadcasts put the Americans within 15 miles of Cherbourg, and said German forces, in the face of fresh parachute landings, were withdrawing south of Montebourg to shorten their lines.

United States Thunderbolts and RAF Spitfires landed and took off from airfields established in France just four days after the invasion, roaring out in closest support of the ground assault.

General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commanding ground invasion forces, has established his advance headquarters in France, it was announced. He already has visited his troops in front-line action and was reported to be well satisfied with their progress.

Trevieres As Well As Isigny Taken

Americans battling between Bayeux and Carentan seized Isigny—control point for floodgates there of the German-wrought inundation—and Trevieres, nine miles west of Bayeux.

The Nazis flooded large areas around Carentan, Ste. Mere Eglise and northeast of Caen, and headquarters reported heavy fighting in the Carentan area.

Allied headquarters said the ground was very soggy, making the advance of the Americans difficult, particularly in the Carentan area.

Headquarters identified four Nazi divisions in the heavy fighting against British and Canadian forces fighting for Caen, pivot city at the eastern end of the 60-mile beachhead front.

The Cherbourg drive stemmed from captured Ste. Mere Eglise. Berlin, terming it a large-scale offensive, declared there was violent fighting east of Montebourg.

Berlin Reports Allied 'Chutists Near Valognes

The Berlin radio said that "in the face of fresh paratroop landings south of Valognes (11 miles below Cherbourg) the German high command has withdrawn its spearheads to a shortened defense line south of Montebourg," 15 miles southeast of the port.

Montebourg is midway below Valognes and Ste. Mere Eglise. The Vichy radio announced the loss of Edmonville, between Ste. Mere Eglise and Montebourg.

The Germans also reported new Allied gains below Bayeux toward the key mid-peninsular town of St. Lo.

Other American forces from Ste. Mere Eglise struck southward for Carentan, while Americans who had captured Isigny drove on westward toward the same city, with seven miles to go. The two Yank columns thus were converging on the strategic city a third of the way inland on the peninsula.

Allied Wounded Being Evacuated By Air

The rapid establishment of air bases on liberated French territory not only gave close fighter cover, but permitted air evacuation of wounded men.

"Planes of the Ninth Air Force troop-carrier commands are evacuating wounded from landing grounds in the beachhead areas from strips constructed by special airfield engineers' units," headquarters announced.

"The first wounded were landed at an airfield in Britain at 1.10 P. M. today."

Just a few hours earlier it was disclosed that the Ninth Air Force had established an advanced headquarters in France, preliminary to putting bases in operation. Such bases give fighters a considerable advantage over their former "Channel commuting."

The Allies' bag of prisoners mounted steadily. Lieut.

Coutances areas on the western side of the peninsula. Lessay is only 13 miles beyond U.S. spearheads cutting across the peninsula from the east.

Roll Through Emondville

A Vichy broadcast said the American drive on Cherbourg had rolled through Emondeville, two miles southeast of Montebourg.

To the east, on the left flank of the Americans, the old Gothic city of Caen near the mouth of the Orneriver was reported in flames as British and Canadian gunners pumped shells into desperately resisting Germans entrenched in that vital communications hub.

The Allies also stood firm under savage Nazi counterattacks launched by two German tank divisions and two infantry divisions. The British and Canadians were fighting fiercely to keep the German panzer divisions from the good tank-fighting country between Caen and Bayeux, and according to German reports also were spearing southward toward St. Lo and the wooded hills where Allied big guns could command road junctions at the base of the Normandy peninsula.

The British-Canadian effort was a great road-blocking effort to keep out German reserves while the Americans fan westward across the peninsula and wheel northwestward toward Cherbourg.

Captured Germans passed the 5,000 mark, with 3,000 of them taken by hard-hitting American parachutists and infantrymen apparently bent on bottling up thousands of Germans based on Cherbourg, France's third largest seaport.

Nazi Parachutists Captured

Hundreds of crack Nazi parachutists, veterans of the Russian and Cassino fronts who had spilled out of the skies in an effort to stop the Americans, were among the captives.

Improving weather found a thunderous procession of Allied bombers and fighters hitting the Germans along the front and plastering Axis communications leading to the French interior.

For the first time since the disastrous days of Dunkerque four Summers ago the Allies had establish forward airfields in France. Both the RAF and the U. S. Ninth tactical air force now have such bases. An official statement said. Their location naturally was not disclosed. RAF Spitfire fighters were among the first on the fields which C-47 troop-carriers also were utilizing for the evacuation of wounded.

Although the weather has been bad and a constant source of anxiety for the Allied command it has not stopped the flow of reinforcements into the Normandy beachheads. Front dispatches said the Allies now held more than 40 miles of beaches where bulldozers had hacked out landing strips for heavy weapons unloaded from thousands of flat-bottomed craft plying 100 miles across the channel from Britain.

The 35-mile American front now extends westward from a point east of captured Trevieres, on the road to captured Bayeux and embattled Caen, through fallen Isigny to a point near Carentan. It skirts that town, where heavy fighting is going on, and runs northwestward through fallen Ste. Mere Eglise to a point near Montebourg.

All these points, with the exception of Trevieres, are on highway 13, the main road leading to Paris, 117 miles east of Caen. Trevieres, representing a five mile inland strike, is about two miles beyond the highway.

Rail Segments Cut

The lopping off of additional segments of the Paris-Cherbourg main rail line apparently occurred south and southwest of Ste. Mere Eglise, where the railway lies about two miles beyond the highway.

A headquarters spokesman said the 709th German infantry division was operating in the Ste. Mere Eglise area, while on the British-Canadian front in the Caen sector the Germans had hurled the 12th S.S. and 21st Panzer divisions, and the 716th and 352nd Infantry divisions against the Allies.

U. S. troops attacking in the Carentan area were engaged in heavy fighting, and hampered by German flooding of the ground on both sides of Carentan, and described the assault as a major one.

Key to Dike System

Carentan itself is the key to much of the dike system, since a whole network of rivers draining the middle Cherbourg peninsula pour through there into the Bay of Seine. The main locks controlling the dike system are at the tiny village of Hautdyck, just on the northern outskirts of Carentan.

Floodgates controlling a smaller area east of Carentan had been opened by the Germans just before the Americans captured Isigny, a small inland port which can handle boats not drawing more than 13 feet. With Isigny's capture American engineers can drain off that area soon.

This is the general area where William the Conqueror launched his 1066 invasion of England, and Gen. Eisenhower's troops now are reversing the operation.

The tiny village of Sully, 16 miles east of Isigny and two miles northwest of Bayeux, was disclosed in a front dispatch as the spot where the left wing of American troops joined up with British and Canadians on the eastern sector.

Sully was stormed by Americans with considerable losses, the dispatch said.

The British Sixth Airborne and Canadian Third division have been identified among the Allied forces on the Caen front. The Canadians also have a battalion of airborne troops, trained at Fort Benning, Ga., in action there, and Canadian troops which landed with the British at St. Aubin, on the coast north of Caen, included French-speaking units.

Also in action on the Caen-Bayeux area is the British 50th division.

A total of 17 Allied divisions now are in action, Berlin said in a broadcast which declared that 400,000 men were fighting, 200,000 of them German.

there and at Ste. Mere Eglise, eight miles to the northwest. The water varies in depth from a few inches to seven feet.

The Germans also flooded a sector northeast of Caen, a spokesman said, and it is in the Caen area that the Germans were striking back the hardest. Despite the concentration of four German divisions there the Germans themselves admitted new British gains south of Bayeux, 15 miles west of Caen.

Returning Allied airmen bombed German concentrations in the Balleroy woods, nine miles southwest of Bayeux on the road to St. Lo. During their mission they could see fires, touched off by Allied shells, raging in Caen.

The Germans used the old French dike system to inundate big sections of the lowlands but Berlin nevertheless said the Americans were attacking through the water

Touffreville, six miles east of Caen, had failed. There was no Allied confirmation of fighting on that side of the city, where Caen would be flanked from the east.

The Nazi high command also reported, without Allied confirmation, that a new Allied landing attempt had been made at Trouville, south of the Seine river mouth at Le Havre, and had "collapsed in the fire of our coastal batteries. An Allied warship was sunk, Berlin said, during the operation.

The Germans asserted Nazi attacks west and northwest of Caen had gained ground, admitted some Nazi strongholds of the Atlantic Wall had been surrounded, but claimed the German garrisons still were resisting.

Fifteen hundred Allied prisoners were claimed by the Germans, who also said 175 Allied tanks had been destroyed.

An official German announcement reported fierce fighting east of Montebourg. And another Berlin broadcast said, "Allied military strength assembled in the Caen-Bayeux area has been thrown in the direction of Cherbourg."

The latter reference obviously was to a new Allied push 4½ miles southeast of Bayeux, where General Eisenhower's ninth communique, issued Saturday morning, said contact had been made with "strong enemy forces near Conde Sur Seulles."

Counterattacks Fail

The German communique declared Allied counterattacks against

Gen. Omar Bradley's American parachutists and infantrymen alone have captured more than 3,000, half of them Nazi parachute veterans of Russia and Cassino. The Allies since D-day have taken more than 5,000 captives.

British and Canadian forces meanwhile battled German armored divisions in the greatest tank engagement since the landings, near Caen, German stronghold on the eastern flank. The Allies also were shelling Caen.

The German communique declared Allied counterattacks against Touffreville, six miles east of Caen, had failed. There was no Allied confirmation of fighting on that side of the city.

Berlin asserted that "Allied military strength assembled in the Caen-Bayeux area has been thrown in the direction of Cherbourg."

General Bradley "Satisfied" With Yanks' Progress

General Bradley told correspondents he was "satisfied" with American progress, but expected a German counter-attack shortly in three-division strength.

The German high command claimed that a new Allied landing attempt at Trouville, south of the Seine river mouth, "collapsed in the fire of our coastal batteries," with a warship sunk. The Germans also said that mopping-up operations on the eastern bank of the Orne river were proceeding and that German attacks west and northwest of Caen had gained ground.

Fifteen hundred prisoners were claimed by the Germans, who also said 175 Allied tanks had been destroyed.

The 3,000 prisoners seized by Americans represented every nationality among the Nazi satellites. United States air-borne troops cut up a German parachute division which had fought in Russia, taking 800 to 1,000 prisoners. Shortly afterward a German paratroop battalion which had fought at Cassino in Italy was dropped, but the whole unit of 500 to 800 men, coming down on top of American positions, was captured.

Allies Continue To Land Men

"Despite unfavorable weather conditions, the disembarkation of further men and material was uninterrupted," said supreme headquarters' ninth communique. There was an overcast sky and lumpy sea in the English Channel today.

(A Reuter dispatch said it had been disclosed at Supreme Allied Headquarters that secret parties landed on the Normandy beaches months before D-day to find out the secrets of the terrain.)

"Since June 6," it was claimed in today's German communique, "two enemy cruisers, three destroyers, six transport vessels totaling 38,000 gross registered tons, five tank landing vessels totaling 15,700 gross registered tons and seven tank landing vessels totaling 2,600 gross registered tons were sunk by the German navy, the Luftwaffe and coastal batteries of the navy as well as the army command.

Rommel Uses Three Divisions

"One enemy heavy cruiser, three other cruisers, six destroyers, five motor boats and eight transports totaling 41,000 gross registered tons and 14 special landing vessels were damaged by torpedo, bomb and shell hits. In addition, numerous small landing vessels and assault boats were sunk or damaged.

"Many enemy warships and landing vessels have run into our mine barrages, whereby the enemy lost 20 major and medium-sized units as well as numerous small landing vessels."

Nazi Marshal Rommel threw three armored divisions into attacks from Caen—and between Caen and Bayeux—in an effort to drive to the sea and break up the beachhead into sections which could be dealt with separately.

Nazis Cut Down Boasts

But every attempt he made failed, in the face of British and Canadian troops determined to stand or die. They fired at tanks over open sights from less than 200 yards.

Rommel was reported to be using all the reserves immediately at hand in his effort to break through.

Supreme Headquarters said the Germans' 12th SS Armored Division, 41st Armored, and 716th and 352d Infantry divisions were fighting in the Caen area, and that the 709th German Infantry was engaged in the Ste. Mere Eglise sector.

The German radio dropped its extravagant claims of the past few days and the German news agency DNB adopted a more conservative tone.

Nazi Destroyer Wrecked

The RAF coastal command announced that a German destroyer, driven ashore off Batz on the Brest peninsula in a fight with Allied naval forces, had been bombed to a smoldering hulk.

German naval forces made stronger efforts to intercept Allied convoys across the Channel with submarines and E-boats, but the Allied air and surface craft kept them at a distance.

With recurrent naval clashes off the coast, the United States naval leaders are preparing for a crucial struggle in the next few days, said a correspondent aboard Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk's flagship Augusta.

Headquarters disclosed that the Germans had made their first naval thrust at the invasion routes across the Channel. Eight British, Canadian and Polish destroyers met the thrust, blew up one German destroyer, ran another aground and hit two others in a fight off Ushant.

Belgian Invasion Predicted

Admitting that air-borne reinforcements were steadily building up Allied manpower in the beachhead, the Germans broadcast that the Allies still had many divisions in reserve in England and Scotland. They predicted an invasion of Belgium "between Dunkirk and Ostende."

Among other broadcast German statements was one that the Allies had sustained such heavy losses that General Montgomery had to use 17 divisions between the Orne and Vire estuaries.

The effect of the invasion in German-occupied France was described in dispatches to Barcelona, which said a condition approaching chaos existed because of German fears of Allied invasion of the Mediterranean coast and a threat of a general uprising in the Vichy area.

The beachhead campaign, entering a critical phase which military men expected would continue for at least another ten days, seemed focused for the moment on a drive northward from the Allied right flank to capture Cherbourg. Possession of this major port for Paris would give the Allies a chance to freight in much heavy equipment which the beachhead now lacks.

Thus the battle of the beachhead had passed through its first phase, with the beachheads established and being consolidated and strengthened despite bad weather, and the test of the inevitable German counter-attack in force, in the pattern of the operations at Gela, Sicily, Salerno and Anzio, Italy, still to be expected.

Headquarters of the 21st Army Group, June 10 (A. P.).—Allied forces beat forward all along the line in France today in the face of heavy German resistance, it was learned at this headquarters, with Americans in the Cherbourg sector making perhaps the most significant progress.

The United States forces were working well west of the main railway to Cherbourg.

The whole tone of information given here by a senior British staff officer was one of restrained optimism, and he stressed particularly that on the fifth day of the invasion Allied troops and supplies were going in in great streams and that our position is stronger every day.

Advances were made both to the north and west in the Cherbourg peninsula. Fighting continues between fallen Isigny and Carentan and is raging violently south of Bayeux. There were heavy tank battles in this latter sector, but our troops were not halted. North of Caen German counter-attacks have been thrown off.

That is a summary of the position. It was a generally satisfactory day, with the Germans failing in desperate efforts to pin the Allies down.

Berlin Admits A New Setback At Cherbourg

Reports a Withdrawal to Northwest in Face of Large-Scale U. S. Attack

LONDON, June 10 (AP).—German news agency broadcasts said tonight that six American divisions with "orders to conquer Cherbourg fortress" began a large-scale attack yesterday and pressed to a point near Montebourg, fifteen miles southeast of Cherbourg.

Nazi formations "fighting delaying actions withdrew northward and northwestward and, by shortening their positions, were able to successfully stem a further advance of the Americans by Friday night," the Transocean Agency said.

More American parachutists dropped behind German lines, Berlin said. The Americans were using two air-borne and three infantry divisions, one tank division and numerous special formations on a fourteen-mile front between Montebourg and Carentan, the Germans said.

Report Landing Attempt

The Nazi high command reported, without Allied confirmation, that the Allies had made another attempt to land at Trouville, seven miles across the Seine estuary south of Le Havre. The attempt "collapsed in the fire of our coastal batteries, which inflicted heavy losses on the enemy," the communique said. "One enemy warship was sunk and the others were forced to withdraw."

While not admitting American advances on the Cherbourg peninsula, the German high command did acknowledge that British-Canadian troops fighting in the Caen-Bayeux sector to the east had "succeeded in pushing back our rear-guard lines, behind which our reserves are being deployed." Heavy tank fighting was continuing in the sector, it said.

"Along the entire front," said the bulletin, "many German nests of resistance and fortified points, encircled by the enemy, are holding their own in stubborn fighting. Within the first three days more than 200 enemy tanks were destroyed and several thousand prisoners taken."

German broadcasts by Transocean, D. N. B. and Interinf, a D. N. B. subsidiary, went beyond the high command in providing details of the fighting which they said extended from Pont-l'Eveque, seven miles inland from Trouville, westward and northwestward to the Montebourgh area on the Cherbourg peninsula.

More British parachutists dropped in the Pont-l'Eveque sector were killed, one Berlin broadcast said. The Allies never have told of fighting in that area.

A German military spokesman was quoted as saying of the entire fight in Normandy: "If we could be convinced that the beachhead would remain only one we could liquidate it when it pleased us. However, we are counting upon the (Allied) establishment of more beachheads at other points where we also are holding reserves in readiness."

Will "Let Invasion Develop"

The Transocean dispatch continued: "The spokesman once again stressed that it is not the intention of the German supreme command to prevent landings but to let the invasion develop, because it considers the invasion as a possibility for a definite decision of the war."

The spokesman, Transocean said, acknowledged the American capture of Isigny, thirty-two miles southeast of Cherbourg, but "declared with emphasis" that German reserves would be on hand to check the American drive on Cherbourg.

A D. N. B. broadcast telling of an Allied southward stroke between Bayeux and Isigny said that parts of one German infantry formation had been encircled temporarily before finally reaching a new defense line.

INVASION LED BY BRADLEY

General Takes Two Air-Borne Divisions Into Normandy

By J. W. GALLAGHER

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Sunday, June 11 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley summoned his old airborne 82nd Division and its flying twin, the 101st, to lead the invasion of Normandy, it was revealed today.

It was the third combat jump for the 82nd and the first for the 101st when these infantrymen parachuted into France shouting their battle cry of "Geronimo."

Reborn In March, 1942

And thus the men of the 82nd returned to the land where their fathers fought, for the 82nd was a proud outfit of the first World War and was in on the American Meuse-Argonne attack.

The 82d was reborn in March, 1942, under the command of Bradley, who then was a major general. Bradley leads them again a commander of all United States ground forces, for he, like the 82d, has come a long way since then.

Until August, 1942, the 82d was traditional infantry. Parachute infantry regiments were added then and the first United States airborne divisions were born, the 82d and the 101st. Each is composed of two thirds parachute and one third glider troops.

Trained In French Morocco

Last May the 82d was sent to French Morocco to train with the then secret Fifth Army. From there it went to Tunisia and took off for Sicily.

Its first landing at Gela found the division widely scattered, and it had difficulty accomplishing its mission. Reformed as infantry, it helped capture Trapani on July 23. During the Sicily campaign it marched 150 miles and captured 22,000 prisoners.

Then came its heroic mission to Salerno, where German counterattacks were threatening to drive the Allied invaders of Italy back into the sea.

Some were dropped behind the German lines and suffered heavy casualties. Others landed right on the beaches at the height of battle and helped to turn the tide. The 82nd was one of the first to enter

Naples.

Moved For Another Adventure

Last November the 82nd once more moved secretly for another adventure, coming to England where it trained for this show with the 101st, which joined it later.

Sergt. Tony Castello, Longmont, Col., whose mother was an Apache Indian, adopted the battle cry of Geronimo, the name of a famous tribal chief who was one of the last to lay down arms against the white man.

Means Thunderbird

"One of the boys of my outfit was an Indian from Oklahoma, and my mother was an Apache," he said, "so we used to try long Indian words when jumping out of planes to keep us busy and not black out until the chute opened.

"Because of my Apache blood, and because it took quite a while to get out, I once used Geronimo. The cry gained further stock when some one explored its meaning and found it was the Apache word for thunderbird."

Castello, who is 26, has made 44 jumps. He was wounded twice in Sicily.

Way For Invasion Paved By Soldier-Scientists

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 10 (AP)—Soldier-scientists, landing secretly months ago on the beaches of Normandy, paved the way for invasion troops, headquarters disclosed today.

Digging through old geology books in French, the scientists discovered that proposed invasion beaches which appeared sandy and well suited really had clay underneath which would bog down heavy equipment.

So the soldier-scientists were sent over in darkness and crawled on their stomachs for miles along the beaches making borings which proved the old books right.

Special equipment then was prepared and tested in England to overcome this problem.

WEATHER CLEARS

2,000 American Planes Take Part in Daylight Attacks.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, June 11. — (AP) Allied Air power swept back into action in support of the invasion yesterday, establishing bases on the beachheads in France, and, it was announced today, U. S. fighter commands alone sent nearly 2,000 planes into the fray.

Clearing weather enabled heavy bombers to roar across the channel again after a 15-hour lull and Allied planes of all types blasted German troop concentrations and tanks, big gun positions and airdromes as well as rail and highway transport.

Attack Behind Lines

Liberators dumped heavy loads of explosives behind the battle zone in both Normandy and Brittany and the tireless Marauder medium bombers made three attacks during the day.

An indication that the assault was being continued through the night came as the Paris radio suspended at midnight and Berlin broadcast warnings of nuisance raiders penetrating into western Germany.

American craft missing while the Ninth Air Force announced at least 10 of the enemy shot down and five U. S. planes missing.

Landing Strip Built

The first planes to take advantage of the newly constructed landing strips—whose existence placed Allied aircraft in action from French soil for the first time since 1940—were American C-47 troop carriers which were used to fly wounded back to Britain.

They landed on one of the three strips built since last Wednesday by a newly formed Ninth Air Force engineering unit in the heart of territory held by the Allies, picked up wounded and returned to Britain within 4 1-2 hours of their original takeoff.

British fighters also were over Normandy in strength and some of them used for the first time a landing strip just completed by RAF servicing commandos. They refueled and returned to battle without having to return to home bases.

Three Nazis Downed

At least three enemy aircraft were shot down and seven Allied fighters are missing, Supreme headquarters said preliminary reports showed.

Supreme headquarters announced that for the first time since 1940 Allied air units were operating from French soil on three landing strips built by the Ninth U. S. Air Force since last Wednesday, and located in the heart of territory recently won and still within enemy artillery range.

First planes to make scheduled landings on the continent, three Ninth Air Force C-47 troop transports, took off at 8:48 a. m., and within four and one-half hours returned to Britain with full cargoes of wounded—German and Allied.

One 1,600-foot landing strip was built in six hours yesterday by an engineering unit commanded by Lt. Col. J. J. Livingstone of St. Louis, Mo. The other two were completed by mid-afternoon Thursday by engineering detachments under Lt. Col. Max McCrory of Martins Ferry, Ohio

One strip was used promptly by British Second Tactical command fighters. One RAF and one Belgian squadron patrolled the beach area until fuel ran low, landed at the emergency strip, refueled and set off on offensive patrol behind the battle zone

Medicos Fly with Unit

Flying with the first evacuation unit were a flight surgeon, five nurses and six medical technicians. Mustangs escorted the C147s, but met no German planes.

The Ninth U. S. Air Force even established advanced headquarters in France to speed the operation of fighter bases from which Allied planes can give close support to ground forces without returning to Britain.

Up to 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators pounded German airfields and gun positions behind the battle area following up similar night blows by the Royal Air Force while light and medium bombers by the hundreds bombed as close as a mile to the battle lines and over a 15-mile stretch behind.

Railroads, highways, heavy gun positions and a concentration of troops and tanks were attacked.

Channel skies remained thick with aircraft throughout the afternoon and evening. The Vichy radio said two air raid warnings had been sounded in the Paris area.

Blast Nazis in France.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 10 (A. P.).—Powerful fleets of American heavy, medium and light bombers today blasted targets behind the Normandy battlelines as well as German airfields in northern France in a thunderous follow up to similar R. A. F. attacks last night.

The day and night blows which broke a fifteen-hour lull in Allied air activity caused by the weather yesterday were aimed at railroads, highways, heavy gun positions and a concentration of troops and tanks behind the invasion front and a key rail junction near Paris as well as at the airfields.

One purpose of the attacks was to prevent the German Air Force from building up air support for Field Marshal Rommel's forces in Normandy.

The blow against the airfields was delivered by up to 500 United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators which took quick advantage of the clearing weather. The British night and American day heavy bombers also hammered the Etampes rail junction thirty miles from Paris, a key troop dispatching point for the Germans.

One Fortress navagator, Lieut. Alfred Turner of Windermere, Fla., declared on his return from today's attack on coastal installations that "There was no opposition whatsoever."

Bombing enemy targets as close as a mile to the Normandy battle lines, American Marauders and Havocs swept over a fifteen-mile stretch, rocking German positions. These planes ducked under an overcast to strike from the unusually low altitude of 3,500 feet, and the tail gunners silenced one anti-aircraft battery as they swooped past. Targets near the French coast were bombed through clouds with secret devices.

From Normandy came dispatches datelined "R. A. F. Beach Squadron Headquarters," indicating the Allies were pushing ahead with the important step of getting airfields in operation in captured territory. So far there have been no reports of Allied offensive sorties from planes based on the other side of the English Channel.

New York, June 10 (AP)—The Berlin radio reported tonight that a new Allied air-borne landing had been made near Danvou, southwest of Caen. "The obvious purpose of this move is to take the Germans in the rear," said the broadcast.

GERMAN TROOPS, TANKS HAMMERED

(The Hungarian radio also left the air early in the night, the Federal Communications commission reported.)

The German air force still avoided a showdown, but several aerial battles developed.

Caen Is Ablaze After Shelling, Flyers Say

By Austin Bealmear

A United States Marauder Base In Britain, June 10 (AP)—Caen is under terrific shelling, American Marauder crewmen reported today after flying over the city on their seventh mission since D-day to blast German armored units in Balleroy Woods southwest of Bayeux.

"Caen was about six miles to our left and we could see shells bursting in the city," said Capt. John B. Stirling, of Annapolis, Md. "It was burning badly. In many other places along the bridgehead there were puffs of smoke showing that fighting was going on."

Stirling said the Allies had put up "dozens of barrage balloons" all along the Normandy beach.

Yet To See German Plane

"There were lots of our fighters in the air—mostly P-38s and Spitfires," he added, "but this is my third mission over there since D-day and I haven't seen a German plane yet. We caught some flak, though, and it was pretty well north of the target which shows that the enemy still is pretty close to the beach. We spotted wrecked vehicles along many of the roads beyond the battle zone."

(Calls to Annapolis today failed to identify Capt. John B. Stirling. Several families named Stirling are listed in the telephone directory, but none of these knew him.)

Lieut. Col. Grover Wilcox, Jr., of Anahuac, Texas, the operations officer of this group who led the formation today, said it looked as if the entire city of Caen was afire.

Target Area Hit Squarely

Wilcox said his formation put their 500-pounders squarely in the target area. "They'll have to detour around that place," he added.

"It looked pretty active on the beachhead," said Lieut. Paul H. Phillips, of Sherman, Texas, a pilot. "There were lots of tanks. We could see gunfire—both artillery and tank fire.

"Our battleships off shore were silent today for the first time. There seemed to be millions of boats down there and plenty more going over."

Lieut. A. N. Sloan of Waelder, Texas, a bombardier said, "there was no trouble to speak of, and the weather has lifted over there. This was the easiest of my three missions since D-Day."

"I couldn't see any definite lines of fighting," said Capt. Rennie Kelly of Beverly Hills, Cal., a pilot, "but there seemed to be plenty of boats on shore."

NAVY REPULSES GERMAN ATTACKS ON LIFELINES

LONDON, June 10.—(AP) After a number of unsuccessful attempts to cut gashes in the greatest naval battle armada in the world's history, German channel forces were concentrating their submarine power today against Allied cross-channel lifelines, and American officers were expecting a crucial struggle in a big German naval effort within the next few days.

In the latest of the slim German navy's unprofitable forays into invasion waters, a light force of British coastal vessels sank four out of seven heavily-armed trawlers in two skirmishes off Holland early today, with the loss of one motor torpedoboat and two casualties.

While a German destroyer of a previous engagement lay smouldering wreckage on the French coast, Allied warships kept up their airtight collaboration with the air force to keep the Germans U-boats under water and ineffective, and the Armies' reinforcements and supplies streamed into the Seine bay, "greatest sea terminus the world has ever seen established for purposes of battle," with the precision and regularity of rail traffic, a front report said.

The biggest obstacle for the fleet thus far has been the weather—not Nazi sea units. Allied warships roamed the channel at will, and German bombing at the Seine anchorage was described as "spasmodic."

Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, aboard the flagship Augusta, was anticipating a desperate German effort to halt the continuous strengthening of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's advancing and unyielding units, and believed the struggle would come soon, a correspondent aboard the ship reported.

The loss of a second American destroyer in the invasion was disclosed in a dispatch from the channel naval forces. No details were given, but these two ships were said to be the U. S. Navy's only losses up to the fourth day after the invasion landings.

The Berlin radio reported that Allied cruisers and destroyers were engaged by Nazi units in violent battle in the western part of the channel. The broadcast said that "one enemy cruiser and destroyer were damaged and also one German destroyer."

Four Nazi Naval Vessels Sunk In Sea Battle Off Dutch Coast

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, June 10 (A. P.).—Light coastal ships of the Royal Navy sank four heavily armed German trawlers off the Dutch coast today in another of a series of naval clashes, the Admiralty announced.

Four trawlers were engaged southwest of Ijmuiden, and three were sent down by torpedo hits. The fourth was damaged by gunfire and sent heading back for the coast.

Later three more armed trawlers, apparently searching for survivors, appeared and one of these was torpedoed and sunk. One British torpedo boat was sunk, but there were only two casualties, the Admiralty said.

Two destroyers were the United State's only losses up to the fourth day of the invasion, it was said at Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters today.

U. S. Navy on the Alert.

With recurrent clashes off the coast, American naval leaders are preparing for a crucial struggle in the next few days, a correspondent aboard Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk's flagship Augusta said.

The first attempts by German naval craft to enter the invasion coast were frustrated, it was disclosed earlier in a communique describing three surface actions, one a point-blank engagement between eight Allied and four Nazi destroyers.

Eight British, Canadian and Polish destroyers intercepted the four German destroyers off the tip of Brittany, near Ile D'Ouessant before dawn yesterday. The Allies blew up one of the enemy destroyers, chased another around in flames and scored hits on the other two, which escaped, the communique said.

The grounded vessel was attacked later by Royal Canadian Beaufighters which shot at least seventy rocket projectiles into her and scored numerous hits with heavy and light bombs. Today she lay a smoldering wreck surrounded by a pool of burning oil.

Damage and a few casualties on one British ship, the Tartar, was the only Allied Destroyers Join Battle.

The Allied destroyers joined battle on parallel courses with the Germans, dodging torpedo barrage.

During Thursday night an Allied destroyer force under Rear Admiral Don Pardee Moon of the United States Navy intercepted and drove off a force of heavily armed German light craft between the mainland and the Isles de St. Marcouf, just off the American landing zone on the east side of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Allied light coastal forces repulsed German E-boats that tried to enter the invasion coast area both from the east and west sides. Two of the enemy ships suffered hits.

Destroyer Lost.

Details were disclosed also of the loss of a United States destroyer in the early part of the invasion. (President Roosevelt said Tuesday two American destroyers and one landing craft had been lost up to noon of that day.)

A German inland battery scored hits on the destroyer while its guns were clearing a beach for landing of ground forces. The battery was silenced, and the destroyer swung back to its assigned targets "when something hit us," the commander recalled.

The vessel went out of control, possibly from a hit by some type of rocket projectile. The commander said he tried to head the ship out to sea, but she went into a tight circle. She stopped with her engine rooms flooded, and orders were given to abandon ship.

The commander was rescued.

Describing the destroyer engagement off Britanny, Lieut.-Commander William Sclater of the Canadian Navy said that the Canadian Tribal class destroyers Haida and Huron drove the German destroyer aground, scoring repeated hits. He said the Nazi destroyers were believed to be of the Roeder class, larger than the Haida and Huron. The Tribal class are of 1,900 tons, mounting six 4.7-inch guns, two 4-inch guns, two 4-inch anti-aircraft guns and seven smaller guns.

FRENCH RISE IN SABOTAGE

Patriots Give Allies Aid, Battle Nazis Behind Lines

London, June 10 (AP)—French resistance to the Germans is rising, wih sabotage and insurrection all over France, it was learned at Allied headquarters tonight.

Every French village, it was declared, offers information, medical assistance and any other possible help to the Allied forces.

Withholds All-Out Blow

Although the Allied high command was withholding for the strategic moment its instruction to the underground to strike all-out for the liberation of the country, front-line dispatches and continental reports told of multiplying blows against the Nazis. Unrest also was reported in the German Reich itself.

While some observers were inclined to be conservative in their estimates of these reports—which seeded out of the Netherlands and northern Italy as well as France and Germany—it was conceded that the invasion of Normandy had inspired increasing sabotage behind the French lines.

The most sanguine reports came to the French press division in London. These said French patriots were engaged not only in widespread sabotage but were fighting pitched battles with occupation troops deep behind the German lines.

Battles With 2,000 Nazis

The French press service said patriots were engaging more than 2,000 Germans in the Vosge district in a battle in which they had captured more than 300 Nazis. It also reported fighting at Bourg and Macon, which lie near the Haute Savoie, a center for the Fighting French Maquis.

Partisans also attacked Germans in Brittany, "killing about 20 and taking supplies," the agency reported, while in the Nord department they have cut three canals, and in the Ain department have destroyed 50 locomotives and slashed electric and telephone lines.

The Algiers radio said the French underground had dynamited railways between Paris and Normandy and Brittany, delaying German troop movements to the front.

The Paris radio announced that the Germans had suspended telegraphic service in northern France, and Vichy took new steps to conscript youths for labor jobs.

Hail De Gaulle As Hero

Gen. Charles de Gaulle is the hero of that fringe of Normandy so far liberated, dispatches from the front said today as the shadow army of the underground sprang to action in southern France and reportedly planted its banners of liberation almost at Vichy's gates.

Free for the first time since France's fall in the bitter summer of 1940, Frenchmen on the coast—some of whom were pressed into service to build the German Atlantic Wall—have been telling the Allies:

"General de Gaulle, as well as Britain and America, has been our constant hope through the darkest hours. He is the only leader for us."

Flame Of Revolt Flares

Reports from Spain said a flame of revolt was sweeping through central and southern France, and heavy fighting between the underground and collaborationist militia was reported at many points, including Gannat, only ten miles from Vichy itself.

On the fighting front the French underground was carrying out orders of the Supreme headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force, serving as guides and furnishing information on German troop movements as requested in a broadcast before D-Day.

Despite their joy at being once more free, the liberated French have not neglected traitors and collaborators, and violence against these persons continues daily.

To the south, far from the front, French guerrilla forces resorted to arms and it is believed they have seized both sides of the Rhone and Saone valleys and are in action both north and south of Lyon.

Thirty collaborationist militiamen were reported killed at Macon on the Saone, while the tricolor waved in city halls, windows and balconies through towns and villages in the region of Auvergne, where Chief of Government Pierre Laval had an electoral stronghold for years.

of revolt against French collaborationists has swept through central France, dangerously close to Vichy, and leaped to other parts of the country, a traveler said today.

French guerrilla forces on both sides of the Rhone and Saone valleys were reported united through several regions both north of Lyon in Burgundy, and south of Lyon in the Valence region.

30 Reported Killed

There was heavy fighting in Macon on the Saone, the French traveler said. Thirty collaborationist militiamen were said to have been killed in Macon yesterday, while Vichy officials fled the city.

(French Patriot formations have surrounded Grenoble, in southern France, and the city is "now in a state of siege," the Swiss newspaper La Suisse said in an article reported today by OWI in New York.)

Fighting Near Vichy

The heart of the revolt seemed to be in the Auvergne region, where Chief of Government Pierre Laval maintained his electoral stronghold for several years, this man said, and fighting also was reported in Gannat, only about a 15-minute drive from Vichy itself.

The Frenchman, who left the district Friday morning, described conditions as "those naturally resulting from abandonment of power by officials who held office only through German arms."

He declared the tricolor was waving from city halls, windows and balconies of homes in many towns and villages south of Vichy, with little vestige of Vichy authority remaining in that region. Administration offices either are closed, or operated by officials acceptable to the underground, he added.

No Clear Demarcation

On Friday, he continued, there seemed to be no clear demarcation between the Vichy-controlled areas and those dominated by underground organizations.

This traveler said military organizations had "vanished like snow in August" under the double shock of the rising popular reaction against them, and Vichy's orders that they must cease strutting and fight in a civil war if necessary.

Anything might happen, he said. The official Vichy car in which he traveled reached the frontier region "only thanks to skillful sleight of hand." The occupants had documents which would satisfy both the collaborationists and patriots.

Glider Pilot Helps Bury Parachutists

By Howard Cowan

At a Ninth Air Force Troop Carrier Station, June 10 (AP)—The grimy, hollow-eyed fellow who sat across the table, hungrily downing a cup of black coffee, was Harvey Shanks, of Gainsville, Texas.

It was hard to realize that he was the same prank-playing glider pilot who left us only four days ago to deliver a howitzer to desperately fighting parachute troops inside France, but it was easier to understand his mollified demeanor when you heard his story.

Lands In Flooded Area

"We landed a little after 11 P. M. Tuesday," he began. "It was getting dark. We came down in a flooded area and the glider sank."

Shanks' companion was Flight Officer Russel Strandberg, of Spokane, Wash.

"We started wading through water and mud," Shanks continued, "and it was three to five feet deep. This thing must have been a mile and a half wide and three miles long. I looked at my watch when we got out. It was 2.45 A. M. We came to the edge of a little town called Bautteville, and were caught in some mortar fire. Shells fell about 200 feet away.

Help The Wounded

"We hid in a ditch there and started crawling on hands and knees. Once we thought for sure we were caught. The Germans shot a parachute flare and it opened down the road. The wind carried it right toward us. We heard some machine guns over on our right, but we didn't know whether they were the Germans' or ours.

"We got into an air-borne first-aid station about a quarter to 5 and slept till 6. The wounded began coming in from gliders then and they asked us to help out with stretchers. Most of the men had broken arms and legs.

More Flights Land

"They were the fellows from gliders that had crashed. That night about 7 we saw another flight of parachute and glider troops come in, and at 8.30 still another. At 10 they told us to get ready to be evacuated. That meant a 12-mile march to the beach.

We stopped at a little town, Les Forges, about three miles south of Ste. Mere Eglise. A German truck drove up about 2 in the afternoon. A French civilian was driving the truck, which was full of dead parachute troopers. I looked and there were more stretched out on the ground.

"The French wouldn't touch the bodies, so we were asked to help. There were about 80 Germans and I guess about 20 of ours. The Americans were laid out in rows with their parachutes over them. The silk was dirty and torn.

Crosses Mark Graves

"The French scooped out shallow graves and little white, wooden crosses were put on each one, with the guy's dog-tag.

"I lifted the parachutes off the faces, to see if I could recognize any from our outfit, but I couldn't. It was hard to tell.

"We got through about 7, and 150 of us marched on to the beach. We got there about midnight. We started out to a large LST, and just about got on it when it hit a mine and blew up, so we stayed on a landing barge all night. About 8.30 Thursday morning we got on another LST and had a hot meal, and they put us ashore at 1 P. M."

Rommel Spotted Weak Spot

By Noel Monks

(Representing the Combined American and British Press; Distributed by the Associated Press)

With the British Forces before Caen, June 9 (Delayed) — When German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel inspected this sector of the Atlantic Wall two months ago he remarked, "This is just the ideal spot for an Allied landing. It must be strongly fortified immediately."

Every able-bodied French man and woman was conscripted into making beach obstructions and putting up obstacles in possible landing fields.

DAY JUN 11 1944

Only Half Completed

Fortunately Rommel's defense program was only half completed when we landed.

The Mayor of the village near Caen who told me this today added with a twinkle in his eye, "Some of us saw to it that the British knew the state of the defenses."

Now that the first rush of landing is over, we are able really to realize that we are back in France and one sees much the same scenes in the French villages here in Normandy as in the Champagne country, where our forces were quartered in those far-off days of 1939.

Welcomed By French

The French people are taking the Allies to their hearts and unearthing all manner of wines, ciders and liqueurs from dusty shelves. Luscious strawberries were handed to the more lucky men of our forces, while eggs produced from hens kept underground to hide them from the Germans were being pressed on our troops.

Reinforcements Slowed by Ruined Railways; Snipers Fail to Bar U. S. Advance

By Don Whitehead

For the combined American press

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, June 9 (Delayed) (AP).—Four days after landing amid bitter fighting on the beach the American troops in this sector have launched an attack to push their beachhead deeper into Normandy.

NIGHT

This was accomplished as a result of the unprecedented speed with which troops, guns and supplies were landed once the crust of the enemy's opposition was broken. Never before have troops, guns, armor and supplies been put ashore with such speed, despite a slow beginning and when the enemy was fighting to crack the American landings.

I believe the Germans now have lost their chance to break the beachhead. They lost that chance the first two days of the invasion when they committed their reserves to desperate battles. The doughboys charged across the beaches and the enemy was unable to launch a counter-attack.

Allied air support is magnificent, and not a single enemy plane has been seen over this beachhead during the daylight hours since the landing in this sector. Indications show that the Germans are unable to rush in heavy reinforcements with any speed because our air forces have bombed the railway lines.

German Trickery Near Caen Bared

R. GREENE

With Allied Forces in France, June 10 (AP)—Allied troops are battling from house to house in the northern outskirts of a village northwest of German-held Caen after experiencing a bitter dose of Nazi trickery.

Tank-led attackers stormed and captured the woods and northern houses of the village late yesterday, whereupon the Germans broke out and started waving white flags. But when the Allies started to enter the Germans cut loose with spandaus and machine guns, forcing a withdrawal to the northern end of this highly strategic village which dominates Caen.

NIGHT

Nazi Bombers Attack

The weather virtually grounded Allied planes yesterday and last night and the Germans seized the opportunity to bomb this sector. At midnight Nazi bombers swooped low over the chateau where this writer is, blew up a near-by stable and the top of a house next door where other correspondents are billeted.

With the first light of dawn, however, the welcome roar of Spitfires was heard and not a single Nazi plane has been seen since.

All through the night big Allied guns have been slamming the enemy with unprecedented fury, and the roads from the beachhead are choked with heavy armor rolling forward.

New Engineer Unit Builds Airfields on Beachhead

Men Are Equipped for Both Combat and Construction

LONDON, June 10 (AP).—The supreme headquarters' announcement that the 9th Engineering Command had entered France lifted the veil of secrecy surrounding the existance of a new-type component of the 9th Army Air Force.

Units of the new command—composed of aviation engineers trained and armed for combat and construction of advanced airfields on the Continent—moved onto the beachheads in the first hour hours of the invasion and other elements followed later.

NIGHT

It is the first separate aviation engineering command to be activated with an air force and under its direct command. The commander of the new outfit is Brigadier General James B. Newman jr., of Washington, a veteran of twenty-six years in the Engineers Corps.

Americans Seize A Chateau

By Richard D. McMillan

[Representing the Combined American Press; Distributed by the Associated Press]

With British-American Forces in France, June 10—Welsh Tommies chased the Nazis from the dining room of their chateau headquarters into the gilded Louis XIV salon and then into the bedrooms.

They almost had control of the situation when German reinforcements arrived with 88-mm. guns and opened fire. The Welsh retired into the undergrowth outside the building. Their situation was critical.

Yanks To The Rescue

Then, just in the nick of time, a battalion of veteran American infantrymen appeared unexpectedly from the west, slogging through the underbrush. They swarmed into the chateau with machine guns.

They smashed up a lot of furniture and drilled a lot of holes in the walls and windows and also in a lot of Germans. Soon there were no more Germans.

That was how the American and British invasion troops made their second junction today west of Bayeux.

Night-Long Barrage

DAY

The Welshmen had a hard fight to get to the chateau in the first place. Their thrust west from Bayeux was preceded by a night long barrage by British Long Toms and field guns.

Shortly after starting out, the British turned a corner and ran into a formatoin of German 88's. The Germans were more surprised than the British. A few bursts of gunfire destroyed the gun crews.

This action cleared a path across a stream for the British. Fording it, the British brought up more munitions and prepared for the attack on the German command post.

Like Indian Warfare

The chateau proved a tough nut to crack. It was like Indian warfare. Posting themselves at windows, the defenders sniped at the Tommies.

A machine gunner told me the Nazis first tried to make a stand in the cellar. Dislodged from there, they made a fighting retreat upstairs. Then the room-to-room battle developed.

Another American I knew. He was the crew chief aboard a troop-carrier plane riddled by ground fire beyond the bridgehead on Cherbourg peninsula Tuesday night.

"I Am The Resurrection . . ."

Capt. R. F. Grady, Philadelphia, Pa., read the Catholic service. Major F. J. Smeltzer, Shamokin, Pa., began the Protestant service with scripture. There was a prayer by Lieut. Ford Gilbert, Long Beach, Cal. The raw wind gusting from the skies drowned out the words and we could only catch parts:

"I am the resurrection. . . ."

Capt. Frank H. Lash, navy chaplain, Clovis, N. M., said a prayer and read from the Bible. Capt. John A. Moore, Lake Helen, Fla., and Lieut. Dezil Carty, New York city, a Negro, concluded the service.

Answering Taps

We stood at attention and saluted while a firing squad set the hills echoing with three volleys.

Corporal Joseph Ferlazzo, Clearfield, Pa., sounded taps. Swelling and then fading as the wind rose and died came the answering taps from the far side of the hill, where the flag stood at half-mast before the white chapel with its ivy-clad columns. They came from the bugle of Sergt. Herbert E. Thompson, Ilion, N. Y.

We marched away, eyes straight ahead and the silence broken only by the cadenced crunch of heels into gravel walks. The flag still was at half-mast as we climbed into our jeeps and trucks, and an officer explained:

Widowed Girl Remains

"The flag remains at half-mast so long as there are unburied dead inside the cemetery."

I took one last look as we headed toward the gate. The English girl stood at the edge of the still-open grave, her hands shoved deep into her pockets.

The steam shovel wheeled ponderously and clawed up a scoopful of sodden earth.

Yanks Who Died In Invasion Are Buried In British Soil

JUN 11 1944

By HOWARD COWAN

Brookwood American Cemetery, England, June 10 (AP)—The first American dead from the terrible battle across the Channel rested tonight beneath British soil.

Rows of flag-covered caskets of brown, polished wood lay at the bottom of mass graves opened by a steel-jawed steam shovel.

As a double column of officers and enlisted men led by five chaplains approached in a slow march, the English operator of the steam shovel stood silently in his cab, his hand clutching his cap, his black hair blowing in the wind.

Until They Come Home

There was nothing to mark this as anything but another military funeral, but it seemed to drive home with cruel sharpness the increased tempo of war on the French coast.

DAY

With Capt. Sumner Johnson, United States Ninth Air Force chaplain, of Terryville, Conn., I drove to this cemetery. It must be one of the most beautiful in the world.

Here lie American dead from the first World War. Here in the gently rolling hills where the grass always is green and towering pines scent the breeze, will lie the dead from this war until they are moved home.

One Lone Mourner

There were no mourners inside the Rhododendron-bounded cemetery save one. An English girl, her eyes red and puffy from weeping, stood in the road a few feet away, and chewed nervously at a wrinkled handkerchief. She wore a rough leather coat, no hat and no stockings. One of the Americans was her husband.

Another was a flyer, pilot of a Lightning. From his base somewhere in England four of the twin-tailed craft dipped near the small group. Flying in perfect echelon, their engines muffled, they circled once and disappeared.

Nazi Sniper Found In U. S. Uniform

By Don Whitehead

[Associated Press Correspondent, Representing the Combined American Press]

With the American Forces in France, June 9 (AP—Delayed)—The Germans are fighting guerrilla warfare in a desperate attempt to stop the steady progress of stout-hearted American doughboys, and they are making great use of snipers.

The enemy is fighting from trees, hedgerows, buildings, farmhouses, and sending snipers infiltrating our lines to harass the rear, but they have been unable to halt the advance.

There was one verified case of a sniper being found garbed in the clothing of an American soldier.

Six Germans Surrender

Outside the town in this area, the Germans are spotting our advance from dugouts. During an exchange of fire, six enemy soldiers came out with their hands up in surrender.

A platoon led by Lieut. Robert Brown, of Jackson, Miss., was fighting for an assembly area when a sniper opened up from behind a bush. Brown silenced this fire.

The German sniping technique is to leave one or two men with machine pistols, rifles and ammunition hidden in the trees or along the thick hedgerows which border Normandy's narrow, winding lanes. If a large body of doughboys passes, the snipers hold their fire. They wait for small groups of men, walking singly and pairs, and then they open fire.

DAY

Few Came Back Alive

But the doughboys stalk them down, and few snipers come back alive. Most of them are very young or men in their forties and fifties. During the night the Germans send sniping patrols to rough our lines, but these tactics, while irritating, have not stopped the infantry.

The other night a German patrol slipped behind our lines along the hedgerows and surrounded one unit's command post, where Major Frank Callicco, of Utica, N. Y., was in command. It was about 1 A. M. They sneaked in and covered Callicco and his men with machine pistols.

"You are prisoners," a young German said in English, and ordered Callicco and his men to accompany them. Callicco had other ideas. The major suddenly grabbed the machine pistol from his captor and tried to shoot him, but the gun jammed. He beat the German over the head. Another German grabbed him from behind, and Callicco tossed this one over his head.

"Muscles" Callicco

In the meantime the other boys were in action, too, and when the fracas was over the major and his men had taken the Germans prisoners. Now the boys are calling him Major (Muscles) Callicco.

Never before have the Germans used such tactics against American troops, but this country lends itself to this type of fighting. The hedgerows are very thick and each neat field is bordered heavily by trees or shrubbery instead of fencing. Greek oak, beech and elm trees provide cover for snipers.

One eighteen-year-old sniper was hiding in a field toward which our unit was moving to set up a command post. He opened fire and a doughboy shot his through the heart. Even as his heart was bursting through the bullet hole in his chest the German was frantically trying to get his first-aid kit. Then he collapsed. Another sniper in the same ditch started running, and a tommy gunner shot him down.

Ranger Sergeant 'Proud We Did It'

By HAROLD V. BOYLE

General Montgomery's Command Post, June 9 (AP—Delayed). A slim little black-haired sergeant told today how American Rangers in their first combat action destroyed five German heavy guns and for two full days beat off all counterattacks, during which one Yank mortar knocked out 12 enemy machine guns.

After exhausing their own ammunition, the Rangers fought on with captured German weapons.

"We spent 11 weeks practicing that maneuver and it caught the Germans flatfooted, because they didn't think we'd dare come ashore," said Staff Sergeant Frederick Dix, 24, of Syracuse, N. Y. "Our job was to take and hold that neck of land, and we did it and are damn proud we did it."

NIGHT

One Boat Missed

Dix, whose outfit took and gave heavy casualties before reinforcements arrived and relieved them, said the Rangers hit the beaches at 7.05 A. M. on D-day, and "seven of our eight boats got ashore okay."

"One got swamped in heavy seas, and I don't know what happened to the men in it," he continued. "We couldn't stop to check. We ran into rifle, machine-gun and sniper fire from the flanks as soon as we got within range and lost some of our medicos right there on General Eisenhower's library in his trailer is composed mostly of western thrillers.

"He likes the kind when there are three men killed in the first paragraph and the hero stands over them with smoking guns," his aide said.

NIGHT

Men and some women in one liberated Normandy town are suffering mal aux cleveux—invasion hangover.

"Ever since we learned the Allies had landed we have been drinking toasts to the British and Americans," one chap explained.

In contrast to such enthusiasm was the French woman who was told she could not proceed further down a road because a battle was in progress immediately ahead.

"How tiresome," she said. "Tell me, when will this battle of yours be over."

—o—

Correspondents report the biggest concern of German prisoners is whether they are going to be shot by their captors and "their biggest surprise is when we give them a cup of tea."

Millions of words are pouring out about the invasion, but what the troops miss most in the field is news. They are not yet accustomed to doing without the morning papers and know what is going on only in their own little sector.

"How's things going?" "What's happening to the Americans?" "What's happening to the British?" "Are all the beachheads linked up yet?" are their first questions.

Berliners Ask: Did The West Wall Fail?

JUN 11 19

Stockholm, June 10 (AP)—The Berlin press sought today to answer the question apparently on the lips of most Germans—"How could the Allies penetrate the Atlantic Wall so quickly?"

The Deutsche Allgemein Zeitung asserted that the German high command never anticipated that the Atlantic fortifications could halt flatly a determined assault.

But, it said, the Atlantic Wall "functioned as expected—by serving as a wave breaker, holding up the attacking groups long enough to permit German defenders to disorganize them."

DAY

Navy "Played A Great Part"

Trying to give the impression that the German navy played a big role in intercepting the Allied armadas, the Voelkischer Beobachter said "our small ships especially played a great part in the first days of the invasion. Naturally, our U-boats couldn't work so effectively in such narrow waters."

The concern of the average German over the apparent ease of the Allied landings was indicated by a German woman arriving from Berlin today.

Berliners were asking openly how the Allies were able to break through, she said.

More SS Troops In Berlin

Fresh formations of SS troops came to Berlin Friday morning, she added.

The woman interpreted this as a Nazi precaution against possible civilian outbursts if Allied success continues, and especially if the Russians open a major offensive from the east.

Other questions puzzling the average Berliner, she continued, were "Where are Rommel's troops?" and "What happened to the Luftwaffe?"

New "Secret Weapon"

The Berlin correspondent of Aftonbladet said the Germans were using new kind of mobile artillery operated by remote control from bunkers. They are called "Snake Heads," he added.

The Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau in a Paris dispatch said the French Ministry of Labor had called for a thousand French doctors to be sent to Germany as quickly as possible.

NAZIS FACING BIG GAMBLE

JUN 11 19

Whether To Risk All In Normandy Is Problem

By ALEX SINGLETON

London, June 10 (AP)—The Germans tonight faced their greatest single gamble since they invaded Russia: whether to risk an all-out effort to blast the Allies off the Normandy beaches and thus weaken themselves elsewhere and ease the way for possible new Allied landings.

As the Americans gained ground in the drive for control of the Cherbourg peninsula, the tough military chess problem facing Marshals von Rundstedt and Rommel was undersscored by the uneasy probing of Nazi light naval units, searching out Allied ship movements, by failure of the German air force to challenge the Allies seriously, and by Germany's own acknowledgment that the defense lines had been pushed back.

NIGHT

Reflected In Communique

It was reflected especially in a German communique admitting that in fierce fighting the Germans had given ground in the Caen-Bayeux areas—territory which presumably would feel the first effects of new German divisions.

The Berlin correspondent of the Madrid paper ABC wrote that "if the Germans brought 50 or 60 divisions to bear, every Allied soldier could be thrown back into the sea in a few hours. But this is not being done because reserves must be held for other landings or other offensives on other fronts."

"Uncertainty" Noted

A Moscow radio commentator said there was evidence of "uncertainty and irresolution" on the part of the German command, which could not make up its mind whether to throw in all its forces. He said the Germans were "badly worried" by the scale of Allied air-borne operations.

"It is clear," one enemy report said, "that six American divisions have received orders to take Cherbourg at any price. Cherbourg is the basis for Montgomery's chief assignment—opening of an offensive bridgehead in the Cherbourg peninsula, where he can assemble his remaining 16 divisions still in southeastern England.

"Once this is achieved, he presumably would attempt to drive southeast toward the interior of France."

Allies Jockey Germans Into Tough Position

JUN 11 1944

By Judson O'Quinn

London, June 10 (AP)—Allied strategy for defeat of Germany mapped at Teheran now is under its severest test of steel on the beaches of France.

Now on hand in Britain, America's top army, navy and air force commanders—Gen. George C. Marshall, Admiral Ernest King and Gen. H. H. Arnold—will watch the most critical phase of the battle for the Cherbourg peninsula.

DAY

May Reinforce Units

They will see in the next few days whether German Field Marshal Rudolf Gerd von Runstedt elects to send in still stronger forces under cover of the prevailing bad weather in a supreme effort to smash Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's armies before the Allies gain ports needed to land heavy equipment.

Such a German move, however, would leave Nazi troop concentrations vulnerable to air attack during clear weather. It also would commit the German strength—already stretched from the eastern front to the Atlantic Wall via the Mediterranean—to such an extent that more landings by the Allies would be just that much easier.

Any German decision must be made with an eye toward the sustained offensive in Italy by the Fifth and Eighth armies and the constant threat of a mighty new Russian army blow from the east.

Whatever choice Adolf Hitler makes, it is clear that the Allies have jockeyed him and his generals into a difficult position.

Joseph Stalin apparently went home from Teheran satisfied with the western front timetable, but just what part the Soviet is to play is yet to be seen.

Strategy Unfolded

The Allied strategy began unfolding early in the spring with the Russians sustaining the momentum of their winter campaign, the American and British heavy bombers hammering away at German industry, and Allied fighters cutting down the German air force.

Now Nazi military strategy must try to cope with the crowning Allied strategy—the plans for utter defeat of Germany.

1st Allied Nurses Land In France

London, June 10 (AP)—Five American nurses, the first Allied women to fly into the zone of operations, formed part of an evacuation unit which landed on an improvised air strip on Cherbourg peninsula and sent back three plane loads of wounded—the first flown from France.

After spending an hour and a half on French soil with shells burst nearby, they returned to Britain carrying bouquets of red popplies they picked on the battlefields.

Seven wounded prisoners, one a Japanese in German uniform, were among those flown back.

The airstrip used by the Skytrains was 3,600 by 200 feet; constructed by the Ninth Air Force engineering command which arrived at the beachhead the day after the invasion began. Mustangs circled overhead to ward off enemy aircraft when the nurses, doctors and six enlisted medical technicians landed amid the bursts of artillery.

Weather at Beachheads Continues to Improve

JUN 11 1944

Clouds Are High, Wind Light, With Visibility Good

LONDON, June 10 (AP).—The weather over the Dover Strait and the invasion beachheads in France continued to improve tonight, with the barometer rising and visibility fair.

A light northwesterly wind increased slightly after dark, but the sea was calm on this side and only slightly disturbed off the French coast. The sky was overcast, but the cloudbank was high and light. The temperature still was unseasonably low, reading 50 degrees at 10 p. m.

NIGHT

For a time during the afternoon the French coast was clearly visible across the Channel.

WEATHER IMPROVED IN DOVER STRAIT

London, June 10 (A. P.).—Daybreak brought a slight improvement in the still unsettled weather in Dover Strait today and visibility was much improved after the shutdown yesterday caused by mist.

The sky was overcast, with a high ceiling of clouds breaking in places. The wind still was fresh from the southwest and the sea was lumpy. It was cool.

The rain stopped before dawn, but by 8 A. M. (2 A. M. Eastern war time) there were more spatters. The barometer remained steady during the night after yesterday's fall.

Later this morning the sky was clear of clouds to the west and the light breeze had veered around more to the northwest. The sea was smoother and the visibility continued to improve. At 9 A. M. the temperature was 50 degrees.

TOULON ATTACKED BY ALLIED WARSHIPS

JUN 1 1944

LONDON, Sunday, June 11—(AP) The Vichy radio reported last night that Allied warships had attacked Toulon, great French naval base on the Mediterranean.

The broadcast claimed German coastal batteries had sunk one "gunboat." No landings were reported.

Germans Eager to Surrender

LONDON, June 10 (AP).—Some Germans in Normandy are so panicky they seek to surrender at the very approach of Allied troops, a Royal Air Force bomber crew discovered. The R. A. F. crew, forced down after towing a glider to France, was captured and locked up in a chateau. Canadian forces advanced toward the chateau—and the Nazi guards surrendered to their prisoners.

Report: Nazi General Captured

New York, June 10 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Company, in a report recorded by NBC in New York, said tonight that a German general and his entire staff had been captured in France.

Is First Yank To Use RCA's French Field

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 10 (AP)—Lieut. Frederick S. Rutan, of Wollaston, Mass., a United States Eighth Air Force fighter pilot, became the first American to land on the Royal Canadian Air Force landing strip in France today, so pleasing the ground crew that they presented him with a German helmet as a souvenir.

NIGHT

Rutan's landing was an emergency. His radio had caught fire from a short circuit and he didn't want to fly over the Channel with it.

Brothers Start Third Invasion

A BEACHHEAD IN FRANCE, June 9 (Delayed) (AP).—Two brothers landed today to begin their third invasion together—Sergeants Joseph and Fred Peltier, of Norwichtown, Conn., machine-gunners in an infantry outfit which gained high honors in Africa and Sicily.

Pin-Up Gals Get Around

With the British Eastern Fleet, June 10 (AP)—They're the same the world over. Pin-up girls are international. You find them in British petty officers' quarters, and on the bulkheads of Japanese, Chinese, French, Italian, British, Dutch and, of course, American crews.

Reprimanded 'Chutist Will Be Decorated

London, June 10 (AP)—Col. Ralph Bagby, of Evanston, Ill., the first paratrooper to return to England from France, and who helped plan the air-borne operations for the invasion, was A. W. O. L. when he went along and made his first parachute jump during the initial stages of the invasion.

Colonel Bagby, who said he went along to "see how things were going," has been reprimanded and will be decorated. As a staff officer, he was not supposed to take an active part in the operations.

NIGHT

The colonel dropped from a troop-carrying plane four hours before landing barges touched the French coast invasion day. Bagby said he and the men with him "just raised hell generally" with German fortifications and gun positions.

Rangers Insist He's 'One-Man Army' Guy

On the Normandy Beach, June 9 (AP—Delayed)—Pfc. Harry W. Roberts, of Charleroi, Pa., finally had to stop fighting and let himself be taken to England for medical treatment, but his fellow-rangers still insisted tonight that he was another o fthose "one-man-army" guys.

A shell splinter tore into his neck shortly after the D-day landing, and that seemed to annoy him, because in the course of the next couple of days he destroyed at least two machine-gun emplacements with grenades, manned a Vickers gun, and finally stole a mortar from under the Germans' noses and turned their weapon upon them.

Nazis in Holland Plan Quick Departure

JUN 11 1944

London, June 10 (A. P.).—German civilians in occupied Holland have been warned to prepare for a speedy departure from that country, the Dutch news agency Aneta said today.

Nazi-Conscripted Poles Are Asked Not To Fight

New York, June 10 (AP)—A spokesman for General Eisenhower broadcast today a message to Poles who have been forced to fight in German armies, directing them not to shoot Allied soldiers and to come over to the Allied side.

"Do not shoot at the soldiers of the Allied armies," said the message beamed to Europe by the British Broadcasting Company and recorded by the Blue Network. "If you are forced to shoot, take care to miss. At first opportunity come over to the Allied armies, or hide and await their arrival."

Polish soldiers also were instructed to request separation from German prisoners if captured and to ask to be put in touch with Polish authorities in London.

De Gaulle Fears Allied Rule

London, June 10 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle said today that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's proclamations to the French people on D-day and later occasions seem to foreshadow a sort of taking-over of power in France by the Allied military command.

"This situation is obviously not acceptable for us and it could provoke in France itself incidents which it seems to us must be avoided," he told interviewers.

Currency Problem

"On the other hand," de Gaulle continued, "the issue in France of so-called French currency without any agreement and without any guarantee from the French authority can only lead to serious complications. At the moment when the battle is being joined on the soil of France, the French Government is eager in common interest to see an end to such confusion and infringement."

De Gaulle, head of the French Committee on National Liberation, said France "is waging war like her Allies in full sovereignty," and served notice she intended "tomorrow to make peace also in full sovereignty." He made his statements in an iterview with the French Independent News Agency.

He said he would "be hnored" to visit President Roosevelt, who has issued him an invitation, and "talk over with the President problems of common interest to the United States and France."

Tojo's Note To Hitler

New York, June 10 (AP)—Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo's "message of encouragement" to Adolf Hitler yesterday on occasion of the Allied invasion of northern France was "played up with banner headlines" in this morning's Tokyo papers, according to a Tokyo English-language broadcast beamed to the United States today and recorded by United States Government monitors.

HUGE AIR FLEET USED BY ARMY

At Least 2 Divisions Landed In French Invasion

Washington, June 10 (AP)—The War Department, in a statement declaring the European invasion spearheads involved the "greatest employment of air-borne forces ever known," implied tonight that the equivalent of two air-borne divisions was ferried by air to France early in the Allied assault.

The fleet of planes used, the statement said, was "more than three times the total of transports operated by commercial airlines in the United States before the war."

(Commercial airlines operated about 350 planes in that period, suggesting that the transports used in the invasion totaled more than 1,050. The army's statement said the Americans used skytrain transports, each capable of carrying 24 soldiers, fully armed and equipped, which would present a total figure in excess of 24,000 men. However, space would have to be allowed for vehicles, guns and other bulky equipment).

Two Per Cent. Loss Reported

"On the basis of early reports," the statement said, "it was estimated that losses in the troop-carrying operations were only about two per cent. of the total number of aircraft employed." This figure was described as much less than had been expected in view of the magnitude of the operation and the opposition encountered.

(The two per cent. estimate mentioned would, on the basis of the apparent total number of transports used, suggest that losses amounted to about 20 planes.)

"The troop carriers," the army said, "are designed for speed and maneuverability, and armor protection is sacrificed in order to achieve maximum loading capacity.

Carry No Guns

"They have neither guns nor self-sealing gasoline tanks, receiving protection from an escort of fighter planes. Adding such equipment would have slowed down production and reduced operating efficiency."

"The transports, operating under the Ninth Air Force in England, . . . are responsible for carrying paratroops and air-borne infantry with their arms and supplies into the combat zone, resupplying these troops and transporting replacements and evacuating the wounded from combat areas."

18 HOSPITAL SHIPS IN SERVICE SOON

Six More To Be Added To Fleet By End Of Year

Washington, June 10 (AP)—A fleet of 18 hospital ships will be in service by the end of June, several of them leaving East Coast and Gulf ports, to bring back wounded from battlefields in France, the War Department said today.

Six more ships will be added to the mercy fleet by the end of the year. The 24 vessels will have a capacity of more than 14,000 patients, of whom about 3,300 will be walking wounded.

Eight In Operation

The ships are operated under direction of the Transportation Corps of the Army Service Forces. Eight now are in operation and ten more soon will be commissioned. The latter are being converted from former army transports and cargo vessels.

Except for the crew, the army medical department staffs the hospital ships, which, in accordance with international treaties, are marked to be clearly recognizable as unarmed hospital vessels—white hull with horizontal green band and a huge red cross on both sides illuminated at night. The ships' crews are employed under civil service status.

Ten Shps Named

The ten new ships and ports from which they are sailing this month are:

John L. Clem, from New Orleans; Ernest Hinds, from San Francisco; Marigold, from Seattle; Larkspur, from Jacksonville; Meany, from Boston, and Dogwood, Blanche F. Sigman, Emily H. M. Weder and Wistaria, all from New York.

The tenth ship is the Mercy, sailing from Los Angeles. This is a navy ship operated for the army.

FOOD FOR EUROPE ALREADY IN STOCK

Continent Can Be Fed Without Rationing U. S.

New York, June 10 (AP)—There is enough food to supply actual relief demands of invaded Europe during the next 15 months "without curbing civilian consumption in the United States," the American Institute of Food Distribution declared today.

"Food rationing, except probably milk products, will not need to be continued while taking care of malnutrition and actual food needs of about 270,000,000 European people, whom we are starting to release from German domination," the non-profit research agency added.

Although supplying milk will be a "serious problem," the food institute said other relief foods—wheat or flour, sugar, fats, dry beans and peas, pork and salt—have been accumulated by the army and through Government buying or should be available from domestic output.

British Reserve Also Noted

"Food stock piles have been built up in Great Britain, North Africa and Italy. The British also have made available food reserves held as protection against return of the U-boat menace," the agency said in its weekly digest to approximately 3,000 food wholesalers, retailers, canners and processors.

The institute said no dried fruits or semi-luxury foods were to be delivered to Europe for relief and no butter and little cheese will be used at first—"unless there is a greater shortage of fats or high protein meats than seems possible."

Danger Is Seen By De Gaulle In Allied Attitude To France

London, June 10 (AP)—Recent Allied proclamations to the French people were criticized today by Gen. Charles de Gaulle as seeming "to announce a sort of assumption of power by the Allied military command in France."

"This situation is obviously not acceptable for us and it could provoke in France incidents which it seems to us must be avoided," the leader of the French Committee of National Liberation, said in an interview.

De Gaulle also criticized the issuing of "so-called French currency without any agreement and without any guarantee from the French authority, and said it "can only lead to serious complications."

"At the moment when the battle is being joined on French soil," de Gaulle added, "the French Government is eager in the common interest to see an end to such confusion and infringement."

De Gaulle, who made the statements in an interview with the French independent news agency, declared that France "is waging war like her Allies in full sovereignty" and intended "tomorrow to make the peace also in full sovereignty."

During the interview de Gaulle said he would be "honored" to visit President Roosevelt, who has issued him an invitation to come to Washington, and "talk over with the President problems of common interest to the United States and France."

Swiss Defense Steps Reported

London, June 10 (AP)—The German radio issued a bulletin today saying the Swiss Federal Council, in agreement with the general staff, had ordered the strengthening of military preparations by the calling up of additional military classes in view of the general situation.

Newsboy Gets Picture From Gen. Eisenhower

Wilson, N. C., June 10 (AP)—Nicky Lazzo, 12-year-old newsboy who sold more than $7,000 in bonds in the third and fourth war loan drives, received the accolade from Allied headquarters today.

A month ago he wrote General Eisenhower for a picture.

Today's mail brought him an autographed photograph and a letter which said:

"Dear Nick:

"Because you have sold so many war bonds and are working so hard to further the war effort I shall be very happy to inclose my autographed photo. Good Luck.

"Dwight D. Eisenhower."

FINNS REPORT SOVIET DRIVE

Moscow, However, Declares Front Is Unchanged

London, June 10 (AP)—The Germans and the Finns said tonight that the Russians had launched a "general offensive" on the Karelian isthmus of the Finnish front above Leningrad, and one Berlin commentator suggested that it might be the opening blow of a Soviet onslaught across the entire eastern front.

Moscow itself said "there were no important changes at the front" during the day. The broadcast Russian communique said 14 enemy planes were shot down Friday, but made no mention of any other action.

A supplement t the communique reported a small Russian gain north of Iasi in Romania and said Red army units had broken up an attack by a battalion of German infantry and tanks southeast of Stanislawow in Old Poland.

Berlin Tests 5 Other Areas

Berlin said there was accelerated action on five sectors of the eastern front in addition to the new action in Karelia.

From the Iasi front in Romania to the long-dormant northern theater suspense was heightened as the third anniversary of Hitler's June 22 invasion of Russia approached.

The Finnish army communique broke the first word of the reported new offensive, declaring that the Russians early yesterday morning started a general offensive on the Karelian isthmus, supported by "particularly heavy artillery fire and strong air forces."

Claim Attacks Repulsed

"Attacks made at various places were repulsed except for a few small and limited penetrations," the bulletin said. "The enemy sustained considerable losses in killed and more than 10 tanks were destroyed. Our fighters and anti-aircraft defense shot down a total of 24 enemy planes.

"The battle continues."

The German Transocean commentator, von Olberg, said over the Berlin radio that it was "too early to judge what tactful and strategic significance can be attached to this blow," but he said that it might well be the initial swing of a Soviet sledge-hammer assault developing across the entire Eastern front.

Suggesting that "it may also constitute a diversionary maneuver to camouflage the real aims of the Russian summer offensive," von Olberg said that German reconnaissance "has determined that main Russian concentrations are in the northern sector, particularly in the rear of Pskov and Ostrov."

Looks For Baltic Break

"The troops thus assembled obviously will be ordered to break through the Baltic countries," this Nazi commentator said.

He said Russian concentrations were observed also "toward Tarnopol and in the Carpthian passes" near the southern end of the front along the northern Romanian, Czechoslovakian and Polish borders and added that "there is no doubt that the push which can be expected will be synchronized with a blow toward Iasi." Around this Romanian town heavy fighting has raged in recent weeks.

The German-controlled Oslo radio reported a flareup in the area of Vitebsk, gateway to Latvia and Lithuania, saying that "northwest of the town the Russians opened an intense artillery barrage on German positions," and "to the southeast they launched a series of medium-sized attacks."

Report From Polish Front

The Oslo radio said also that

Prisoners Aghast; U. S. Is Still Intact

Phoenixville, Pa., June 10 (A. P.).—Sixteen Nazi and three Italian prisoners of war who are patients at Valley Forge General Hospital thought much of the United States was in ruins when they arrived in this country, Lieut. Bayard Stockton, provost marshal, said today.

One believed that New York and points west to Cincinnati had been destroyed, along with cities along the Eastern seaboard, Lieut. Stockton reported.

"on the Polish front the Russians attacked a German strong point south of Luck on the main Kiev-Warsaw railroad simultaneously from several sides."

One enemy report which Moscow affirmed was that German tanks had attacked at Tarnopol. The Russians said the Germans at a cost of heavy losses broke into one town but later were thrown out in a counterattack.

The Germans told of local Russian thrusts on the Romanian and Carpathian fronts in the districts of Iasi and Kolomea.

"Reconnoitering activity took place at other parts of our land fronts."

Nazi Blow Crushed

Earlier, Moscow announced that Soviet troops had crumpled a localized German attack northwest of Tarnopol, in old Poland, as Red army preparations for a new eastern front offensive brought more indications of uneasiness in Germany and among the Axis' Balkan satellites.

In a broadcast communique the Russians announced that a tank-supported Nazi infantry regiment broke into one inhabited locality in the Tarnopol region, but had been ejected from the position by a night counterattack. Ten German tanks and two self-propelled guns were declared to have been crippled.

New Height Taken

The war bulletin said Soviet units also have taken another height north of Iasi, in Romania, wiping out more than a company of the enemy. The Nazi radio commentator, Ernst von Hammer, who described the fighting around Iasi Thursday as a new Soviet offensive, reversed himself yesterday and declared that the action there had "petered out somewhat."

A Soviet anti-aircraft battery shot down four German fighter planes out of a formation of 12 which appeared over the Russian lines northeast of Stanislawow, the Russian communique said. Stanislawow is 60 miles southwest of Tarnopol.

General Russian Drive Opened, Finns Say

JUN 11 1944

London, June 10 (AP)—President Eduard Benes of the exiled Czechoslovak Government said in a broadcast to his people today that a "new, powerful and final" Soviet offensive was imminent and "we shall not have to wait long" for an Allied attack from northern Italy upon the Balkans and Germany. "We can now really say that the end of Nazi Germany's domination has begun," he declared.

London, June 10 (AP)—A Finnish communique, quoted by DNB in a Berlin broadcast, said the Russians launched a general offensive, supported by heavy artillery barrages and strong tank formations, on the Karelian Isthmus north of Leningrad yesterday.

The German Transocean news agency also reported that the Russians had launched an attack on the Karelian Isthmus, Reuter said.

"The enemy in the early morning hours of yesterday started a general offensive on the Karelian Isthmus, supported by particularly fierce artillery fire and strong air formations," said the communique, as quoted by DNB.

Minor Breaches Admitted

"The attacks, which were launched at various points, were frustrated, except for some minor breaches of local importance.

"The enemy suffered a considerable number of fatal casualties. Ten enemy tanks were destroyed. Our fighters and anti-aircraft defense downed 24 enemy machines. The battle is still in full swing.

Tito's Partisans Gain Offensive In Sanjak

JUN 11 1944

London, June 10 (AP) — Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisians have broken the German offensive in some sections of the Western Bosnian front and launched counterattacks, a broadcast communique by the Free Yugoslav radio said tonight.

In Eastern Bosnia and Sanjak, Partisians have taken the offensive and levied a heavy toll on the Nazis, the war bulletin stated, and more than 200 Germans were killed in widespread guerrilla attacks on rail and highway traffic.

8 Nazi Officials Listed as Lidice War Criminals

JUN 11

Allied Committee Acts on Second Anniversary of Czech Village Massacre

LONDON, June 10 (AP).—On the second anniversary of the Lidice massacre, eight Nazi officials and "certain unknown culprits" accused of responsibility in the destruction of the Czechoslovak mining village have been put on the United Nations' official list of war criminals, it was announced today.

The United Nations Committee for the Investigation of War Crimes took action on accusations brought by the Czechoslovak Ministry of Interior charging murder, robbery, deportation, enslavement and larceny.

The action means that those on the list for the Lidice crime will be marked for capture by any of the United Nations, brought to justice after the war and tried in a Czechoslovakian court under the Czech penal code.

The action stemmed from the tragedy which shocked the world on June 10, 1942, when the men of Lidice were slain and the women and children were sent to concentration camps. The only two men from the town known to be survivors are now in the Royal Air Force.

Among those named as responsible were Karl Hermann Frank, Reich protector or Bohemia-Moravia, and Kurt Daluege, a Gestapo general and at that time Reich protector.

The Interior Ministry's accusation also cited for later determination and trial all those participating in an executive capacity in Lidice's destruction.

YANK ARMY DRIVE SLOWED IN ITALY

NOREARD

Retreating Germans Make Stand Near Village of Viterbo.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN ITALY, June 10.—(AP) Nazi forces in Italy, fleeing northward in a rout that the Allied command declared had become a "catastrophe," turned to make a stand of stubborn but not fully-disclosed proportions late today around a village some miles northeast of Viterbo, which is 40 miles above Rome.

George Tucker, Associated Press correspondent with the Fifth army in the field, wrote in a dispatch timed 9:30 p. m. tonight that the previously almost-unopposed race of the Allies to overtake the retreating Germans had slowed perceptibly when they ran into a maze of German 88-millimeter and anti-tank guns in and around the village.

Bring Up Tanks

The Allies brought up tanks, infantry and artillery, and the fighting "quickly assumed the character of a sizable action," Tucker said.

Indications were that the Fifth army, which has advanced at a speed of about 15 miles a day since the fall of Rome last Sunday, had succeeded in its racing efforts to overtake and engage some important units of Col. Gen. Eberhard Von Mackensen's 14th army.

Capturing the ancient town of Tuscania, 13 miles northeast of Tarquinia, which fell Friday, the Fifth army had fanned out with just such an overtaking battle intended.

Earlier Saturday a headquarters spokesman had described the German army as "retreating in a completely disorganized fashion," with the Fifth army "unable to catch up with any important element of it," despite the speed of pursuit.

Tucker wrote tonight that the Germans were beaten "but by no means disorganized."

British Capture Towns

The German withdrawal before the British Eighth army on the Adriatic front, first announced yesterday, continued with the Allies advancing more than five miles and capturing the battle-wrecked towns of Orsogna, Guardiagrele, Miglionico and Filetto and crossing the river Foro.

The Eighth army front east of Rome also was advanced as Allied troops, fighting their way through demolitions and minefields in the rough country, captured Moricone, 11 miles north of Tivoli, and Arsoli, nine miles northwest of Subiaco.

Catastrophic

NOREARD

Rome, June 10 (AP)—The German 14th Army fled northward today with increasing disorder, and the Allied command for the first time declared officially that a "catastrophe" has befallen Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's forces in Italy.

Slashing steadily northward after the retreating foe, the Fifth Army captured the ancient town of Tuscania, 13 miles northeast of Tarquinia.

Despite the great speed of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's troops, which have averaged roughly 15 miles daily since the fall of Rome, an official spokesman declared they are "unable to catch up with any important elements of Col. Gen. Eberhard von Mackensen's 14th Army which is withdrawing in this area in a completely disorganized fashion."

The Eighth Army also picked up speed in its northward advance near the Adriatic.

Mackensen's flight was considered a peril to the Nazi 10th Army, whose withdrawal northward on the east side of the Tiber has been slower and more orderly, due largely to demolitions, mine fields and the mountainous terrain, which made close pursuit by the British 8th Army difficult.

"East of the Tiber river the German 10th Army is robbed of the support of its sister army and now has to provide out of its own means flank protection against the threat represented by the Allied advance to the Viterbo area," the spokesmen said.

"Here, too, there is considerable disorganization noted and prisoners recently taken include cooks, butchers, bakers, some no more than 14 years old.

"Losses in the Tenth Army continue heavy and the Hermann Goering Division in particular has been reduced to a strength comparable with that with which it straggled back from Sicily."

With the taking of Tuscania, Tarquinia and Vetralla, the Fifth Army now has fanned out on a broad front more than 50 miles to the northwest from Rome, and at the same time has stabbed at least 40 miles north of the capital city in a drive beyond Veterbo, a provincial capital and communications center which was a medieval rival to Rome.

Moricone Captured

The Eighth Army captured Moricone, 11 miles north of Tivoli and Arsoli, nine miles northwest of Subiaco.

In the Adriatic sector Eighth Army units advanced as much as five miles. The battered towns of Orsogna and Guardiagrele, as well as Miglionico and Filetto, were occupied and the river Foro crossed.

The Germans left Guardiagrele in flames, then shelled the ruins to delay occupation.

The continued demoralization of Kesselring's forces was due in a large measure to the Allied air onslaughts. Mediterranean Army Air Force fighter bombers yesterday were credited officially with destroying 246 motor vehicles and 300 rail cars, damaging 150 vehicles and 130 rail cars and knocking out great numbers of horsedrawn carts.

Elaborating on the catastrophe that has befallen the German armies in Italy, an official spokesman said "we continue to pick up stragglers and deserters from all manner of units," adding that the only orderly unit encountered in the last few days has been the 20th Luftwaffe Field Division which was sent hastily from Denmark.

Meanwhile inroads were made on the German air force.

Thirty-four enemy planes were shot down by more than 500 heavy bombers. The MAAF lost 23 planes, including 18 heavies.

Barracks Blasted

Despite cloudy conditions, the bombers hit buildings and barracks at the Riem airdrome east of Munich, as well as the city's industrial area. Rail yards and lines toward Augsburg and Ingolstadt were also battered.

Fifteenth Air Force Headquarters, Italy, June 10 (AP)—Squadrons of Lightnings in the longest fighter-bomber mission ever flown in this theater attacked the last major refinery still producing in Romania's Ploesti oil fields today and left the target enveloped in smoke.

Then as these fast twin-finned fighters turned for the 500-mile flight back to base they blasted out of the sky a number of the nearly 100 Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs that rushed up to meet them.

Over The Trees To Bucharest

All the way to Bucharest the Lightnings thundered at tree-top level, then they rose for the dive-bombing attack on the refinery—the Romana Americana—which had stood intact through three heavy bomber raids designed to dry up this important source of Nazi oil.

Before this daring foray, heavy bombers had cut the total Romanian oil production an estimated 90 per cent. The Romana Americana formerly was a subsidiary of Standard of New Jersey.

Uses Up Ammunition

The formation, led by Lieut. Col. William P. Litton, of Shaw, Miss., used up its ammunition on the return trip by strafing locomotives and tank cars.

Other Mediterranean heavy bombers, possibly 500 strong, kept up the blows against German oil by attacking the Aquila refinery at Trieste among other targets, sending smoke columns 15,000 feet above the city. Trieste had been hit by RAF bombers a few hours earlier.

Rail yards at Trieste also were bombed along with oil storage tanks at Porto Maghera, near Venice, and an airdrome at Ferrara.

The Aquila refinery is one of the largest available to the Germans outside Romania.

Fighters Rip Last Big Ploesti Refinery

JUN 11 1944

Fifteenth Air Force Headquarters, Italy, June 10 (AP)—Swarms of American Lightnings streaked across the Balkans at tree-top levels today bombing and strafing the Romania-Americana oil refinery at Ploesti, last major refinery left operating in Romania. The target was left enveloped in black smoke.

Nearly 100 Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs pounced on the raiders when they finished the attack and started on the last leg of the journey. A number of enemy planes were shot down.

The long-range assault was tried after Fortresses and Liberators in three earlier raids attempted unsuccessfully to bring the Romanian refining industry to a standstill.

Output Cut 90 P. C.

All other major refineries in the Ploesti area have been rendered inactive by the heavy bombers and the total output of the Romanian producers has been cut an estimated 90 per cent.

Lightning formations led by Lieut. Col. William P. Litton, of Shaw, Miss., slipped across Yugoslavia at a low level until they reached Bucharest. Then they climbed and swooped on the target.

Trieste Refinery Hit Again

At the same time heavy bombers of the Fifteenth Air Force attacked a refinery at Trieste which had been a target of RAF night bombers a few hours earlier.

Other targets of the heavies today included oil storage tanks at Porto Marghera, near Venice, and rail yards in Trieste, as well as other points.

More than 500 Fortresses and Liberators participated.

The 500-mile flight to the refinery by the Lightnings was the longest fighter-bomber mission ever flown in this theater. On the return flight the planes strafed locomotives and tank cars.

Negro Pilots Get 5 Nazis

Flying Thunderbolts in Italy They Lose Only One in Battle

ROME, June 10 (AP).—The only Negro fighter group in the United States Air Force, penetrating ahead of the 15th Air Force bombers bound for Munich yesterday, battled twenty Nazi attackers and sent five of them crashing to the earth, it was disclosed today.

Only one plane in the Negro fighter group was lost. The encounter occurred near Udine, in northern Italy. The group, commanded by Colonel Benjamin O. Davis jr., of New York, was flying new Thunderbolts.

New Italy Cabinet Snubs Umberto

Rome, June 10 (AP)—The Italian Cabinet of Premier Ivanoe Bonomi assumed office today without taking the customary oath to the Crown, as represented by Crown Prince Umberto.

Instead the 17 Ministers pledged themselves to the Premier to fulfill their duties according to the constitution. Some of the Cabinet opposed taking the oath to the Crown on the grounds the question of whether Italy will continue as a monarchy will be decided at the close of hostilities.

Acclaimed By Backers

Umberto, while snubbed by the Government, nevertheless received an acclamation from supporters among the people as he prepared to leave Rome for Naples.

The Government also prepared to leave Rome as Salerno will remain Italy's provisional capital as long as Rome is considered in the zone of military operations.

Excitement continued high in Rome and among many rumors was one that an attempt had been made on the Crown Prince's life. But highly placed officials, both Allied and Italian, said they knew nothing of such an incident and Umberto's supporters said the rumors were spread by his enemies.

Embassy Explosion

Another cause of excitement was an explosion in the German Embassy as Allied soldiers searched the building and uncovered a large amount of explosives in the cellar. One case of explosives blew up smashing windows but causing no serious casualties.

Other causes of excitement were the arrest of Fascist spies and stragglers of the German army pulled out of their hiding places. In many cases Romans threatened to attack the prisoners, and had to be held back by Allied soldiers.

Rome, June 10 (AP)—Dr. Vincenzo Azzolini, 64, governor of the Bank of Italy and holder of several high offices under the Fascist regime, was removed from office and placed under guard in "house arrest" in his home today by the AMG.

Fraser in Rome To See Pope

Rome, June 10 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand has arrived in Rome, the first head of any United Nations Government to come since the city's capture by the Allies.

JAPS MAKE STAND SOUTH OF KOHIMA

Rearguards Battle Pursuers 8 Miles From City

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, June 10 (AP)—Rearguards of Japanese forces fleeing the Kohima area in India fought pursuing Allied troops eight miles southeast of the city as the enemy apparently abandoned villages along the road another six miles to the south, it was disclosed today.

Japanese forces covering the withdrawal made a stand at Vismema. A communique said that except for continuing operations north of Kanglatongbi and the repelling of two Japanese counterattacks 15 miles north of Imphal, where the Allies occupied "important features," the rest of the Indian front remained unchanged.

Fight Around Kohima

To the east, fighting continued in and around the besieged Japanese North Burma stronghold of Myitkyina.

Chinese, American and British troops were tightening their lines around the city against continued resistance, a communique said, while in the Mogaung Valley Chinese troops killed 50 Japanese and captured four field guns southeast of Pahkren and Sakan.

To the west of Myitkyina, south of the enemy base of Kamaing, the communique said, the Chinese consolidated a roadblock at Seton by eliminating two enemy positions and killing 60 Japanese, drawing a noose tighter about the city.

South of Mogaung, at Pinhmi, Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's airborne Chindits seized large dumps containing about 200 rail wagon loads of ammunition, the bulletin said.

Jap Opposition Met By Allies Near Kohima

Southwest Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 10 (AP)—Allied troops were reported today to have met opposition eight miles southeast of the Indian town of Kohima, but the Japanese apparently have abandoned villages along a road another six miles to the south.

Farther south, Allied troops won important features 15 miles above Imphal after beating back two Japanese counterattacks, the communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said.

In the Mogaung Valley of northern Burma, Chinese troops consolidated their roadblock at Seton, south of Kamaign, and at Pinhmi, south of Mogaung. Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's forces seized large dumps with 200 railways cars of ammunition.

Allied planes again struck Japanese communications and positions over a wide area.

Chinese Throw Block Across Lungling Road

Chungking, June 10 (AP)—Chinese forces threw a strong roadblock across the Burma road south of Mangshih and 22 road miles to the northeast stormed the northern and eastern gates of Lungling after occupying the southern portion of that second most important Japanese base in Yunnan province, the Chinese communique announced tonight.

This slashing Chinese Salween river offensive menaced the main Japanese base of Tengchung, 40 miles to the northwest of Lungling, and threatened to cut off large concentrations of enemy troops there and to the north, a Chinese army spokesman said.

Mopping Up Outside Lungling

Other Chinese units were mopping up remnants of the outer defenses of Lungling, which first were pierced last Wednesday, the communique said, while troops to the southwest who had cut the Burma road near Mangshih surrounded Hsiangta, east of that town. Chinese troops were said to hold all but one of the enemy's defensive strong points in that sector.

About 20 miles northeast of Lungling, south of Chenanso, which was reported captured by Chinese troops yesterday, Japanese suffered heavy casualties and loss of stores and material when the Chinese stormed a garrison. Tapa, in that area, was captured, the communique said.

Lungling was described by Major General Sung Hsi-lien, commander of an army group on this front, as one of the major objectives of the Chinese Salween River offensive which has been rolling ahead steadily since its start last May 11.

General Sung was quoted in a delayed dispatch from William Boni, Associated Press correspondent at the front, as saying that with elimination of Japanese from the surrounding area it would be merely a matter of four days before engineers could link the ends of the Burma Road with a truck ferry and ease the supply burden now borne by thousands of civilians and soldier-coolies.

Japan Reports Changsha Falls Without a Siege

Says Troops Entered City Early Saturday; Hankow Rail Line Is Imperiled

CHUNGKING, June 10 (AP).—Advancing Japanese forces are bombarding the Hunan Province capital of Changsha and are hammering from the northeast and northwest against this major goal of an all-out offensive, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

Northeast of Changsha, the Japanese maneuvered for a position from which to outflank the defenders, and to the east, were repulsed in an attempted new crossing of the Laotao River, last line of defense before the city, the high command said.

A communique reported grim fighting in the "outer defenses." Changsha's fall would open the way for complete enemy conquest of the Canton-Hankow railway route.

Northwest of Changsha, below captured Siangyin, thirty miles from the capital, fighting continued as the enemy attempted to obstruct possible flow of reinforcements for the beleaguered defenders of the capital, and fifty miles northwest of Changsha, the communique reported, the Japanese reached Yiyang's outskirts.

On the other side of the lake, a supplementary communique claimed, the Chinese completely reoccupied Nanhsien, forty miles west-southwest of the north Hunan Japanese base of Yoyang (Yochow), and that several other strategic points south of the Yangtze River were seized.

Chinese Troops Take Part Of Lungling

Chungking, June 10 (AP)—Hard-fighting Chinese forces have smashed into the southern sector of Lungling, and have occupied that portion of the second most important Japanese base in Yunnan province, and 22 road miles to the southwest have established a strong roadblock south of Mangshih, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

A Chinese spokesman at the front was quoted as saying fall of the Burma Road city of Lungling, 100 airline miles from the north Burma fighting around Myitkyina, would endanger large Yunnan enemy forces to the north.

Spearhead Nears Tengchung

Front dispatches said the Chinese had pushed a small spearhead within 12 airline miles of Tengchung, 40 miles northwest of Lungling, and are closing in on the Japanese headquarters at Watien.

FLYERS AID CHINESE

Chungking, June 10 (A. P.).—American fighters ranging over a wide area in support of the embattled Chinese attacked Japanese positions in Hupeh and Honan provinces, and Liberator bombers in a sweep off the south China coast sank a 1,700-ton enemy freighter and seriously damaged a 2,700-ton vessel, Lieut.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

Along the Yangtze River rocket-firing P-40s struck military installations, warehouses and factory districts in Shasi, Japanese Hupeh base. P-40s on the Honan front flew strafing missions along the Yellow River, shooting up enemy cavalry concentrations in the area from Nanyang to Lushan.

Japanese forces east of the Canton-Hankow railway city of Changsha were foiled in new attempts to cross the Laotao River, second and last barrier before the city, a Chinese communique said tonight. Yesterday the Chinese communique said some enemy forces had crossed the river. Fighting also continued about thirty miles northwest of the city.

Chinese General Dies in Battle

Chungking, June 10 (A.P.)—Gen. Li Chin Yu, Commander in Chief of China's Thirty-sixth Group Army, was killed in action May 21 near Loning in Honan Province, it was disclosed officially today.

NAVY THWARTS RELIEF OF BIAK

Japanese Warships Chased Away By Allied Vessels

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Sunday, June 11 (AP)—Five Japanese destroyers attempting to sneak supplies and personnel to the enemy's garrison on Biak in the Schouten islands were intercepted Thursday night by American and Australian destroyers which chased them for an hour and a half.

One enemy destroyer probably was damaged by long-range fire as the pursuers closed to about six miles, headquarters said today in announcing the action off north Dutch New Guinea.

Follows Sinking Of Four

This thwarting of Japanese reinforcement efforts occurred less than 24 hours after another Biak-bound group of warships was attacked by Allied planes which sank four destroyers, damaged a fifth and caused a cruiser and destroyer to flee.

The naval interception, 100 miles northwest of Biak, placed Allied warships on patrol well beyond the invasion scene.

On Biak, where the Yank Sixth Army units invading the island May 27 now occupy an airdrome within bombing range of the Philippines, the invaders mopped up Japanese in caves along ridges near the airfield.

3 Merchant Ships Sunk

To the west of the invasion scene, near Manokwari, three small enemy merchantmen were sunk Friday by Liberators.

Seizure of Biak's Mokmer Field also has put Palau in the western Carolines within fighter range of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's air arm. It already was brought within bomber range by earlier capture of the Wakde Island airdrome 200 miles southeastward and today headquarters reported that Palau was bombed Thursday night.

This was the first announced land-based air strike at Palau, previously hit by carrier planes of a task force.

Headquarters today also announced a 44-ton bombing of Truk in the central Carolines by Liberators from the Admiralty Islands.

Malaria Cut 95% On New Guinea

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, June 4 (AP—Delayed)—Allied headquarters today announced a reduction of malaria fever cases among American officers and men in New Guinea by 95 per cent. in 15 months.

Military leaders rank success of the anti-malaria campaign on a par with combat victories.

A year ago malaria was putting more fighting men on the non-effective list than any other cause. Today it is less than secondary, according to Brig. Gen. Guy B. Benit, chief surgeon, USA, Far East.

With the lesson of Bataan in mind, Gen. Douglas MacArthur ordered the malaria prevention studies. More than 2,000 of the 36,000 troops on Bataan were disabled or weakened by malaria after preventive medicines were exhausted.

American and Australian army scientists and Medical Corps officers conducted the New Guinea studies. In 1943 the malaria rate for United States fighting men there was 962 attacks per 1,000 a year. In April, 1944, the attacks fell to 45.1 per 1,000, and of the total only 14.2 represented relapses.

During February, 1943, 23 out of 1,000 men of the Southwest Pacific Command were in hospitals every day for malaria alone. During March, 1944, the rate dropped to two out of 1,000.

New Aerial Attacks Thrown Against Truk

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 10 (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz today announced new air attacks against Truk, the Marshalls and two Japanese-occupied phosphate islands south of the Equator.

Liberators of the Seventh Army Air Force bombed Truk atoll without opposition Thursday. The Pacific fleet's Second Air Wing sent a search plane against Puluwat Island, 165 miles west of Truk, Friday, and knocked out enemy gun positions.

Ponape Hangars Bombed

Aircraft hangars and shops on Ponape Island, east of Truck, underwent seventh air force attacks on Wednesday and Thursday.

Ventura search planes on Wednesday bombed Japanese installations on Ocean and Nauru islands. Mitchells attacked Nauru's coastal guns in the face of intense anti-aircraft fire Thursday.

Although Ocean Island, 175 miles east of Nauru, had been hit frequently from the Solomons, this was its first raid by land-based planes from central Pacific bases.

Tor River Beachhead Smashed, Taps Claim

New York, June 10 (AP)—The Japanese news agency Domei quoted a South Pacific front war correspondent today as saying a fierce Japanese attack after ten days of preparation had smashed completely the American beachhead at the estuary of the Tor river in northern New Guinea. Routing a full division of American troops on the beach line.

The broadcast said an "overpowering counter-offensive" got under way May 27, and that "the debacle was so complete that the enemy sustained more than 3,000 dead and wounded" in a seven-day battle from which remnants "barely managed to escape to the island of Wadke" off the New Guinea coast.

There was no Allied confirmation of these claims.

Other Japanese radio reports said 13 United States B-24 bombers raided Truk Thursday morning, while nine others hit Mille Island, in the Marshalls, and 34 planes bombed the Japanese base at Rabaul, on New Britain Island.

As usual, the Japanese reports claimed "no damage."

Pacific Natives Sell Modern Souvenirs

Guadalcanal, June 10 (AP)—Natives on this historic island have built a profitable sideline selling souvenirs to American soldiers.

Their line consists of grass skirts, shells, beads, war clubs and engraved walking sticks.

An ambitious native brought out a new-type souvenir in keeping with the times: Hand-carved models of the Liberator bomber.

NAVY HONORS BALLENTINE

Rear Admiral Gets Star, Legion of Merit, for Pacific Feats

HONOLULU, June 10 (AP)—The skill and daring with which Rear Admiral John J. Ballentine of Hillsboro, Ohio, commanded his aircraft carrier in recent actions in the Central and South Pacific has won for him the Navy Silver Star and the Legion of Merit.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet, presented the medals to Admiral Ballentine.

The Silver Star citation read in part:

"For gallantry during attacks on the enemy. The task group of which his ship was a part was subjected to heavy and sustained air attack, but so skillfully did he fight his ship that severe losses were inflicted upon the enemy without damage to the defense of the entire task group and the success of its missions."

The Legion of Merit citation said Admiral Ballentine "contributed greatly to the neutralization of enemy forces in two important areas of conflict."

ADMIRAL TRAIN IS SHIFTED

Panama Frontier Chief Called to Capital for New Post

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone, June 10 (AP)—Rear Admiral Harold C. Train, commandant of the Panama Sea Frontier and Fifteenth Naval District since October, 1943, has been directed to report to Washington for a new assignment. Capt. Ellis Stone, of 17 East Eighty-fourth Street, New York, became acting commandant at transfer ceremonies this afternoon.

Rear Admiral Train, formerly director of Naval Intelligence, took command of the Panama Sea Frontier on Oct. 14, 1943, relieving Rear Admiral C. E. Van Hook. As a captain he had been appointed Director of Navy Intelligence in August, 1942, and in the same year he was promoted to Rear Admiral on nomination of President Roosevelt.

Hirohito Opens Drive To Raise Food Output

New York, June 10 (AP)—To launch a Japanese drive for increased Japanese food production, the Tokyo radio reported today, Emperor Hirohito "with his own hands" planted the "first rice seedling" in a rice planting ceremony on the Imperial Palace grounds and then retired "greatly pleased."

The Tokyo broadcast, recorded by United States Government monitors, said the Japanese had instituted a program of utilizing vacant lots for the purpose of increasing food production.

MIKOLAJCZYK IMPRESSES U. S.

Hopes For Soviet-Polish Settlement Rising

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of Poland has made such a favorable impression on American officials during a week's visit here that hopes were reported rising tonight for reestablishment of relations between the Soviet Union and the Polish exiled Government.

On his first trip to this country Mikolajczyk has had several conferences with President Roosevelt and acting Secretary of State Stettinius. One talk at the White House lasted until midnight.

No Formula Sought

No formula for a settlement with Russia was sought and none was evolved. But the talks have led authorities here to conclude that the Polish Government is willing to negotiate Russian demands regarding the Russo-Polish boundary and to adopt a practical policy of friendship toward Russia.

The Russians might regard as proof of such a policy a shakeup in the Polish Government which would replace men Moscow considers unfriendly. This political issue is believed to be more at the heart of Russian-Polish troubles than the issue over territory.

American officials would not be surprised, in fact, if the Poles eventually prove willing to accept the Curzon Line basis for discussion with the Russians and work out a settlement provided they retain Lwow, a focal point of Polish culture and traditions. Their loss in square miles of territory would be restored by giving Poland East Prussia and possibly other German areas.

Policy On Freed Areas

Meanwhile, the imminence of a great Red army offensive against Germany, which will carry it into territory that Moscow considers strictly Polish, has brought to a critical point the question of what provision Russia will make for the administration of freed areas of Poland.

There is some expectation here that the Russians will not take any action which would prevent their coming to a friendly understanding with the Polish Government later on. They might even follow a policy similar to that of the United States in France. That would mean handling civil administration on an improvised military, rather than a formal, diplomatic basis.

U. S. to Import Argentine Corn Until November

6 Million Bushels in July to Start Easing Shortage for Feed and Processing

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP).—The War Food Administration announced today that it had arranged for the July importation of 6,000,000 bushels of corn from Argentina to help relieve an acute domestic shortage.

Needed for livestock feed and for food processing and other essential war uses, the corn will be brought in under shipping arrangements made with the War Shipping Administration and private importers.

The W. F. A. said the plans are being made for additional shipments until this year's domestic corn crop becomes available in November. No figures as to the total amount to be imported were given in the official announcement, but some officials said 40,000,000 bushels was the present goal.

Domestic corn supplies are at the lowest point for this season of the year since 1937, when a short drought crop forced the country to import supplies. The present situation results largely from a record war-time use of grain.

Officials said the Argentine grain will be allocated among industrial users and feeders, with a few hundred thousand bushels being turned over to Mexico to help relieve a corn food products shortage in that country.

The feed portion of the grain will be distributed among Atlantic seaboard farmers.

The price to the user will be about the same, officials said, as he would pay for domestic corn under current ceiling price regulations.

The import program will supplement a goverament corn purchase campaign being conducted in the Mid-Western corn belt to obtain at least 65,000,000 bushels for war processors until the new crop becomes available.

Brazilian, Who Assessed U. S. Policy, Quits Job

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Dr. Hernane Tavares de Sa, Brazilian educator who yesterday sharply criticized United States policy in Latin America, resigned from the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs about ten days ago, effective June 15, it was learend today.

Nelson Rockefeller, head of the CIAA, accepted Dr. Travares de Sa's resignation when it was tendered. He was employed in the advisor's office of the agency.

Yesterday, during a speech in Frederick, Md., the Brazilian said relations between the United States and aLtin 9merica had deteriorated, and blamed Brazil's economic disruption on American industrial and business policy in his country.

Congratulations to Iceland

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP).—A congratulatory resolution welcoming Iceland as "the newest republic in the family of free nations" was passed unanimously today by the House and sent to the Senate. Iceland will become a repuolic next Saturday as a result of a plebiscite last month which severed its last tie with Denmark.

Finland Held 'Pro-Nazi' By State Department

Washington, June 10 (AP)—The State Department accused the Finnish Government of "pro-German sympathies" today as a result of Finland's suppression of a newspaper because of pro-Allied sympathies.

The statement issued by the department in response to inquiries, indicated that officials here were moving steadily closer to a complete diplomatic break with Finland unless that Scandinavian country gets out of the war quickly.

An Associated Press dispatch from Stockholm yesterday said that the newspaper Svenska Pressen had been banned indefinitely because it favored the Allies too much.

The State Department said:

"We have no official report that the paper has been banned but it would not surprise us. It would be one further indication if any were needed of the pro-German sympathies of the Finnish Government and leaders."

Taylor Asked to Return To Old Post at Vatican

President Requests Reassignment of Representative

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP).—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal representative to the Vatican, has been asked to return to his post as soon as possible. He has been absent from the post since the fall of 1942. His reassignment was made possible by the Allied conquest of Rome.

The State Department issued this statement today:

"Acting Secretary of State Stettinius announced this afternoon that at the request of the President the Honorable Myron C. Taylor has been asked to return to the Vatican as soon as possible as the President's personal representative."

Since his return to America Mr. Taylor has served as vice-chairman of the Advisory Council on Post-War Foreign Policy in the State Department. He went to the Vatican in 1939 as the President's first representative there. He holds the personal rank of ambassador.

U. S. Tanker Is Sunk In Middle Atlantic

Washington, June 10 (AP)—The American tanker Seakay was hit by a torpedo and sunk in the mid-Atlantic several weeks ago, the War Shipping Administration reported today, but only one of the 80 merchant seamen and navy gunners aboard died.

The 11,335-ton tanker was carrying a full cargo of vapor oil and a deckload of material for the European war theater.

Capt. Alfred K. Jorgensen, of Merion, Pa., ordered the vessel abandoned when it became apparent it could not survive. All lifeboats and rafts were picked up by a destroyer within an hour and a half and survivors were taken to Britain.

The lone casualty, a member of the naval armed guard, was drowned when his lifeboat capsized.

FREER WORLD TRADE U.S. AIM

Reciprocal Pacts Seen Core For Post-War Relations

JUN 11 1944

Washington, June 10 (AP)—All the major trading countries of the Allied world have now agreed with the United States Government that international trade must surge upward after the war and that obstacles must be hacked down.

The principle of expanding world trade, set down in the lend-lease agreements, the Atlantic Charter and the United Nations declaration is not new for Americans, but it directly contradicts the between-wars policy of almost every other country.

Ten years ago Monday, in the face of growing trade walls throughout the world, Congress passed the much-debated Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

Scheme Drafted By U. S.

Preparation for war and war itself became greater considerations than trade during the first decade of the act's life, but now American officials are looking to a world where its principle will be part and parcel of every country's foreign poilcy.

Plans have only begun to crystallize, but the United States already has drafted its scheme for freer world trade to show any interested foreign diplomats. It is expected that eventually the United Nations will hold a trade conference similar to the food, relief and monetary conferences and adopt common views. An international secretary may be set up to gather trade information, and settle disputes of fact.

If the United Nations adopt a formula for reducing trade restrictions, officials look to reciprocal agreements as the main method of translating that policy into the duty on French porcelain or Persian rugs.

WORLD MONEY PLAN ASSAILED

JUN 11 1944

Taft Says It Would Be Like Pouring Dollars In Sewer

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Republican opposition to any commitments on a world currency stabilization program at the forthcoming United Nations monetary conference flared up again today with an assertion by Senator Taft (R., Ohio) that American involvement would be "like pouring money down a sewer."

Taft, who heads the Republican Postwar Advisory Committee on Finance and the Republican steering committee of the Senate, told a reporter he is opposed to the principle of setting up any fund "to which we contribute all of the money and somebody else dispenses it."

"The question of currency stabilization is only incidental to the rehabilitation of foreign countries after the war," the Ohioan declared. "If you stabilize currency without taking all of the other steps necessary to get a country on an exporting basis, as the Treasury's plan apparently contemplates, it would be like pouring money down a sewer."

Conference Begins July 1

The broad outlines of a proposed $8,000,000,000 world stabilization fund will be laid before international delegates at a conference at Bretton Woods, N. H., beginning July 1. The Treasury has emphasized that any agreement reached there would be subject to Congressional approval.

As announced by the Treasury, the outline, agreed to in principle by the monetary experts of 34 united and associated nations last April, calls for the United States to contribute about $2,500,000,000 to the fund. Britain would put in about $1,250,000,000, Russia about $1,000,000,000, and the rest would be made up by other nations in accordance with a complicated formula.

While this would be calculated to make all nations participants, Taft said it was his belief the practical effect would be that the United States, by using dollars, would put in the only gildedged security.

Would Be Dollar Support

"The only thing anybody in the world wants now is dollars," he declared. "In effect, our dollars would be backing all of the other countries so that we would be putting up the money."

Taft, who had been mentioned as a possible choice for one of a Congressional delegation of four to the meeting, suggested, instead, that the United States make separate agreements wih Great Britain, Russia and other countries.

It appeared, meanwhile, that Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) might be one of the two Senate delegates to the meeting, despite reported Administration attempts to by-pass a member of Congress who has been severely critical of New Deal policies in the past.

Chairman Wagner (D., N. Y.) of the Senate Banking Committee and Representatives Spence (D., Ky.) and Wolcott (R., Mich.) are expected to be the other members.

Plan To Use Mexicans Dropped

JUN 11 1944

Washington, June 10 (AP)—A plan to import Mexican workers to relieve the acute labor shortage in foundries and forge shops has been abandoned by the War Production Board.

The WPB said the Mexican Government is "not currently in a position" to increase the number of nationals sent to this country for work projects.

Navy Reveals How Marine Died Killing Japs On Tarawa

JUN 11 1944

Washington, June 10 (AP) — Staff Sergeant William J. Bordelon, San Antonio, Texas, died on Tarawa, but before his death he demonstrated that a single marine can, in effect, operate as a one-man landing force.

The navy told his story today—a story of bravery that won for him the nation's highest honor, the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Only Four Companions

Bordelon went ashore with the first assault waves hitting the Gilbert Islands atoll November 20. Withering enemy fire killed all but four of his companions in an amphibious tractor

So Bordelon went to work. He hurriedly prepared demolition charges and personally wiped out two Japanese pillboxes. Then he turned to a third.

Machine-gun bullets struck him, and a demolition charge exploded in his hand, but he grabbed a rifle and provided firing cover for a group of marines scaling the seawall.

Killed In Final Assault

Disregarding his own injuries, he waded into the surf and rescued two wounded men.

"Still refusing first aid for himself," his citation reads, "He again made up demolition charges and singlehandedly assaulted a fourth Japanese machine gun position but was instantly killed when caught in a final burst of fire from the enemy."

Appointed Aide To Stimson

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Lieut. Col. William Harvey Kyle, of Cleveland, has been appointed aide to Secretary Stimson, the army announced today. He succeeds Col. W. H. S. Wright who has been given an unannounced assignment.

Navy Bases Ordered To Curb Use of Fuel

Forrestal Calls for 'Drastic' Measures as War Needs Rise

JUN 11 1944

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP).—Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal has ordered a strict conservation program at all naval shore establishments to conserve fuel of all types.

The Navy said today that the Secretary told the shore bases "drastic measures" are necessary because of "critical shortages" resulting from increased industrial requirements, movements of increasing quantities of fuel to overseas theaters of war, decrease in production in some areas and in some cases insufficient transportation facilities.

"On the Pacific Coast," Mr. Forrestal said, "the demand for oil is much greater than the producing ability of the supplying oil wells. A critical situation already exists and it is anticipated that it will become increasingly difficult to meet the deficit in actual wartime demands from outside sources. This is particularly true in the states of Oregon and Washington.

SCHOOLS SEEN VICTIM OF WAR

Dr. Frazier Points To Dangers Of Teaching Shortage

JUN 11 1944

Washington, June 10 (AP)—War threatens the future intellectual leadership of the nation.

This is why:

Selective service and well-paid war jobs have greatly cut enrollments in high schools and colleges, draining off students and teachers.

College graduating classes this June number half their peak figure of more than 185,000 in 1940. High-school diplomas went to 200,000 fewer students than in the top year of 1942, when they totaled 1,242,375.

Teachers' colleges and normal schools lost even greater numbers. Enrollments in the former dropped 53 per cent. in the last year alone; in the latter, 60 per cent.

Dr. Benjamin Frazier, United States Office of Education, says that one of the most damaging effects of the war is the 69 per cent. decrease in graduate college students during the past four years.

Warning From Educator

An 8.7 per cent. loss in high-school students and a 44 per cent. loss of undergraduate students will add to losses in the graduate schools for years to come, he warns.

"In few other human institutions is the destructive character of war more devastating than in the higher levels of learning," he said in an interview. He pointed out that war's tolls on American education "deprive the nation of many of its potential leaders, scholars and professional workers," and added:

"The supply of young college teachers trained in graduate schools and available to instruct returning veterans, war workers and other college students in the post-war world will be appreciably depleted."

Serious Loss Of Teachers

The most immediately serious loss in education is the rapid departure from Amercan classrooms of thousands of well-trained and competent teachers, both men and women.

Their going is traceable not only to selective service and the lure of high wages but also to the necessity of finding better-paid employment to meet living costs, which have far exceeded their meager teachers' pay.

About 12,500 teachers left the colleges and universities of the country btween June and October, 1943, and more than 2,600 of these vacancies were still unfilled up to October 15, the United States Office of Education reports. In addition there were 7,500 vacant classrooms.

Subjects for which deferments for teachers were recommended are no longer listed, and the prospect for physically qualified teacher registrants, 18 through 25, is service in the armed forces.

Selective service is taking from 90 to 100 per cent. of the civilian men students still left on campuses, including the formerly deferred engineering and technology undergraduates.

Another Deferment Deadline

Under the new draft program, Dr. Frazier says, most men's schools and engineering colleges now have only army and navy training program students, a few classified as 4-F and a scattering of returned veterans. The number of the last is small, despite the fact that about 1,000,000 veterans have been discharged. Many of these are disabled, over age or adjudged misfits.

Office of Education figures show that over an age span of 11 years, an average of 38 per cent. of those who normally would be going to school are in war jobs or the armed services.

Dr. Frazier points out there is a marked tendeency at present to reduce the number of students granted selective service deferment.

July 1 is deferment deadline, for instance, for students pursuing full-time courses in such scientific and specialized fields as areonautical engineering, marine, radio and sanitary engineering, chemistry, physics, mining and the agricultural sciences.

Students of medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine and osteopathy are deferred until graduation. Those in courses preparing to study these subjects may remain until their graduation, provided they will enter into actual classroom work in a recognized school on or before July 1. This also applies to pre-theological students.

Compromise Voted on 'G. I. Bill of Rights'

Broad Plan of Benefits for Veterans of This War Ready for Passage

JUN 11 1944

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP).—A joint Congressional committee settled all its differences today and unanimously approved a broad legislative program of benefits for the veterans of this war.

Expected ratification of the compromise next week will send the legislation to the White House for Presidential action. Arrangements have been made to lay it before the Senate Monday and the House Tuesday or Thursday.

Under the bill, men and women returning from the war will be entitled to hospitalization, educational assistance, aid in getting jobs and unemployment compensation. The cost has been estimated at $3,000,000,000 to $6,500,000,000 but an accurate calculation is impossible.

Only one provision, dealing with job replacement, was in dispute when the Senate-House conferees got together this morning. Fearing a deadlock over that, American Legion representatives had sent an "SOS" to Representative John S. Gibson, Democrat, of Georgia, one of the conferees, at his home at Douglas, Ga., to cast what might be the deciding vote.

Mr. Gibson arrived by plane early this morning. But evidently there wasn't the stalemate the Legion thought; for the first ballot was thirteen to one to accept the Senate's idea of putting job placement under the U. S. Employment Service to avoid setting up a whole new agency in the Veterans' Administration.

To obtain Senate provisions on job placement, the conferees had to accept a House proposal that any benefits a veteran gets under the "G. I. Bill of Rights" be deducted from any bonus granted him after the war.

Here are some of the major things the bill would do:

1. If the veteran should be out of a job during the first two years after his discharge, he could draw $20 a week unemployment compensation for 52 weeks.

2. If his education was interrupted when he put on a uniform—and the bill establishes a presumption of interruption if he entered service before the age of 25—he could get a year's schooling, and in some instances a complete college education. The government would pay $500 for the year's tuition, laboratory fees, books and similar expenses, and $50 a month for subsistence, plus $25 for dependents.

3. If he needed a job, he could enlist the help of the Federal Employment Service.

4. If he needed hospitalization, he would get it through the Veterans' Administration.

Services Limit Cigar Sales

"Ration" Them in U. S. to Assure Plentiful Supply Overseas

JUN 11 1944

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP).—The Navy announced today that sale of cigars on military establishments within the United States will be limited to insure a sufficient supply for men overeas. On May 5 the War Department reported that a total of 750,000,000 cigars had been allocated to the armed services under an agreement with cigar manufacturers.

The Navy did not disclose the extent of the limitation to be placed in effect on sales at Army and Navy posts in the United States.

Army and Navy Draftee Pools To Be Merged

Hershey Orders Boards to End Classification for Branch of Service July 1

JUN 1 1944

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP).—Selective Service headquarters tonight ordered local boards to cease specifying men for Navy or Army duty, announcing that after July 1 both services will draw from a common pool of general service men.

At the same time, Major General Lewis B. Hershey announced that future inductions of limited service men will be carried out only on specific orders from state draft directors.

Registrants currently are earmarked at pre-induction stations for Army or Navy service. After July 1, General Hershey announced, registrants found physically fit for military services may be taken by either of the two branches.

The move is expected to help the Navy complete its expansion to a desired strength of 3,650,000 men by Sept. 1. The Army already has reached its planned strength of 7,700,000.

Establishment of a common pool in many cases will bring about a stricter adherence to the policy of inducting non-fathers before fathers.

Under the current program, the Army pool of men awaiting induction might become larger than the Navy pool, or vica versa. The larger pool, although formed by men examined according to order numbers, might contain numerous non-fathers while the other, subject to a steadier drain, might contain fathers who would be sworn in before the non-fathers of the first group, officials explained.

CENSOR REFUSES SENATORS' REQUEST

Price Declines To Show Papers Without Subpoena

JUN 1 1944

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Declaring that extracts taken by censors from international mail are "part of the secret files of the war," Censorship Director Byron Price refused today to turn over a file of such intercepts to a Senate investigating committee without a subpoena.

Obviously nettled by his stand, members of the Postoffice subcommittee investigating censorship leaks conferred briefly in private, then called on Price and other witnesses to return for questioning Monday afternoon.

"Not Without A Subpoena"

Asked by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) if he would have the original intercepts with him Monday, Price replied:

"No, not without a subpoena."

At one point Senator Reed (R., Kan.) declared hotly:

"Byron Price, the position you're taking is actually funny. . . . If that isn't a damn fool proposition I've never seen one."

Earlier a State Department official had declined to hand the committee copies of the intercepts, explaining he was under instructions not to let them out of the department without written permission from Price.

Correspondence Involved

The correspondence in question was between Miss Vivien Kellems, Connecticut war plant operator, and Count Frederick Von Zedlitz, a German who lives in Buenos Aires and who is on the State Department's blacklist as a representative of Mettallgesellschaft, Herman Goering's metals syndicate.

Purported excerpts from their letters were broadcast last February by Drew Pearson, Washington news commentator, and referred to in a House speech by Representative Coffee (D., Wash.) last March.

At a previous hearing, Price testified that the information used by Pearson and Coffee apparently came from six intercepts, which were distributed by censorship only to the State Department, the Office of Strategic Services and British censorship.

Price Sent For

George P. Shaw, assistant chief of the State Department's division of foreign activity correlation, told the committee today he had not been able to determine that the leak occurred in the State Department.

Senator Reed demanded why Shaw had to have Price's permission to yield up copies of the intercepts, and the cenorship director was summoned from his office. Reed told him the committee did not concede the necessity of getting his permission to inspect the documents.

Price said he would be "very reluctant" to make them public as he felt a great responsibility to protect the correspondence of private citizens, and likewise because the intercepts contained other information, such as who had read them.

"Part Of The Secret Files"

"They are part of the secret files of the war," he said, citing an opinion by former Attorney General Jackson holding that in the public interest confidential departmental documents do not have to be turned over to Congressional committees.

"I feel my responsibility with regard to this correspondence is such that if the committee wants to see it, it should say so in writing and subpoena the papers," Price said. "That would give me an opportunity to investigate the matter, put it in a formal state where I can decide what to do."

It was then that Reed made his remark about Price's standing being a "damn-fool proposition."

Army Ending Contracts For U. S. Air Transport

JUN 1 1944

Washington, June 10 (AP)—All army air-transport service within the continental United States will be taken over by the Air Transport Command before the end of the year, and contract service terminated, the War Department said today.

Contracts with commercial companies for overseas operations will be continued. The change-over on the domestic operations already is under way.

The army said that "increased personnel available to the Air Transport Command will make it possible for the ATC to conduct the cargo operations within the United States formerly handled by air contract."

Aircraft available to the air lines, the department said, have been insufficient to provide the air transportation required for mail and other wartime needs.

The department noted that in the last five months, 28 aircraft were returned to the air lines. Some had been in Air Transport Command service and others used as troop carrie[illegible]

Tar Heel Seeks Nomination For Vice-Presidency

New York, June 10 (AP)—Gov. J. Melville B[illegible]ghton, of North Carolina, announcing his candidacy for the Democratic Vice-Presidential nomination, told a press conference today that "the American public mind in its present state will overwhelmingly reelect President Roosevelt."

Broughton, who said his name would be placed in nomination for the second place on the Democritic ticket, declared that "the issue in the coming national campaign will resolve itsel finto the question of the conduct of the war and negotiations at the peace table. All other problems will be forgotten.

Predicts States' Rights Plank

He predicted that a general plank in the Democratic national platform against Federal encroachment of States' rights would appease Southern Democrats now threatening to bolt the New Deal.

The so-called Southern revolt, Broughton said, was "not so much anti-Roosevelt nor anti-fourth term as it was resentment against Federal interference with matters of sole State concern."

The principal questions at issue between Southern exponents of States' rights and the Administration, Broughton added, were the poll tax and the racial problem.

Sees Fourth Term

"I can agree with leaders of the movement that these questions and many others are exclusively State perogatives," Broughton said.

He expressed the opinion that President Roosevelt would be renominated, would accept and would be elected with the "border States"—Oklahoma, Kentucky and West Virginia—going Democratic.

Broughton said he was strongly in favor of State management of new public works in the post-war period.

"The States will be in a better position financially to inaugurate such programs," he asserted. "And furthermore the responsibility of doing such important work would be upon local people."

Repatriate Sees Preparation For Solo War In Far East

JUN 11 1944

By RUSSELL BRINES

San Francisco, June 10 (AP)—Japan has begun to pry loose the last German influences in her wartime life, streamlining herself for a single-handed fight after the German collapse, which some of her leaders have anticipated for more than a year.

The cutting of some economic cords was reported a few hours before the European invasion by the Zurich correspondent of the Stockholm Aftontidningen.

This newspaper said Dr. Helmut Wohltat, chairman of the Nazi economic mission to Japan, had returned to Germnay aboard a Japanese submarine with the report of events which "unfavorably influenced relations" between the uncongenial allies.

Chemical Trust Ousted

While Wohltat was in Tokyo, the newspaper said, the Japanese closed the offices of the German chemical concern, I. G. Farben-Industrie. It added that "550 German businessmen lost their trading licenses."

The Nazis also were displeased over Japan's continued supply of wolfram to Russia, "despite German protests," and Toyko's failure to stop "nearly 2,000,000 tons of shipping (presumably Allied) that reached Vladivostok during recent months."

The Japanese economic measures were unusually direct. The Stockholm newspaper's report was the first published account of this nature originating within the Axis in months. Both are part of numerous incidents betraying the growing tensity of Nazi-Japanese relations, which always have been based on expediency.

German Arrogance Resented

Once German influence was so strong in Tokyo that Gestapo agents sat in the Home Ministry. Arrogant Nazi officials expected to turn the islands into another Italy. Their businessmen anticipated brisk trade. The Japanese deeply resented both their aims and their manner.

When I left Asia in late 1943 as a repatriate, Nazi political influence seemed negligible. Tokyo's political organizations were being purged of European Fascism. The average Japanese believed the European and Pacific wars were separate; his, more important, was being conducted by Japan without outside help.

Preparation For Solo War

Now Japanese pressure upon German businessmen shows the final step in the attempt to regain "self-sufficiency" for the future solo war. Hereafter the Nazis will share fewer Japanese confidences. Their role in Tokyo's affairs will decrease in proportion to Allied successes.

For the moment, collaboration will continue on the surface, in its present limited aspects, and Japanese propagandists will continue their pro-Nazi boasting.

But, well before the final capitulation the Japanese will be ready to shed the Nazis like a threadbare coat.

WAR COST IN 1944 TO BE INCREASED

Morgenthau Tells Of Boost In Loan-Drive Message

JUN 11 1944

Texarkana, Texas, June 10 (AP)—Texarkana, which will spearhead the opening of the Fifth War Loan drive Monday, was told by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, tonight, that the war in 1944 will cost more than it did last year.

Morgenthau's announcement was in reply to a telegram sent by this Texas-Arkansas border city to the Secretary at Hot Springs, Ark., announcing that Texarkana already had exceeded it bond quota of $4,675,000.

Morgenthau today wes rewriting with Orson Welles, Hollywood producer, the radio show that will inaugurate the loan drive.

Will Have Figures On Cost

Morgenthau said when he arrived here he would have "figures that reveal the costs of fighting this war."

"Within the past week," he said, "I have talked to General Marsall and other military leaders who assure me that the war's growing intensity will demand even more money in 1944 than we spent last year. The $16,000,000,000 we must get in the Fifth War Loan is only a small but, nevertheless, vital part of the total cost of the fighting to come.

"The people of the nation have volunteered to finance the war. Up to this time they have done wonderfully well. I know they will continue."

To Remain Until Tomorrow

Morgenthau and Welles, accompanied by the Secretary's aide, Fred Smith, and others, arrived at Hot Springs in a Coast Guard transport plane and planned to remain there until Monday morning, when they will fly here.

The Secretary of the Treasury will appear on a regional broadcast at 4 P. M. Monday with Govs. Coke Stevenson of Texas, Homer Adkins of Arkansas and Jimmie Davis of Louisiana, together with radio and screen stars, who will take part in the coast-to-coast broadcast officially opening the bond drive.

President Roosevelt will participate in the four-network night broadcast.

"Grapevine" Reports Boyington Is Alive

JUN

Tacoma, Wash., June 10 (AP)—Themother of Major Gregory Boyington, here to christian an aircraft escort carrier, said tonight that "grapevine" reports indicated the missing marine air hero was alive on a Southwest Pacific island.

Mrs. E. J. Hallenbeck said one of her son's friends fro mthe war zone told her a week ago of "grapevine" reports that natives were taking care of "Greg's" needs on an unidentified island and that "all the boys are convinced he is alive."

Boyington failed to return from the Rabaul raid on which he downed his 26th Japanese plane to tie Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's World War record.

Dewey Backers Seek Harmony With Taft

JUN 11 1944

[By the Associated Press]

Supporters of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York were reported today to have thrown their weight behind Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) for the chairmanship of the important platform committee of the Republican National Convention.

Taft heads an Ohio delegation pledged to support Gov. John W. Bricker of that State for the Presidential nomination, and the reputed action of some of Dewey's friends was regarded generally as a pre-convention "harmony" move by those who expect the New York Governor to be named on the first ballot.

JUN 11 1944

Resolutions Committee Meeting

The resolutions committee, consisting of two members from each State, will meet in Chicago on June 21 to elect its officers and begin hearings on the platform to be recommended to the convention opening June 26.

With the convention only a little more than two weeks away selection of delegates was to be concluded today, with Nevada Republicans picking six at a State meeting.

Without taking those six into account, Dewey had a total of 391 pledged and publicly claimed votes toward the 529 needed to nominate.

65 For Bricker

Against Dewey's total, Bricker has 65 pledged and specifically claimed. Support for other candidates includes 50 pledged but subsequently released by Gov. Earl Warren of California; Lieut. Com. Harold E. Stassen, 34; Gov. Simeon Willis of Kentucky, 22; Gov. Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, 6; Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, 3, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, 2.

In New York Bricker asserted today that no candidate currently has a majority of delegates' votes and said that predictions of nominating the party candidate on the first ballot at the Republican National Convention were inaccurate.

"There will be 1,057 delegates to the Chicago convention," Bricker said, "... and it is safe to say that no one at this time is in a position to predict what a majority will do, as the majority of delegates will not know themselves until the convention has assembled."

BITTER FIGHTING OCCURRED AT CARENTAN. THE LAND IN THIS AREA IS MARSHY AND CUT BY RIVERS. IF THE ALLIES COULD SMASH ACROSS THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA HERE, THEY COULD TURN AND DEAL AT THEIR CONVENIENCE WITH THE IMPORTANT PORT OF CHERBOURG ON THE TIP OF THE PENINSULA.

IN THIS AREA THE MAIN PART OF THE FIGHTING WAS BY INFANTRY. THE COUNTRY IS NOT SUITABLE FOR LARGE-SCALE TANK WARFARE.

AMERICAN TROOPS ALSO FANNED OUT FROM STE.MERE-EGLISE TOWARD THE PORT OF CHERBOURG, BUT IT WAS NOT CLEAR HOW MUCH PROGRESS HAD BEEN MADE. HERE AMERICAN AIRBORNE TROOPS WERE LINKED UP WITH LT. GEN. OMAR BRADLEY'S INFANTRY COMING IN FROM THE BEACHES TO FORM ONE ATTACKING FORCE.

JUN 11 1944

THE GERMANS ADMITTED THE AMERICANS HAD ADVANCED A MILE FROM STE. MERE-EGLISE, WHICH WOULD PUT THEM 17 MILES FROM CHERBOURG ITSELF.

THE GERMANS ATTEMPTED TO BLOCK THE ADVANCE OF AMERICAN AIRBORNE FORCES BY DROPPING PARACHUTISTS OF THEIR OWN BUT A FIELD DISPATCH SAID THE AMERICANS HAD CAPTURED 800 OF THESE ELITE HITLER AIRBORNE FORCES WHICH LANDED ALMOST ON TOP OF AMERICAN UNITS.

BEHIND THE AMERICAN ADVANCE AGAINST GERMAN RESISTANCE, WHICH FIELD REPORTS DESCRIBED AS "WEAKENING," THERE LAY A BLOODSTAINED AND SHELL-TORN TERRAIN WHICH TOLD OF DESPERATE FIGHTING.

PILES OF LITTER AND TWISTED WRECKAGE DOTTED THE BLACKENED LANDSCAPE STREWN WITH BODIES OF BOTH GERMANS AND AMERICANS.

THE AMERICANS FOUGHT ONE OF THE BLOODIEST BEACHHEAD STRUGGLES OF THE WAR BEFORE LINKING UP WITH THE AIRBORNE UNITS, BUT NOW THEY WERE MOVING FASTER.

GEN. SIR BERNARD MONTGOMERY, COMMANDER OF ALLIED GROUND FORCES, SENT A SPECIAL NOTE TO THE FIFTIETH NORTHUMBRIAN DIVISION, WHICH FOUGHT WITH HIM ACROSS THE DESERT IN NORTH AFRICA AND NOW IS WITH HIM IN FRANCE, CONGRATULATING IT ON "A FIRST CLASS FIGHTING PERFORMANCE IN THE FACE OF VERY ADVERSE SEA CONDITIONS AND STOUT ENEMY OPPOSITION."

STE. MERE-EGLISE FELL TO A SPEARHEAD OF AMERICAN PARACHUTISTS AND INFANTRYMEN AND THE GERMANS SAID THESE FORCES WERE A MILE BEYOND THE TOWN.

IN THE AREA OF CAEN, NINE MILES INLAND ON THE ALLIED LEFT FLANK, HEAVY FIGHTING PROCEEDED WITH INCREASING NUMBERS OF TANKS THROWN INTO THE MELEE BY BOTH SIDES. "THE ENEMY IS MAKING A DETERMINED EFFORT TO STEM THE ADVANCE" IN THE CAEN AREA, SAID THE ALLIED COMMUNIQUE.

HUGE ALLIED TANK CONVOYS ARE PROCEEDING TO THE FIGHTING ZONE, SAID A FRONT-LINE DISPATCH FROM THE CAEN AREA.

GERMAN BROADCASTERS SAID 400,000 MEN WERE ENGAGED IN THE BEACHHEAD FIGHTING -- ABOUT 200,000 ON EACH SIDE.

THE WHOLE BAYEUX-CAEN SECTOR WAS REPORTED ABLAZE WITH HEAVY FIRING.

HEADQUARTERS DISCLOSED THE GERMANS HAD MADE THEIR FIRST NAVAL THRUST AT THE INVASION ROUTES ACROSS THE CHANNEL. EIGHT BRITISH, CANADIAN AND POLISH DESTROYERS MET THE BLOW, BLEW UP ONE GERMAN DESTROYER, RAN ANOTHER AGROUND AND SCORED HITS ON TWO OTHERS IN A FIGHT OFF USHANT.

TOP COMMANDERS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE -- GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHAL, ADMIRAL ERNEST KING, AND GEN. H.H. ARNOLD ARRIVED IN LONDON FOR A MEETING OF ALLIED COMBINED CHIEFS OF STAFF.

AMERICAN FORCES LED BY LT.GEN.OMAR BRADLEY THRUST FORWARD FROM THEIR 28-MILE SECTOR OF THE BEACHHEAD AND TOOK FORMIGNY, HALFWAY BETWEEN STE.MERE-EGLISE AND BAYEUX. THE BAG OF PRISONERS TAKEN SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE INVASION ROSE TO BETWEEN 4,000 AND 5,000.

THE GERMANS THREW A FURIOUS COUNTER-ATTACK WITH TANKS AT THE BRITISH AND CANADIAN SECTOR NEAR CAEN ON THE LEFT FLANK OF THE ALLIED-HELD AREA BUT IT WAS THROWN BACK AFTER ONE PENETRATION HAD BEEN MADE IN THE CANADIAN SECTOR, FRONT DISPATCHES SAID.

IT WAS DISCLOSED THAT AMERICAN PARACHUTE TROOPS WHO LANDED ON D-DAY NEAR STE. MERE-EGLISE AND HUNG ON TO LINK UP WITH INFANTRY FOR THE SUCCESSFUL ACTIONS ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY, HAD CARRIED OFF HISTORY'S MOST SUCCESSFUL AIRBORNE OPERATION. IT FAR OUT-RANKED THE GERMAN OPERATION CRETE IN THE SPRING OF 1941.

ALTHOUGH THE ALLIED COMMAND WAS CHARY OF MENTIONING PLACE NAMES, IT WAS APPARENT THAT THE ALLIES' RAMBLING BEACHHEADS NOW HAD PIERCED THE COASTLINE IN DEPTHS VARYING FROM ONE MILE TO TEN. THE GERMANS CONCEDED A WEDGE DRIVEN THROUGH BAYEUX SOUTHWEST TOWARDS ST. LO, A DEPTH OF TEN MILES, AND SAID THE GREAT TANK BATTLE NEAR CAEN WAS REACHING ITS CLIMAX.

THE ALLIED BEACHHEAD IN FRANCE WAS YET NARROW AND SUSCEPTIBLE TO DISASTEROUS BREAK-THROUGH.

THE BAD WEATHER WAS AN ADVANTAGE TO THE GERMANS, PREVENTING THE ALLIES FROM UTILIZING THEIR SUPERIORITY IN THE AIR. FIELD DISPATCHES STRESSED THE CONSTANT BUILDING UP OF ALLIED STRENGTH ON SHORE.

HOWEVER, IMPROVEMENT IN THE WEATHER OVER DOVER TODAY THERE WAS SLIGHT AND THE CLOUDS WERE BREAKING.

JUN 11 1944

ALLIED WEATHER LUCK, WHICH HELD GOOD IN EVERY PREVIOUS EUROPEAN AMPHIBIOUS OPERATION, APPEARED RUNNING OUT. A WIND FROM THE NORTHWEST PILED UP WAVES ON THE BEACHES AND MADE DISEMBARKATION DIFFICULT.

ROMMEL WAS REPORTED USING ALL THE RESERVES IMMEDIATELY AT HAND IN HIS EFFORT TO BREAK THROUGH.

MARSHALL, KING AND ARNOLD WENT INTO CONFERENCE WITH GEN. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, SUPREME INVASION COMMANDER, AND BRITISH MILITARY CHIEFTANS.

IT WAS EXPECTED, HOWEVER, THAT THIS COMBINED CHIEFS OF STAFF MEETING WOULD HAVE LITTLE TO DO WITH PRESENT OPERATIONS.

SHAEF ITSELF REVEALED THE OTHER DAY THAT IT NOW WAS PLANNING BATTLES OF THE FUTURE WHILE MONTGOMERY AND BRADLEY CARRY OUT THE PRESENT BATTLE.

THE COMBINED CHIEFS OF STAFF UNDOUBTEDLY ARE DISCUSSING EVENTS EVEN MORE IN THE FUTURE BUT THEY MAY DEAL WITH ANY PRESSING PROBLEM OF THE MOMENT.

WHILE THESE BLOWS WERE RAINING DOWN FROM THE WEST, LIGHTNING FIGHTER-BOMBERS FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN FLEW DEEP INTO THE BALKANS AND MADE A DARING DIVE-BOMBING ATTACK ON THE LAST MAJOR REFINERY STILL OPERATING IN THE OFTEN BOMBED PLOESTI OIL FIELDS.

THIS IMPORTANT SOURCE OF NAZI OIL STILL HAD IN OPERATION THE ROMANA-AMERICANA REFINERY AFTER PREVIOUS ATTACKS BY AMERICAN HEAVIES. AND THE LIGHTNINGS LEFT THE TARGET ENVELOPED IN BLACK CLOUDS OF SMOKE.

MEANWHILE UP TO 500 HEAVY BOMBERS STRUCK AT A REFINERY AT TRIESTE, HIT BY RAF NIGHT BOMBERS ONLY A FEW HOURS EARLIER.

THE QUESTION OF WHERE THE GERMAN AIR FORCE WAS REMAINED UNANSWERED AS SKIES CLEARED OVER NORTHERN FRANCE--THE GERMANS HAD SAID BAD WEATHER HAMPERED THEIR AERIAL OPERATIONS--AND NOT MORE THAN 50 ENEMY AIRCRAFT WERE SIGHTED OVER FRANCE THIS MORNING.

MEDIUM, LIGHT AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS AGAIN STRUCK FROM LOW LEVELS IN DEFIANCE OF ENEMY FLAK. TAIL GUNNERS REPORTED SILENCING AN ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERY AS THEIR PLANES SWEPT PAST ON A BOMBING MISSION.

BRITISH HEAVIES, IN ADDITION TO POUNDING FOUR AIR FIELDS LAST NIGHT, SMASHED AT THE ETAMPES RAILROAD JUNCTION 30 MILES FROM PARIS, FROM WHERE THE GERMANS HAD BEEN HURRYING TROOPS INTO BATTLE. MOSQUITOS WENT ON A BOMBING JOURNEY TO BERLIN. EIGHT HEAVY BOMBERS WERE MISSING.

NINTH U.S. AIR FORCE MARAUDERS AND HAVOCS RETURNED TO ACTION IN CLOSE SUPPORT OF AMERICAN TROOPS OPERATING ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA AND FLEW TWO MISSIONS BY MID-DAY.

A NOON ATTACK WAS DIRECTED AGAINST ENEMY GUN POSITIONS NEAR RUINEVILLE ON THE EASTERN COAST OF THE PENINSULA AND AGAINST A HIGHWAY BRIDGE AT SAINT SAVEUR LE COMPTE, 19 MILES INLAND. IN AN EARLIER OPERATION MEDIUM AND LIGHT BOMBERS ATTACKED RAILYARDS, TRACKS, HIGHWAYS, HEAVY GUN POSITIONS AND A CONCENTRATION OF TROOPS AND TANKS -- TARGETS SPREAD FROM ONE TO 19 MILES BEHIND THE BATTLE LINES.

BRITISH FIGHTER-BOMBERS AND ROCKET-FIRING PLANES RENEWED ATTACKS ON TROOPS CONCENTRATIONS AND ROAD AND RAIL MOVEMENTS DEEP IN ENEMY-HELD TERRITORY. ONE RAF MUSTANG FORMATION MADE TWO ATTACKS ON A LARGE CONVOY OF GERMAN ARMORED VEHICLES SOUTHWEST OF FONTAINE, DESTROYING AT LEAST 90 OF THEM AND DAMAGING MANY MORE.

AN RCAF TYPHOON SQUADRON ATTACKING TANKS AND TRANSPORT IN THE CAEN AREA SCORED BOMB HITS ON A CONCENTRATION OF TANKS IN A WOOD.

LIGHT BOMBERS DURING THE NIGHT BATTERED LINES OF COMMUNICATIONS BEHIND THE BATTLE ZONE AND PLANES OF THE COASTAL COMMAND KEPT UP A VIGOROUS ATTACK ON GERMAN SUBMARINES WHICH, IT HAS BEEN REVEALED, SWARMED AROUND IN AN ATTEMPT TO CHECK THE CROSS-CHANNEL FLOW OF SUPPLIES AND REINFORCEMENTS.

THE ENEMY MADE A FEW SMALL-SCALE STABS AT THE BEACHHEADS UNDER COVER OF NIGHT AND LOST FOUR PLANES TO THE ALLIED NIGHT PATROL.

RAF HEAVIES, KEEPING THE GERMAN AIR FORCE OFF BALANCE, HIT AIR FIELDS AT RENNES, LAVAL AND LE MANS, ABOUT 100 MILES SOUTH OF THE FRONT, AND FLERS, ONLY 30 MILES FROM THE FIGHTING.

RECONNAISSANCE PHOTOS SHOWED THE IMPORTANT SAUMUR RAILROAD LINE 150 MILES SOUTH OF CAEN, BOMBED THURSDAY NIGHT, PROBABLY WAS BLOCKED BY A CAVE-IN AT THE END OF A BIG TUNNEL.

AMERICAN HEAVIES OUT TODAY IN ATTACKS ON COASTAL INSTALLATIONS SAID THERE WAS "NO OPPOSITION WHATSOEVER." MUSTANGS TANGLED WITH TWO ENEMY FORMATIONS, HOWEVER, AND SHOT DOWN A FIGHTER AND A BOMBER.

ONE THUNDERBOLT GROUP LED BY COL.GLENN E.DUNCAN, HOUSTON, TEX., SHOT UP 41 TRUCKS AND STRUCK AT THREE RAIL JUNCTIONS.

INLAND SOME FLIERS SAID THEY SAW "A FEW DAZZLE-PAINTED ENEMY PLANES COLORED RED, BLACK AND WHITE BUT THEY DIDN'T ATTACK OUR FORMATION."

ONE LIBERATOR GUNNER SAID THE EFFECTS OF THE TERRIFIC NAVAL AND AERIAL BOMBARDMENT WAS SHOWN BY THE CRATERS POCKMARKING WIDE STRETCHES OF THE FRENCH COAST.

BOTH LIGHTNINGS AND THUNDERBOLTS OF THE U.S. NINTH AIR FORCE DIVE-BOMBED AND STRAFED GUN POSITIONS WHICH HAD BEEN HOLDING UP THE ALLIED GROUND FORCES AND OTHER OBJECTIVES ALONG THE LINES OF BATTLE.

THE THUNDERBOLTS IN ADDITION TO HITTING FRONTLINE GUN POSITIONS RANGED BEHIND THE BATTLE AREA, STRIKING RAIL LINES AT LEMANS, CORAN, GOSSE, LAVAL, CHATEAU-GAUTIER AND SABLE. OTHER THUNDERBOLTS BOMBED AND STRAFED THREE GERMAN STAFF CARS, A COMMAND CAR AND A NUMBER OF TRUCKS AND TRAILERS OUTSIDE LILLE.

UP TO MID-AFTERNOON NOT A SINGLE ENEMY PLANE HAD BEEN SIGHTED BY THE NINTH AIR FORCE FLIERS AND OF ALL THE BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS SENT OUT, ONLY ONE THUNDERBOLT FAILED TO RETURN.

THE CREWS OF THE MARAUDERS AND HAVOCS DESCRIBED THE BEACHES FROM WHICH THE BATTLES HAVE MOVED FORWARD AS "BLACK WITH WRECKED TANKS AND VEHICLES AND DOTTED WITH BOMB CRATERS."

DESPITE A HEAVY OVERCAST, BOMBERS SWEPT IN LOW AND WERE ABLE TO SCORE EFFECTIVELY IN BOTH RAIDS. ONE MARAUDER MADE THREE RUNS BEFORE IT FOUND AN OPENING IN THE CLOUDS TO BOMB ONE GUN POSITION.

IT WAS DISCLOSED AT HEADQUARTERS THAT NINTH AIR FORCE BOMBERS ALONE HAVE FLOWN MORE THAN 2,000 SORTIES SINCE D-DAY AND DROPPED AROUND 3600 TONS OF BOMBS.

FROM TUESDAY MORNING THROUGH FRIDAY NIGHT THE NINTH AIR FORCE THREW HUNDREDS OF FIGHTERS AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS AGAINST 784 TARGETS IN NORMANDY.

FIFTY BRIDGES WERE DAMAGED OR DESTROYED, RAIL LINES WERE SMASHED AT 36 POINTS, NINE LOCOMOTIVES WERE BLOWN UP, 125 FREIGHT CARS BOMBED AND STRAFED AND GUN POSITIONS, FIELD BATTERIES, TROOP COLUMNS, VEHICLES AND TWO ENEMY MILITARY HEADQUARTERS WERE ATTACKED.

FIGHTER-BOMBERS UNLOADED 1,268 TONS OF BOMBS IN FLYING 5,131 SORTIES AT A COST OF 41 PLANES.

IN THEIR THIRD OPERATION TODAY, MARAUDERS BOMBED ROAD JUNCTIONS, BRIDGES AND SUPPLY DEPOTS BEHIND THE BATTLE LINES, THEN DROPPED TO 200 FEET--AN ALMOST UNHEARD OF LEVEL FOR MEDIUM BOMBERS--TO MACHINE-GUN BIVOUAC AREAS AND INTERIOR POSITIONS.

SOME MEDIUMS, AFTER HITTING THE ROAD INTERSECTION AT FALAISE, 20 MILES SOUTHEAST OF CAEN, WENT DOWN SO LOW THAT ONE PILOT SAID THE CREWS WERE ABLE TO MOTION FRENCH CIVILIANS TO GET OUT OF THE WAY WHILE THEY STRAFED GERMAN CARS IN THE STREETS.

IN ALL THESE RAIDS EVERY BOMBER RETURNED ALTHOUGH THEY FLEW INTO THE VERY MUZZLES OF GERMAN ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS.

FLAK FURNISHED THE PRINCIPAL OPPOSITION MET BY THE ATTACKING PLANES AND SOME OF THE GUNS PROBABLY HAD BEEN RUSHED INTO THE FIGHTING SECTOR WITHIN THE LAST DAY OR TWO.

THERE WERE SOME AIR FIGHTS, HOWEVER, AND ONE OF THE MOST VICIOUS CAME WHEN A THUNDERBOLT GROUP ON A DIVE-BOMBING MISSION WAS ATTACKED BY ABOUT 40 NAZI PLANES. THE P47 PILOTS BAGGED FIVE IN A SERIES OF DOGFIGHTS.

FIGHTERS OF THE EIGHTH AIR FORCE REPORTED KNOCKING OUT 28 LOCOMOTIVES, THREE TRAINS AND 83 RAILWAY CARS AS WELL AS SEVERAL BRIDGES. FLYING LOW IN THE FACE OF INTENSE FLAK, OTHER FIGHTERS SHOT UP 180 TRUCKS, FIVE TANKS AND A NUMBER OF OTHER VEHICLES.

MORE THAN 900 MUSTANGS, LIGHTNINGS AND THUNDERBOLTS OF THE NINTH AIR FORCE SWEPT 75 MILES BEHIND THE ENEMY'S LINES TO ATTACK CONVOYS, TROOP CONCENTRATIONS AND OTHER TACTICAL TARGETS.

IN A CONTINUATION OF THE CAMPAIGN TO KNOCK OUT BASES FROM WHICH THE GERMANS SEND PLANES TO THE BATTLE OF NORMANDY, SEVERAL HUNDRED RAF HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACKED ENEMY AIRFIELDS AT FLERS, RENNES, LAVAL, AND LE MANS IN NORTHERN FRANCE. A RAIL JUNCTION AT ETAMPES, 30 MILES SOUTH OF PARIS, ALSO WAS HIT. EIGHT HEAVY BOMBERS WERE MISSING FROM THESE ATTACKS.

LIGHT BOMBERS POUNDED ENEMY COMMUNICATIONS IN THE REAR OF THE BATTLE ZONE DURING THE NIGHT, AND NIGHT FIGHTERS AND INTRUDER AIRCRAFT SHOT DOWN FOUR GERMAN PLANES OFF THE BEACHHEAD. THE AIR MINISTRY SAID THE NIGHT RAIDERS HAD TO FLY THROUGH THICK CLOUDS AND HEAVY RAIN.

IN BAYEUX, FOR EXAMPLE, A FRONT LINE CORRESPONDENT SAID THE PEOPLE WERE FERVENT IN THEIR WELCOME TO THE ALLIED TROOPS BUT WERE SHY AND QUIET AS OF PEOPLE WHO HAD FORGOTTEN SPONTANEOUS SPEECH AND LAUGHTER.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN WRAPPED THEIR ARMS AROUND SOLDIERS, THREW FLOWERS AT THEM, AND PRESSED UPON THEM THE PITIFULLY FEW BITS OF LUXURIES THEY HAD LEFT.

YET THEY WERE AFRAID TO TALK FREELY, AS THOUGH THEY STILL FEARED THEY MIGHT BE BROUGHT TO BOOK BY THE NAZIS. SPINDLY FRENCH YOUNGSTERS ANSWERED SOLDIERS' QUESTIONS WITH THE GERMAN "NEIN" OR "JA." THEY THAWED ONLY WHEN THEY WERE CONVINCED THE ALLIES HAD COME TO STAY.

JUN 11 1944

"WE WAITED AND WAITED," SAID AN ELDERLY WOMAN, "AND SOMETIMES WE THOUGHT YOU WOULD NEVER COME, BUT IN THE LAST FEW DAYS WE KNEW IT WOULDN'T BE LONG...I KNEW YOU WERE COMING THIS MORNING WHEN YOUR BOMBS STARTED BLOWING OUR HOUSES TO PIECES. I RAN TO A DEEP TRENCH AND WAS FRIGHTENED BUT VERY HAPPY, AND I SHOOK MY FIST AT THOSE BOCHES AS THEY RETREATED PAST THE HOUSE."

DISPATCHES FROM SPAIN SAID THE NAZIS FEARED A NEW INVASION FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN AND TWO BATTALIONS OF GERMAN POLICE ENTERED VICHY YESTERDAY, PRESUMABLY TO DEFEND IT AGAINST POSSIBLE UNDERGROUND ATTACK.

FRENCH PATRIOTS HAVE SURROUNDED GRENOBLE, IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, AND THE CITY NOW IS IN A STATE OF SIEGE, A DISPATCH FROM SWITZERLAND SAID.

MONSIEUR HUBERT, MAYOR OF THE TOWN, SAID THE GERMANS WITH FEW EXCEPTIONS TREATED THE PEOPLE REASONABLY WELL IF THEY DID WHAT THE NAZIS ORDERED. THE MEN WERE ALL FORCED TO WORK FOR THE GERMAN ARMY THREE DAYS A WEEK, AND MOST OF THEM WERE EMPLOYED IN THE PAST MONTHS HELPING BUILD BEACH OBSTACLES, PILLBOXES, BLOCKHOUSES AND DUGOUTS, WHICH FAILED TO STOP THE DOUGHBOYS ASSAULT ACROSS THE BEACHES YESTERDAY.

UNLIKE THE GERMANS IN NORTH AFRICA, SICILY AND ITALY, THE GERMANS WHO WERE DIRVEN OUT OF THIS SECTOR PAID FOR WHAT THEY GOT FROM THE FARMERS AND TOWNSPEOPLE, AND UNDER STRICT ORDERS, ACTED VERY CORRECTLY.

JUN 11 1944

THE MAYOR SAID THERE WAS ONE RAPE AND ONE ROBBERY COMMITTED BY THE SOLDIERS, BUT THE PREPETRATORS WERE NOT GERMANS. HE SAID THE PEOPLE OF THIS SECTOR, WHICH IS A RICH FARMLAND SPECIALIZING IN DAIRY PRODUCTS HAVE PLENTY TO EAT. BU THEY ARE EAGER FOR SUCH LUXURIES AS SWEETS AND CIGARETTES.

JUN 11 1944

THE GERMANS DIDN'T DISTURB THE HERDS OF CATTLE AND FEW OF THE ANIMAL WERE KILLED DURING THE FIGHTING.

ALTHOUGH THE GERMANS ACTED CORRECTLY, THE PEOPLE SAID THEY PUT PRESSURE ON THEM WHEN THEY WANTED SOMETHING. THE FORMER MAYOR REFUSED TO GIVE A RADIO TO A GERMAN OFFICER AND HE WAS REMOVED FROM OFFICE.

LT. LEON RUBEN, ROCKY MOUNT, N.C., WHO SPEAKS FLUENT FRENCH, SAID THE PEOPLE TOLD HIM THE PRESENT MAYOR WAS NOT A COLLABORATIONIST, BUT ACCEPTED THE OFFICE BECAUSE HIS SON WAS BEING HELD IN GERMANY AS A PRISONER.

JUN 11 1944

WHETHER THE GERMANS KNEW THE ALLIES WERE TO ATTACK YESTERDAY WAS NOT CLEAR, ALTHOUGH THREE REGIMENTS HAD MOVED INTO THIS AREA FOR MANEUVERS. THE DAY BEFORE "D" DAY, THE COMMANDING OFFICER CAME TO THE MAYOR AND TOLD HIM THERE WOULD BE PRACTICE SHOOTING IN THE AREA THE NEXT DAY, BUT THAT THE RESIDENTS SHOULD NOT BE ALARMED.

THE OFFICER REQUISITIONED SIX ANIMALS TO CARRY SUPPLIES TO THE MEN AND ARRANGED FOR TWO OTHERS TO CARRY THEM FOOD AT NOON.

SUPPORTING THE THEORY THE GERMANS DIDN'T SUSPECT THE INVASION IS THE FACT THAT THE OFFICERS AND MEN MADE NO EFFORT TO PACK PERSONAL BELONGINGS OR GET PAPERS IN HOMES WHERE THEY WERE BILLETED. ALSO NO EFFORT WAS MADE TO EVACUATE CIVILIANS IN THIS PARTICULAR AREA.

WITH THE ALLIED FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 6-(DELAYED)-(AP)-BRITISH TROOPS ATTACKING WITH BAYONETS WIPED OUT THE LAST GERMAN COASTAL STRONG POINT IN THIS KEY SECTOR TODAY AND DROVE ON TO JOIN HANDS WITH CANADIAN FORCES IN THE ADJOINING AREA.

A SHATTERING ASSAULT BY ALLIED BIG NAVAL GUNS PRECEDED THE INFANTRY ATTACK. ONLY A SKELETON OF THE GERMAN FORCE REMAINED IN THE STRONG POINT, A SEASIDE VILLAGE ALREADY WRECKED BY BOMBS AND SHELLS, BUT FROM THEIR HIDDEN VANTAGE POINT AMID THE RUINS THEY HAD EFFECTIVELY PREVENTED A JUNCTION OF THE BRITISH AND CANADIANS FOR NEARLY THREE DAYS.

NOW THE COASTAL ROAD IS CLEAR AND THE BRITISH GENERAL DROVE OVER TO THE CANADIAN SECTOR THIS AFTERNOON.

BY EARLY EVENING THE GENERAL PICTURE HAD BRIGHTENED CONSIDERABLY. A GERMAN TANK ATTACK WHICH FAILED TO DEVELOP INTO A BIG-SCALE COUNTER-BLOW, HAD BEEN EXPECTED, AND WAS DISPERSED IN THE ROLLING GRAIN FIELDS SEVERAL MILES TO THE NORTH.

JUN 11 1944

TWO GERMAN TANK DIVISIONS ARE KNOWN TO BE OPERATING IN THE CAEN AREA, BUT SO FAR FIELD MARSHAL GEN. VON RUNSDTEDT HAS NOT VENTURED A MAJOR COUNTER-ASSAULT. NOW HE MAY BE TOO LATE, FOR COLUMNS OF BIG SHERMAN TANKS, WAVED ON BY CHEERING TROOPS, ARE RUMBLING UP TO THE FRONT.

JUN 11 1944

THICK CLOUDS WHICH BLOTTED OUT THE MORNING'S BRILLIANT SUNSHINE GAVE THE GERMANS A CHANCE TO STRIKE WITH SNEAK ATTACKS ON ALLIED OBJECTIVES THIS AFTERNOON. DODGING IN AND OUT OF THE CLOUDS, NAZI PLANES CASCADED BOMBS ON A BEACH SUPPLY DUMP, AND FROM A FARMHOUSE A MILE AWAY I WATCHED IT.

LATER I JEEPED BACK TO DIVISIONAL HEADQUARTERS AND WATCHED A TERRIFIC SKY BATTLE DIRECTLY OVERHEAD IN WHICH NAZI FIGHTERS SNARLED LIKE HORNETS AROUND A FORMATION OF ALLIED HEAVY BOMBERS. BUT THEY WERE DRIVEN OFF.

SO FAR OUR DOMINATION OF THE SKIES HAS BEEN SO COMPLETE THAT FEW ALLIED SOLDIERS BOTHER TO LOOK UP NOW WHEN THEY HEAR PLANES OVERHEAD.

TO VETERANS WHO WENT THROUGH THE HELL OF FRANCE IN 1940, WHEN THE GERMAN AIR FORCE RULED THE SKIES, THE SPECTACLE OF ALLIED PLANES THUNDERING OVERHEAD IN ALMOST ENDLESS WAVES IS THE BIGGEST THRILL OF THE CAMPAIGN, AND THIS TIME THEIR HEARTS ARE HIGH.

THE DETECTORS WERE PARTICULARLY EFFECTIVE AGAINST GERMANS HIDDEN IN SMALL DUGOUTS ENTERED BY SMALL SOD-COVERED TRAP DOORS. THE GERMANS MADE A PRACTICE OF LEAVING THE DOOR SHUT UNTIL THE AMERICANS PASSED, THEN PUTTING IT UP AND TAKING A SHOT OR TWO BEFORE POPPING BACK.

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE, JUNE 8-(DELAYED)-(AP)-ALLIED TROOPS, THROWN BACK SLIGHTLY FROM THE OUTER PERIMETER OF CAEN IN BITTER FIGHTING, WERE HOLDING STRATEGIC GROUND TODAY AGAINST AN EXPECTED HEAVY COUNTER-ATTACK BY GERMAN ARMOR.

LATEST REPORTS INDICATED A MAJOR BATTLE WAS IMMINENT, WITH FIELD MARSHAL GEN. KARL RUDOLF GERD VON RUNDSTEDT SWIFTLY RALLYING HIS DEFENSES AND MASSING TIGER TANKS FOR THE COUNTER-BLOW.

ALLIED BIG GUNS ARE RUMBLING FORWARD IN GREAT NUMBERS FROM THE BEACHHEAD, HOWEVER, AND HIGH OFFICERS EXPRESSED CONFIDENCE THAT THE NAZI THRUST WOULD BE HELD. ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT ALLIED ARTILLERY WAS HEARD SLAMMING THE ENEMY WITH INCREASING VIOLENCE.

FIELD HEADQUARTERS ACKNOWLEDGED GERMAN DEFENSES WERE STIFFENING IN THIS NORTHEAST SECTOR OF THE BATTLE FRONT THIS MORNING, BUT AFTER THE INITIAL D-DAY DELAY IN LANDING MATERIAL, PARTLY CAUSED BY TIDAL CONDITIONS, ALLIED HEAVY EQUIPMENT NOW IS ROLLING FORWARD FROM THE BEACHHEAD IN GREAT MASSES AND ALLIED TROOPS ARE BEING STRONGLY REINFORCED.

CLEAR SKIES AND BRILLIANT SUNSHINE AGAIN PERMITTED ALLIED AERIAL ARMADAS TO ROVE THE SKIES IN SPECTACULAR NUMBERS THIS MORNING AND CLOUDS OF BLACK SMOKE WERE RISING LIKE A FUNERAL PYRE FROM THE DIRECTION OF CAEN, INDICATING THAT NAZI-HELD CITY WAS UNDERGOING A TERRIFIC POUNDING.

AT THIS MOMENT ALLIED NAVAL GUNS ARE LAYING DOWN A THUNDEROUS BARRAGE ON THE LAST GERMAN-HELD COASTAL POSITION IN THIS AREA. ELIMINATION OF THIS STRONG POINT WILL MEAN A SOLID JUNCTION BETWEEN BRITISH AND CANADIAN FORCES WHO ALREADY HAVE ESTABLISHED A "FLUID" LIAISON FARTHER INLAND.

NO LARGE-SCALE ATTACK HAS BEEN ATTEMPTED BY EITHER SIDE. FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE OUR LANDING THE BATTLE AREA IS COMPARATIVELY QUIET. THE SUDDEN HUSH HAS THE QUALITY OF OVERPOWERING DRAMA.

OUR TROOPS THIS MORNING PUSHED A LIMITED WEDGE ACROSS THE BAYEUX-CAEN ROAD IN ONE SECTOR AND IN ANOTHER THEY WERE FORCED TO MAKE A SLIGHT RETIREMENT, LEAVING THE TACTICAL SITUATION LARGELY UNCHANGED.

THE ENEMY IS MAINTAINING STEADY PRESSURE ALL ALONG THE FRONT, PROBING FOR WEAK SPOTS WITH GROUPS OF SEVERAL TANKS. THESE TANKS DECLINE BATTLE, THEIR JOB OBVIOUSLY BEING RECONNAISSANCE.

IN THE AREA OF CAEN THE SITUATION IS STATIC. THE ENEMY HAS MANNED THE DEFENSES OF THIS ANCIENT TOWN. EXPERTLY CONSTRUCTED FIELD EMPLACEMENTS REPRESENTING MANY MONTHS OF WORK ABOUND IN THE FIELDS SURROUNDING THE PLACE INDICATING THAT THE GERMANS HAVE LONG REGARDED IT AS A KEY POINT IN THEIR DEFENSE PLAN FOR FRANCE.

MEANWHILE ON OUR SIDE OF THE LINE THE PACE OF THE BUILD-UP OF MEN AND EQUIPMENT IS MOST SATISFACTORY. BEACH CREWS ARE WORKING LIKE BEAVERS IN SOME SECTORS UNDER LONG-RANGE ENEMY FIRE, BUT NOTHING SEEMS TO MATTER TO THESE MEN EXCEPT THAT THE TANKS AND GUNS ROLL OFF AND UP TO THE FRONT.

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, JUNE 10-(AP)-I HAD SEEN ENOUGH OF OUR BEACHHEAD FROM A FOXHOLE SO I WENT UP IN A PIPER CUB TODAY TO TAKE A LOOK AT THE WEDGE DRIVEN INTO CONTINENTAL EUROPE AND WHAT I SAW WAS BOTH BEAUTIFUL AND AWESOME.

FROM A LOW ALTITUDE I GOT A BETTER PERSPECTIVE OF THE MAGNIFICENT JOB THE DOUGHBOYS HAVE DONE THAN I HAD, EVEN THOUGH I HAD LANDED WITH THEM AND WATCHED THEM FIGHT THEIR WAY OFF THE BEACHES TO DRIVE THE GERMANS STEADILY BACK.

AS I FLEW OVER THE AREA WITH LT. OSCAR B. RICH OF FOLEY ALA., WE SAW YANKS ATTACKING BELOW US TOWARD A FOREST WHERE THE ENEMY WAS BELIEVED TO HAVE HIDDEN TANKS AND INFANTRY.

OUR BIG GUNS HAD BEEN POUNDING THE FOREST FOR HOURS IN A STEADY, ROLLING BLAST OF EXPLOSIONS AND AS WE WATCHED A DARK GREEN SMOKE ROLLED UP FROM AN AMMUNITION OR GASOLINE DUMP HIT BY THE ARTILLERY.

FROM THE BEACH TO THE FRONT LINES WE COULD SEE THE OBSTACLES WHICH THE INFANTRY AND ENGINEERS HAD TO OVERCOME TO PUSH INLAND AND SECURE THE BEACHHEAD.

WE SAW ARMORED VEHICLES ROLLING SLOWLY ALONG HEDGEROWS RAKING THE UNDERGROWTH WITH MACHINE-GUN FIRE TO DRIVE OUT SNIPERS WHILE BEHIND THEM CAME DOUGHBOYS TAKING COVER IN TREES AND HEDGES AS THE ATTACK MOVED FORWARD.

ALONG THE ROADS CONVOYS MOVED AND TROOPS MARCHED IN COLUMNS. WHILE SOME AREAS APPEARED UNTOUCHED OTHERS WERE RIPPED BY BOMB CRATERS AND POCKED WITH SLIT TRENCHES.

RICH WHO USED TO BE A FLORIST BEFORE JOINING THE ARMY, SWUNG OUT OVER THE BEACH AND THERE STOOD OUR TREMENDOUS INVASION FLEET STRETCHING AS FAR AS I COULD SEE. SHIPS WERE MOVING IN TO DISCHARGE THEIR CARGOES AND SMALL BOATS SCURRED AROUND WEAVING WHITE WAKES ABOUT THE BIGGER

SHIPS WHICH WERE POURING MORE MEN, GUNS AND SUPPLIES ASHORE.
VEHICLES, GUNS AND ARMOR ROLLED UP THE ROADS CUT FROM THE BEACH. DURING THE FIRST TWO DAYS OF THE INVASION THERE HAD BEEN ONLY ONE EXIT FROM OUR BEACH AND EVERYTHING HAD TO MOVE ACROSS IT, NOW THERE WERE SEVERAL EXITS TO HANDLE THE MASS OF STUFF MOVING IN BEHIND US.
INVASION WRECKAGE LITTERED THE SAND. VEHICLES, HALFTRACKS, ARMOR, AND SMALL CRAFT WERE PILED UP WITH A VAST AMOUNT OF EQUIPMENT. SALVAGE CREWS WERE BUSY REFLOATING BOATS WHICH HIT MINES OR WERE SUNK BY ENEMY FIRE. MANY VEHICLES WERE BEING TOWED FROM THE SAND AND PUT BACK IN OPERATION.
RICH FLEW OVER BAYEUX WITH ITS BEAUTIFUL CATHEDRAL AND THEN OVER PORT EN BESSIN. THEN WE LANDED AND I CARRIED AWAY FROM THE PLANE WITH ME A NEW RESPECT FOR THE VALOR OF THE AMERICAN DOUGHBOY AND THE JOB HE HAD DONE.

AN RAF BEACH SQUADRON HEADQUARTERS ON THE CAEN FRONT, JUNE 9-(DELAYED) --A TANK TRAP SET YESTERDAY WAS PARTIALLY SUCCESSFUL AND NOW THAT OUR FIELD ARTILLERY HAS TAKEN UP POSITIONS A BATTLE FOR A RIDGE COMMANDING CAEN IS EXPECTED WITHIN THE NEXT FEW HOURS.
THE ARMIES FACE EACH OTHER MORE OR LESS IN A SEMI-CIRCLE AND SKIRMISHING FORAYS ARE CONTINUALLY BEING WAGED IN LOCAL SECTORS.
ARTILLERY DUELS WITH BOTH SMALL AND HEAVY CALIBER GUNS CONSTANTLY RENT THE AIR. ROYAL NAVY CRUISERS LYING OFF THE BEACH ADD THE SHELLS OF THEIR SIX-INCH GUNS TO OUR MEDIUM AND FIELD BATTERIES WHILE THE ENEMY IS MAKING THE BEACH A TARGET FOR THEIR BATTERY OF 155MM GUNS WHICH THEY MOVED FORWARD ON OUR EXTREME LEFT FLANK ACROSS A RIVER.
A STAFF COLONEL SAID THIS MORNING "IT SEEMS OBVIOUS THAT WE HAVE TAKEN THE BRUNT OF THE WHOLE INVASION IN THIS BEACHHEAD. I THINK THE POSITION NOW CAN BE CONSIDERED VERY SATISFACTORY UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES."
WITH REGARD TO THE TANK TRAP WE CERTAINLY CAUGHT SEVERAL TANKS OF A CRACK PANZER DIVISION AND GERMAN ARMOR NEITHER WIDENED A PLANNED GAP NOR PREVENTED IT BEING CROSSED AGAIN, WHEN THEIR LEADING ARMOR WAS SAFELY IN THE NET. IT WAS A GREAT TEST FOR OUR TROOPS AND SUPPORTIN ARTILLERY AND THEY EMERGED WITH FLYING COLORS.
THERE WAS GOOD NEWS ABOUT AN AIRBORNE DIVISION WHICH IS ACROSS THE RIVER TO THE WEST. THEY WERE GIVEN SUPPORT LAST EVENING IN THE FACE OF NEW GERMAN ARMOR AND INFANTRY WAS BROUGHT UP. AN IMPORTANT BRIDGE AREA WAS HELD IN DESPERATE FIGHTING AND THE POSITION HAS IMPROVED STEADILY ALL ALONG THIS SECTOR.
AN AIRBORNE COLONEL SAID TO ME TODAY:

JUN 11 1944

"EVERYTHING IS OK NOW. THOSE REINFORCEMENTS WERE JUST WHAT WE WANTED AND THEY CAME AT THE RIGHT MOMENT."
THE TROOPS ARE GRINNING HAPPILY AS THEY SEE THE FIELD ARTILLERY TAKING UP POSITIONS. THEY HAD HEARD AND APPRECIATED THE MEDIUM REGIMENT WITH ITS VICIOUS 6.5 GUNS IN ACTION TOGETHER WITH A SELF-PROPELLED ARTILLERY REGIMENT WITH ITS 105MM GUNS AND A FIELD ARTILLERY REGIMENT WITH 25 POUNDERS.
AS I WRITE I CAN SEE SHELLS FROM OUR ARTILLERY DROPPING WITH AN ASSURING REGULARITY INTO ENEMY POSITIONS JUST OVER THE RIDGE.
I HEARD THIS STORY FROM ONE OF THE GUNNERS AS WE LEFT THE BEACH: A SNIPER HAD BEEN WORRYING ONE BATTERY. THEY FOUND THE SNIPER WAS A WOMAN, AGED 56, WHO HAD BEEN USING A BEDROOM WINDOW. SHE WAS A FRENCHWOMAN.

JUN 11 1944

ON THE OTHER HAND I HAVE SEEN A YOUNG FRENCH GIRL IN HER IMMACULATE WHITE SMOCK RIDING A BICYCLE DOWN TO THE BEACH EVERY DAY TO LEND A HAND AT A DRESSING STATION. SHE HAS DONE REMARKABLE WORK HELPING WITH THE WOUNDED.
A GERMAN MILITARY DOCTOR TO WHOM I WAS INTRODUCED BY THE PADRE HAS PERFORMED SOME REMARKABLE FEATS OF SURGERY AT THE BEACH STATION FOR BOTH HIS OWN WOUNDED AND OURS.

THE ENEMY TANKS, OPERATING IN GROUPS OF ABOUT 20 TO EACH GROUP AND SUPPORTED BY SELF-PROPELLED GUNS, FOUGHT A SERIES OF HIT AND RUN ACTIONS. THE ACTION COST THEM 10 TANKS YESTERDAY IN THIS SECTOR AND DID NOTHING MORE THAN SLIGHTLY DELAY OUR FORCES.
THIS MORNING I WATCHED TWO OF OUR ARMORED COLUMNS PRESSING TOWARDS A TOWN EAST OF CAEN. GERMAN TANKS IN A WOOD JUST NORTH OF THE TOWN OPENED FIRE ON THEM BUT DID NOT ATTEMPT TO COME OUT AND ENGAGE OUR TROOPS. WHEN OUR TANKS BEGAN PLASTERING THE WOOD, THREE COLUMNS OF BLACK SMOKE SPURTED SKYWARDS INDICATING THAT THREE OF THE ENEMY TANKS HAD BEEN HIT.

A U.S. MARAUDER BASE IN ENGLAND, JUNE 10-(AP)-AMERICAN MARAUDER CREWS WHO HAVE BEEN BOMBING AT MEDIUM ALTITUDES OF 10,000 TO 12,000 FEET IN THE LAST YEAR HAVE BEEN REQUIRED TO GO DOWN TO ALMOST SUICIDAL LEVELS IN SUPPORTING THE ALLIED INVASION TROOPS, BUT IT IS ALL RIGHT WITH THESE HARD-WORKING AIR VETERANS.

JUN 11 1944

THEY KNOW HOW MUCH THE SLUGGING SOLDIERS ON THE GROUND NEED THEIR HELP.

"WE HAVEN'T HAD A SINGLE COMPLAINT FROM ANY MAN," DECLARED LT. COL. ROBERT O.BARKER, 99 CHESTNUT ST., JACKSON, OHIO, A SQUAXRON COMMANDER, WHO DISCLOSED TONIGHT THAT FLIERS HAVE BEEN CROWDING EACH OTHER TO GET ON "LOAD LISTS" SINCE D-DAY.

"IT'S A CASE OF HAVING A JOB TO DO AND NO MATTER WHAT THE WEATHER IS, IT JUST HAS TO BE DONE," HE ADDED.

ON SOME OCCASIONS IN THE LAST WEEK MARAUDERS HAVE FLOWN AS LOW AS 200 FEET. GUNNERS HAVE STRAFED SOME OF THE TARGETS AT THE SAME TIME BOMBS WERE BEING DROPPED.

DURING AN ATTACK ON A ROAD INTERSECTION ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA TODAY THE CREWS IN A MARAUDER GROUP COMMANDED BY COL. GLENN C.NYE OF RALEIGH, N.C., REPORTED THAT SOME OF THEIR PLANES HAD BEEN DAMAGED BY THE BLASTS OF THEIR OWN BOMBS.

ONE GROUP OF MARAUDERS THREW AWAY THE RULE BOOK TODAY AND DESCENDED TO 200 FEET AT WHICH HEIGHT THEY MACHINE-GUNNED THEIR WAY TO THE COAST THROUGH GERMAN BIVOUAC AREAS AND INTERIOR POSITIONS AFTER UNLOADING BOMBS ON ROAD JUNCTIONS BEHIND THE BATTLE AREA.

LT. ROBERT A.GOLDBERG OF CHICAGO, A PILOT, BROUGHT BACK HIS PLANE WITH A FOUR-INCH BOMB FRAGMENT LODGED IN ONE WING.

JUN 11 1944

STAFF SGT. HARRY HARSON OF HAHAN, VA., A GUNNER IN ANOTHER PLANE, SAID THE ESCAPE HATCH HAD BEEN BLOWN OFF BY CONCUSSION. "THE PLANE BUCKED LIKE A WILD HORSE," HE RELATED.

TYPICAL OF THE ATTITUDE AMONG FLIERS WAS THAT OF LT. JOHN D. HELTON OF CLIFTON, TEX., A PILOT WHOSE 76 MISSIONS FLOWN SINCE JULY 26, 1943 IS BELIEVED TO BE TOPS AMONG AMERICAN PILOTS IN THIS THEATER.

"IT'S ALL RIGHT WITH ME TO GO IN LOW AS LONG AS WE CAN DO SOME GOOD," HELTON SAID. "I'VE GOT A BROTHER OVER THERE ON THE GROUND AND THAT'S A GOOD ENOUGH REASON TO WANT TO GET IN THERE AS OFTEN AS POSSIBLE AND AS LOW AS NECESSARY."

JUN 11 1944

THE BROTHER, PVT. ED HELTON, IS WITH THE INFANTRY WHICH LANDED IN NORMANDY. THE PILOT HAS THREE OTHER BROTHERS AND ONE SISTER IN SERVICE. LT. COL. ELBERT HELTON COMMANDS A LIBERATOR GROUP IN THIS THEATER. SGT. GARLAND HELTON IS IN AN AIR CORPS SERVICE UNIT, ALSO IN THE ETO. LT. COL. BURREL HELTON IS IN THE SIGNAL CORPS AT DREW FIELD, FLA., AND SISTER LUCIE IS IN THE NURSE CORPS AT SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

JUN 11 1944

"I HOPE TO HIT 100 MISSIONS BEFORE THE MIDDLE OF NEXT MONTH," SAID THE ARMY FLIER, WHO ENTERED THE SERVICE IN DECEMBER, 1939.

"IT'S A LITTLE TERRIFYING TO SEE THOUSANDS OF TRACERS COMING UP AT YOU WHEN YOU'RE ACCUSTOMED TO FLYING ABOVE THE LIGHT TYPE OF FLAK, BUT WE ARE ALL ANXIOUS TO GET OVER THERE," SAID CAPT. JOHN B. STIRLING OF ANNAPOLIS, MD., A PILOT WHO STARTED OUT WITH THE RAF AND TRANSFERRED TO THE U.S. AIR FORCE A YEAR AGO.

"WE KNOW THOSE FELLOWS DOWN THERE ARE DEPENDING ON US AND WE COULD GO IN AT DECK LEVEL IF NECESSARY."

JUN 11 19

BARKER EXPLAINED THAT EVERY MAN AT HIS BASE FELT THE SAME WAY.

"ALSO IN GOING TO FRANCE NOW," HE SAID, "IT'S NOT JUST A CASE OF BOMBING FRENCH TERRITORY. NOW WE'RE BOMBING GERMANS. THEN, TOO, THIS LOW LEVEL FLYING HAS BROUGHT THE WAR CLOSER TO US. BEFORE IT WAS HARD TO SEE WHAT WE WERE BOMBING, BUT NOW WE CAN SEE WHAT WE HIT AND WHAT OUR BOMBS DO TO THE TARGET."

BY LEWIS HAWKINS

ABOARD ADMIRAL HALL'S FLAGSHIP, OFF NORMANDY, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-BEFORE D-DAY THERE WAS A BATTERY OF SIX BIG GUNS PLANTED ON A CLIFF OF AN INSIGNIFICANT BIT OF NORMANDY PROTRUDING OUT INTO THE BAY OF THE SEINE. THESE FORMER FRENCH LONG-RANGE RIFLES WERE CAPABLE OF THROWING SIX-INCH SHELLS TEN OR MORE MILES OUT TO SEA AND DIRECTLY INTO THE AREA IN WHICH TRANSPORTS WERE TO GATHER FOR THE START OF THE INVASION.

JUN 11 1944

THOSE GUNS NEVER FIRED A SHOT FOR HITLER AND THIS IS THE STORY OF HOW THEY WERE SILENCED BY COURAGEOUS AMERICAN RANGERS.

U.S. PLANES AND WARSHIPS PULVERIZED THE POINT OF LAND ON WHICH THE BATTERY WAS LOCATED, BUT THE GUNS WERE KNOCKED OUT MAINLY BECAUSE ABOUT 200 RANGERS CLIMBED THE CLIFF, OVERCAME THE GUNS' DEFENDERS AND HELD ON FOR THREE DAYS IN AS SPLENDID A SHOW OF DOGGED COURAGE AS AMERICAN FIGHTING MEN EVER HAVE DISPLAYED ANYWHERE.

THE RANGERS WHO WENT ON THIS ASSIGNMENT WERE COMPANIES D, E AND F OF THE SECOND RANGER BATTALION. OUT OF ABOUT 200 WHO STARTED OUT, THERE WERE APPROXIMATELY 70 LEFT ON THE SHORE WHEN I TALKED TO THEM TODAY. OF THE OTHERS, BETWEEN 30 AND 40 HAD BEEN WOUNDED AND EVACUATED TO ENGLAND. THE REST -- NEARLY HALF THE ORIGINAL CONTINGENT -- WERE DEAD.

THESE GREEN MEN -- WELL TRAINED, BUT NOT BATTLE BAPTIZED -- WERE GIVEN A TOUGH JOB. THINGS WENT WRONG AND HELL BROKE LOOSE AROUND THEIR HEADS, BUT THEY STUCK IN THERE AND THEY DID THEIR JOB.

THE PLAN CALLED FOR THESE THREE COMPANIES TO LAND AT 6:30 A.M. IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE D-DAY BOMBARDMENT ENDED AND TO SCALE THE CLIFF, THEN TO SEND A SIGNAL FLARE TO THE REMAINDER OF THE SECOND RANGER BATTALION WAITING OFFSHORE.

IN THE ABSENCE OF A SIGNAL, WITHIN 30 MINUTES THE WAITING UNITS WERE TO PRESUME THAT THE LANDING FORCE HAD NOT BEEN ABLE TO GET IN AND WERE TO JOIN THE INFANTRY IN LANDING ON A BEACH ABOUT THREE MILES EAST.

PARTLY BECAUSE THE NAVAL BOMBARDMENT HAD SO COMPLETELY ALTERED THE FACE OF THE CLIFF, THE LEADING RANGER BOATS MISSED THE POINT WHICH WAS TO BE ATTACKED AND SWERVED TO THE EAST UNTIL LT. COL. EARL RUDDER OF EDEN, TEX., HEFTY FORMER TEXAS A. AND M. FOOTBALLER, ORDERED THE COURSE REVERSED.

THEY GOT BACK TO THE DESIGNATED POINT, BUT THE OPERATION WAS NEARLY AN HOUR BEHIND SCHEDULE. USING ROPE LADDERS AND FIGHTING THROUGH GRENADE AND RIFLE FIRE FROM THE TOP, THE MEN SCALED THE CLIFF WITHIN 20 MINUTES. THE SIGNAL FOR REINFORCEMENTS WAS FIRED, BUT ALREADY THEY HAD GONE TO OTHER BEACHES TO FIGHT TOWARD THE POINT BY LAND.

AS SOON AS THEY HIT THE TOP, AND BEFORE THE DEFENDERS HAD TIME TO TURN THEMSELVES FULLY TOWARD THE CLIFF, COMPANY D, COMMANDED BY LT. GEORGE KERCHNER OF 458 SOUTH BENTALOU ST., BALTIMORE, MD., HEADED DOWN THE ROAD LEADING FROM THE BASE OF THE POINT LOOKING FOR GUNS.

THEY FOUGHT THROUGH, KNOCKING OUT SNIPERS AND SOME PILL BOXES ON THE WAY. THEN AT ABOUT NOON SGTS. JACK KUHN OF 1608 SIXTEENTH ST., ALTOONA, PA., AND LEN LOMELL OF POINT PLEASANT, MD., FOUND FOUR GUNS EMPLACED ALONG A TREE-COVERED LANE HALF A MILE FROM THE POINT.

QUICK SHOTS DISPOSED OF THE GUNS' DEFENDERS, AND THERMITE BOMBS IN THE BREECHES PUT THEM OUT OF ACTION. THE REMAINDER OF THE COMPANY CAME UP, BUT THE GERMANS, GETTING ORGANIZED NOW, DROVE THEM AWAY FROM THE USELESS CANNON. RETURN TO THE POINT NOW WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE GROUP THAT HAD BEEN REDUCED TO FEWER THAN 20 MEN -- AND SO, AS KERCHNER SAID, THEY SPENT THE NEXT TWO DAYS "SHOOTIN' AND SWEATIN'" IN A HEDGEROW WITH A DITCH RUNNING DOWN THE MIDDLE OF IT.

MEANWHILE "F" COMPANY, UNDER LT. ROBERT ARMAN OF LAFAYETTE, IND., PUSHED SOME 300 OR 400 YARDS TOWARD THE BASE OF THE POINT TO VIEW

THE GERMAN BILLET.

SGT. WILLIAM PETTY OF COHUTTA, GA., MOWED DOWN DOZENS OF THE ENEMY WITH A BROWNING AUTOMATIC RIFLE.

"I GUESS MAYBE I GOT ABOUT 30," HE SAID. "I'D LET THEM GET ALONG THE PATH QUITE A WAY FROM THE HOUSE, THEN I'D LET THEM HAVE A BURST FROM THE BAR -- AND WAIT FOR SOME MORE. I GUESS THEY FINALLY HAD ENOUGH BECAUSE SEVEN OF THEM CAME OUT AND SURRENDERED." JUN 11 1944

DESPITE THE DIFFICULTIES, THE RANGERS TOOK BETWEEN 40 AND 50 PRISONERS INCLUDING SOME ITALIANS AND POLES.

PRESSURE BECAME TOO STRONG IN THE ADVANCED POSITION, SO COMPANY "F" WITHDREW LATE IN THE AFTERNOON OF D-DAY TO THE EDGE OF THE CLIFF, JOINING COMPANY "E" UNDER COMMANDER OF SECOND LT. TED LAPRES, FORMER DARTMOUTH HOCKER STAR FROM PHILADELPHIA'S CHESTNUT HILL.

IN A POCKET 500 YARDS LONG AND 50 YARDS DEEP AROUND THE TIP OF THE POINT, THESE BOYS HELD OUT THROUGH TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY AND UNTIL MIDDAY THURSDAY, WHEN OTHER RANGERS AND INFANTRY CAME IN FROM THE EAST.

IF HOLDING THIS CLIFFSIDE POCKET HAD BEEN MERELY A MATTER OF STANDING OFF FRONTAL ATTACKS BY MACHINE-GUN, MORTAR AND ARTILLERY FIRE, IT WOULD HAVE BEEN TOUGH ENOUGH FOR THE RUGGED LITTLE BAND, BUT THE POSITION HAD SEVERAL TUNNELS WHICH ENABLED THE GERMANS TO TAKE A SHOT AND THEN, WHILE THE AMERICANS WERE LOOKING FOR THEM, POP OUT OF ANOTHER TUNNEL OFF TO THE SIDE OR EVEN BEHIND THEM.

MAJ. J. B. STREET, SAN ANTONIO, TEX., RANGER OFFICER ATTACHED TO THIS FLAGSHIP, GAVE SOME RELIEF TO THE CLIFF DWELLERS WEDNESDAY WHEN HE PICKED UP 25 "F" COMPANY MEN FROM ANOTHER BEACH AND TOOK THEM IN, ALONG WITH FOOD, WATER AND AMMUNITION.

THE DESTROYER SATTERLEE UNDER COMDR. W. M. MARSHALL ALSO SENT IN FOOD, WATER AND AMMUNITION AND EVACUATED PRISONERS AND WOUNDED THE SAME DAY.

"WE'D NEVER HAVE MADE IT WITHOUT THE NAVY AND I WANT THE WORLD TO KNOW THAT," SAID THE RANGER COLONEL. JUN 11 1944

MK1251AEW

ABOARD ADMIRAL HALL'S FLAGSHIP, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-GERMANS ARE USING WOODEN BULLETS AGAINST THE AMERICANS.

RANGERS TODAY FOUND 20 MILLIMETER AND INFANTRY RIFLE AMMUNITION WITH SLUGS HOLLOWED OUT OF WOOD FITTED INTO THE USUAL METAL CARTRIDGE CASES. JUN 11 1944

THEY SAID THESE BULLETS HAD BEEN USED AGAINST THEM AND THAT SOME OF THEIR MEN HAD BEEN KILLED BY THEM. THE WOODEN BULLETS SPLINTER AND MAKE NASTY WOUNDS ALTHOUGH THEIR LIGHT WEIGHT INCREASES INACCURACY AT LONG RANGES, THEY PROBABLY ARE ACCURATE UP TO 100 YARDS OR SO, RANGERS SAID.

THE RIFLE CARTRIDGES BORE EVIDENCE OF HAVING BEEN RELOADED ONCE OR MORE, SUGGESTING A SHORTAGE OF STEEL MAY BE FORCING THE GERMANS TO USE WOOD.

ABOARD THE USS TEXAS OFF THE FRENCH COAST, JUNE 8-(DELAYED)-WOUNDED RANGERS TAKEN OFF A NEARBY BEACHHEAD TOLD TODAY HOW GERMAN TROOPS RAN UP A WHITE FLAG OF SURRENDER AND THEN MOWED DOWN THE FIRST AMERICANS WHO MOVED IN TO TAKE THEM PRISONERS.

OFFICERS IN THE ACTION WERE LT. JAMES R.MCCULLERS, 30, A COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY ALUMNUS WHOSE HOME IS 1519 STARKE AVE., COLUMBUS, GA., AND LT.KENNETH E.NORTON, 28, KANSAS STATE ALUMNUS FROM COLBY, KAS., WHO WAS FORMER FOOTBALL AND WRESTLING COACH AT COLBY, KAS., HIGH SCHOOL. THEY WERE ATTACHED TO THE RANGERS SHORE FIRE CONTROL PARTY.

"GERMAN TRICKS WERE NOT UNEXPECTED," SAID LT. MCCULLERS. "I WAS MOVING IN ON OUR LEFT WITH A NUMBER OF OUR MEN TRYING TO GET A GERMAN MACHINE GUN NEST. WE WERE SNAKING ALONG FROM ONE SHELL HOLE TO ANOTHER AND CLOSING IN ON THEM. I HAD JUST WARNED OUR BOYS TO BEWARE OF TRICKS LIKE THAT WHITE FLAG STUNT WHEN THE GERMANS IN A STRONG POINT A LITTLE OVER 100 YARDS AWAY RAISED A 2-FOOT SQUARE OF WHITE MATERIAL ON A BAYONET AND CEASED FIRING.

"ALL OF OUR MEN KEPT LOW FOR A MINUTE. THEN ONE OF OUR MACHINE GUNNERS ON THE RIGHT POKED HIS HEAD UP AND ANOTHER RANGER NEAR HIM ALSO BEGAN TO GO FORWARD. THEY SHOT OUR MACHINE GUNNER THROUGH THE HEAD. THE OTHER RANGER WAS LUCKIER. HE IS STILL ALIVE BUT WITH A BULLET WOUND IN THE SHOULDER. JUN 11 1944

"IT TOOK US A LITTLE MORE TIME TO CLEAN OUT THOSE GUYS. THEIR TWO OR THREE POSITIONS WERE ALL CONNECTED UP. BUT WHEN WE CLEANED THEM OUT I MEAN WE DID EXACTLY THAT."

A DISPATCH FROM THE FRONT FROM CHARLES LYNCH, REPRESENTING THE COMBINED BRITISH PRESS, SAID THE PRISONER IS A BIG GERMAN POLICE DOG, LEFT BEHIND BY FLEEING GERMANS ON D-DAY, AND FOUND IN THE PADDOCK AT NAZI HEADQUARTERS. "TWO-F" IS THE SOLDIER'S DESIGNATION FOR SECOND FRONT.

(THE FOLLOWING IS AN EYE-WITNESS ACCOUNT OF THE LANDING IN FRANCE, WRITTEN BY SGT.ROBERT BONNELLY, FORMERLY EMPLOYED IN THE PHOTOGRAPHIC DEPARTMENT OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS AT CHICAGO.)

LONDON, JUNE 10-(AP)-AFTER LEAVING THE BASE AND PACING UP AND DOWN THE RENDEZVOUS POINT, WE HEADED TOWARD THE COAST OF FRANCE. OUR LCT, VETERAN OF THREE CAMPAIGNS, WAS SKIPPERED BY ENSIGN JOHN NATALI OF WORCESTER, N.Y., WITH ENSIGN FRANK B.CURTIS OF ITHACA, N.Y., AS EXECUTIVE OFFICER.

JUN 11 1944

WE BUCKED THE CHOPPY WATERS GAMELY. FINALLY OUR LCT ENTERED FRENCH WATERS MINUS OUR PROPELLER, SIDE-GUARD PLATES AND SOME BALLAST. WE JOCKEYED AROUND, WAITING OUR TURN TO LAND, WHILE CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS NEARBY POURED PLENTY OF FIREPOWER INTO CONCEALED MACHINE GUN PITS, PILLBOXES AND 88 MM. EMPLACEMENTS CLEVERLY BUILT ON THE HILLS IN BACK OF THE BEACHES.

JUN 11 1944

THE TIDE WENT OUT, DISCLOSING MANY OBSTACLES AND MAKING FURTHER LANDINGS IMPOSSIBLE. OUR LCT WAS LISTING BADLY AND TAKING IN WATER. A DESTROYER OPENED FIRE ON THE ENEMY, SCORING SEVERAL HITS.

JUN 11 1944

PRESSURE FROM A SALVO EVIDENTLY WAS TOO MUCH FOR OUR LCT, BECAUSE WE WERE ORDERED BY OUR COMMANDING OFFICER, LT.J.K.BOSCH OF DETROIT, TO TRANSFER TO AN LCT WHICH HAD PULLED ALONGSIDE. A CUTTER WAS CALLED LATER AND WE WERE TRANSFERRED TO IT.

WE TRIED TO TOW OUR LCT, BUT SHE KEPT ON LISTING AND FINALLY TURNED OVER AND WENT TO THE BOTTOM. SIXTY-FIVE SOLDIERS AND 15 SAILORS WERE SAVED -- ALSO THE LCT MASCOT, A TERRIER NAMED NIPPER.

LONDON, JUNE 10-(AP)-TURBULENT CONDITIONS PREVAIL IN CENTRAL FRANCE, ESPECIALLY IN THE VICHY REGION WHERE A GENERAL UPRISING IS THREATENED AS A RESULT OF THE ALLIED INVASION OF NORMANDY, BORDER DISPATCHES RELAYED FROM BARCELONA, SPAIN, REPORTED TODAY.

THE DISPATCHES, WHICH SAID THE NAZIS ARE FEARING A NEW INVASION THRUST BY THE ALLIES ON THE FRENCH MEDITERRANEAN COAST, GAVE THIS PICTURE OF CONDITIONS:

BARRICADES HAVE BEEN FLUNG ACROSS ROADS BY VICHY AND GERMAN FORCES. ALL CIVILIAN MOTOR TRAFFIC HAS BEEN BANNED IN FOUR DEPARTMENTS IN THE VICHY AREA. VICHY POLICE WARNED THEY WOULD SHOOT ON SIGHT ANY NON-OFFICIAL CAR IN MOTION.

OPEN FIGHTING HAS OCCURRED BETWEEN VICHY FORCES AND FRENCH PATRIOTS AT GANNAT, WITHIN 10 MILES OF VICHY, AND A SCORE OF PERSONS HAVE BEEN SLAIN.

TWO BATTALIONS OF GERMAN POLICE ENTERED VICHY YESTERDAY, PRESUMABLY TO HELP DEFEND IT AGAINST POSSIBLE DIRECT ATTACK FROM GUERILLA FORCES. HUNDREDS OF TOWNS IN CENTRAL FRANCE WERE DECLARED TO HAVE CAST OFF THE LAST VESTIGES OF VICHY RULE. TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE COMMUNICATIONS HAVE BEEN CUT OFF COMPLETELY OR SUFFER REPEATED BREAKDOWN DUE TO SABOTAGE.

(THE OWI REPORTED A BROADCAST FROM ALGIERS ASSERTING THE FRENCH NATIONAL COMMITTEE PASSED AN ORDNANCE INCORPORATING INTO THE FRENCH ARMY ALL "COMBATANT UNITS OR SUCH OF THEIR ORGANIZATIONS" TAKING PART "IN THE FIGHT AGAINST THE ENEMY" ON FRENCH TERRITORY UNDER LEADERS RECOGNIZED AS "RESPONSIBLE COMMANDERS.")

(THE BERLIN RADIO SAID PIERRE LAVAL, CHIEF OF GOVERNMENT IN FRANCE, MET YESTERDAY WITH THE CABINET COUNCIL IN PARIS TO DEAL WITH PROBLEMS LINKED WITH THE BEGINNING OF MILITARY OPERATIONS IN WESTERN FRANCE AND MAINTENANCE OF ORDER WITHIN THE COUNTRY.)

JUN 11 1944

(THE OWI SAID THE NAZICONTROLLED VICHY HOME RADIO INTERRUPTED ITS BROADCAST SCHEDULE TODAY TO "URGENTLY REQUEST" ALL MILITIAMEN IN THE LYON REGION TO REPORT TO THEIR HEADQUARTERS IN LYON, WHICH HAS BEEN AN ACTIVE CENTER OF RESISTANCE BY FRENCH PATRIOTS.)

A NEW LANDING ATTEMPT AT TROUVILLE, IMMEDIATELY SOUTH OF THE MOUTH OF THE SEINE, "COLLAPSED IN THE FIRE OF OUR COASTAL BATTERIES," WITH A WARSHIP SUNK AND OTHERS FORCED TO WITHDRAW, THE GERMAN COMMUNIQUE ASSERTED.

"MOPPING UP OPERATIONS ON THE EASTERN BANK OF THE ORNE ARE MAKING GOOD PROGRESS. ENEMY COUNTERATTACKS AGAINST TOUFFREVILLE HAVE FAILED."

THE COMMUNIQUE DECLARED THAT HEAVY TANK FIGHTING WENT ON IN THE AREA OF BAYEUX AND CAEN WHERE "THE ENEMY AFTER AN EMBITTERED STRUGGLE SUCCEEDED IN PUSHING BACK OUR REAR GUARD LINES BEHIND WHICH OUR RESERVES ARE BEING DEPLOYED."

ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA "EMBITTERED FIGHTING IS IN PROGRESS,"

THE COMMUNIQUE SAID, ADDING THAT "OUR TROOPS ARE GIVING AN EXCELLENT ACCOUNT OF THEMSELVES FIGHTING AGAINST STRONG ENEMY FORCES AND SUPERIOR ENEMY AIR FORCES. ALONG THE ENTIRE FRONT MANY GERMAN NESTS OF RESISTANCE AND FORTIFIED POINTS ARE ENCIRCLED BY THE ENEMY AND HOLDING THEIR OWN. WITHIN THE FIRST THREE DAYS MORE THAN 200 ENEMY TANKS WERE DESTROYED AND SEVERAL THOUSAND PRISONERS TAKEN X X X.

"SINCE JUNE 6 TWO ENEMY CRUISERS, THREE DESTROYERS, SIX TRANSPORT VESSELS TOTALLING 38,000 GROSS REGISTERED TONS, FIVE TANK LANDING VESSELS TOTALLING 15,700 GROSS REGISTERED TONS AND SEVEN TANK LANDING VESSELS TOTALING 2,600 GROSS REGISTERED TONS WERE SUNK BY THE GERMAN NAVY, THE LUFTWAFFE AND COASTAL BATTERIES OF THE NAVY AS WELL AS THE ARMY COMMAND."

JUN 11 1944

"ONE ENEMY HEAVY CRUISER, THREE OTHER CRUISERS, SIX DESTROYERS, FIVE MOTOR BOATS AND EIGHT TRANSPORTS TOTALLING 41,000 GROSS REGISTERED TONS AND 14 SPECIAL LANDING VESSELS WERE DAMAGED BY TORPEDO, BOMB AND SHELL HITS. IN ADDITION NUMEROUS SMALL LANDING VESSELS AND ASSAULT BOATS WERE SUNK OR DAMAGED.

JUN 11 1944

"MANY ENEMY WARSHIPS AND LANDING VESSELS HAVE RUN INTO OUR MINE BARRAGES WHEREBY THE ENEMY LOST 20 MAJOR AND MEDIUM-SIZED UNITS AS WELL AS NUMEROUS SMALL LANDING VESSELS."

GERMAN LOSSES IN PRISONERS AND EQUIPMENT WERE MOUNTING STEADILY, AND ALTHOUGH NO NEW FIGURES HAVE BEEN DISCLOSED RECENTLY IT APPEARED PROBABLE THAT GREAT ADDITIONS HAVE BEEN MADE TO THE MORE THAN 22,000 PRISONERS TAKEN IN THE FIRST THREE WEEKS OF THE OFFENSIVE, WHICH NOW IS A MONTH OLD.

JUN 11 1944

THE FIFTH ARMY POUNDED ON NORTH OF VITERBO, IMPORTANT JUNCTION 40 MILES ABOVE ROME WHICH FELL YESTERDAY, IN AN ADVANCE WHICH REPRESENTED THE MOST DIRECT FLANKING THREAT TO THE GERMAN TENTH ARMY. THE ALLIED COMMAND ANNOUNCED THAT "HERE TOO THERE IS MUCH DISORGANIZATION, AND PRISONERS RECENTLY TAKEN INCLUDE COOKS, BUTCHERS AND BAKERS FROM AGES OF NO MORE THAN 14."

JUN 11 1944

LOSSES IN THE TENTH ARMY CONTINUED TO RUN HEAVY AND THE ONCE-PROUD HERMANN GOERING DIVISION IN PARTICULAR HAS BEEN REDUCED TO A STRENGTH COMPARABLE TO THAT WITH WHICH IT STRAGGLED BACK FROM SICILY, LATER TO BE REBUILT.

THE MEDITERRANEAN AIR FORCES CONTRIBUTED GREATLY TO THE DEMORALIZATION AND THE RIPPING APART OF THE ROUTED ENEMY. FLYING 2,700 SORTIES YESTERDAY, THESE ALLIED AIRMEN WERE OFFICIALLY CREDITED WITH DESTROYING 246 MOTOR VEHICLES AND 300 RAIL CARS AND DAMAGING 150 VEHICLES AND 130 RAIL CARS.

VIRTUAL DESTRUCTION OF THE 14TH ARMY REQUIRED CONSIDERABLY LESS THAN A MONTH. IT WAS MAY 23 WHEN THE AMERICAN AND BRITISH FIFTH ARMY TROOPS ATTACKED FROM THE ANZIO PERIMETER AND BEGAN PUNCHING HOLES IN VON MACKENSEN'S LINES.

OF AT LEAST SEVEN DIVISIONS VON MACKENSEN WAS KNOWN TO HAVE USED, THE 20TH LUFTWAFFE FIELD DIVISION RUSHED FROM DENMARK WAS THE ONLY ONE STILL TRYING TO FIGHT AS AN ORGANIZED UNIT, AND IT WAS DOING SO IN A BELATED ATTEMPT TO STAVE OFF ROUT LONG ENOUGH FOR THE OTHER TROOPS TO BE REORGANIZED.

UNLIKE THE ILL-FATED GERMAN ARMY UNDER COL. GEN. JURGEN VON ARNIM IN TUNISIA, FIELD MARSHAL ALBERT KESSELRING'S TROOPS HAVE NORTHERN ITALY INTO WHICH TO FLEE AND THEY THEREFORE CAN NOT BE WIPED OUT NOW. BUT IT APPEARED TONIGHT THAT THE ALLIES ALREADY HAD ACHIEVED IN SUBSTANTIAL DEGREE THE AVOWED OBJECTIVE OF THE OFFENSIVE--DESTRUCTION OF THE ENEMY IN ITALY.

IN HUNAN PROVINCE, JAPANESE FORCES EAST OF THE CANTON-HANKOW RAILWAY CITY OF CHANGSHA WERE FOILED IN NEW ATTEMPTS TO CROSS THE LAOTAO RIVER, SECOND AND LAST BARRIER BEFORE THE CITY, A CHINESE COMMUNIQUE SAID TONIGHT. YESTERDAY THE CHINESE COMMUNIQUE SAID SOME ENEMY FORCES HAD CROSSED THE RIVER.

FIGHTING ALSO CONTINUED ABOUT 30 MILES NORTHWEST OF THE CITY, BELOW SIANGYIN, WHERE THE JAPANESE WERE TRYING TO OBSTRUCT THE FLOW OF REINFORCEMENTS FOR THE RELIEF OF CHANGSHA, AND NORTHEAST OF THE CITY. AT LATEST REPORTS THE JAPANESE DIRECTLY NORTH, DRIVING DOWN THE RAILWAY, WERE ABOUT SEVEN AND ONE-HALF MILES FROM THE CITY.

FIFTY MILES NORTHWEST OF CHANGSHA, ANOTHER ENEMY COLUMN REACHED THE OUTSKIRTS OF YIYANG, BUT WERE PRESSED BACK, THE BULLETIN SAID, AND HEAVY FIGHTING WAS IN PROGRESS SIX MILES EAST OF THAT CITY.

WITH CHINESE TROOPS ON THE SALWEEN RIVER, MAY 23-(DELAYED)-(AP)-CORPORAL DONALD H.KITCHIN CAME TRUDGING INTO CAMP LAST NIGHT FROM AN ASSIGNMENT WITH CHINESE UNITS WEST OF THE SALWEEN. JUN 111944

AS HE PASSED A COOK FIRE, A VOICE RANG OUT: "HEY, KITCHIN, YOU'RE GOING HOME."

IN 28 MONTHS OVERSEAS, KITCHIN HAD HEARD THAT BEFORE. HE REPLIED "WHO DO YOU THINK YOU'RE KIDDING?"

"HE'S NOT KIDDING--YOUR ORDERS ARE HERE," SAID CAPT.WILL LEE, 2720 WEST COLLEGE AVENUE, SPOKANE, WASH., ORDNANCE OFFICER WITH WHOM KITCHIN HAS BEEN WORKING IN THE Y-FORCE. JUN 111944

KITCHIN'S HOME IS ROUTE ONE, GENERAL DELIVERY, MIAMI, FLA. PROBABLY THE FIRST STAGE OF HIS JOURNEY WILL BE SLOWEST SINCE IT IS TWO FULL DAYS WITH PACK ANIMALS MERELY BACK TO THE BURMA ROAD.

KITCHIN WAS SO EXCITED LAST NIGHT HE NEGLECTED TO PUT UP ANY SORT OF SHELTER. CAUGHT SHORT, HE HAD TO SLEEP OUT IN THE OPEN DURING A NIGHT-LONG RAIN.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, JUNE 10-(AP)-AKING THE BIGGEST TOLL OF JAPANESE WARSHIPS IN MONTHS, AMERICAN IRPOWER HAS SMASHED ANOTHER APPARENT ATTEMPT TO AID HARD-PRESSED MPERIAL TROOPS ON BIAK ISLAND, HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED TODAY.

MITCHELL BOMBERS, DIVING TO MAST HEIGHT, SANK FOUR JAPANESE ESTROYERS WITH 1,000-POUND BOMBS, DAMAGED A FIFTH AND DROVE FF A CRUISER AND ANOTHER DESTROYER. THE ACTION OCCURRED THURSDAY FF MANOKWARI, DUTCH NEW GUINEA, AS THE JAPANESE TASK FORCE AS PROCEEDING EASTWARD ACROSS GEELVINK BAY TOWARD BIAK, 150 ILES DISTANT. JUN 111944

THE 10 MITCHELLS WERE ESCORTED BY FIGHTER PLANES WHICH ANGLED WITH 10 ENEMY FIGHTERS, SHOOTING DOWN FIVE AND PROBABLY NOTHER. THREE AMERICAN PLANES WERE LOST.

AMERICAN LAND FORCES ON BIAK, HOLDING IMPORTANT MOKMER AIR-ROMES, WERE MOPPING UP TWO RESISTANCE POCKETS OF JAPANESE. NE WAS 1,600 YARDS NORTH OF MOKMER VILLAGE; THE SECOND WAS IN AVES ALONG THE COAST SOUTH OF THE AIRFIELD. THIS WAS THE FINAL RELUDE TO ANOTHER PUSH TOWARD THE ISLET'S TWO REMAINING AIRSTRIPS, OROKOE AND SORIDO. AMERICAN PLANES HIT THE LATTER, WHICH IS WO MILES WEST OF MOKMER, WITH 50 TONS OF BOMBS.

THE DESTROYED JAPANESE TASK FORCE WAS THE FIRST SIZEABLE IMPERIAL LEET UNIT TO DARE NEW GUINEA WATERS FOR SOME MONTHS. THAT ACTOR EMPHASIZED THE IMPORTANCE ATTACHED TO BIAK, MAIN ISLAND N THE SCHOUTEN GROUP, WHICH TOKYO HAS ADMITTED IS WITHIN HE EMPIRE'S "INNER DEFENSE" CIRCLE. BOMBERS FROM ITS IRFIELDS CAN REACH THE SOUTHERN PHILIPPINES.

IN THREE OTHER SEPARATE ACTIONS SINCE JUNE 3, AMERICAN AIRCRAFT AMAGED A HEAVY CRUISER, SANK ONE DESTROYER AND LEFT ANOTHER EAD IN THE WATER. PREVIOUSLY, THE LAST JAPANESE WARSHIP EPORTED SUNK WAS MARCH 21.

GUADALCANAL--(DELAYED)--FOUR MARINES, AFLOAT FOR FIVE DAYS IN A SHARK-CONVOYED RAFT AFTER THEIR MITCHELL BOMBER WAS FORCED DOWN OFF NEW IRELAND, OWE THEIR LIVES TO LUCK AND A TINY SUN REFLECTOR.

CHANCE TOOK THE TINY RAFT CLOSE TO ALLIED-HELD EMIRAU ISLAND AFTER IT HAD DRIFTED 200 MILES IN THE OPPOSITE DIRECTION TO THE ONE PLOTTED BY THE MARINES. THE FLASHING OF THE REFLECTOR WAS SPOTTED OFF THE ISLAND AND THE FLIERS WERE PICKED UP AFTER FIVE DAYS OF RAW FISH AND SIX SWALLOWS OF WATER A DAY.

THE MEN RESCUED WERE FIRST LIEUT. HOWARD E.MIDBUST. CO-PILOT, OF 1025 JOHN AVENUE, SUPERIOR, WIS.; SECOND LIEUT. ROBERT J.O'LEARY, NAVIGATOR, OF FIRESTEEL, SOUTH DAKOTA; SERGEANT HARVEY ELLIS FLOWERS, RADIO GUNNER, OF 1972 NEWTON STREET, AKRON, OHIO, AND CORPORAL JAMES L.O'BRIEN, 20, TURRET GUNNER, OF 1400 FAIRMONT STREET, N.W., WASHINGTON, D.C. LOST WHEN THEIR PLANE WAS FORCED DOWN WERE CAPTAIN REX ARCHIE BREASHER, PILOT, OF 4255 BOYAR STREET, LONG BEACH, CAL., AND CORPORAL BERNARD ALOYSIUS O'HARA, OF 500 VAN COURTLANDT, PARK AVENUE, YONKERS, N.Y.

JUN 11 1944

LIEUT. MIDBUST LOST SEVERAL TEETH WHEN THE PLANE CRASHED AND CORPORAL O'BRIEN FRACTURED HIS LEFT ARM AND SUFFERED SEVERE LEG LACERATIONS, BUT IS RECOVERING IN A NAVY HOSPITAL HERE.

O'BRIEN TOLD OF HIS EXPERIENCE:

JUN 11 1944

THE CREW HAD COMPLETED A NIGHT BOMBING ATTACK ON RABAUL. SPOTTING SEVERAL SHIPS OFF NEW IRELAND, THE PILOT MADE AN IDENTIFICATION RUN OVER THEM. THE SHIPS SCATTERED AND THE PILOT HEADED BACK FOR BOMBS AND GAS TO RETURN TO THE ATTACK.

JUST AFTER 1 A.M., THE PLANE RAN OUT OF GAS AND CRAUHED AT ABOUT 175 MILES AN HOUR INTO THE STORM-SCREENED SEAS.

THE PLANE STAYED AFLOAT SIX MINUTES, LONG ENOUGH FOR O'BRIEN TO JOIN THE THREE OTHERS WHO SURVIVED THE CRASH.

LIEUT.MIDBUST TOOK COMMAND WHEN THE PLANE WENT DOWN WITH THE PILOT AND CORPORAL O'HARA. EFFORTS TO EXTRICATE THEM WERE UNAVAIL-ING. HE INVENTORIED SUPPLIES, THEN ESTABLISHED THE RATIONS--THREE SWALLOWS OF WATER AND A SMALL AMOUNT OF FOOD PER MAN EACH MORNING AND EACH EVENING. NO RATIONS TO BE EATEN IF FISH COULD BE CAUGHT.

LIEUT.O'LEARY, HAVING A COMPASS, SET A COURSE IN THE STORMY DAWN FOR BOUGAINVILLE. LIEUT.MIDBUST FASHIONED A SAIL FROM A PARACHUTE AND A MAKESHIFT RUDDER.

SHARKS SWAM LAZILY AROUND AND UNDER THE RAFT, THEIR FINS OFTEN TOUCHING THE MARINES AS THEY LAY FOR SHELTER IN THE BOTTOM.

THE FIRST DAY PLANES FLEW OVER THEM BUT DIDN'T SEE THEIR FLARE IN THE BRIGHT SUN.

THEY SIGHTED LAND THURSDAY AFTERNOON AND THOUGHT IT WAS BOUGAINVILLE. BUT IT WAS EMIRAU, A HUNDRED MILES AWAY. LIEUT.MIDBUST AND THE OTHERS FLASHED THEIR REFLECTOR FOR HOURS.

ABOUT 6 P.M. A SHIP HEADED FOR THEM UNDER FULL STEAM. THE AMERICAN VESSEL QUICKLY PULLED ALONGSIDE AND PICKED THE MEN UP. THEY HAD DRUNK AND EATEN SO SPARINGLY THEY STILL HAD ENOUGH WATER AND FOOD TO SURVIVE FOR 15 MORE DAYS.

Wounded Hospital Crew Flies Out Burma Raiders

BURMA — AP — Wounded and flying a bomb-damaged hospital plane, four members of an air-evacuation corps — one a woman — brought wounded American troops out of Myitkyina and two other Burma fields.

The woman, Lt. Audrey Rogers, of Burkburnett, Tex., is in command of the air-evacuation nurses' corps in India and China.

Her plane landed at Myitkyina the day after Brig. Gen. Frank Merrill's Marauders captured the field in a surprise attack behind the Japanese lines. As the plane was about to take off, Japanese bombers appeared and fragments tore big holes in one of its wings.

One of the wounded men was killed. Then the Zeros ripped bullets and .20 mm. shells through the fuselage. After the attack, the pilots reported the plane was barely airworthy. Nevertheless, the takeoff was ordered, and successfully made.

Insisting on completing the assignment, the evacuation crew collected the wounded at two other fields and delivered them at an advance base before returning to their own base.

Green Islands Become South Pacific Paradise

NISSAN, South Pacific—AP—The Green islands, after four months of Allied occupation, have become a south Pacific paradise despite the Japanese on islands encircling the group.

Day and night, combat and transport planes take off from the air strips dominating the center of Nissan, largest of the seven islands in the group.

The weather is moderate. Picturesque natives clad in red, green and blue skirt-like coverings add color to the scene. Flight nurses make brief daily stops.

Miles of jungle were leveled for airstrips and camps. But there's enough jungle left to provide a south seas backdrop.

Tilly-Sur-Seulles and Lison Fall to Allies; Bitter Fighting Near St. Lo.

By WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, June 12. — (AP) American troops, making news which headquarters declared today was "excellent—it could not be better," plunged to the outskirts of Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of the prize port of Cherbourg, slashed half-way across the Cherbourg peninsula, and drove deeply southeast towards St. Lo Sunday in furious battle with the Germans.

Quickly following the midnight communique No. 12 which announced these gains and heavy fighting on the British wing of the Normandy invasion front below liberated Tilly-Sur-Seulles, headquarters said the American progress on the right wing towards Cherbourg was "extremely good news."

The Americans also won high official praise for an advance on their own left wing, in the center of the 50-mile Allied front headquarters disclosed that they had liberated the town of Lison, 10 miles south of the coast below Isigny and, in a continuing push on a broad front, had moved several miles farther south and east to the forest of Cerisy.

So encouraging were these gains of five miles or more that headquarters announced: "The phase of securing the bridgehead is nearing a successful end."

Americans Near Carentan

The situation around Carentan, big town in the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula, was described as "obscure." The Germans still held the town but Americans were advancing deep along each side of it.

(A BBC broadcast from London, recorded in New York by the Blue network, said Carentan is virtually surrounded and that American patrols are fighting in the streets.)

West of St. Mere Eglise, on the road to Cherbourg, Americans who have crossed the main peninsular railway in several places still are fighting stiffly, beating off repeated German counter-attacks.

New Landings Reported

The Germans said there were massive new landings of troops and equipment Sunday on the east coast of the peninsula, and the Allies announced that rail yards, junctions, bridges and the airfield at the city of Cherbourg itself were bombed and strafed during the day.

The Germans conceded that it was obvious that the Allies intended to seize Cherbourg and the top of the peninsula and "make it a platform for the second phase of the invasion.

Germans Resist Advance

The Allied communique announced that in the vicinity of Tilly-Sur-Seulles the Germans had thrown in heavy armored forces and were stubbornly resisting the British advance along the Seulles river. Tilly-Sur-Seulles is a dozen miles inland, southeast of Bayeux. Its capture by the British with the aid of heavy naval artillery, plus the American surge past Lison, put most of the beaches out of range of German guns.

There was strong indication that the German defense command of Field Marshals Rommel and Von Runstedt was committing its armor and reserve troops piecemeal along the entire deepening beach-

[illegible] in a desperate effort to contain the Allied drive generally rather than stopping it in detail by overwhelming concentration of forces.

The rolling American offensive under Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, which won such high and rare praise from conservative staff officers at headquarters, was spearheaded by the 82nd and 101st Airborne divisions and the First and 29th Infantry divisions.

Bombers Aid Drive

It coincided with crushing aerial blows which saw more than 1,000 bombers go out on a single mission, while British and American warships pounded enemy defenses to bits deep inland and broke up repeated attacks by German motor torpedo boats.

On the Cherbourg peninsula, the Germans evidently were making a last desperate stand to try to protect the railway junction of Valognes, four miles above Montebourg, and were battering in vain against the airborne troops who had crossed the railway west of St. Mere Eglise. The firm stand of the airborne forces was described by headquarters as "very gratifying" since it showed the Germans had not the strength to break the lines.

In the center, the American drive on St. Lo, nine miles below Lison, was aimed at a highway-hub controlling a large part of Normandy.

This drive won high praise from headquarters. The American troops, aided by engineers, had to wade and fight through five miles of flooded lowlands to take Lison.

Reach Rolling Country

They now have reached rolling country, ideal for mobile warfare.

Between Bayeux and Caen, heavy fighting was continued by British and Canadian units. Tank battles still raged in desperate fury about Caen as the Germans tried to break through.

The British Sixth Airborne division defended the east bank of a canal in that sector in what was officially called a "gallant" action against repeated German counter-attacks.

The day's progress altogether was the biggest and most gratifying since the initial landings Tuesday.

Unofficially, the opinion was expressed around headquarters that it now was impossible for the Germans to dislodge the Allied forces.

After the first tough four days, the Allies were regaining the initiative and were in an offensive mood.

The optimism of the supreme command was partly due to improving weather. Although there were drizzles of rain and a mist in the channel during the night, the wind had dropped and the unloading of supplies and reinforcements was proceeding rapidly.

Reinforcements Poured In

Both sides poured in armor and fresh troops, with Allied planes and warships battering home titanic supporting blows. Berlin estimated 18 Allied divisions of 350,000 to 400,000 men were engaged.

U. S. Airborne troops operating as infantry smashed in several places across the Merderet river, coursing through the center of Cherbourg peninsula, driving within a mile or two of the last remaining roads leading to the port. A push of another 10 to 11 miles would choke off the tip of the peninsula.

Berlin broadcasts reported "extensive landings of troops with heavy material" today on the U. S. beachhead between Isigny and Quineville, said both sides were throwing fresh forces into the Normandy battle, especially in this American sector.

Allied warships bombarded Barfleur, at the northeast tip of the peninsula, Berlin said, and one broadcast reported strong parachute troop landings "south of Caen" at the other end of the front.

The American drive in the center of the merged beachheads menaced St. Lo's roads feeding to all sections of Normandy.

Fall of Lison and British capture of Tilly Sur Seulles—accomplished with aid of naval guns firing 10 miles inland—put the beaches beyond range of any but the largest German guns, with the Nazis denied air control for effective direction of such fire.

German counterattacks against Americans advancing west of the main Cherbourg road were beaten down. U. S. troops were said to be making fairly rapid progress north and south of Carentan, with the Germans defending that town with Cassino-like stubborness. Carentan is the control point for flood gates by which the Nazis inundated that area.

7,000 PLANES HIT NAZI KEY POINTS

CLADWIN HILL

Force of 1,000 U. S. Bombers Spearheads Bombing of Enemy Supply Lines.

JUN 12 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 11.—(AP) Spearheaded by 1,000 U. S. heavy bombers, nearly 7,000 Allied warplanes supporting Allied armies enlarging their beachheads in Normandy today dealt the Germans the heaviest series of daylight blows since the invasion began.

Strong RAF forces were heard flying from British bases in the night and Axis announcements said Berlin was one target and that the southeastern quarters of the Paris region were bombed.

Enemy Airfields Hit

U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators smashed at nine enemy airfields, eight bridges, a German army headquarters and other objectives in an area stretching from the beachhead to Paris and as far north as Pas De Calais. At the same time fighters kept up a day-long pounding of communication lines and enemy convoys.

Mustangs, Thunderbolts and Lightnings dive-bombed and blasted enemy targets, shooting up more than 300 railroad cars, 85 trucks, a number of tanks and armored cars, 25 locomotives and a dozen oil tanks.

Headquarters of the strategic air force announced that five German planes were destroyed and that three heavy bombers and eight fighters were missing from all the day's operations.

Since D-Day until 6 p.m., Sunday, headquarters of the strategic air force announced, planes of the Ninth air force alone flew more than 13,000 sorties, averaging about 100 flights per hour over enemy territory despite bad weather which grounded all except reconnaissance planes for 24 hours June 9.

Since H-hour, the announcement said, mediums, light and fighter-bombers of the Ninth have dropped more than 5,800 tons of bombs in and around the battle zone. Fighter-bombers alone have hit more than 800 different objectives.

C-47 troop carriers and gliders have flown more than 1,000 operations.

112 Planes Lost

Altogether, the announcement said, the Ninth has lost 112 planes since the invasion began, excluding gliders abandoned after unloading. Forty German planes out of the small forces willing to challenge the Allies were shot down by the Ninth air force.

While Allied planes based in Britain and on newly-won air strips in France were battering at the Nazis, Hitler's Balkan defensese were pounded by American heavy bombers which flew from their new bases in Russia to smash at two Romanian airfields north of Bucharest and complete their shuttle trip back to Italy.

American Marauder and Havoc bombers ranged over a 200-mile front during the day, from the Paris area to the bay of St. Michel at the western foot of the Cherbourg peninsula, bombing six targets.

American Mustangs dive-bombed two railroad bridges and a repair shed on the Vire river south of St. Lo, 10 miles south of the American lines.

Thunderbolts twice dive-bombed German reinforcements heading towards the front in railway yards at Coutances, 17 miles west of St. Lo, and radio installations and rail facilities in the same area.

One Marauder and five fighters were shot down by anti-aircraft fire. Only one German plane was seen.

Beachhead Protected

R.A.F. Typhoons, Mustangs and Spitfires maintained the beachhead "umbrella," meeting some flak but few German planes. Up to noon four R.A.F. fighters and four German planes had been shot down.

Overall Allied aerial losses for the day were 26 planes, most victims of German anti-aircraft guns. In all operations a total of nine German planes were reported destroyed—five by the Eighth air force.

Indicating the Allies' aerial activity was continuing on through the night, the German radio broadcast that nuisance raiders were approaching western Germany—perhaps Mosquitos going to Berlin for the third successive night. The Budapest radio also went off the air, suggesting that Mediterranean-based night bombers were out.

Later the German radio said Allied raiders were over Berlin.

(The Nazi-controlled Paris radio said shortly before midnight in a broadcast reported by OWI that Allied planes "heavily bombed the locality southwest of the Paris area.")

The American assault followed a huge R.A.F. night blow on four key rail centers in the Paris area, and was supplemented by fighter-bombers which through the day maintained what headquarters termed probably the closest air support ever given ground operations.

Allied airmen flew 6,000 to 7,000 sorties in the 36 hours since Friday midnight.

Some 1,000 U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators drove home the main morning blow today, escorted by as many Thunderbolt, Mustang and Lightning fighters swooping low to strafe additional objectives en route.

"The havoc wreaked upon the enemy's transport, lines of communications and troop movements has been of inestimable value to the over-all effort," Lt.-Gen. Carl A. Spaatz declared in a message praising the work of the U. S. Eighth Fighter command.

Fine weather over the channel with improving visibility and sunshine aided the continuing thrusts to speed the ground advance.

R.A.F. Lancasters and Halifaxes by night hammered the French railway centers of Versailles, Acheres, Orleans and Dreux — on which the Germans were heavily dependent for reinforcing the Normandy front since Allied planes disrupted lines to the north.

Mosquito planes meanwhile struck Berlin for the second straight night, and laid mines at a cost of two planes.

The German radio said Vienna also was hit last night, and the Paris radio said the French capital area was raided again this morning.

Twenty R.A.F. bombers were lost in the assaults on the Versailles and Acheres yards near Paris, the Orleans railyards 90 miles south of that capital and the yards at Dreux, 50 miles east of Paris and only 90 miles from the fighting front. Six German night fighters were brought down.

Ten other Junkers-88's, probably on reconnaissance, were shot down last night by patrolling fighters, nine over the battle area and one over the ocean.

FOE'S PARATROOPS ROUTED BY OUR OWN

Several Hundred Killed, 1,000 Seized by Outnumbered U.S. Unit in Vital French Fight

JUN 12 1944

Associated Press Correspondent

For the Combined American Press

WITH UNITED STATES PARATROOPS IN FRANCE, June 8 (Delayed)—In a duel in which every bullet counted, American paratroops today shot up a force of German paratroops more than double their size, killing several hundred and capturing more than 1,000.

The action broke the back of German defenses and the survivors retired.

Our paratroops made a daylight attack. The Germans, ordered to hold at all costs, put up a stubborn defense in thick woods and a dozen houses. The opposing troops, sheltered behind stone walls and in houses, fought from distances as close as fifty yards.

30. 24 — 16148

To speed progress the paratroops called for artillery fire in the center of town, particularly on the largest building, where they were meeting strong machine-gun and machine-pistol fire.

Snipers Rooted Out

Guns and mortars dropped shells squarely in the courtyard, where 100 dead Germans within 100 square yards later were co nted. To encircle the town, our paratroops crawled from wall to wall and from hedge to hedge, moving forward slowly as they wiped out one sniper after another.

Finally the opposing forces exchanged shots at close range. Every time a German moved he was killed. I saw at least twenty with bullet holes through the forehead.

The Germans were young and brave but inexperienced. They showed this when they moved to obtain a better firing position, thereby exposing themselves to our riflemen. Our men, unable to carry much ammunition when they jump from planes, did not fire unless they were sure of hitting their target.

Our losses were proportionately small. After a half hour of this kind of fighting the Germans saw that they were being outshot. About 200 of them laid down their rifles and surrendered. About 200 others quit.

Fighting in Marshes

Meanwhile a similar shooting match was going on in the marshes as our troops advanced. After the Germans there had seen that they could not equal our marksmanship, 400 surrendered to fewer than 100 Americans.

However, several hundred Germans, fighting a rearguard action, retreated, about 150 Americans attacking them. The Americans were able to leave only about fifty of their small number to guard the prisoners.

Then another group of 100 or more Germans who had been overlooked attacked from the rear against the Americans guarding the prisoners. The situation was saved by American reinforcements.

A corps officer set the day's prisoner total at 1,300.

It was uncertain whether the German paratroops had jumped into the area or had arrived on foot or by trucks.

FRENCH PARTISANS SHOOT NAZI AIDES; UPRISINGS SPREAD

JUN 12 1944

IRUN, Spain, June 11—(AP) French Partisans have occupied strategic centers in the cities of Toulouse, Limoges and Tarbes in southern France and have shot the prefects of police, mayors and other collaborationist authorities in all three cities, direct dispatches reaching here said today.

The dispatches did not make clear whether the actions constituted a general uprising, saying only that important points in the three cities, as well as in the regions surrounding them were occupied by the partisans.

(A major uprising by French patriots, extending from Metz to Avignon—almost the entire length of the eastern France—and including a "major coup" at Bellegarde near the Swiss border, was described today in Swiss and Swedish newspaper accounts, the Office of War Information reported. About 100 French patriots were said to have seized the Bellegarde railway station, location of a Nazi headquarters, and to have "proceeded systematically to sabotage all the installations. About a mile away, the reports said, 48 Germans were killed and 150 prisoners taken in a "violent clash" between Germans and patriots last Thursday.

(The German-controlled Vichy telegraph agency, the OWI reported, said Nazi occupation authorities had assumed full "executive power" in the four departments of south central France—Allier, Cantal, Haute-Loire and Puy De Dome.)

The first train to arrive here from northern France since the start of the Allied invasion had been routed by way of Lyon, Marseille, Toulouse, Bordeaux and Hendaye.

A traveller said the partisans have been receiving arms constantly from the Allies for the last fortnight, enabling them to attack Germans and collaborationists in force.

This traveler said the French roads were "in a more chaotic condition than in 1940," as the collaborationists fled the countryside for the cities and German protection. Inhabitants of coastal regions were reported trying to reach central France, despite German resistance.

One carload of weary travelers crossed the Irun frontier today from Paris and Belgium and reported that French underground guerrillas, they said, had occupied scores of smaller towns, as well as points in the three large cities. They said they were told by trainmen that saboteurs had wrecked the direct Paris-Boreaux line.

These travelers said they saw from train windows in the southwest swarms of Frenchmen, "some refugees, some armed citizenry and some fleeing collaborationists." They told of reports by station officials of French guerrilla groups who swooped down on central French towns and cities, shooting some Vichyite officials who were surprised while trying to organize collaborationists.

(The Stockholm newspaper, Stockholms Tidningen, estimated that in a 48-hour period ending yesterday the Germans had arrested at least 6,500 Frenchmen, including 822 at Lyon, and said that several hundred executions had taken place, OWI reported.)

One traveler said that heavily-armed and well-equipped mountain guerrillas had taken over Limoges. He added:

"They struck yesterday from all sides. When I left, there seemed to be little resistance. The collaborationist officials literally vanished. On a march toward Limoges, the guerrilla forces met speed cyclists participating in a cross-country race. They seized the cycles, which were used by guerrilla armed scouts, and the cyclists joined the guerrillas on the march. It is quite likely that Périgueux, the capital of Dordogne, south of Limoges, is also in guerrilla hands."

Montgomery Says Allies Have 'a Firm Lodgment'

He Asserts Invaders Have Achieved 'Great Success'

JUN 12 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 11 (AP).—General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, in a message to the 21st Army Group, today said the Allies have secured a "good and firm" hold on the French mainland, and were in a good position to exploit their success.

The text of General Montgomery's statement:

"After four days of fighting the Allied armies have secured a good and firm lodgment area on the mainland of France.

"First we must thank Almighty God for the success achieved and for giving us such a good beginning toward the full completion of our task.

"Second, we must pay tribute to the Allied navies and air forces for their magnificent co-operation and support. Without it we soldiers could have achieved nothing.

"Third, I want personally to congratulate every officer and man in the Allied armies on the splendid results of the last four days.

"The British, Canadian and American soldiers fighting gallantly side by side have achieved great success and have placed themselves in a good position from which to exploit this success.

"To every officer and man, whatever may be his rank or employment, I send my grateful thanks and best wishes for the future. Much still remains to be done, but together, you and I, we will do it and we will see the thing through to the end."

American Progress "Excellent"

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (Monday) (AP).—American troops are making news which headquarters declared today was "excellent—it could not be better." Headquarters said the American progress on the right wing toward Cherbourg was "extremely good news." The Americans also won high official praise for an advance on their own left wing, in the center of the fifty-mile Allied front.

So encouraging were the gains that headquarters announced: "The phase of securing the bridgehead is nearing a successful end."

11 GERMAN SOLDIERS KILLED BY BETHANY BOY

JUN 12 1944

AT A NINTH AIR FORCE TROOP CARRIER BASE, June 11 (AP) In a few hours of fast action, Glider Pilot R. B. Fowler of Bethany, Conn. killed 11 Germans, was taken prisoner and escaped back to the American lines on a stolen Nazi motorcycle.

When the flight officer's glider crash-landed in Normandy on D-day, Fowler killed nine Nazis with a hand grenade and his rifle. He was knocked unconscious then, and when he awoke he was a captive.

He was taken to regimental headquarters with two other survivors of his group. A German colonel drove up and Fowler threw a hand grenade which the Nazis had overlooked in his pocket when they searched him. It killed the colonel and another soldier.

Fowler fled with the colonel's binocular and carbine.

"All I'm waiting for now is the next tow job," he said.

GERMANS TO CONSIDER FRENCH AS GUERRILLAS

LONDON, June 11—(AP) The German-controlled Paris radio tonight broadcast a decree from Field Marshal Gen. Karl Von Rundstedt that all French caught resisting the Germans would be treated as Francs Tireurs (guerrillas) to whom the usual international conventions regarding prisoners of war would not be applied.

This was the harshest of a series of German steps aimed at subduing the increasing resistance behind their lines.

A broadcast tonight from Algiers by French resistance leaders directed that "all Frenchmen and women, consider yourselves mobilized as from today" to hamper the Germans by every means possible.

Allied Army at Pescara As Nazis Resume Flight

Fifth and Eighth Armies Overrun Industrial City on Adriatic as Germans, After Costly Stand at Viterbo, Speed Retreat North of Rome.

JUN 12 1944

By LYNN HEINZERLING

ROME, June 11.—(AP) The Fifth and Eighth armies, pressing close behind the mauled Germans who have lost 70,000 men in a month, sped northward today in a general 10-mile advance that overran the important industrial city of Pescara on the Adriatic coast.

Midway on the Italian peninsula east of Rome the former German bastion of Avezzano also fell to the Eighth army which was fighting over difficult rolling wooded land heavily mined and studded with stubborn rear guards. Avezzano lies on the important lateral road from Rome to Pescara and the Eighth was methodically clearing it of the enemy.

Nazis in Full Retreat

The Fourteenth German army, which turned to make a brief and costly stand six miles north of Viterbo, was in full retreat again and the Fifth army pushed 10 miles north of that city.

There were indications the German flight was even faster than before since mine sweepers steamed into Santo Stefano to find that port, 80 miles northwest of Rome and 25 miles beyond Allied patrols advancing up the coast, abandoned.

The Tenth German army, which had been falling back more slowly, accelerated its retreat as the Fourteenth's swift withdrawal uncovered its right flank and Indians of the British Eighth army seized not only Pescara but Chieti, another provincial capital farther inland, the coastal resort of Francavilla five miles south of Pescara, and Sulmona.

The Fifth army continued to meet only slight opposition as it roared north, capturing Montalto Di Castro, 60 air line miles north of Rome, ten miles beyond Tuscania and 24 miles west of Viterbo, and the small town of Cannino, about ten miles northeast of Montalto Di Castro, the farthest announced point of advance so far.

Other towns to fall were Tessannano, 16 miles west of Viterbo, Soriano Del Cimino, six miles east, and Bassanello.

White flags were flying ashore when mine sweepers boldly entered the port of Santo Stefano and a naval communique reported a railway linking the island to the mainland appeared to have been demolished.

Rail Lines Hammered

The Allied communique said tactical aircraft hammered railroad lines and yards, highways and bridges, motor transport and other targets in the battle area between Sinena and Lake Bolsena and no enemy planes appeared to oppose them during daylight hours.

These blows were struck while strong forces of heavy bombers were attacking oil stores and refineries in the Trieste area of northeastern Italy and Lightning fighter-bombers were making their daring raid on a refinery at Ploesti.

Twenty-seven enemy aircraft were destroyed in all operations and 28 Allied planes were missing as the Mediterranean Allied air force flew approximately 2,400 sorties. These embraced strikes at targets in Yugoslavia and southern Albania, including oil installations at Brod, Yugoslavia.

The magnitude of the defeat dealt the Germans was shown by an official source who declared Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring had lost at least 70,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners since the Allied offensive was launched May 11. This was the equivalent of almost nine divisions and losses still are mounting.

22 Divisions Engaged

Kesselring had under his command in Italy not less than 23 divisions and at least 22 of them have been engaged. The Fifth army advancing southeast of Lake Bolesna has taken prisoners from the German 356th infantry division, the 22nd to be identified. This division was brought south from Genoa toward the end of May.

Associated Press Correspondent George Tucker in a dispatch from the front said the futile enemy stand north of Viterbo cost the Germans five tanks, four self-propelled guns, 21 pieces of artillery and 30 machine guns.

North of Viterbo, he said, the terrain levels out into a broad wheat basin ideal for tank fighting. He saw two groups of prisoners, one of between 90 and 100 men, the other of 44 including a high-ranking officer.

The Fifth moved up over ground littered with dead horses and wrecked enemy vehicles, testimony to the havoc wrought by fighter-bombers.

Germans Offer Resistance

On the east side of the Tiber, the Eighth army armor ran into determined resistance by the German Tenth army anti-tank and infantry holding strong positions west of Poggio Mirteto, nearly 30 miles northeast of Rome. The enemy evacuated the town of Fara five miles southeast of this defense point.

Pescara, the eastern terminus of the road leading east from Rome through Avezzano, has steel and chemical industries.

(Continuing its reports of Allied naval activity off Corsica, DNB in a Berlin broadcast said German "men-of-war" engaged ten British E-boats northwest of Elba and claimed two of the British boats were sunk.)

Trieste Area Bombed

ROME, June 11 (AP).—Strong forces of heavy bombers have attacked oil stores and refineries in the Trieste area of northeastern Italy, and Lightning fighter-bombers made a raid on a refinery at Ploesti, according to an Allied communique.

JUN 12 1944

Twenty-seven enemy aircraft were destroyed in all operations and twenty-eight Allied planes were missing as the Mediterranean Allied Air Force flew approximately 2,400 sorties. These included strikes at targets in Yugoslavia and southern Albania, including oil installations at Brod, Yugoslavia.

'Shuttle' Bombers Return to Italy From Russia, Blasting Axis Bases

Headquarters here named only the Focsani airdromes near Galati, Romania as the targets.

The announcement of the bombers return to Italy disclosed for the first time that General Eaker had made the roundtrip to Russia with the original shuttle-bombers. A dispatch from Moscow said that the Allied Mediterranean air commander had visited the Soviet capital during his stay in Russia and quoted him as saying that the Russian-based U. S. heavy bombers "are going to be a big help to the Red army.")

General Eaker on his return expressed "gratitude and admiration" for the assistance of the Russians in helping establish the new bases in the Soviet Union.

Other 15th air force bombers today attacked other Balkan targets from which the German army is getting support.

Liberators with Lightning escort bombed the Black sea port of Constanta, leaving fire and smoke rising two miles above oil storage facilities. No fighters attacked the formations, but Mustangs on "a penetration escort" engaged and shot down some enemy planes.

The Liberators also attacked Giurgiu on the Danube river, south of Bucharest, where the docks are used for oil transport by river boats. Several air battles were fought over the target.

Liberators and Fortresses also bombed rail yards, and oil installations at Smederevo in Yugoslavia, on the Danube between Belgrade and the Iron Gate.

Lt. General Eaker declared that "gratitude and admiration fill the hearts of all of us who were on this operation" as a result of the Russians' inauguration of shuttle bombing, and he added that the Russians "worked closely with us in the selection of current and future targets."

"The Soviet Air Force on each of our missions," the Allied Mediterranean air chief said, "gave us excellent area support, beating up airdromes with fighters and medium bombers. And Russian aintiaircraft units protect our bases between missions."

Shuttle Raiders, 1,000 Strong, Blast Romania

Italian and Russian-Based U. S. Planes Co-ordinate Attacks; Eaker on Raid

EASTERN COMMAND UNITED STATES STRATEGIC AIR FORCES, Russia, June 11 (AP).—More than 1,000 American planes based in Russia and Italy joined in co-ordinated assaults today on targets at Constanta and Giurgiu, in Romania, and Smedorevo, in Yugoslavia, this command announced tonight.

It was the third mission for American heavy bombers which shuttled to Russia from Italian bases nine days ago.

One of the Russian-based craft was lost in the day's raids, which were carried out in fine weather and with excellent results, a communique said.

First "Shuttlers" Back

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 11 (AP).—American heavy bombers returned to Italy today, completing the homeward leg of the first historic shuttle bombing trip utilizing Russian bases, and en route blasted two Romanian airfields northeast of Bucharest.

The targets were the Focsaani Galati airfields.

Accompanying the bombers on the return trip as he did on the outward flight on June 2 was Lieutenant General Ira C. Eaker, commander of the Allied Mediterranean Air Force. He expressed "gratitude and admiration" for the assistance of the Russians in helping establish the new eastern command of the United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe.

Other 15th Air Force bombers today attacked other Balkan targets from which the German Army is getting support.

Liberators with Lightning escort bombed the Black Sea port of Constanta, leaving fire and smoke rising two miles above oil-storage facilities. No fighters attacked the formations, but Mustangs on "a penetration escort" engaged and shot down some enemy planes.

The Liberators also attacked Giurgiu on the Danube River, south of Bucharest, where the docks are used for oil transport by river boats. Several air battles were fought over the target.

Liberators and Fortresses also bombed rail yards and oil installations at Smederevo in Yugoslavia, on the Danube between Belgrade and the Iron Gate.

Eaker declared that "gratitude and admiration fill the hearts of all of us who were on this operation" as a result of the Russians' inauguration of shuttle bombing, and he added that the Russians "worked closely with us in the selection of current and future targets."

"The Soviet air force on each of our missions," the Allied Mediterranean air chief said, "gave us excellent area support, beating up airdromes with fighters and medium bombers. And Russian anti-aircraft units protect out bases between missions."

Eaker paid particular tribute to Colonel General Nitikin, deputy chief of the Russian air force; Major General Perminov, commander of the bases used, and Major General Slavin, assistant chief of staff of the Russian Army, for co-operating with American leaders on the plans.

Eaker flew to Russia with the veteran 97th Bomber Group, which made the first attack on Nazi targets in Europe from British bases on Aug. 17, 1942. In that pioneer mission he rode a Fortress named Yankee Doodle, and the round trip to Russia was made by its successor, Yankee Doodle II.

29th Division in France

"Blue and Gray" Unit in Action on Cherbourg Peninsula

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS OF ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 11 (AP).—The American 29th Division, disclosed today to be operating on the Cherbourg Peninsula between Isigny and Trevieres, is called the "Blue and Gray Division" because its fighting men come from both sides of the Mason-Dixon Line.

Activated on Jan. 14, 1941, the division reached Great Britain on Oct. 3, 1942, and trained in Britain longer than any other for the "big show." Since its activation all its training has been pointed directly for one thing—the invasion of the Continent.

BORDER IS CLOSED TO FRENCH MOROCCO

ALGIERS, June 11.—(AP) The French National committee today announced the closing of the border between Spanish and French Morocco to all except French, American British and Soviet diplomats and consular officials.

The order also prohibited all outside correspondence in code or diplomatic pouch by the representatives of neutral governments here.

The committee's action followed the recent escape of several Anti-DeGaullists across the border to Madrid where, according to Algiers rumors, they are attempting to form a rival refugee regime.

(The Berlin radio said the border was closed for reasons of "military security." The action was similar to that given by Britain a few weeks before the invasion of Northern France.)

GAIN OF 15 MILES IN KARELIAN AREA HAILED BY STALIN

Red Forces Smash Through Mannerheim Line, Capture 82 Towns.

TERIJOKI SEIZED

Assault Pressed on 25-Mile Front in Vicinity of Lake Ladoga.

LONDON, Monday, June 12—(AP) The Red army, opening a major offensive on the Karelian isthmus above Leningrad, has smashed 15 miles through the strong Finnish Mannerheim line and captured 82 towns and villages, Premier-Marshal Stalin disclosed last night in an order of the day.

The Russian assault on a 25-mile-wide front between Lake Ladoga and the Gulf of Finland was aimed at knocking out Finland, Germany's co-belligerent in the war against Russia, and was launched after Finland had rejected Russian armistice terms which included a demand for the expulsion of seven Nazi divisions operating in Finland.

New Attacks Expected

Other Red army offensives were expected to unfold soon on the long front from the Baltic to the Black seas as part of the Allied master plan aimed at defeating Germany this year.

Reports from uneasy Finland said the massive Russian assault began Friday—three days after the Allied invasion of western France.

Stalin's order of the day and a following communique announced the Russian capture in two days fighting of the rail city of Terijoki, 27 airline miles northwest of Leningrad and 160 miles east of the Finnish capital of Helsinki.

Terijoki is six miles west of the 1938 Russian-Finnish border on the Leningrad-Helsinki railway which runs near the north coast of the gulf of Finland at that point. Terijoki was the site of the short-lived "Finnish people's government" headed by Otto Kuusinen and recognized by Soviet Russia in December, 1939, during the 1939-40 Finnish-Russian war.

Reds Seize Yappilya

Russian forces attacking with the support of massed artillery and swarms of planes also seized Yappilya, "an important strongpoint" seven miles northeast of Terijoki, the order of the day said.

Both Yappilya and Terijoki are about 45 miles from the city of Viipuri; and 68 miles from the Finnish-Russian border established in 1940 when Finland sued for peace.

Twenty salvoes from 220 Moscow guns were ordered fired to celebrate the initial Summer campaign of the Russian armies which hope to topple Germany, Finland, and Balkan satellites of the Axis this year.

The Finnish front had been more or less stalemated since November, 1941, after the Finns had regained the territory lost to Russia the year before. A Russian victory in Russia would open the way for a smash into German-occupied Norway, which adjoins Finland in the north. It also would close the aerial ring on Germany from the north.

Finnish military officials acknowledged the Russians have broken through their lines, and dispatches from Helsinki said the Finns were increasingly worried.

Finnish Firms Blacklisted

Finnish business firms were blacklisted by the United States recently after several friendly American warnings to Finland to get out of the war or risk destruction.

The blacklisting occurred after Finland's government had rejected Russian armistice terms last April.

Russian terms had called for reparations of $600,000,000 payable in five years, the withdrawal of Finnish troops to the 1940 border, the internment of German divisions, and the concession of bases. Finland turned down these terms, apparently in the belief that she could gain a more favorable negotiated peace at a later date.

For the first time in his order of the day, Stalin used the expression "death to the German-Finnish invader." He said the Russians, led by Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov, victor of Mozhaisk and liberator of Leningrad, had "passed over to the offensive on the Karelian isthmus."

Germany, whose war machine is Finland's main hope of surviving a disastrous conflict, did not show much obvious interest in the developments on the Finnish front. Berlin broadcasts merely reported that the Russians were attacking against Finnish lines, and said that the Nazi high command was expecting the main Russian offensive to break on the front near Pskov, gateway to Latvia and Estonia.

Nazis Expect New Blows

The Germans also were perturbed about the prospect of simultaneous Red army blows in Poland and near Iasi in eastern Romania.

Finland entered the war soon after Germany attacked Russia nearly three years ago, but there has been little big-scale fighting on her part of the front. Her troops re-won territory ceded to Russia in 1940, and then settled down into fortifications that have been steadily augmented.

The Finns said the Russians in their new offensive were using hundreds of planes to cover their advancing tanks and infantrymen as well as a terrific concentration of artillery which placed a withering barrage on Finnish forward positions.

Russian Progress Continues

The Soviet forces in two days' fighting had widened their breakthrough to a width of 25 miles of the peninsula, whose width is only 35 miles. Further Russian progress along the north side of the Gulf of Finland should speed the day when the Soviet Baltic fleet leaves its harbors near Leningrad for attacks on German positions in Estonia.

A midnight communique said a three-hour artillery and aerial bombardment of Finnish fortifications preceded the infantry and tank assault.

London military men, recalling how a much smaller Red army cracked the Isthmus defenses in the 1939-40 conflict, expressed belief that the Finns would be unable to continue the fight for long. Help from Germany is regarded as unlikely since the seven Naiz divisions already in Finland are said to be inferior troops.

KALININ NOTE HAILS LANDING BY ALLIES

Soviet President, Roosevelt, in Messages to George VI, See Victory Nearer

LONDON, June 11 (AP)—The President of the Soviet Union, Mikhail I. Kalinin, in a message to King George VI released today, said the "landings of Allied forces which have begun on the territory of northern France give assurance that the combined blows of the Allies against Hitlerite Germany will be crowned with complete and final victory over our common enemy."

The King's reply expressed confidence that the operations in France "will hasten the complete and final victory of the Allies over our common enemy toward which the great achievements of the Soviet forces are so powerfully contributing."

Greetings were exchanged in connection with the King's forty-eighth birthday.

A message from President Roosevelt to the King said:

Your Majesty's birthday, coming at this solemn hour in the history of our two countries and of the world, is a fitting occasion to express the deep feeling of the people of the United States for the people of the British Commonwealth. We share a common fortune as brothers in arms and a common task in the liberation of Europe. The spirit which is bringing victory must be a spirit in which we seek and establish a lasting peace. The friendship between our peoples has been sealed in a common struggle. It will be made much stronger by a common achievement. Let me add my warmest personal remembrances.

The King's reply to President Roosevelt:

I am greatly moved, Mr. President, by the terms of the message which you have been so kind to send me on the occasion of my birthday.

The destinies of mankind have indeed entered on a historic hour. I and my peoples are deeply conscious of the never-failing sympathy and support which the people of the United States have extended to us in the years of peril through which we have passed.

As our nations stand shoulder to shoulder in the vanguard of a great struggle which will finally free the world from the menace of slavery it is my constant prayer and confident hope that the bonds between them, tried in the fire of dangers jointly endured and jointly survived, will link them indissolubly in the high task of bringing to mankind the blessing of peace. It is in that belief that I ask you, Mr. President, to accept my warmest thanks and personal greetings.

Soviet Radio and Papers Play Up Lend-Lease Aid

Present Detailed Picture of Help, Express Thanks

MOSCOW, June 11 (AP).—Russians received today from newspapers and radios of the Soviet Union the full story of the material aid furnished the Red Army by the United States, Great Britain and Canada.

The detailed statement by Anastas I. Mikoyan, Commissar of Foreign Trade, on supplies provided Russia, together with his recognition of the significant part they have played in the Red Army's victories, was carried on the front pages of all newspapers, together with editorials expressing Russia's appreciation.

Never before have the Russian people received so complete a picture of aid received from the Allies.

This flood of thanks and appreciation followed a banquet given by Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov and Mikoyan for American Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and other Americans on the occasion of the second anniversary of the signing of the lend-lease agreement by Molotov and President Roosevelt.

American leaders were elated and, with the invasion on, American prestige today stands at its highest point in the history of the Soviet Union.

GERMANS PREDICT NEW 'INVASION'

RICHARD C. WILSON

Vichy Reports 60 Allied Divisions Poised to Dash Across Channel

JUN 12 1944

LONDON, Monday, June 12—(AP) The German-controlled Vichy radio early today broadcast "a report from Field Marshal Gen. Karl von Rundstedt's headquarters" declaring that "another Allied invasion is imminent."

"Sixty Allied divisions are waiting in the British isles to take another leap across the water to land on a different spot in Europe," it said.

Other Landings Forecast

Earlier the German military commentator Capt. Ludwig Sertorius also had forecast "other, possibly stronger Allied landings elsewhere" but he suggested they might be delayed "until the situation in Normandy had been consolidated so that the Allies can withdraw the bulk of their air and naval forces."

The Germans yesterday admitted American forces had punched to a point within 14 miles of strategic Cherbourg and declared in broadcasts that the Allies were attempting to seal off the port and peninsula "in order to clear out the Germans and make it a platform for the second invasion phase."

"Extensive landings of troops with quantities of heavy material were made today in the American beachhead from the Vire mouth (above Isigny) to Quineville," Berlin said, and one U. S. push reached as far as the Montebourg-Quineville road 14 miles from France's third largest port.

Warships bombarded Barfleur at the northeast tip of the peninsula, the Germans reported.

Report Parachute Landing

Far to the east at the other end of the battlefront, strong Allied parachute forces landed south of Caen, another broadcast declared, and bridgehead penetrations as deep as 12 1-2 miles inland at the most were acknowledged.

For their own successes the Germans claimed the sinking of four Allied destroyers and damaging of two more, and the sinking of 10 Allied transports. There was no Allied confirmation of such losses.

Through the day, Berlin transmitters made these assertions concerning the invasion front:

The Allies now are using 20 divisions in Normandy, "of which seven to eight can be regarded as mauled in varying degree."

Caen is completely in German hands, but a big British tank force crossed the Orne river above the city and forced the Germans back several miles.

2 TOWNS CAPTURED BY YUGOSLAV UNITS

JUN 12 1944

LONDON, June 11—(AP) Yugoslav partisans of Marshall Tito, working closely with Allied troops hacking away at Hitler's back-door in the Balkans, announced tonight the capture of the German base at Pousnik, in Slovenia, and the Croatian town of Korenica, seven miles south of Zagreb.

As the Yugoslav partisans carried the fighting to the Nazi forces in the Balkans, Allied forces aided the guerrilla fighters with land, sea and air attacks.

Allied naval units shelled the Italian port of Lussin Piccolo on the island of Lussino off the Yugoslav coast Thursday, and for three days British and American raiders working with Partisans occupied the big Yugoslav island of Brac and inflicted severe losses before withdrawing June 4.

The Brodbosanski Brod oil refinery between Belgrade and Zagreb was left a mass of flames last night by Royal Air force heavyweight bombers a few hours after American heavy bombers had pounded Trieste's refinery and hit other oil installations in northern Italy.

Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, [redacted] warned the Albanian puppet government to drop its plans to recruit Albanians for the German army.

Such an act, his statement said, would be "an act of enemies which still have inevitable consequences both now and in the day of liberation."

The island of Lussino is the one on which the German High command said Friday it had captured a British Lt. Col. Tom Churchill, nephew of Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

YORK DIFFERS WITH POPE

Archbishop Explains Why Allies Must Fight to Finish

JUN 12 1944

LONDON, June 11 (AP)—The Archbishop of York said in a sermon today that "we are fighting against cruelty, tyranny and treachery in their most detestable forms" and "that is why we cannot agree with His Holiness, the Pope, when he coupled together those who commenced the war with those who prolong it or when he suggested a negotiated peace.

"It is on moral grounds that we refuse to negotiate with these wicked criminals who have brought such suffering to mankind," he said.

Col. Brown Tells British Advance May Be Slow

Warns Not to Expect Push in France Until July

JUN 12 1944

LONDON, June 11 (AP).—The Allies may not be able to make a general advance in France before the end of July, Colonel Clifton Brown, Speaker of the House of Commons, told a "Salute the Soldier Week" crowd last night at Hexham.

Warning against over-optimism he said: "There are too many people today who think that because we landed across the Channel it is going to be a cake walk from Cherbourg to Berlin.

"It is going to be nothing of the kind, for we have not even started our march to Berlin. It may be a long time before we are able to establish a bridgehead from which we can advance, but I think that if we can make a general advance before the end of July we shall be lucky, indeed."

A similar admonition came from Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister of Aircraft Production.

LONDON, Monday, June 12.—(AP) RAF Mosquitos blasted Berlin last night for the third successive night while a heavier force of British bombers plastered targets in France in support of the Allied invasion forces, it was announced today.

U. S. CUTTER SAVES 16

Ties Up to Sinking Ship and Takes Unconscious Men Aboard

JUN 12 1944

LONDON, June 11 (AP)—A United States Coast Guard Cutter 40 saved sixteen unconscious men from drowning during the invasion operations when she tied up to a sinking ship that had struck three mines.

One was saved when Seaman Jack Jordan of Los Angeles disentangled him from the wreckage just as the ship was going down.

Crew members picked up included John P. Howard of Midlothian, Md.; Joseph A. Bove of Allentown, Pa.; Frederick Mason Jr. of Barrington, R. I.; George Born of Little Rock, Ark.; Antonio Albergo of the Bronx; Lewis C. Wicks of Patchogue, L. I.; Donald F. Harker of Dayton, Ohio; Ferdinand Slaimen of Providence, R. I., and Richard P. Gibbons of Brighton, Mass.

Tank-Carrying Glider Is Allied 'Secret Weapon'

JUN 12 1944

London, June 11 (AP).—The British disclosed tonight that a "secret weapon" used in the Normandy landings was a huge new glider called the Hamilcar.

With a wingspread greater than that of a Lancaster four-engined bomber, the Hamilcar must be towed by a heavy bomber, but can land in a small field. It can—and did—carry a light tank.

One of the first tanks to be landed in France silenced within two minutes a German gunpost which had been causing heavy casualtie's among Allied ground forces.

Another Hamilcar's tank immediately blew the top off a tower in which German snipers were concealed.

CORRESPONDENT KILLED

LONDON, June 11—(AP) Arthur Thorpe, naval correspondent for exchange telegraph, was killed in action at sea today. The 42-year-old father of three was the first war correspondent reported killed in the western Europe invasion operations.

De Gaulle's Spokesman Addresses Bayeux Crowd

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, June 11—Gen. Charles de Gaulle's official London spokesman has visited Bayeux and addressed several thousand Frenchmen in the market square, it was disclosed today.

The Tempest, New Plane, in Use

LONDON, June 11 (AP).—The Tempest, the newest British single-engine fighter plane, is taking part in the invasion of Europe, it was learned today. Few details of the plane have been released, although it is known to have phenomenal speed and a highly super-charged engine which enables it to operate at great heights.

Bombs Seal Nazi Train in Tunnel

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—Some Eighth Air Force fighter-bombers started after a train loaded with German tanks and trucks in western France today. The train crew spotted them and parked the train in a tunnel. The fliers closed both ends of the tunnel with bombs.

U. S. Bombers Fly Low to Aid Troops Fighting in France

U. S. Marauder Base, England, June 11 (AP).—American Marauder crews who have been bombing at medium altitudes of 10,000 to 12,000 feet in the last year have been required to go down to almost suicidal levels in supporting the Allied liberation troops, but it is all right with these hard-working air veterans.

Lieut. Col. Robert O. Barker, Jackson, Ohio, squadron commander, disclosed tonight fliers have been crowding each other to get on "load lists" since D-Day.

One group of Marauders threw away the rule book today and descended to 200 feet.

Lieut. Robert A. Goldberg of Chicago, a pilot, brought back his plane with a 4-inch bomb fragment lodged in one wing. A gunner in another plane reported the escape hatch blown off by concussion.

Typical of the attitude among fliers was that of Lieut. John D. Helton of Clifton, Tex., a pilot whose 76 missions flown since July 26, 1943, is believed to be tops among American pilots in this theater.

"It's all right with me to go in low as long as we can do some good," Helton said. "I've got a brother over there on the ground and that's a good enough reason to want to get in there as often as possible and as low as necessary."

Flier 'Back From Dead' As in Sergeant's Dream

By The Associated Press.

A UNITED STATES AIR FORCE BASE IN ENGLAND, June 11—Harold McGrath of Manchester, N. Y., top sergeant of a Ninth Air Force troop carrier squadron, saw his commanding officer shot down over the sea in the initial phase of the Normandy landings, so upon returning here he reported the officer, Maj. Kenneth L. Glassburn of Turlock, Calif., "missing in action."

That night Sergeant McGrath dreamed that the major had returned from the dead to read the Riot Act to him. The next morning, as he was describing his nightmare, the telephone rang. It was Major Glassburn, who had been rescued from a dinghy in the Channel and wanted to ask Sergeant McGrath how that report started about his being missing in action.

Strait Visibility Marred by Mist

JUN 12 1944

Dover, June 11 (AP).—A drizzle and mist were blown across the Dover Strait tonight by a freshening southerly wind after a day which had started with sunshine and clear skies. The sea was moderate but visibility at dusk was poor. The barometer, after rising during the day, remained steady.

Swedes Look to Defenses

Increase Preparedness in View of Invasion and Red Drive

JUN 12 1944

STOCKHOLM, June 11 (AP).—Premier Pehr Albin Hansson announced in a speech at Eksjo today a "considerable reinforcement" in Sweden's war preparedness due to the Allied invasion and opening of the Russian offensive in Finland.

He said he did not know whether the Allies planned a thrust against Scandinavia, but "we must count on the possibility."

"We will resist every attempt by the belligerents to benefit from our position," he said.

Pope Pius Pays Visit to Church Outside Vatican

JUN 12 1944

Had Been Virtual Prisoner Under Nazis; 3,000 Allied Soldiers Get His Blessing

ROME, June 11 (AP).—Pope Pius XII emerged from the Vatican late today to give thanks to the Madonna of Divine Love that Rome had been spared.

Virtually a prisoner during the German occupation, the Pope left the Vatican in a small automobile followed by two other cars containing guards and attendants. The party drove through Rome to the Jesuit Church of St. Ignatius, where the Pope prayed before a painting of the madonna.

Earlier today Pope Pius received more than 3,000 Allied soldiers at an audience and gave them his blessing after addressing them in English and French.

At other special services today 10,000 soldiers of the Allied 5th Army offered prayers of thanks for their victory at a mass in the Church of St. Mary of the Angels while Italians in the Eternal City's countless other churches expressed their gratitude that Rome had been spared.

Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, the 5th Army's commander, with French, British and American members of his staff, attended the mass of thanksgiving, taking their places in the sanctuary beside Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, who presided. Near them were diplomats accredited to the Vatican and other dignitaries. The nave of the massive church was packed with Americans, Britons and Frenchmen.

Among those attending the mass were Sir D'Arcy Osborne and Harold H. Tittman, jr., the British and American representatives at the Holy See, and two Americans attached to the Vatican, Monsignors Walter S. Carroll, of Pittsburgh, and Joseph McGeogh, of New York.

Chaplain Michael I. English S.J., formerly of Loyola university of Chicago, preached the sermon in which he said there was no more appropriate place in the world than Rome to pray and give thanks. He asked his soldier congregation to unite in the prayer of Pope Pius that peace may come soon.

ROME BANKS REOPENED

ROME, June 11.—(AP) The Allied military government issued an order today for reopening of Rome banks, closed by Allied decree seven days ago. It was announced provisions would be made soon for reopening financial institutions in the provinces about the city.

CO Gas Stuns Correspondents

ROME, June 11 (AP)—An American officer and two correspondents escaped death from carbon monoxide by seconds today as they were traveling in a captured German car. Will Lang, correspondent for Time Magazine, who was driving the car, suddenly became dizzy, stopped the car and threw open the door. He found Lieut. Rudolf von Ripper, Australian-born war artist, also suffering from dizziness, and Carl Mydans, Life photographer, unconscious.

PRAYERS OFFERED BY U. S. SOLDIERS

ROME, June 11 — (AP) Almost 10,000 soldiers of the Fifth army offered prayers of thanks for their victory at a great mass in the church of St. Mary of the Angeli's today while Italians in the Eternal City's countless other churches expressed their gratitude that Rome had been spared.

Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark with French, British and United States members of his staff attended the mass of thanksgiving, taking their places in the sanctuary beside Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, who presided.

Opposite them were diplomats accredited to the Vatican and other dignitaries. The nave of the massive church was packed with American British and French.

Col. Patrick J. Ryan, St. Paul, Minn., chaplain of the Fifth army, celebrated mass, assisted by Father Louis Jarraux and Father Patrick Tobin of the French and British sections of the Fifth army.

BURMA ROAD DRIVE REGAINS LUNGLING

Japanese Also Defeated in India and In and Around Their Myitkyina Base

By The Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, China, June 11—The complete occupation of Lungling, the second most important Japanese base in Yunnan Province, was announced tonight by the Chinese communiqué, which called it "the greatest success to date for our troops in the Salween offensive."

Personally led by Maj. Gen. Sung Hsi-lien, troops of an Eleventh Army group, who stormed through the city yesterday, were mopping up trapped remnants of the Japanese garrison, the communiqué said. They also were pressing attacks of extermination outside Lungling.

The fall of Lungling, field dispatches have indicated, would cut off large concentrations of Japanese at the main enemy base of Tengyueh, forty miles to the northwest.

"Only one small group of less than fifty men remains in the city, trapped near the west gate, where they now are being annihilated," the communiqué said. "Another group estimated at approximately fifty Japanese is surrounded on the airfield outside the city, where attacks of extermination were being pressed by us last night.

"Not more than 300 Japanese were able to escape from the west gate of the city, from which they were pursued more than nine miles to the west. Many were destroyed."

This remarkable Chinese drive west of the Salween River, accomplished in spite of monsoon rains and formidable supply problems, may ease the supply problem. General Sung has said that within a short time engineers could put to use the part of the Burma Road seized in the offensive and step up the flow of supplies, which up to now have been carried forward by soldier-coolies, thousands of Chinese civilians behind the lines and endless slow-moving pack trains.

The drive at the same time has been of benefit to the north Burma front at Myitkyina, 100 miles to the west, where Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's forces are attempting to attain a similiar goal, the reopening of an overland supply route to China. Front-line spokesmen in Yunnan have said most of the Japanese Salween reinforcements have been drawn from the north Burma forces.

"Inclement weather grounded all air support throughout the action in which Lungling was captured," the communiqué said. "Total enemy casualties for this action are not yet known, but more than 200 dead Japanese were observed near the east gate."

Fifty miles to the north, an enemy force pushing northward from Watien attacked Chinese positions at Kaitou, penetrating the right flank and reaching regimental headquarters before a counter-attack drove them back and encircled an estimated 200 Japanese in the hills southeast of Chinese-held Kaitou, the communiqué said.

Yesterday's official report told of a strong roadblock being established across the Burma Road fifteen miles south of Lungling, cutting Japanese supply lines.

CHUNGKING, June 11 (AP).—Japanese driving from the north are hammering at the gates of Changsha, their major objective in the all-out Hunan Province offensive, the Chinese high command announced tonight, but there was no confirmation of an enemy assertion that the invaders already had entered the beleaguered Canton-Hankow railway city.

American bombers and fighters ranged the battle areas in the provinces pouring bombs on Japanese installations and strafing troop concentrations and river transport, as fighting constantly intensified, the high command said.

Halted at the outer defenses of the city to the northeast, the enemy yesterday sent a strong force southward from Tungting Lake in a drive on a village about twenty miles north of the city, and heavy fighting raged in the area, the bulletin said, while east of Changsha enemy units northwest of Liuyang pushed forward to a point about eleven miles from the city, where they were halted. Seven hundred of the enemy were slain, the Chinese said.

Japanese Routed in India

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 11 (AP)—Japanese troops who made a stand at Viswema, eight miles south of Kohima, in India, have been routed, and about seven miles to the south the enemy was driven from a roadblock at Milestone 60, headquarters announced tonight.

Allied successes were scored also to the east in the north Burma fighting in and around the besieged Japanese bastion of Myitkyina, where an American unit advanced a half mile and also seized the junction of the Myitkyina-Mogaung-Sumprabum Road and established a road block. Chinese and Americans now are battering the enemy from the south, within the city, and at the northern outskirts, where they have taken the north airfield.

Activity has flared again in the Imphal plain sector in India. North of the road to Jessami, thirteen miles northwest of Imphal, Allied troops repulsed a Japanese counter-attack and there was fierce fighting for the high ground around Modbung, the communiqué of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said.

The chief features in the area, the bulletin said, have been occupied by the Allies, who repulsed counter-attacks three miles northeast of Modbung. In the Ukhrul Road area enemy attacks on Allied positions north and south of the road were unsuccessful.

Lively exchanges were reported fourteen miles northeast of Imphal and in the Palel-Tamu Road sector.

In the air American planes attacked supply dumps, buildings, bridges and gun positions in the neighborhood of Myitkyina and Katkyo, and RAF fliers ranged over the Mandalay area, where two river steamers and seven large barges were damaged. There were no Allied air losses in these actions.

Japanese Open New Offensive Up From Coast

Seek to Guard Railroad to Hankow; Chennault Sees War at 4-Year Peak

HEADQUARTERS, UNITED STATES 14TH AIR FORCE, China, June 11 (AP).—Reinforced Japanese divisions were reported authoritatively today to have opened a northward offensive along the Hankow-Canton railway synchronized with the enemy's present southward drive in the Changsha sector.

Major General Claire L. Chennault said the enemy push upward from the coast, combined with the battle for Changsha, brought the China war to its greatest pitch since 1938.

The Japanese, bolstered by puppet troops, already have driven from five to ten miles beyond their previous Kwangtung Province positions and are now at Fengtsun, on the railway about thirty miles north of Canton, and at Fahsieh and Tsungfa, on highways paralleling the railway, it was announced.

Chennault commented that the Japanese evidently were embarked on building of a "Westwall" along the rail line to protect their home islands, and said that this design, if achieved, might prolong the war in Asia by years.

YANKS HIT PALAU IN DAYLIGHT RAID

22 Enemy Planes Destroyed on Ground in Surprise Attack.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Monday, June 12—(AP) Apparently catching the Japanese off guard, Liberators of the Fifth Army air force raided Palau Friday, destroying 22 planes on the ground in the first daylight raid by land-based planes on the enemy island fortress only 536 miles from the Philippines.

Headquarters announced today that the Liberators were not intercepted, indicating the Japanese were taken by surprise. Palau first was raided March 29, 30 and 31, when carrier-based planes sank 28 Japanese ships and destroyed more than 160 airplanes. The first attack by land-based planes was (sday night and in the darkness r—ts were not observed.

In addition to destruction of 22 grounded planes Friday, many buildings in the vicinity of Palau's airdrome were blown up, a headquarters spokesman said. He added that "this remarkable extension of Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney's bomber line is the result of our capture of Dutch New Guinea air bases within the last two months."

Truk, in the Central Carolines 1,000 miles east of Palau, underwent a heavier attack on the same day. Fifth Army air force Liberators dropped 60 tons of bombs on Moem, Dublon, Param, Mesegon, and Alet island in the Puluwat group. Japan's Truk air force sent up 30 fighters, three of which were shot down. One Liberator was lost.

In the Manokwari area of Dutch New Guinea, at the entrance to Geelvink bay, medium bombers attacked Japanese shipping, destroying a 1,000-ton freighter and six coastal vessels. This is the area down which the Japanese twice sent destroyer formations last week in an apparent effort to reinforce the Schouten island garrison. The effort cost the enemy four destroyers sunk, one damaged and another probably damaged.

General Douglas MacArthur's communique reported that the ground situation at Hollandia, and Aitape, in Dutch New Guinea, and at Biak in the Schouten islands was static. Americans on Biak have captured Mokmer airdrome and are driving toward two others.

Yanks Destroy 22 Jap Planes In Palau Raid

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Monday, June 12 (AP). Liberators of the Fifth Air Force bombed Palau on Friday, Southwest Pacific Headquarters announced today.

The land-based bombers destroyed 22 enemy aircraft at Palau.

Palau is the major enemy base between the Carolines and the Philippines.

Other southwest Pacific planes hammered at Truk, between Palau and the Marshalls, bombing enemy positions with 60 tons of explosives. One Liberator was lost.

A communique reported that the ground situation at Hollandia, and Aitape, in Dutch New Guinea, and at Biak in the Schouten Islands was static. Americans on Biak have captured Mokmer airdrome and are driving toward two others.

Carrier Planes Hit 3 Japanese Mariana Bases

Guam, Saipan and Tinian Are Struck by 'Powerful' Force in One-Day Attack

PEARL HARBOR, June 11 (AP).—A powerful American carrier task force attacked the Islands of Saipan, Tinian and Guam, in the southern Marianas, Saturday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today in a brief communique which did not disclose the result of the attack. The statement that the "task force struck enemy positions" was taken to mean that it was a one-day raid on bases where American carrier planes had a field day in a Feb. 21-22 raid.

There was no indication whether the latest attack was comparable to the February raid, which involved about 1,000 planes. Nor was there any estimate of whether there was an appreciable amount of Japanese shipping in the harbor at the time.

The February carrier blow cost the Japanese 135 planes and ten ships. Since then all three islands have been raided by long-range, land-based bombers. These have hit Tinian once, Saipan twice and Guam four times.

Guam, captured by the Japanese early in the war from a small United States Marine garrison, is

Allied Diplomats Draft German Surrender Terms

JUN 12 1944

WASHINGTON, June 11 — (AP) With the invasion of Europe well under way Allied diplomats are drafting surrender and occupation terms which are understood to call for complete industrial demobilization of Germany.

The terms were worked out by the European advisory council in London, composed of American, British and Russian diplomats, subject to final revision and approval of the Moscow, London and Washington governments.

They are being rushed into a final working agreement because Allied leaders feel they must be prepared for the possibility, no matter how remote, of a German collapse. From the White House down there is no evidence in official quarters here that a collapse is expected.

The plan for what to do when victory comes considers two main contingencies: (1) that the German surrender will be given by a government or a military command capable of halting resistance on all fronts effectively or (2) that the Germans will break down piecemeal, losing their armies and their territory in prolonged retreat.

In the first instance it would be possible to bring about the orderly military occupation of the country; in the second, it probably would be necessary for assaulting armies to fight their way into Germany.

It follows that the Allies must wait until the day of victory to know exactly what sort of relations can be established with whatever regime then exists in Germany. It may be civil, military or a revolutionary combination.

In any event for a time it is expected that the country will be under full Allied military control, being separated roughly into thirds, respectively under American, British and Russian command. These commands, it is planned, will be subject to the directives of a joint military commission in Berlin. The capital itself is expected to be occupied jointly by all forces.

Beyond ending the military powers of the German forces and rooting Nazi adherents out of positions of power and influence, the aim of the occupation will be to strip the country of its industrial resources for armament manufacture. Factories which can be converted to peaceful production probably will be so converted but destruction or complete dismantling is marked out for the great armament works incapable of conversion.

Still in the realm of unanswered questions is how long the occupation will continue and whether Germany will be split up into small states. Experts are reported to be divided on the dismemberment idea. It might be resolved quickly if and when President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Marshal Stalin get together.

Some authorities believe occupation on a large scale will last only long enough to restore order, break down war industry and make sure the German are completely disarmed. That might be a matter of six months to a year, and after that the Germans would be left to work out their own destiny under whatever permanent restrictions are imposed (such as territorial changes) and under the general supervision of the Allied governments.

Many American officials hope to get a world security organization set up in time to take over this task of supervision for the period during which the German people will have a chance to earn a peaceful place in international life.

Red Cross Aid: 26-Month Value Is 250 Million

JUN 12 1944

Most Is Spent on War, With 4,866 Hospital Workers as Largest Expense Item

WASHINGTON, June 11 (AP).—More than a quater of a billion dollars in goods and services, all but a small fraction directly war-connected, were provided through the American Red Cross in the first twenty-six months of war, the organization reported today.

The figures, showing actual expenditures of $205,819,870 from Red Cross funds and $78,951,368 in goods distributed as agent for the government and other organizations, take no account of the millions of dollars worth of services performed by volunteers. The supplementary report covers the period from Jan. 1, 1942, just after Pearl Harbor, to Feb. 29, 1944. It includes both national and local operations.

All the big items of cost are direct war expense, led off by $14,174,799 of national funds for services by 4,866 Red Cross workers in 687 Army and Navy hospitals at home and overseas, and $29,365,681 for personal assistance to men and women in the armed forces. The latter work, in which 6,230 staff members are engaged, is largely concerned with family and personal problems.

More than four million women, the report shows, have been enrolled for volunteer special service, principally production, and at the end of February were turning out each month about 64,000,000 surgical dressings, 220,000 kit bags and 685,000 garments for men in the services. National and chapter expenditures for such service totaled nearly $20,000,000 in the twenty-six months.

Recreation and social activities for servicemen overseas, at 260 Red Cross clubs over the world, engaged about 1,500 Red Cross personnel and cost $15,953,713.

Local chapters aided four million families of servicemen and handled one million other home-service cases. Most frequent calls were for help in communicating with men in the services, or held prisoner by the enemy. Such communications at the end of the report period were running about 3,200 daily.

The blood donor service, which had produced 6,538,104 pints of blood, cost about $7,500,000.

Relief expenditures for 257,750 persons in 425 civilian disasters were $4,292,456 in national funds and $1,200,000 from chapters.

The report shows 44,012 nurses recruited for the armed services and issuance of 1,034,690 certificates in home nursing.

Civilian war sufferers in other countries got $24,307,507 in help through the Red Cross, most of it supplied by the United States government, but with value greatly enhanced by such services as knitting and sewing.

The prisoner and civilian war relief service included 10,726,528 food packages and 13,052 medical kits.

The report shows 19,098 persons on the Red Cross staff Feb. 29 with 4,487 in overseas service aided by some 6,500,000 volunteers.

Vacation for Congress Depends On Cleaning Up of Legislation

JUN 12 1944

WASHINGTON, June 11 — (AP) Congressional leaders hoped today to get enough work out of legislators in the next two weeks to assure a vacation for five.

Their idea is to take a recess through the Republican and Democratic conventions. The Republicans meet June 26 and the Democrats July 19. Congress would meet again August 1, and, if there is no urgent business, lay off for another month.

The plans are contingent on whether Congress can clean up:

A bill, enmeshed in controversy, to extend the price control act which expires June 30.

Nearly $100,000,000,000 in appropriations, which also need attention by June 30.

The "G.I. Bill of Rights," providing a vast system of benefits for veterans of the present war.

Legislation to expedite settlements of terminated war contracts.

Republican and Democratic leaders are fairly well agreed on recess plans. But there may be a hitch because of a tussle over the price control bill and the possibility of a veto.

The Senate approved last week an 18 months' extension measure but riveted on an amendment by Senator Bankhead (D.-Ala.) to adjust textile price ceilings and boost the price of raw cotton. There's a chance the House may accept the amendment, which is opposed by the administration as inflationary.

Should the House turn down the amendment, some compromise might be worked out that would satisfy everybody, including the White House.

The G.I. Bill of Rights, approved in compromise form Saturday by a Senate-House committee, is scheduled for a Senate "okay" tomorrow and House approval as soon as the Price Control bill is out of the way. It would grant hospitalization, educational benefits and unemployment compensation to war veterans.

A contract termination bill has cleared the Senate and corresponding legislation is ready for the House when it can find time to look it over.

The House figures on working a $49,000,000,000 appropriation for the War department into its schedule and possibly a second deficfency appropriation.

Only two of fifteen appropriations have become law—a first deficiency measure and the Treasury-postoffice supply bill. They carry $1,860,000,000. A $25,570,000,000 Navy bill is ready to be signed by the President and a $240,000,000 appropriation for the State, Justice and Commerce departments soon will be.

Five other bills are in Senate-House conference committees for adjustment of differences, and four more which have passed the House are awaiting clearance in the Senate appropriations committee.

French Terrain Suited To Use of Tank Forces

JUN 12 1944

Col. Montgomery Cites Dry Spring and Firm Ground

WASHINGTON, June 11 (AP).—Fierce tank battles are developing on the fields of France between Allied and Nazi mechanized divisions, an Army expert recently returned from Europe said today.

No large-scale armor clashes have occurred since the African campaign along the Mediterranean, when desert terrain afforded the space needed for maneuvering the big lang cruisers.

Colonel Robert O. Montgomery, of the field artillery of Fort Bragg, N. C., who served on the Army Ground Forces board in the European theater of operations, said in a statement released by the War Department:

"This has been a dry spring in France. The ground is firm and admirably suited to use of armored forces."

1st U. S. Girls In France Forced To Wade Ashore

JUN 12 1944

New York, June 11 (AP).—Margaret Stanville of Hayti, Mo., was credited today in a dispatch from CBS correspondent Larry Leseur with being the first American girl to arrive by boat on the French beachhead.

The first girls to arrive by barge, he reported, waded ashore while battle-weary soldiers blinked in astonishment. The nurses, garbed in two layers of men's uniforms and wearing leggings and steel helmets, didn't take time to remove their wet clothing before they set about caring for the wounded, the correspondent said.

Nazi War Prisoner Escapes Guards at Halloran Hospital

JUN 12 1944

Staten Island Break Reveals Captives Are Held There; Wide Hunt Under Way

A blond, stocky German prisoner of war escaped between 6 and 7 a. m. yesterday from a barracks at Halloran General Hospital in the isolated Willow Brook section of Staten Island, precipitating one of the biggest man hunts in the island's history. The news of the escape was the first public disclosure that war prisoners are quartered within the city limits.

Despite the intensity of the search, in which more than one hundred men from the Army, police and Federal Bureau of Investigation were engaged, the fugitive was still at large last evening. But authorities had bottled up all ferry and bridge exits from the pear-shaped, thinly-populated island and two bloodhounds from the Hawthorne, N. Y., station of the state police were hunting through the wooded and open sections of La Tourette Park, adjacent to the huge, sprawling hospital grounds.

The prisoner was identified as Emanuel Kalytka, twenty-nine years old. He is five feet nine inches tall, weighs 165 pounds, and has blond hair, gray eyes, and a light complexion. He is sunburned and has a square, jutting jaw. He was dressed in a blue-green prisoner of war fatigue uniform with "P. W." inscribed in large white letters on the back of his blouse, on the seat of his trousers and on the front of the legs. He speaks German and Polish. His English is limited to a very few words.

Hospital authorities declined to reveal the details of the escape, but said that Kalytka was a member of a prisoner labor unit at the hospital, housed with a number of other prisoners in a prison barracks, one of more than forty-three buildings on the hospital grounds, in the central northwest section of the island.

A few minutes after the alarm was received at 7 a. m. police were rushed to the St. George ferry terminal for Manhattan and Sixty-ninth Street, Brooklyn; to the Tottenville ferry station for Perth Amboy, N. J., and at the three Staten Island bridges, the Bayonne Bridge, across the Kill van Kull from Port Richmond to Bayonne, N. J.; the Goethals Bridge, crossing Arthur Kill from Howland Hook to Elizabeth, N. J.; and the Outerbridge Crossing, bridging Arthur Kill from Tottenville to Perth Amboy.

Soon after the police came detachments of four men each from the Army post at the hospital to these five exit points. Each Army unit carried a machine gun and rifles. They and the police were stopping and searching all trucks and station wagons, and peering into private automobiles.

Police headquarters at St. George received a report that a man believed to be the prisoner was seen by a park employee about noon making his way across the golf course of La Tourette Park, which lies just to the east of the hospital in the direction of the Lower Bay. The public relations office at the hospital said last night, however, that no definite word had been received of the fugitive since his escape.

The authorities appeared convinced that Kalytka was in hiding somewhere on the island, which is fifteen miles long and at its widest point seven wide. About the only practicable means of escape from the island, the regular exits being barred, would be to swim either the Kill van Kull or Arthur Kill streams, separating the island from New Jersey. These Kills are about a mile wide, the currents are treacherous, and they were being constantly patrolled by police launches, as were the waterfronts along the Narrows, the Upper and Lower Bays and Raritan Bay.

The Halloran Hospital spreads over 383 acres and is surrounded on all sides by woods. It was believed that Balytka could not have gone farther than this wooded area without being observed and therefore must have found a hiding place fairly near the hospital. As darkness fell last night the hunters were beating through the woods with searchlights.

The hospital is under command of Brigadier General Ralph G. DeVoe, recently elevated from colonelcy, and has accommodations for several thousand wounded American service men. It was opened last fall.

MARAUDER CREWS WHICH ATTACKED BRIDGES NEAR PONT AU BAULT REPORTED EXCELLENT RESULTS.

JUN 12 1944

"AFTER WE HAD BOMBED, A DOUBLE-RAIL BRIDGE WAS DOWN ON THE SOUTH END, AND THE MIDDLE WAS BADLY SMASHED," SAID STAFF SGT.HAROLD PHILLIPS, MARAUDER TAIL GUNNER FROM KELLYVILLE, OKLA.

ANOTHER MARAUDER FORMATION BOMBED A ROAD-RAIL INTERSECTIONWEST OF YVETOT, 20 MILES NORTHWEST OF ROUEN, AND STILL OTHERS HIT OIL TANKS NEAR LILLEBONNE, CLOSE BEHIND THE ENEMY LINES, AND A HIGHWAY BRIDGE ACROSS THE SEINE RIVER AT MANTES-GASSICOURT AND RAIL BRIDGES NORTHWEST OF PARIS.

LT.JAMES C.SMITH OF GLENDALE, MICH., BOMBARDIER OF A LIBERATOR IN SUNDAY'S HEAVY BOMBER OPERATIONS, SAID, "WE BOMBED A BRIDGE FROM LOW ALTITUDE. I SAW HITS ON THE MIDDLE SECTION AND NEAR ONE END. AS WE LEFT, SOME OF MY CREW OBSERVED A GAP IN THE CENTER SPAN."

"OPERATIONS HAVE STEPPED UP TO THE POINT WHERE WE ARE SUPPORTING THE INVASION BY SENDING TASK FORCES FROM OUR BASE WITHIN A FEW MINUTES OF EACH OTHER," SAID MAJ.MALCOLM K.MARTIN, 702 CAROLINE AVE., GRAHAM, TEX., A GROUP OPERATIONS OFFICER. "IT IS ONE STEADY, CONTINUOUS ATTACK FROM THE AIR."

STAFF SGT.ARCHIE SLOMAN, 706 MAINE ST., LONG BEACH, CALIF., A LIBERATOR GUNNER, SAID, "WE WERE SO LOW I COULD SEE EIGHT TARGETS BURIED IN A BLANKET OF SMOKE."

"WE COULD FEEL THE CONCUSSION OF THE BOMBS AS THEY HIT," SAID STAFF SGT.WILLIAM BEL, ROUTE 10, MINNEAPOLIS, A LIBERATOR RADIO OPERATOR. "IT WAS THE FIRST CHANCE WE'D HAD TO SEE FRANCE, AND WE MADE GOOD THE OPPORTUNITY."

STAFF SGT. CHARLES QUICK OF LEVY, ARK., A LI[illegible] GUNNER, DECLARED, "I SAW THE BRIDGE THAT WE BOMBED RAISE UP AND FALL OVER ON ITS SIDE."

LT.PETE RIBLET, JR., 354 E.MCCREIGHT AVE., SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, LIBERATOR PILOT, SAID, "THE LUFTWAFFE IS REALLY LAYING LOW THESE DAYS. WE WERE FLYING AT RELATIVELY LOW ALTITUDE ALL THE TIME, BUT NO ENEMY AIRCRAFT BOTHERED US. FLYING OVER ONE LITTLE TOWN WE COULD SEE PEOPLE RUNNING IN THE STREETS. THEY SEEMED TO BE CHEERING US."

CAPT.SETH ARMSTEAD, BOULDER, COLO., FORTRESS PILOT, REPORTED, "WE MET A LITTLE FLAK COMING OFF THE TARGET BUT SAW NO ENEMY FIGHTERS. WE HEARD EXPLOSIONS IN THE CHANNEL AS WE RETURNED BY IT WAS TOO HAZY TO SEE WHAT WAS HAPPENING."

LT.CHARLES HOWISON OF CULVER, KANS., A FORTRESS BOMBARDIER, CALLED IT "OUR EASIEST MISSION IN MANY WEEKS, WITH POSITIVELY NO FLAK AND NO FIGHTERS."

STAFF SGT.MALCOLM DUBERT, FORTRESS GUNNER FROM HARRISON CITY, PA., SAID, "THE ONLY THING I SAW BELOW US TODAY WAS A LOT OF SHIPPING IN THE CHANNEL."

ONE LIGHTNING PILOT, UNABLE TO GET BACK ACROSS THE CHANNEL BECAUSE OF A LOW FUEL SUPPLY, LANDED AT AN EMERGENCY STRIP ON THE BEACHHEAD, REFUELED AND RETURNED TO HIS BASE.

A MUSTANG SQUADRON LED BY CAPT.HOWARD HIVELY, WARD, W.VA., SPOTTING A CONVOY OF MORE THAN 100 NAZI TRUCKS, ARMORED CARS, STAFF CARS AND OTHER VEHICLES BEING CAMOUFLAGED, BOMBED AND STRAFED THE VEHICLES IN THE FACE OF INTENSE GROUND FIRE AND LEFT 30 OF THEM BURNING OR DAMAGED.

ANOTHER GROUP, LED BY COL. ROY WEBB OF PAMPA, TEX., SEVERELY DAMAGED A RAILYARD. THEY SMASHED AT LEAST EIGHT LOCOMOTIVES WITH ABOARD A UNITED STATES CRUISER OFF THE FRENCH COAST, JUNE 9--(DELAYED)--(AP)--MORE THAN 100 MEN ABOARD A SLOW-MOVING INVASION BARGE WERE HUDDLED AROUND THE WHEELS OF LOADED ARMY VEHICLES--WAITING TO BE KILLED.

WITH GERMAN SSS AND MACHINE GUNS CRACKING AROUND US, THERE DIDN'T SEEM TO BE THE GHOST OF A CHANCE OF SURVIVING OUR THIRD ATTEMPT TO LAND FIRST DAY REINFORCEMENTS.

YET, NO ONE SEEMED AFRAID TO DIE. WE HAD SAID OUR LAST PRAYERS AND WERE JUST WAITING--SILENTLY. THERE WAS NOT A RIPPLE OF EXCITEMENT OR PANIC.

THE INVASION WAS ONLY A FEW HOURS OLD. BUT THIS LOAD OF GUNS, AMMUNITION, MEDICAL SUPPLIES AND OTHER EQUIPMENT ALREADY WAS OVERDUE AND DESPERATELY NEEDED ON THE BEACH, AND THE NAZIS STILL WERE RAKING US WITH DEADLY CROSS-FIRE FROM CAMOUFLAGED POSITIONS IN THE CLIFFS OVERLOOKING THE CHANNEL.

THEY HAD TURNED THE TWO-MILE STRIP IN FRONT OF US INTO A MIGHTY, INVISIBLE FORTRESS, WHICH WAS NOT YET SILENCED. IT WAS THE MOST SICKENING SIGHT I EVER SAW.

THE BEACH WAS LITTERED WIGH BLAZING, SMOKING DEBRIS, WRECKED LANDING CRAFT AND TANKS AND VEHICLES OF ALL VARIETIES. THROUGH MY GLASSES I SAW SOME BODIES LYING ON THE SAND. THERE WERE ALSO SEVERAL OVERTURNED DUCKS AND WRECKED PARTS OF LANDING CRAFT WERE FLOATING IN THE WATER.

OCCASIONALLY BODIES WERE PICKED UP BY PATROL BOATS DIRECTING TRAFFIC. THE GERMANS HUNKERED IN THEIR CONCRETE FORTIFICATIONS, DIDN'T WASTE

THEIR SHOTS ON THE SHIPPING. THEY PLAYED THE GAME OF WAITING UNTIL THE BOATS CAME ON THE BEACH.

AS THE BIG NAVAL GUNS BLASTED OUT THE FORTIFICATIONS, IT COULD BE SEEN THAT VIRTUALLY THE ENTIRE CLIFF WAS A SERIES OF INTERLOCKING GUN POSITIONS IN REINFORCED CONCRETE. THEY WERE SO WELL CAMOUFLAGED THAT THE BANKS RESEMBLED A PEACEFUL SEASIDE RESORT. A NUMBER OF BIG SUMMER HOMES NEARBY SOON WERE DEMOLISHED.

WHEN WE WERE WITHIN 50 YARDS OF THE BEACH, AN 88 MM. SHELL EXPLODED WITH TERRIFIC CONCUSSION A FEW YARDS TO THE RIGHT OF TWO MOTOR RHINO BARGES, ONTO WHICH THE ENTIRE LOAD OF AN LST LANDING CRAFT WAS UNLOADED AT SEA BEFORE.

A MINUTE LATER ANOTHER BURST SPLASHED JUST TO THE LEFT OF US, THROWING SHRAPNEL INTO THE BARGE LIKE HAIL. THEY HAD US MARKED AND IT LOOKED LIKE OUR NUMBER WAS UP. WE CROUCHED THERE WAITING FOR THAT THIRD SHELL TO STRIKE A BULLSEYE, BUT IT NEVER CAME AND WE WERE ABLE TO PULL OUT AND WAIT UNTIL THE BEACHHEAD WAS FIRMLY ESTABLISHED.

EVERY MAN WAS RESIGNED TO HIS FATE. NOT A WORD WAS SPOKEN FOR MINUTES WHICH SEEMED HOURS. SQUATTING IN WATER ANKLE DEEP, BETWEEN THE WHEELS OF A HALF-TRACK, I HAD MY ARMS HALF-LOCKED AROUND THE WAIST OF A YOUNG ARTILLERYMAN. HE WAS TREMBLING LIKE HE WAS FREEZING. ANOTHER YOUTH MANNING THE MACHINEGUN WAS SICK, BUT HE DIDN'T MOVE FROM HIS POST. HE JUST LEANED OVER THE SIDE.

THE CHANNEL WAS CHOPPY ON INVASION DAY AND THE STUBBORN CURRENT MADE HANDLING THE BARGE DIFFICULT. ALTHOUGH HEAVILY LOADED, WE WERE BOBBING AROUND LIKE A CORK. AS IT TOUCHED THE BEACH, THE TRACTOR USED FOR UNLOADING TORE LOOSE AND TOPPLED INTO SIX FEET OF WATER, TEARING AWAY PART OF THE LANDING CRAFT. THEN ONE MOTOR CAUGHT AN UNDERWATER OBSTRUCTION AND WAS YANKED OUT.

THAT WAS WHEN WE WERE ORDERED OUT TO WAIT A WHILE. BUT A TUG HAD COME TO PULL US OUT, AND THERE WAS A GREAT SIGH OF RELIEF, AS THE MEN HAD JUST WITNESSED THE DESTRUCTION OF MORE THAN HALF THE EQUIPMENT UNLOADED FROM THE FERRY JUST IN FRONT OF US. ONE TRUCK LOADED WITH SOLDIERS AFTER ESCAPING GUNFIRE HIT A LAND MINE AND WAS BLOWN TO PIECES. I SAW ONE BODY FLY 50 FEET IN THE AIR. THE LAND MINES CAUSED HEAVY CASUALTIES AMONG THE INITIAL LANDING PARTIES. UNDERWATER MINES ATTACHED TO IRON STAKES WRECKED SCORES OF LANDING CRAFT.

THREE SOLDIERS ABOARD THE BARGE SUFFERED HEAVY SHRAPNEL WOUNDS. THEY WERE TREATED UNDER FIRE BY TWO ARMY DOCTORS, MAJ.DARRELL CAMPBELL OF ANN ARBOR MICH., AND CAPT.JOHN SHELTON OF STURGEON, MICH. THE IMPACT OF ONE BURST KNOCKED ME FLAT AGAINST A TRUCK, RESULTING IN A WRENCHED SHOULDER AND SPRAINED KNEE. A SMALL PIECE OF FLAK GRAZED THE OTHER LEG.

AFTER 14 HOURS ABOARD A BARGE I LEFT THE PARTY AT MIDNIGHT WHEN IT TIED UP TO A MOTHER SHIP FOR REPAIRS, BUT NOT UNTIL AFTER THE FIRST GERMAN PLANE TO APPEAR OVER THE BEACH MADE A STRAFING ATTACK. THERE WERE A FEW CLOSE SPURTS IN THE WATER, BUT NO DIRECT HITS ON OUR CRAFT.

BY THE TIME THEY FINALLY REACHED THE BEACH SAFELY LATE THE FOLLOWING DAY, THE SOLDIERS ON THE FERRY I STARTED OUT WITH HAD BEEN ABOARD IT APPROXIMATELY 32 HOURS, WITH LITTLE MORE THAN ENOUGH ROOM TO STAND UP AND STRETCH.

WITH UNITED STATES AMPHIBIOUS FORCES, JUNE 11-(AP)-NAVAL BOMBARDMENT PLAYED AN IMPORTANT ROLE IN THE SUCCESS OF THE INVASION LANDINGS

AND A VITAL FIGURE IN THIS PHASE OF OPERATIONS WAS A CORN-FED AMERICAN GUNNER EXPERT WITH A HOBBY OF AVIATION.

HE IS REAR ADMIRAL DON PARDEE MOON, 50, MEMBER OF REAR ADMIRAL ALAN G.KIRK'S STAFF.

FULL DETAILS OF THE WORK OF THE AMERICAN TASK FORCE WHICH TEAMED WITH THE BRITISH FORCE TO SHELL THE COAST AND SHEPHERD THE TROOPS ASHORE HAS NOT YET BEEN REVEALED, BUT MOON IS REGARDED BY NAVAL EXPERTS AS ONE OF THE WORLD'S LEADING AUTHORITIES ON THE USE OF THE TORPEDO AND IN THE USE OF NAVAL GUNS.

BORN IN KOKOMO, IND., APRIL 18, 1894, MOON WAS GRADUATED FROM THE U.S.NAVAL ACADEMY AT ANNAPOLIS IN 1916, JUST IN TIME TO GO ABOARD THE BATTLESHIP ARIZONA AND SERVE IN THE WORLD WAR.

AT THE ACADEMY HE HAD BEEN A MEMBER OF THE SABER AND RIFLE TEAMS AND WAS ON THE WRESTLING SQUAD. AT GRADUATION HE WAS AWARDED THE CLASS OF 1817 PRIZE OF A NAVY DRESS SWORD AND KNOT, GIVEN EACH YEAR TO THE GRADUATE MOST PROFICIENT IN PRACTICAL AND THEORETICAL ORDNANCE AND GUNNERY.

FROM THAT DAY MOON SPECIALIZED IN GUNS, ALTHOUGH WHILE HE WAS ABOARD THE ARIZONA HE SERVED AS RADIO OFFICER, BROADSIDE GUNNERY OFFICER, PLOTTING ROOM OFFICER AND ENGINEERING OFFICER.

LEAVING THE ARIZONA, HE DID POST-GRADUATE INSTRUCTION IN ORDNANCE AT THE NAVAL ACADEMY AND WON A MASTER OF SCIENCE DEGREE AT CHICAGO UNIVERSITY IN 1921. WHILE A STUDENT HE DEVELOPED THE INSTALLATION USED TODAY IN MEASURING PROJECTILE VELOCITIES AT THE NAVAL PROVING GROUNDS IN DAHLGREN, VA.

LATER HE MOVED INTO THE DRAFTING ROOM AT A NAVAL GUN FACTORY IN WASHINGTON, D.C., AND WHILE ON LEAVE TOOK AN INDOCTRINATION COURSE IN AVIATION WHICH EVENTUALLY LED TO SOLOING AND FURTHER AVIATION STUDIES.

HE WAS AMONG THE FIRST NAVAL MEN TO REALIZE THE VALUE AND DESTRUCTIVE POWER OF NAVAL AVIATION, AND MAINTAINED AN ACTIVE INTEREST IN AVIATION WHILE IMPROVING HIS KNOWLEDGE OF GUNNERY. WHILE HE WAS IN COMMAND OF THE U.S.S. JOHN D.FORD IN THE ASIATIC FLEET, HIS SHIP MADE A 100 PER CENT RECORD IN TORPEDO HITS IN THREE SUCCESSIVE YEARS, AND MOON WAS AWARDED THE FIRE CONTROL AND TORPEDO "E" FOR GREATEST IMPROVEMENT IN ENGINEERING FOR DESTROYERS.

MOON'S WORK WITH DESTROYER SQUADRON 8 IN THE INVASION OF MOROCCO IN NOVEMBER, 1942, WON HIM A LETTER OF COMMENDATION FROM VICE-ADMIRAL ROYAL E.INGERSOLL, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE U.S.ATLANTIC FLEET. THE CITATION SAID HE PROVIDED AN EXCELLENT ANTI-SUBMARINE SCREEN AS WELL AS A SPLENDID ANTI-AIRCRAFT PROTECTION WHILE UNDER HOSTILE FIRE.

HIS SQUADRON ALSO SERVED WITH THE BRITISH HOME FLEET IN 1942 AND IN THE LATTER PART OF THAT YEAR THE ADMIRAL DID TOUR DUTY IN THE PLANNING SECTION OF HEADQUARTERS OF ADMIRAL ERNEST KING, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE UNITED STATES FLEET.

HE WAS PROMOTED TO REAR ADMIRAL JAN.1, 1944 AND SHORTLY AFTERWARDS WAS PLACED IN COMMAND OF A GROUP OF THE 11TH AMPHIBIOUS FORCE.

AMONG HIS MANY SERVICE RIBBONS FOR DUTY ALL OVER THE WORLD HE PROUDLY WEARS THE MEDAL OF AN EXPERT RIFLEMAN.

HIS FAMILY LIVES AT 2931 SECOND ST., NORTH ARLINGTON, VA.

A LIBERATOR BOMBER BASE IN SOUTHERN ITALY, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE BOYS KNEW ABOUT NEWTON'S LAW OF GRAVITY AND THEY HAD NOTHING AGAINST HIM PERSONALLY, BUT THEY WANTED TO GET BACK TO ITALY.

SO THEY BROUGHT THEIR 30-TON LIBERATOR, TWO OF ITS FOUR ENGINES DEAD, ACROSS THE ALPS.

THAT IS THE WAY THEY TOLD IT TODAY AFTER ONE OF THE MOST HECTIC FLIGHTS OF THE MEDITERRANEAN CAMPAIGN.

LT.WILLIAM K.BALL OF TEXAS (HOME TOWN RECEIVED AS "BEXLEY," WHICH UNLISTED POSTAL GUIDE) WAS THE PILOT WINGING NORTHWARD TO GRENOBLE, FRANCE, SEVERAL DAYS AGO. HIS BIG BOMBER LOST ONE ENGINE JUST BEFORE REACHING THE TARGET AND ANOTHER IMMEDIATELY AFTERWARDS. THE CREW DECIDED TO RIDE IT HOME. SO BALL HEADED INTO THE MOUNTAINS.

UP IN THE NOSE TURRET SGT.WILLIAM F.PYNE, 141 WEST SECOND ST., NEW YORK CITY, PLOTTED A CRAZY QUILT COURSE, DARTING OF PEAKS AND POINTING OUT THE VALLEYS. THE HEAVY SHIP ROLLED ITS WAY UP TO THE 15,000-FOOT DIVIDE, THEN CREPT ACROSS WITHIN 20 FEET OF A JAGGED CRAG.

GOING DOWN, THE REMAINDER OF HER ENGINES, TRIED TO THE MAXIMUM, BEGAN TO SPUTTER. BUT THE SHIP KEPT GOING.

OVER THIS ALLIED FIELD THE CREW RADIOED "MUST LAND NOW OR CRASH," AND THEN CAME IN SO CLOSE BEHIND ANOTHER PLANE IT WAS HARD TO TELL THE TWO APART.

OTHER MEMBERS OF THE CREW WERE:

LT.RICHARD J.STILLER, 1ST AVE., BROOKLYN, N.Y., NAVIGATOR; SGT. THEODORE KOGUT, 145 GOULD AVE., DEPEW, N.Y., PHOTOGRAPHER; LT.ROBERT B.BRAGWELL, 3525 STRONG ST., RIVERSIDE, CALIF., CO-PILOT; LT.JOSEPH J.CASSERLY, 2122 GIRARD AVE., NORTH MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., BOMBARDIER; SGT.DONALD O.GRONLUND, HARTINGTON, NEB., ENGINEER; SGT.JAMES HALSTON, 1159 LELAND AVE., THE BRONX, N.Y., RADIO OPERATOR; SGT.EDWARD R.MORAN 1505 WEST LEIGH AVE., PHILADELPHIA, PA., GUNNER, AND SGT.PAUL B. A U.S. CAMP FOR GERMAN PRISONERS OF WAR IN FRANCE, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THROUGH THIS BARBED-WIRE-ENCLOSED CAMP ATOP A HILL HAVE PASSED ABOUT 800 ENEMY SOLDIERS, MOST OF THEM SUPERBLY EQUIPPED, WELL-UNIFORMED MEN FROM COUNTRIES THAT GERMANY HAS OCCUPIED OR CONQUERED.

IN THIS CAMP, STILL WAITING TO BE SHIPPED TO ENGLAND, ARE RUSSIANS, POLES, CZECHS, DUTCH, FRENCH, ITALIANS AND SPANIARDS.

I HAD BEEN TOLD THAT THESE TROOPS WERE MOSTLY MISERABLE PEOPLE WHO HAD BEEN PRESSED INTO GERMAN MILITARY SERVICE AGAINST THEIR WISHES, BUT TALKING TO THEM, ESPECIALLY TO SOME RUSSIANS AND POLES, CONVINCED ME THEY FIRMLY BELIEVE IN THE NAZI SYSTEM.

SOME ARE FANATICALLY PRO-HITLER AND PRO-GERMAN AND ANTI-AMERICAN AND ANTI-BRITISH.

STILL WORSE FOR OUR SIDE, THEY ARE GOOD, WELL-TRAINED SOLDIERS. ALL APPEARED HUSKY AND WELL-FED.

CAPT. WILLIAM STEPHAN, OF 43 LAKE ST., BERGENFIELD, N.J., AND SAYVILLE, LONG ISLAND, N.Y., IS IN CHARGE OF THIS CAMP, WITH FIRST LT. CHARLES MILICI, 34, OF 504 LAKE AVE., LYNDHURST, N.J., AS HIS ASSISTANT.

LT. MILICI SAID THE PRISONERS WERE SURLY AND IMPOLITE, BUT GENERALLY WELL-BEHAVED WHEN THE AMERICANS ASSERTED THEIR AUTHORITY.

MANY SAID THEY HAD BEEN IN THE GERMAN NAVY UNTIL A FEW WEEKS BEFORE THE INVASION, WHEN THEY WERE TRANSFERRED TO THE ARMY WITHOUT EXPLANATION.

ONE OF THESE WAS A 59-YEAR-OLD LIEUTENANT WHO SPOKE PERFECT ENGLISH AND SAID HE HAD MADE MANY VISITS TO NEW YORK AND SAN FRANCISCO.

THE ENLISTED PRISONERS APPEARED TO ME MORE LIKE CAGED TIGERS. MOST OF THEM SHARPLY WATCHED THE BARRICADE AND THE TROOP MOVEMENTS ALONG THE ROAD IN FRONT OF IT. THERE SEEMED TO BE A SINISTER AIR ABOUT THEM.

SOME OBJECTED TO BEING TAKEN SO SPEEDILY TO ENGLAND, INSISTING THEY WOULD BE FREED BY GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS IF THEY COULD STAY HERE A SHORT TIME.

OTHER PRISONERS ARE CONSTANTLY BEING BROUGHT IN. MOST OF THEM HAVE BEEN CAPTURED BY MOP-UP PARTIES AFTER ALLIED ADVANCED TROOPS HAD PASSED THEIR POSITIONS.

THEY APPEAR TO BE GOOD, INTELLIGENT SOLDIERS, WELL-TRAINED IN THEIR JOB, AND THEY DON'T QUIT EASILY.

AFTER HIS COMPANY LANDED IN FRANCE, TOD WAS PRESSED INTO PATROL DUTY. HE WALKED DOWN A DEEP ENEMY TRENCH AND, ROUNDING A TURN, BUMPED INTO A GROUP OF GERMANS. THEIR HANDS SHOT UP.

PRETENDING HE WAS SHOUTING TO COMRADES, TOD CALLED "COME ON UP MEN," AND THEN CALMLY ADVANCED AND DISARMED THEM.

DISTRIBUTED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 11--DUE TO A LAST MINUTE ALTERED ARRANGEMENT I DIDN'T ARRIVE ON THE BEACHHEAD UNTIL THE MORNING AFTER D-DAY AFTER OUR FIRST WAVE ASSAULT TROOPS HAD HIT SHORE.

BY THE TIME WE GOT HERE THE BEACHES HAD BEEN TAKEN AND FIGHTING MOVED A COUPLE MILES INLAND.

ALL THAT REMAINED ON THE BEACH WAS SOME SNIPER AND ARTILLERY FIRE AND THE OCCASIONAL STARTLING BLAST OF A MINE GEYSERING BROWN SAND INTO AIR. THAT PLUS THE GIGANTIC AND PITIFUL LITTER WRECKAGE ALONG MILES OF SHORE LINE. SUBMERGED TANKS AND UPTURNED BOATS AND BURNED TRUCKS AND SHELLSHATTERED JEEPS AND SAD LITTLE PERSONAL BELONGINGS ARE STREWN ALL OVER ON THESE BITTER SANDS.

THAT PLUS BODIES OF SOLDIERS LYING IN ROWS OF COVERED BLANKETS, THE TOES OF THEIR SHOES STICKING UP LINE AS THOUGH ON DRILL. AND OTHER UNCOLLECTED BODIES STILL SPRAWLING GROTESQUELY IN SAND OR HALF-HIDDEN BY HIGH GRASS BEHIND THE BEACH.

THAT PLUS AN INTENSE GRIM DETERMINATION OF WORKWEARY MEN TO GET THE CHAOTIC BEACH ORGANIZED AND GET ALL THE VITAL SUPPLIES AND REINFORCEMENTS MOVING MORE RAPIDLY OVER IT FROM STACKED-UP SHIPS STANDING IN DROVES OUT TO SEA.

NOW THAT IT IS GOVER IT SEEMS TO ME A PURE MIRACLE WE EVER TOOK THE BEACH AT ALL. FOR SOME IT WAS EASY BUT IN THIS SPECIAL SECTOR WHERE I NOW AM OUR TROOPS FACED SUCH ODDS THAT OUR GETTING THE SHORE WAS LIKE ME WHIPPING JOE LOUIS DOWN TO PULP. IN THIS COLUMN I WANT TO TELL YOU WHAT OPENING THE SECOND FRONT IN THIS ONE SECTOR ENTAILED SO YOU CAN KNOW AND APPRECIATE AND FOREVER BE HUMBLY GRATEFUL TO THOSE BOTH DEAD AND ALIVE WHO DID IT FOR YOU.

ASHORE FACING US WERE MORE ENEMY TROOPS THAN WE HAD IN OUR ASSAULT WAVES. THE ADVANTAGES WERE ALL THEIRS; THE DISADVANTAGES ALL OURS. THE GERMANS WERE DUG INTO POSITIONS THEY HAD BEEN WORKING ON FOR MONTHS. STILL THEY WEREN'T YET ALL COMPLETE.

A 100-FOOT BLUFF A COUPLE OF HUNDRED YARDS BACK FROM THE BEACH HAD GREAT CONCRETE GUN EMPLACEMENTS BUILT RIGHT INTO THE HILLTOPS. THEY OPENED TO THE SIDES INSTEAD FRONT, THUS MAKING IT VERY HARD FOR NAVAL FIRE FROM THE SEA TO REACH THEM. THEY COULD SHOOT PARALLEL WITH THE BEACH AND COVER EVERY FOOT OF IT FOR MILES WITH ARTILLERY FIRE.

THEN THEY HAD HIDDEN MACHINEGUN NESTS ON THE FORWARD SLOPES WITH CROSS FIRE TAKING IN EVERY INCH OF THE BEACH. THESE NESTS CONNECTED WITH NETWORKS OF TRENCHES SO THE GERMAN GUNNERS COULD MOVE ABOUT WITHOUT EXPOSING THEMSELVES.

THROUGHOUT THE LENGTH OF BEACH RUNNING ZIGZAG A COUPLE HUNDRED YARDS BACK FROM SHORELINE WAS AN IMMENSE V-SHAPED DITCH 15 FEET DEEP. NOTHING COULD CROSS IT, ,95 3;3, .3, -1995 7,58) !8))' £-$?33, .-$3. AND IN OTHER PLACES AT THE FAR ENDS OF THE BEACH WHERE THE GROUND WAS FLATTER THEY HAD GREAT CONCRETE WALLS WHICH HAD BEEN BLASTED BY NAVAL GUNFIRE OR BY

COULD CROSS IT, NOT EVEN MEN AFOOT UNTIL FILLS HAD BEEN MADE. AND IN OTHER PLACES AT THE FAR ENDS OF THE BEACH WHERE THE GROUND WAS FLATTER THEY HAD GREAT CONCRETE WALLS WHICH HAD BEEN BLASTED BY NAVAL GUNFIRE OR BY HAND-SET EXPLOSIVES AFTER WE GOT ASHORE.

OUR ONLY EXITS FROM THE BEACH WERE SEVERAL SWAILS OR VALLEYS EACH ABOUT HUNDRED YARDS WIDE. THE GERMANS MADE MOST OF THESE FUNNEL-LIKE TRAPS, LITERALLY SOWING THEIR BOTTOM SIDES WITH BURIED MINES. THEY CONTAINED, TOO, BARBED WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS WITH MINES ATTACHED TO HIDDEN DITCHES AND MACHINEGUNS FIRING FROM SLOPES.

THAT IS WHAT WAS ON SHORE. BUT OUR MEN HAD TO GO THROUGH A MAZE NEARLY AS DEADLY BEFORE THEY EVEN GOT ASHORE. UNDERWATER OBSTACLES WERE TERRIFIC. GERMANS HAD WHOLE FIELDS OF EVIL DEVICES TO CATCH OUR BOATS. EVEN NOW, SEVERAL DAYS AFTER THE LANDINGS WE'VE CLEARED ONLY CHANNELS THROUGH THEM AND CANNOT YET APPROACH THE WHOLE LENGTH OF THE BEACH WITH OUR SHIPS; EVEN NOW A SHIP OR BOAT HITS ONE OF THESE MINES EVERY DAY AND IS KNOCKED OUT OF COMMISSION. THE GERMANS HAD MASSES OF THOSE GREAT SIX-PRONGED SPIDERS MADE OF RAILROAD IRON AND STANDING SHOULDER HIGH IN PLACES JUST BENEATH THE SURFACE WATER FOR OUR LANDING CRAFT TO RUN INTO.

THEY ALSO HAD HUGE LOGS BURIED IN THE SAND, POINTING UPWARD AND OUTWARD, THEIR TOPS JUST BELOW THE WATER. ATTACHED TO THESE LOGS WERE MINES. IN ADDITION TO THESE OBSTACLES THEY HAD FLOATING MINES IN THE BEACH WATERS, LAND MINES BURIED IN THE SAND BEACH AND MORE MINES IN CHECKERBOARD ROWS IN THE TALL GRASS BEYOND THE SAND.

AND AS I SAID BEFORE, THE ENEMY HAD FOUR MEN ON SHORE FOR EVERY THREE MEN WE HAD APPROACHING THE SHORE. AND YET WE GOT ON.

BEACH LANDINGS ARE PLANNED TO A SCHEDULED SET FAR AHEAD OF TIME. THAT IS NO SECRET FOR THEY ALL HAVE TO BE TIMED IN ORDER THAT EVERYTHING WILL MESH AND FOR THE FOLLOWING WAVES TROOPS TO BE STANDING OFF THE BEACH AND READY TO LAND AT THE RIGHT MOMENT. AS THE LANDINGS ARE PLANNED, SOME ELEMENTS OF THE ASSAULT FORCE BREAK THROUGH QUICKLY AND PUSH ON INLAND AND ATTACK THE MOST OBVIOUS ENEMY STRONGPOINTS. IT SUALLY IS THE PLAN FOR UNITS TO BE INLAND, ATTACKING GUN POSITIONS FROM BEHIND WITHIN MINUTES AFTER THE FIRST MEN HIT THE BEACH.

I'VE ALWAYS BEEN AMAZED AT THE SPEED CALLED FOR IN THESE PLANS. YOU'LL HAVE SCHEDULES CALLING FOR ENGINEERS TO LAND AT H-HOUR PLUS TWO MINUTES AND SERVICE TROOPS AT H PLUS 30 AND EVEN FOR PRESS CENSORS TO LAND AT H-HOUR PLUS 75 MINUTES, BUT IN THIS ATTACK ON A SPECIAL PORTION OF THE BEACH WHERE I AM, THE WORST WE HAD, INCIDENTALLY, THE SCHEDULE DIDN'T HOLD. OUR MEN SIMPLY COULD NOT GET OFF THE BEACH. THEY WERE UTTERLY PINNED DOWN RIGHT AT THE WATERS EDGE BY AN INHUMAN WALL OF FIRE FROM THE BLUFF. OUR FIRST WAVES WERE ON THAT BEACH FOR HOURS INSTEAD OF A FEW MINUTES BEFORE THEY COULD BEGIN WORKING INLAND. YOU CAN STILL SEE FOXHOLES DUG AT THE VERY WATER'S EDGE OUT OF THE SAND AND SMALL JUMBLED ROCKS THAT FORM PARTS OF THE BEACH.

MEDICAL CORPS MEN ATTENDED WOUNDED AS BEST THEY COULD. MEN WERE KILLED AS THEY STEPPED OUT OF LANDING CRAFT. AN OFFICER WHOM I KNOW GOT A BULLET RIGHT THROUGH HIS HEAD JUST AS THE DOOR OF HIS LANDING CRAFT LET DOWN. SOME WERE DROWNED.

THE FIRST CRACK IN BEACH DEFENSE FINALLY WAS ACCOMPLISHED BY TERRIFIC AND WONDERFUL NAVAL GUNFIRE WHICH KNOCKED OUT THE BIG EMPLACEMENTS. THEY TELL EPIC STORIES OF DESTROYERS THAT RAN RIGHT UP INTO SHALLOW WATER AND HAD IT OUT POINT BLANK WITH BIG GUNS IN THOSE CONCRETE EMPLACEMENTS ASORE.

WHEN THE HEAVY FIRE STOPPED, OUR MEN WERE ORGANIZED BY THEIR OFFICERS AND PUSHED ON INLAND, CIRCLING MACHINEGUN NESTS AND TAKING THEM FROM THE REAR. AS ONE OFFICER SAID, THE ONLY WAY TO TAKE A BEACH IS TO FACE IT AND KEEP GOING. IT IS COSTLY AT FIRST BUT IT IS THE ONLY WAY. IF THE MEN ARE PINNED DOWN ON THE BEACH, DUG IN AND OUT OF ACTION, THEY MIGHT AS WELL NOT BE THERE AT ALL.

A65

THEY HOLD UP THE WAVES BEHIND THEM. OUR MEN WERE PINNED DOWN FOR A WHILE BUT FINALLY THEY STOOD UP AND WENT THROUGH AND SO WE TOOK THAT BEACH AND ACCOMPLISHED OUR LANDING. WE DID IT WITH EVERY ADVANTAGE ON THE ENEMY'S SIDE AND EVERY DISADVANTAGE ON OURS. IN THE LIGHT OF A COUPLE DAYS RETROSPECTION WE SIT AND TALK AND CALL IT A MIRACLE WE EVER GOT ON AT ALL OR THAT WE WERE ABLE TO STAY ON.

BEFORE LONG UNITS THAT DID IT WILL BE PERMITTED TO BE NAMED. THEN YOU'LL KNOW TO WHOM THIS GLORY SHOULD GO. THEY SUFFERED CASUALTIES AS A UNIT. AND YET IF YOU TAKE THE ENTIRE BEACHHEAD ASSAULT, INCLUDING OTHER UNITS THAT HAD A MUCH EASIER TIME, OUR TOTAL CASUALTIES FOR OPENING THE WEDGE ONTO THE CONTINENT OF EUROPE IS REMARKABLY LOW, ONLY A FRACTION, IN FACT, OF WHAT OUR COMMANDERS HAD BEEN PREPARED TO ACCEPT.

AND THESE UNITS THAT WERE SO BATTERED AND WENT THROUGH SUCH HELL ARE STILL RIGHT AT THIS MOMENT PUSHING ON INLAND WITHOUT REST, THEIR SPIRITS HIGH, THEIR EGOTISM IN VICTORY ALMOST REACHING SMART ALECKY STAGE.

THEIR TAILS ARE UP. WE'VE DONE IT AGAIN, THEY SAY. THEY FIGURE THE REST OF THE ARMY ISN'T NEEDED AT ALL, WHICH PROVES THEIR JUDGMENT IS BAD BUT IT CERTAINLY IS THE SPIRIT THAT WINS BATTLES AND EVENTUALLY WARS.

WITH THE CANADIANS IN FRANCE, JUNE 11--THE THIRD CANADIAN INFANTRY DIVISION, AFTER DEFEATING GERMAN COUNTERBLOWS ON ITS FRONT, IS TURNING TO THE OFFENSIVE AGAIN WITH POWERFUL BRITISH FORMATIONS ADVANCIN FROM THE BEACHHEAD. DURING THE NIGHT TWO CANADIAN INFANTRY UNITS ADVANCED BETWEEN ONE AND TWO MILES AND WENT THROUGH ONE TOWN WHICH HAD BEEN STRONGLY DEFENDED BUT WHICH WAS FOUND EMPTY.

IN ANOTHER TOWN THEY FOUND ONLY A FEW MACHINE GUNS AND SOME WORK PARTIES LAYING MINES AND AFTER A BRIEF SKIRMISH THEY ALSO WENT INTO IT. THERE WERE A NUMBER OF GERMAN DEAD IN THE TOWN.

ENEMY DEFENSES IN THIS SECTOR APPEAR DEFINITELY WEAKER AND THE GERMANS APPEAR TO HAVE PULLED BACK INTO THE PERIMETER GUARDING CAEN FROM THE NORTH AND WEST.

ON ANOTHER SECTOR OF THIS JAGGED FRONT WESTERN CANADIAN INFANTRY OCCUPIED ANOTHER TOWN AND ADVANCED FROM IT WITH TANKS AND ARTILLERY.

THERE IS A GENERAL MOVE FORWARD ALONG PRACTICALLY THE WHOLE BRITISH AND CANADIAN FRONT FCOM THE CAEN PERIMETER TO THE BAYEUX AREA AND SATURDAY'S COMPARATIVE LULL SEEMS OVER.

MASSES OF FIGHTERS WERE DRONING LOW OVER THE BATTLEFIELD THIS SUNDAY MORNING. THE SKY WAS OVERCAST.

JUN 12 1944

BY DON WHITEHEAD

WITH THE FIRST DIVISION IN FRANCE, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-TODAY THERE'S A REASON FOR THE MEN OF THE FIGHTING FIRST TO SING THEIR BATTLE SONG, "THE FIGHTING FIRST WILL LEAD THE WAY FROM HELL TO VICTORY."

I'VE SEEN THEM PROVE THAT THE HERALDED INVINCIBILITY OF HITLER'S ATLANTIC WALL WAS BUT A MYTH. IT WASN'T EASY AND IT COST LIVES TO PROVE IT, BUT THE FIGHTING FIRST DID IT IN ONE BIG EPIC BATTLE WITH A MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY OF SHEER COURAGE.

IN ALL THE LANDINGS ALONG THE COAST OF NORTHEASTERN FRANCE, THE FIRST DIVISION HAD THE TOUGHEST JOB OF ALL. THE INFANTRYMEN HIT A SOLID CORE OF ENEMY RESISTANCE FROM THE TIME THEIR ASSAULT BOATS BOUNCED ON THE BEACH. THEN THEY HAD TO BATTLE EVERY INCH OF THE WAY INLAND AGAINST STRONG PREPARED POSITIONS. LOOKING BACK, IT IS DIFFICULT TO SEE HOW THE BOYS DID THE JOB.

BUT THEY DID IT BECAUSE THEY ARE THE FIRST DIVISION. THEY DID IT IN NORTH AFRICA. THEY DID IT AGAIN IN SICILY, AND THEY ARE GIVING THE ENEMY A REPEAT PERFORMANCE IN FRANCE.

IN THIS SECTOR THE DIVISION UNLOCKED THE DOOR TO THE BEACHHEAD WITH A COURAGEOUS CHARGE ACROSS THE BLOODY BEACH AGAINST THE ENEMY WAITING IN READY POSITIONS.

THE DAY BEFORE D-DAY THE GERMANS MOVED TWO REGIMENTS INTO THE SECTOR FOR MANEUVERS. THIS MEANT THAT ON THE VERY BEACHES THE ENEMY HAD A STRENGTH ALMOST EQUAL TO THE AMERICAN.

HOW ANY OF THEM LIVED THROUGH THOSE FIRST HOURS IS ONE OF THE WONDERS OF THE WAR. YOU JUST HAD TO BE LUCKY, AND THERE WERE A NUMBER WHOSE LUCK PLAYED OUT.

I THOUGHT TIME AND AGAIN, "THIS IS IT--THIS TIME WE FAILED."

THE FIRST WAVE WENT THROUGH MINED UNDERWATER OBSTACLES OF LOGS, HUGE IRON TRIPODS LOOKING LIKE OVER-SIZED JACKS SUCH AS CHILDREN PLAY WITH, AND BOAT TRAPS.

THE TROOPS DIVED FOR COVER FROM A MURDEROUS FIRE UNDER A GRAVEL EMBANKMENT JUST ABOVE THE WATER'S EDGE AND PRESSED THEIR BODIES INTO THE STONE FOR PROTECTION. BUT THERE WAS NO PROTECTION FROM THE MORTAR AND ARTILLERY SHELL AND MACHINEGUN BULLETS POURING IN. THE MEN LAY SHOULDER TO SHOULDER FOR HUNDREDS OF YARDS, UNABLE TO MOVE UNTIL THE FIRST ASSAULT UNITS HAD CLEARED OUT THAT DIRECT FIRE.

THERE WERE SOME GRISLY SIGHTS ON THE BEACH AS I TRAMPED UP AND DOWN IT FOR FOUR HOURS WITH THE BRIGADIER GENERAL WHO WAS GETTING THE TROOPS ORGANIZED AND MOVING THEM OFF THE BEACH TO MAKE ROOM FOR OTHERS.

THE WOUNDED LAY AT THE WATER'S EDGE WITH THE GLAZED LOOK OF SHOCK WAITING UNTIL SOMEONE COULD REMOVE THEM. DEAD MEN'S BODIES WERE SPRAWLED IN THE GRAVEL OR ROLLED GENTLY IN THE SURF. A WOUNDED MAN CRAWLED OUT OF THE WATER TO THE EDGE OF THE PROTECTING EMBANKMENT. A MORTAR SHELL HIT HIM SQUARELY BETWEEN THE SHOULDERS.

A29

SOME NEVER REACHED SHORE. SHELLS EXPLODED SQUARELY IN THEIR BOATS. SOME WERE HIT AS THEY WADED AND THEY QUIETLY SLUMPED OUT OF SIGHT.

THOSE FOUR HOURS WERE A NIGHTMARE OF BURSTING SHELLS, OF WOUNDED AND THE PLEADING LOOK IN THE EYES OF MEN DYING, OR BODIES WASHING ASHORE, OF EXPLOSIONS WHICH SPRAYED US WITH DIRT AND WATER AND STUNG OUR EYES WITH CORDITE FUMES.

THERE WAS NO PANIC. THE MEN EVEN JOKED AND OCCASIONALLY LAUGHED.

SALERNO? GELA? NORTH AFRICA? NONE COULD COMPARE WITH WHAT THE FIRST DIVISION DID ON THE BEACHES OF NORMANDY WITH ITS FLOWERING SWEET APPLE BLOSSOMS, ITS GREEN HEDGEROWS AND WINDING LANES.

UNITS FROM A BATTALION COMMANDED BY A SLIM YOUNG LIEUTENANT COL. FROM SPARTANBURG, S.C., WHOSE NAME I CANNOT GIVE NOW, BROKE OFF THE BEACH FIRST. THERE WERE 250 MEN WHO FOUGHT THEIR WAY INLAND AND HELD FOR SIX HOURS UNTIL OTHERS COULD FIGHT THEIR WAY TO THEM. THEY DROVE THE WEDGE INTO WHICH POURED THOUSANDS OF TROOPS.

THIS YOUNG LIEUTENANT COLONEL HAD 37 ENLISTED MEN AND OFFICERS

IN HIS BOAT. THREE OFFICE[illegible]D NINE ENLISTED MEN LIVED TO REACH THE BEACH. OFFICERS WITH [illegible] COLONEL WERE CAPT.FRED W.HALL OF HUDSON, N.H., LT.NEVILLE H.CHANDLER, 3407 ROCKY RIVER RIVER DRIVE, CLEVELAND, OHIO, AND MAJ.WILLIAM WASHINGTON OF CROZET, VA.

"THEY GOT US AS WE CAME ACROSS THE BEACH," WASHINGTON SAID. "HOW I GOT THROUGH I'LL NEVER KNOW UNLESS IT WAS BY THE GRACE OF GOD AND THE FACT THAT MY WIFE WAS PRAYING FOR ME."

FROM THE BEACH THE LIEUTENANT COLONE'S MEN FOUGHT THEIR WAY INTO A SMALL TOWN NEAR THE BEACH. A UNIT UNDER THE COMMAND OF CAPT.JOSEPH DAWSON OF WACO, TEX., FOUGHT ALL DURING THE DAY AND NIGHT TO SUBDUE THE ENEMY. ONCE HIS UNIT WAS SURROUNDED.

(ADVANCE) LONDON, MONDAY JUNE 12-(AP)-SOME AMERICAN AND BRITISH PILOTS WERE IN THE AIR AS MANY AS 14 HOURS ON D-DAY, WHEN ALLIED AIR FORCES THREW THEIR FULL WEIGHT INTO THE COMBINED ASSAULT, LT.GEN. CARL SPAATZ, CHIEF OF THE U.S. STRATEGIC AIR FORCE IN EUROPE, SAID TODAY IN A SPEECH PREPARED FOR BROADCAST TO THE UNITED STATES.

MORE THAN 32,000 SORTIES WERE FLOWN BY ALLIED PLANES FROM JUNE 5 (CORRECT) TO JUNE 8, SPAATZ DISCLOSED.

"WHILE D-DAY CALLED FOR UNUSUAL EFFORT ON THE PART OF THE AIR FORCES, THE TASK ITSELF WAS NOT UNUSUAL," HE SAID. "THE AIR FORCES HAD BEEN FIGHTING IN PREPARATION FOR MANY MONTHS, AND JUNE 6 REPRESENTED MERELY THE LOGICAL CULMINATION OF A SERIES OF ORDERLY, PLANNED STEPS."

UNITED STATES AIR FORCES HAVE KEPT UP A CONSTANT OFFENSIVE SINCE THEY BEGAN OPERATIONS IN THE UNITED KINGDOM NEARLY TWO YEARS AGO, AND IT-REACHED A CLIMAX IN THE DEVASTATING ATTACKS OF LAST FEBRUARY, HE SAID, "WHEN WE FATALLY REDUCED THE GERMANS' CAPACITY TO PRODUCE MUCH-NEEDED REPLACEMENT AIRCRAFT."

"ALL THIS WAS IN REALITY A PRELUDE TO THE INVASION, FOR WITHOUT THE AIR SUPERIORITY WE HAVE ENJOYED SINCE D-DAY, OUR LOSSES ON THE SEA AND THE GROUND MIGHT WELL HAVE BEEN FAR TOO COSTLY," HE SAID.

RAF LANCASTERS AND HALIFAXES LAST NIGHT HIT FOUR RAIL CENTERS, AT ACHERES AND VERSAILLES CLOSE TO PARIS AND ORLEANS AND DREUX WITHIN A 90-MILE RADIUS, TO COMPLICATE THE GERMANS' REINFORCEMENT PROBLEMS.

POWERFUL FORMATIONS STREAMED ACROSS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL TOWARD NORTHERN FRANCE TODAY FOLLOWING UP RAF BLOWS LAST NIGHT, AND AMERICAN THUNDERBOLT FIGHTER-BOMBERS ROARED OVER THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA BATTLE AREAS EARLY THIS MORNING DIVE BOMBING RAILROAD TRACKS AND A ROUND HOUSE THE DAYLIGHT RAIDERS HAD FAVORABLE WEATHER.

THE GERMAN-CONTROLLED PARIS RADIO SAID THAT THE PARIS AREA WAS ATTACKED AGAIN THIS MORNING. THE RAIL YARDS AT VERSAILLES AND ACHERES, BOTH IN THE PARIS AREA, WERE AMONG THE TARGETS OF RAF HEAVY BOMBERS LAST NIGHT. BOTH YARDS ARE CRITICAL FOR THE MOVEMENT OF GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS TO THE NORMANY AREA BECAUSE OF THE DISRUPTION OF JUNCTIONS TO THE NORTH DURING THE ALLIES' LONG PREPARATORY AERIAL CAMPAIGN.

OTHER TARGETS HIT BY THE BIG BRITISH BOMBERS WERE THE YARDS AT ORLEANS, 90 MILES SOUTH OF PARIS, AND DREUX, 50 MILES EAST OF PARIS AND ONLY 90 MILES FROM THE FIGHTING FRONT. TWENTY OF THE BIG BOMBERS FAILED TO RETURN.

IN A SIMULTANEOUS NIGHT ATTACK BRITISH MOSQUITOS BOMBED BERLIN FOR THE SECOND NIGHT IN A ROW AND LAID MINES IN ENEMY WATERS IN OPERATIONS FROM WHICH TWO PLANES OF THE ATTACKING FORCE ARE MISSING. THE GERMAN RADIO SAID THAT VIENNA ALSO WAS BOMBED.

THE AERIAL SCORE COVERING YESTERDAY'S DAYLWGHT U.S. HEAVY BOMBER ATTACKS ON AIRFIELDS AND GUN POSITIONS AND THE FIGHTER AND FIGHTER-BOMBER ATTACKS ON AIRFIELDS AND GUN POSITIONS AND THE FIGHTER AND FIGHTER-BOMBER ATTACKS IN THE BATTLE AREA AS WELL AS LAST NIGHT'S OPERATIONS SAW 57 GERMAN PLANES SHOT DOWN WHILE THE ALLIES LOST 67, OF WHICH 42 WERE FIGHTERS.

A U.S.NINTH AIRFORCE TROOP CARRIER BASE, ENGLAND, JUNE 11-(AP)- BUDDIES OF LT.RALPH ELSTONN GLIDER PILOT FROM KANSAS CITY, CLAIM THE FOXHOLD DIGGING CHWMPIONSHIP FOR HIM.

ELSTON WITH OTHERS OF HIS SQUADRON PUT HIS GLIDER DOWN IN THE STE. VERE UCLISE AREA. THEPTHEY ALL HAD TO JIG IN

"ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT WHEN WE WERE BEING SHELLED THE FELLOWS COULD SEE ELSTON'S SPADE THROWING OUT DIRT," SAID MAJ.CLAIR SMITH, 2525 AVENUE O, GALVESTON, TEX.

"EVERY TIME A SHELL DROPPED NEAR HE'D DIG A LITTLE DEEPER. NEXT MORNING THREE OF US HAD TO LIFT HIM OUT. HE KINDA OVERDID IT."

IT IS THE CONSENSUS OF ELSTON AND OTHER GLIDER PILOTS OF THIS BASE WHO ARE BACK AFTER THREE DAYS AND NIGHTS IN THE CONFUSION AROUND STE.MERE EGLISE THAT ONE OF FRANCE'S BIG POSTWAR PROBLEMS WILL BE PUTTING DIRT BACK IN THE FOXHOLES THEY DUG.

MAJOR SMITH, PROMOTED FROM CAPTAIN THE DAY HE FLEW HIS GLIDER IN, SAID THE GERMANS HAD SOME JAPANESE TREE SNIPERS SPRINKLED IN WITH AN ASSORTMENT OF RUSSIAN, POLISH AND CZECH BATTALIONS ON THE COASTAL DEFENSI.

"I NEVER THOUGHT I'D RUN INTO JAPANESE IN FRANCE," HE SAID, "BUT I WATCHED 19 PARATROOPERS STALKING A TREE 100 FEET HIGH WITH ONE IN THE TOP. THEY FINALLY GOT HIM."

FLIGHT OFFICER MARK NOBLE, 123 LEXINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., HAD NEVER HANDLED A COW BEFORE AND DIDN'T KNOW HOW TO SAY "BOSSY" IN FRENCH BUT HE GOT ENOUGH MILK TO HELP NINE GI'S WASH DOWN THEIR K RATIONS.

"SHE DIDN'T SEEM TO MIND THE SNIPERS," HE SAID. "SHE JUST STOOD THERE AND CHEWED HER CUD. BUT IT GOT TOO HOT FOR ME EVERY ONCE IN A WHILE AND I HAD TO TAKE TO MY TRENCH."

THE MOST POPULAR SOUVENIR THE MEN BROUGHT BACK IS A 30-CALIBER WOODEN BULLET THE GERMANS ARE USING IN GROUND FIGHTING. IT IS UNLIKE ANYTHING THE AMERICANS USE. THEY ARE DANGEROUS ONLY UP TO ABOUT 200 FEET, THE SOLDIERS SAY, BUT LEAVE A GHASTLY WOUND. THE BULLET IS OF PURPLE DYED WOOD CUT GRAINWISE, ABOUT AN INCH LONG AND THE THICKNESS OF A PENCIL. THEY ARE DESIGNED SO AS NOT TO ENDANGER THE GERMANS OWN TROOPS BEHIND THE IMMEDIATE TARGET IN CLOSE FIGHTING.

FLIGHT OFFICER JAMES CRAWFORD, ROUTE 2, THOMASVILLE, N.C., SHOWED ME A BOX OF THEM DATED 1941.

"THEY HAD ENOUGH OF THESE IN AN AMMUNITION DUMP OUTSIDE ST.MARIE DUMONT TO LAST YEARS, IT LOOKED LIKE," HE SAID.

PILOTS SAID THE GERMANS USED A CHURCH IN STE.MERE EGLISE FOR SNIPER HEADQUARTERS. GUNFIRE KEPT COMING FROM THE CHURCH AFTER PARACHUTISTS ONCE HAD CLEANED IT OUT. A SECOND SEARCH DISCLOSED TWO NAZIS IN A 7-FOOT SQUARE ROOM ENTERED BY A TRAP DOOR UNDER THE PULPIT. IT WAS A VERITABLE ARSENAL. THE TROOPERS TOOK CARE OF IT WITH A GRENADE.

THE GLIDER PILOTS HAVE GREAT ADMIRATION FOR THE PARACHUTE TROOPERS.

"THE GUYS WERE IN PAIRS LOOKING FOR SNIPERS," RELATED FLIGHT OFFICER T.N. LEATHEM, JR., 1014 FERRIS AVE., WAXAHACHIE, TEX. "ONE WILL GO WALKING RIGHT THROUGH THE OPEN. THE OTHER FOLLOWS SOME DISTANCE BEHIND HIM, OUT OF SIGHT. HIS JOB IS TO NAIL A SNIPER WHEN HE RAISES UP OR MOVES TO TAKE A SHOT AT THE GUY AHEAD. THEY TAKE TURNS WALKING IN FRONT."

"THE BEST I SAW," REPORTED FLIGHT OFFICER ROBERT LEE CAMPBELL, SIGOURNEY, LA., "WAS A PARATROOPER RIDING BAREBACK ON A HORSE, WITH A FRENCH BABE PERCHED ON THE HORSE BEHIND HIM. HE HAD A COUPLE BOTTLES OF CHAMPAGNE SLUNG ON A ROPE AROUND HIS NECK, HIS RIFLE ACROSS HIS KNEES. HE WAS GOING THROUGH THE WOODS PICKING OFF GERMANS."

HEADQUARTERS 21ST ARMY GROUP, JUNE 11-(AP)-A SENIOR BRITISH STAFF OFFICER AT HEADQUARTERS HERE SUMMED UP THE WHOLE POSITION TODAY IN THE NORMANDY BATTLE THIS WAY:

EVERYTHING DEPENDS ON WHICH SIDE NOW CAN BUILD UP ITS FORCES QUICKER--AND THE ALLIES ARE IN SUCH CONTROL OF THE SEA THAT ALLIED SHIPS MOVE AT WILL EXCEPT FOR ISOLATED GERMAN E-BOAT ATTACKS.

GERMAN RAILWAY AND HIGHWAY COMMUNICATIONS, FURTHERMORE, HAVE BEEN DISRUPTED ON A WIDE SCALE.

WHAT THE GERMANS ARE NIBBLING AT WITH THEIR SMALL SHIPS IS A GREAT MASS OF ALLIED SHIPPING EXTENDING OVER 200 SQUARE MILES, FIVE MILES DEEP AND STRETCHED OUT ON A 40-MILE FRONT.

THIS VAST OBLONG IS BEING MANNED WITH OUTSTANDING VALOR--THE OFFICER PUT THIS STRONGLY--BY AMERICAN AND BRITISH MERCHANT SEAMEN.

ENEMY E-BOATS HAVE BEEN GIVING A LITTLE TROUBLE OFF CHERBOURG ON THE AMERICAN FLANK, AND LAST NIGHT ONE OF THE MOST SPECTACULAR SMALL ACTIONS OF THE WAR WAS FOUGHT IN THAT AREA. BRITISH MOTOR TORPEDO BOATS DASHED THROUGH A LINE OF GERMAN E-BOATS AND SLUGGED IT OUT WITH THE ENEMY VESSELS AT A RANGE OF 15 YARDS.

MEANWHILE, EMERGING DETAILS OF THE GREAT ALLIED SEA ACTION IMMEDIATELY BEFORE AND DURING INVASION DAY WERE DISCLOSED. THIS ACTION WAS EVEN MORE SUCCESSFUL THAN IT HAD APPEARED TO COASTAL OBSERVERS AT THAT TIME.

WE HAD EXPECTED TO HAVE TO THROW DOWN 16,000 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES FROM COASTAL SHIPS IN THIS INITIAL PHASE. ACTUALLY, WE WERE REQUIRED TO PUT DOWN FAR LESS.

AND UP TO YESTERDAY NOON, 57 SHIPS HAD FIRED OUT EVERY ROUND THEY HAD AND HAD BEEN RELOADED FOR ANOTHER GO. THEY ARE STILL FIRING SPORADICALLY ALL ALONG THE FRONT WHERE SOME MOBILE GERMAN BATTERIES STILL ARE STICKING UP THEIR HEADS AND GETTING THEM KNOCKED OFF.

BY SUELLA BERNARD AND MARIJEAN BROWN

A NINTH AIR FORCE EVACUATION BASE SOMEWHERE IN BRITAIN, JUNE 11-(AP)-WE PICKED POPPIES IN SHELL-POCKED FIELDS OF NORMANDY AND BROUGHT THEM BACK TO BRITAIN WITH THE FIRST CARGO OF WOUNDED TO BE EVACUATED FROM THIS NEW EUROPEAN BATTLEFIELD--TWO GERMANS, A FRENCH CIVILIAN, AND TWO AMERICANS--A COLONEL AND A GI.

IT WAS DREARY WHEN WE TOOK OFF FROM THE BASE IN THE BIG C-47, BUT WE DID NOT NOTICE THE WEATHER MUCH. WE HAD OTHER THINGS TO THINK ABOUT AND THIS WAS THE DAY AND THE DUTY FOR WHICH WE HAD BEEN TRAINING MORE THAN A YEAR. FOR A WHILE WE WERE WORRIED UNTIL WE PICKED UP A FIGHTER ESCORT AT THE COAST, BECAUSE WE THOUGHT PERHAPS WE WOULD HAVE TO TURN BACK, BUT ONCE THE FIGHTERS TOOK THEIR POSITIONS OVERHEAD WE KNEW WE WERE GOING UP.

WE KEPT PEERING OUT, LOOKING FOR GERMAN PLANES, AND KEPT EXPECTING FLAK WHEN WE PASSED OVER THE COAST. NOT A SINGLE GERMAN PLANE SHOWED UP AND THERE WASN'T A SIGN OF FLAK. WE WOULD HAVE THOUGHT THE TRIP OVER SORT OF DULL IF WE HADN'T KNOWN WHERE WE WERE GOING.

THE LANDING STRIP WHERE WE WERE TO COME IN HAD JUST BEEN COMPLETED, BUT OUR PILOT WASN'T TAKING CHANCES. WE CAME IN LOW FIRST, REALLY HEDGEHOPPING, TO LOOK THINGS OVER BEFORE LANDING, AND SENT UP A CLOUD OF DUST.

OFF IN THE DISTANCE YOU COULD HEAR THE GUNS ROAR. JUST A FEW HUNDRED YARDS AWAY OUR TROOPS WERE EXPLODING GERMAN MINES IN THE FIELDS TO GET THEM OUT OF THE WAY. THEN WE WERE TOLD THERE WOULD BE A WAIT UNTIL THE AMBULANCES BROUGHT IN THE PATIENTS.

OVERHEAD THE FIGHTER ESCORT CIRCLED PROTECTIVELY AND THEY GAVE US A COMFORTABLE FEELING. THERE WAS NOTHING WE COULD DO FOR A MOMENT, EXCEPT WAIT, SO WE WENT PICKING FLOWERS. THE POPPIES, TALL, BRIGHT AND SWAYING, WERE LOVELY.

BUT IN THE FIELDS WE CAME ACROSS THE BODIES OF THREE DEAD GERMANS AND WHEN WE GOT BACK IN THE PLANE WE WERE TOLD IT WAS NOT UNLIKELY THAT THERE STILL WERE MINES IN THE FIELD. A GROUP OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS CAME RUNNING UP WHILE WE WERE THERE. THEY SEEMED SURPRISED TO SEE US, BUT ASKED THE SAME OLD QUESTION -- "WHERE ARE YOU FROM IN THE STATES?"

THE THING THEY SEEMED TO MISS MOST WAS WATER.

"BRING US BACK A COUPLE OF BUCKETFULLS THE NEXT TIME," THEY JOKED.

ABOUT AN HOUR AND A HALF AFTER WE LANDED THE PATIENTS WERE CARRIED ABOARD. WE WERE BUSY THEN.

AMONG THE FIVE IN OUR SHIP WAS A CIVILIAN FRENCHMAN. WE HAD BEEN TOLD HE WAS OF GREAT SERVICE TO THE ARMY BY MARKING OUT ON THE MAP THE PLACES WHERE THE GERMANS HAD PILLBOXES. HE HAD A HIP INJURY, BUT HE KEPT WAVING HIS ARMS, TRYING TO TELL US HOW HAPPY HE WAS. BUT EVEN THE TWO GERMANS SEEMED HAPPY TO BE SAFE BOARD.

WE BROUGHT THE INJURED IN WITHOUT ACCIDENT. WE HOPE WE WILL BE GOING BACK SOON.

THE TRIP GAVE THE POPE HIS FIRST CLOSEUP VIEW OF ROME UNDER THE ALLIED OCCUPATION. HE PASSED MANY AMERICAN SOLDIERS SO CLOSELY THEY COULD HAVE TOUCHED HIM,BUT FEW REALIZED THE IDENTITY OF THE RED-CLAD FIGURE.

AS THE PONTIFF WAS ENTERING THE HALL OF BENEDICTIONS, TECHNICIANS TURNED ON THE LOUDSPEAKER SYSTEM AND, THROUGH SOME TECHNICAL ERROR, IT BURST OUT WITH LIVELY MUSIC BEING BROADCAST BY THE ROME RADIO. THE MUSIC DIED AWAY QUICKLY HOWEVER AS THE POPE ASCENDED THE THRONE.

MOSCOW, JUNE 11-(AP)-HURLING ITS LONG-EXPECTED OFFENSIVE AGAINST FINLAND, A RED ARMY UNDER COL. GEN. LEONID A.GOVOROV, LENINGRAD FRONT COMMANDER, HAS DRIVEN 15 MILES THROUGH FINNISH LINES ON THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS AND CAPTURED 82 TOWNS AND VILLAGES, PREMIER-MARSHAL STALIN ANNOUNCED TONIGHT.

THOUSANDS OF MUSCOVITES CHEERED AS MOSCOW'S VICTORY CANNON SOUNDED AGAIN IN CELEBRATION OF THE NEW OFFENSIVE WHICH PUT THE RUSSIANS ON THE MARCH ONCE MORE AFTER THE AMERICAN-BRITISH-CANADIAN INVASION OF FRANCE IN THE WEST. THE LONG SUMMER TWILIGHT WAS BROKEN BY ARCHING ROCKETS ABOVE MOSCOW.

STALIN'S ORDER OF THE DAY ANNOUNCED THE CAPTURE OF THE RAIL CITY OF TERIJOKI, 42 MILES SOUTHEAST OF VIIPURI (VIBORG) ON THE LENINGRAD-HELSINKI RAILWAY. TERIJOKI, NEAR THE COAST OF THE GULF OF FINLAND, IS ABOUT FIVE MILES SOUTHEAST OF THE JUNCTION OF TWO HIGHWAYS LEADING TO VIIPURI.

THE RUSSIANS WERE DECLARED TO HAVE BROKEN THROUGH ON A 25-MILE FRONT AFTER TWO DAYS' FIGHTING.

MOSCOW RADIO GAVE THE NEWS TO THE PEOPLE. STALIN'S ORDER THIS TIME ENDED WITH "DEATH TO THE GERMAN-FINNISH INVADERS," AN EXCLAMATION WHICH HERETOFORE HAS BEEN VENTED AGAINST THE GERMWNS ONLY.

"AN ARMY LIVES ON ITS COMMUNICATIONS AND IT JUST SO HAPPENS THAT A LOT OF GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS PASS OUR FRONT DOOR," HE SAID AT AN AMERICAN BASE.

GENERAL EAKER HAS BEEN WELCOMED WARMLY HERE. HE HAD A 45-MINUTE TALK WITH FOREIGN MINISTER VYASCHESLAV MOLOTOV AND SAW AIR MARSHAL A.A.NOVIKOV, CHIEF OF THE RED AIR FORCE, AND OTHER HIGH OFFICERS AT A RECEPTION AT SPASSO HOUSE, WHERE U.S. AMBASSADOR W.AVERELL HARRIMAN PINNED THE LEGION OF MERIT ON MARSHAL NOVIKOV.

THE CITIATION TO NOVIKOV WAS READ BY MAJ. GEN. JOHN R.DEANE, HEAD OF THE AMERICAN MILITARY MISSION WHICH WORKED WITH THE RUSSIANS TO SET UP THE U.S. AIR FACILITIES HERE.

HARRIMAN DESCRIBED EAKER'S VISIT AS A "TREMENDOUSLY SUCCESSFUL TRIP, AND SAID THAT IT AND THE SHUTTLE BOMBING "DESTROYED FOR ALL TIME THE AXIS PROPAGANDA THAT THE ALLIES CAN BE DIVIDED."

QUESTIONED ABOUT THE AMERICAN BASES EAKER SAID: "THEY ARE VERY GOOD BASES, AND WE'VE BEEN RECEIVED BY THE RUSSIANS AS COMRADES IN ARMS IN EVERY RESPECT. THERE HAS BEEN AND IS NO SUSPICION ABOUT US. THEY ASKED US WHAT WE WANTED. WE TOLD THEM, AND THEY SAID OKAY."

HEADQUARTERS U.S. 14TH AIR FORCE IN CHINA, JUNE 11-(AP)-POWERFULLY REINFORCED JAPANESE DIVISIONS WERE AUTHORITATIVELY REPORTED TODAY TO HAVE OPENED A NORTHWARD OFFENSIVE ALONG THE HANKOW-CANTON RAILWAY SYNCHRONIZED WITH THE PRESENT SOUTHWARD DRIVE IN THE CHANGSHA (CORRECT) SECTOR.

MAJ. GEN. CLAIRE L.CHENNAULT SAID THE ENEMY PUSH UPWARD FROM THE COAST, COMBINED WITH THE BATTLE FOR CHANGSHA, BROUGHT THE CHINA WAR TO ITS GREATEST PITCH SINCE 1938.

THE JAPANESE, BOLSTERED BY PUPPET TROOPS, ALREADY HAVE DRIVEN FROM FIVE TO 10 MILES BEYOND THEIR PREVIOUS KWANGTUNG POSITIONS AND ARE NOW AT FENGTSUN, ON THE RAILWAY ABOUT 30 MILES NORTH OF CANTON, AND AT FAHSIEH AND TSUNGFA, ON HIGHWAYS PARALLELING THE RAILWAY, IT WAS ANNOUNCED.

CHENNAULT COMMENTED THAT THE JAPANESE EVIDENTLY WERE EMBARKED ON THE BUILDING OF A "WEST WALL" ALONG THE RAIL LINE TO PROTECT THEIR HOME ISLANDS AND SAID THAT THIS DESIGN, IF ACHIEVED, COULD PROLONG THE ASIATIC WAR BY YEARS.

THIRTEENTH ARMY AIRFORCE HEADQUARTERS, SOUTH PACIFIC, JUNE 6-(DELAYED)-(AP)-JAPANESE AIR STRENGTH WILL BECOME GREATER AS ALLIED FORCES GET CLOSER TO JAPAN PROPER AND THE CHINA COAST, BUT IT NEVER AGAIN WILL BE ABLE TO MATCH AMERICAN PACIFIC AIRPOWER, MAJ. GEN.HUBERT HARMON, COMMANDER OF THE 13TH ARMY AIR FORCE, PREDICTED TODAY.

HARMON WAS TOP AIR FORCE OFFICER DURING ROUGH AND TUMBLE BATTLES WHICH KNOCKED JAPANESE AIR POWER OUT OF THE NORTHERN SOLOMONS, RABAUL AND KAVIENG. HE COMMANDED THE 13 AAF AND THE SOLOMONS AIR FORCE OF ARMY, NAVY, MARINE AND NEW ZEALAND PLANES IN THAT CAMPAIGN.

"THE JAP," HE SAID, "MAY BE IMPROVING HIS PLANES IN SOME RESPECT, BUT HE CAN'T IMPROVE THE PILOTS. OUR KIDS HAVE KNOCKED OFF JAP AIRMEN FIVE TO ONE, AND THAT RATIO IS GOING TO IMPROVE.

"I DON'T BELIEVE THE JAPANESE HAVE THE PRODUCTIVE CAPACITY TO TURN OUT BOMBERS SUFFICIENT TO MENACE THE SOURCES OF THE AIR STRENGTH WE BRING AGAINST HIM. ALL HE HAS BEEN ABLE TO DO FOR A LONG TIME IS TRY TO FIGHT US OFF OVER HIS OWN DROMES. PERSONALLY, I THINK THAT'S ALL HE'S EVER GOING TO BE ABLE TO DO AGAIN."

"THIS IS NOT TO SAY," HARMON ADDED, "WE WON'T SUFFER RAIDS--HEAVY ONES, TOO--BUT I THINK IN THE MAIN THEY WILL ONLY BE HARASSING RAIDS."

IN HIS OPINION THE SUPERIORITY OF UNITED NATIONS AIR POWER COMES FROM THE PILOTS.

"THERE'S NO DOUBT THAT OUR PLANES ARE BETTER, BUT THE REAL SUPERIORITY LIES IN THE MEN AT THE CONTROLS. IF THE JAPS HAD OUR PLANES WE'D STILL SHOOT THEM DOWN THREE AND FOUR TO ONE."

By WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Tuesday, June 13. — (AP) American tanks and infantry smashed through the center of the German line in Normandy yesterday, capturing the Cerisy forest 18 miles inland from the sea, toppling the stronghold of Carentan after a bitter fight, and battling Nazi forces only 14 miles from the prize port of Cherbourg.

Headquarters said that Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel was using from 14 to 15 divisions, 250,000 German troops, against the Allied forces, but Communique No. 14 declared:

"The fusion of our beachheads is now complete and a coastal strip some 60 miles long is firmly in our hands. Its depth is being increased steadily."

NIGHT

A later official statement also said: "The enemy has been unable to build up his attacking forces as rapidly as anticipated.

Carentan's fall put the Americans a third of the way across the Cherbourg peninsula at its narrowest point, and astride roads leading to La Haye Du Puits, Lessay and Coutances on the highway near the western side of the peninsula.

New Landings Reported

(Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by NBC, said two new Allied divisions had landed northeast of Cherbourg, presumably in the 15-mile area between the port and Pinte de Barfleur at the northeast tip of the peninsula. German broadcasts earlier had predicted Allied "leap frog" landings close to Cherbourg).

At the end of the first week of invasion fighting the Allies have taken more than 10,000 prisoners, a statement said. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Allied ground commander, said some regular Japanese soldiers were among the captives and the Axis slain, but did not explain their presence on the front.

The seizure of Cerisy forest put American troops near the mid-Normandy communications hub of St. Lo, and was the deepest inland penetration yet scored by the Allies.

Slight advances were made east of Caen on the British-Canadian sector on the American left flank, headquarters said, and "American troops in the Cherbourg peninsula have made further progress to the north and west" in their effort to seal off an 800-square-mile area including the port of Cherbourg.

Armored Units in Battle

Fierce fighting between British and enemy armored units continued between Tilly-sur-Seulles and Caen, east of the Cerisy forest now occupied by the Americans, the bulletin said.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied invasion commander, made a five-hour inspection tour of the American sector yesterday, accompanied by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of the U. S. Army staff, Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in chief of the U.S. fleet, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, head of the U.S. air forces.

Besides the American "big four," Prime Minister Churchill of Britain also visited the Normandy front 100 miles across the English channel. With him were Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, South African premier, and Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the British Imperial staff.

The greatest daylight heavy bomber fleet ever dispatched from Britain, more than 1,400 U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators, supported the invasion during the day by striking at a broad belt of 16 airfields and six rail bridges in France.

German Build Up Defenses

In the overall situation Rommel's Axis forces were showing signs of weakness, an official statement said. But the Germans were pouring reinforcements into the western coastal areas of the Cherbourg peninsula and putting up stiffer resistance against the American thrusts below Cherbourg, it added.

The U. S. drive on Cherbourg and the west coastal roads was facilitated by the securing of additional road crossing over coastal inundations made by the Germans, the communique said. The seizure of Carentan and its sluice gates also will enable the Americans to drain off large areas flooded by the Germans.

Confirming field dispatches which said the Germans had not yet shown any sign of mounting a major counterattack with reserve forces, headquarters said the enemy "is unable to take his armour out of the battle to reform for a large attack because he apparently lacks infantry to hold the ground."

German accounts of the loss of Carentan said Axis troops had been punished by Allied warships firing offshore, and consequently were withdrawn to escape such broadsides. Carentan is six miles inland.

A bitter ground fight preceded the American entry into Carentan, Berlin said.

Maj. Van Der Heydte, commander of a German parachute unit fighting in the area, broadcast from the front that even clerks, messengers and cooks were pressed into service" against American paratroops who received support from Allied tanks."

Battleships Shell Foe

Headquarters said the U. S. battleships Texas and Nevada were bombarding inland batteries on the peninsula in support of the push toward Cherbourg and the western side of the peninsula. Rocket-firing Allied planes just before noon also attacked enemy coastal batteries near the tip of the peninsula and struck at a variety of Nazi armored targets and motor transport.

The Axis-controlled Paris radio said General Montgomery had 30 of 45 available divisions now in Normandy. "The remaining 15 are waiting in England under the command of American Lt. Gen. George C. Patton, Jr.," the broadcast added. Berlin broadcasts on Sunday said the Allies had from 350,000 to 400,000 troops in France, and said that figure was only a third of the Allied amphibious power which had been based in Britain.

A headquarters announcement disclosed that the British Third infantry division which fought in France and Flanders four years ago now was operating in Normandy. The Third fought all through the previous French campaign and was evacuated at Dunkerque.

At Caen on the east end of the 60-mile-long Normandy invasion line, a Berlin broadcast said: "A new major battle is imminent. Both sides have concentrated powerful tank and motorized artillery formations. Montgomery has tried in the last 24 hours to surround Caen but the town still is in German hands."

Other German accounts said the British had infiltrated German lines on both sides of Caen and had dropped parachutists at the rear of the town, to the south.

A great tank battle also was raging at Tilly-Sur-Seulles with strong indications that British-Canadian formations had been hurled out of that town, 12 miles west of Caen. The Allies were declared however holding commanding high ground around Tilly.

Yanks Gain Eight Miles

The advances by Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's U. S. troops were the biggest of the day. An eight-mile smash captured the Cerisy forest, which is from six to nine miles northeast of St. Lo.

Balleroy forest, between Cerisy forest and Tilly-Sur-Seulles, apparently has been captured by British or Canadian troops on the American left flank.

Northwest of St. Lo and Carentan the Americans were striking westward through a seven-mile-wide gap blasted in German lines in the Ste. Mere Eglise sector. The doughboys were within 12 miles of western coastal roads whose capture would doom Cherbourg and its Nazi defenders.

Farther northwest the Americans were fighting on both sides of Montebourg, 14 miles from Cherbourg on the already-severed Paris highway, and a Vichy broadcast announced that Bradley's men had captured the coastal town of Quineville, linked by road with Montebourg.

German radio broadcasts also said that new sea-borne American troops had been put ashore farther up the coast near St. Vaast la Hougue, 15 miles east of Cherbourg.

More Troops Go Ashore

In addition to the reported new American landings at St. Vaast la Hougue, the Germans also told of Allied reinforcements streaming ashore in the Vire estuary to the southeast, and airborne landings south of the rail junction of Valognes, four miles northwest of Montebourg.

Although the Germans reported that the Americans already were fighting at St. Lo, Allied headquarters termed that a fabrication, put out in advance by Berlin so that the Germans later could claim to have repulsed the initial American assault.

St. Lo, however, was menaced by American troops attacking from Cerisy forest to the northeast and also swinging down from the north along the road below fallen Carentan. St. Lo is a hub for roads branching westward and southwestward to Lessay and Coutances on the peninsula's western coast, and southward to German reserve quarters in Brittany.

Several days ago the Germans said that American parachutists had been dropped in the Lessay and Coutances areas on the west side of the peninsula, and late Berlin reports said the Allies still were utilizing air-borne troops in an effort to disorganize the German rear.

Headquarters described the general situation as "better than satisfactory," for the Allies.

One German report, stressing the danger of an Allied encirclement of Caen at the eastern end of the Allied line, said some British troops were attacking nine miles east of Caen—in the Troarn sector. But the best available information here was that Allied troops were only one or two miles east of the Orne river which connects Caen port with the sea.

Near Road Junction

In the west the Americans who had plunged across the Merderet river beyond Ste. Mere Eglise were within 12 miles of La Haye du Puits, an important junction on the main road on the western side of the peninsula.

The U. S. Ninth Air Force Troop Carrier command announced that its planes this morning dropped more than 23,000 pounds of supplies to the American troops. Escorted by Mustang fighters, all the transport planes returned safely.

Captured Cerisy forest had been used by the enemy as one of the greatest ammunition and fuel dumps in western France. It had been attacked repeatedly by the R.A.F. bomber command and the U. S. Eighth Air Force.

Hitler Reported in West

Unconfirmed underground reports reaching London said Adolf Hitler had arrived in the west, setting up headquarters near much-bombed Le Mans, 100 miles south of embattled Caen.

The wiry Allied ground commander, General Montgomery, said women snipers were among Axis troops which had been killed.

It was likely that the reason the Germans have been slow in bringing up reinforcements is a combination of circumstances, not the least of which is the relentless Allied bombing campaign which has blasted the enemy's railroads and highway choke points.

With every bridgehead between Rouen and Paris either down or damaged as a result of the air attack the Germans have taken to using ferries. R.A.F. rocket planes have attacked such ferries, sinking two and setting afire a ferry dock at Bierville.

One German war correspondent in a broadcast quoted German veterans from Russia, North Africa and Italy as being "unanimous in saying that the vicious battle in Normandy is the grimmest fighting they ever have experienced."

Another German broadcast said "there is no doubt that the form of the American soldier has improved since the first landing in Sicily a year ago."

General Montgomery was high in his praise of the Americans. He said that the beach where the Americans landed east of the Carentan estuary had been manned by a regular German division whcih had been brought up especially to reinforce Nazi coastal units.

General Montgomery, Allied ground commander, told correspondents in France that approximately 7,000 Germans had been captured in the first six days of battle, "and a great many of the enemy has been killed" in addition.

The general also disclosed for the first time that Japanese troops—regular fighting soldiers, not merely military observers—were battling alongside their German Axis partners in Normandy. Small numbers of Japanese already have been taken prisoner and others killed, he said.

American Troops Praised

Montgomery said that "American troops did absolutely magnificently" in the invasion, recovering on the first day from a situation in which they were "not more than 100 yards inland and were hanging on by their eyelids."

At the close of a week's hard invasion fighting the Allies hold a front or more than 60 miles, extending from the Montebourg-Quineville area, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg, to a point several miles east of Caen.

bourg itself from the southeast, and had punched halfway across the jutting cape, cracking the center of the Cherbourg line.

Driving inland to the east, American forces captured the whole Cerisy forest, after advancing eight miles in a day to punch the deepest dent in the Nazi line. The Americans were converging on St. Lo, communications hub in the center of Normandy, less than nine miles away, from the north and east.

The Germans said Carentan, whose floodgates control the main peninsular water defense system, was evacuated in order to continue a stand on ground less exposed to Allied naval guns.

Nazis Expect Full-Fledged Assault.

As for Caen, German broadcasts said a British drive had driven nearly to Troarn, 9 miles due east of that bastion, and that Allied parachutists had landed south of Caen. British troops were driving down west of Caen threatening the other flank. Marshal Erwin Rommel has mounted his fiercest armored counterattacks in this Caen sector, and Berlin said major British forces were concentrating for a full-fledged assault on the town.

The Berlin radio declared meanwhile that Caen, eastern bastion of the sixty-mile-long front, was threatened with encirclement as British troops drove nine miles east of the city. Between Caen and Bayeux, however, the British had apparently been driven out of the town of Tilly-Sur-Seulles, seven miles southeast of Bayeux. Heavy fighting raged there.

A front dispatch today said Caen had not been captured, although a considerable German force has been brought to battle and hit hard. Another story dated Sunday declared Allied troops pressed within a few miles of Caen after blasting the Germans out of the town late Friday. This suggested the Nazis had pulled back at least the main part of their armored force from the city.

The Germans said the Allies had crossed the Orne estuary, ferrying over tanks to threaten Caen, which Marshal Erwin Rommel by his counterattacks had made a testing point. The crossing of the estuary forced the Germans to evacuate two towns before the Allied onslaught was checked near Troarn, nine miles east of Caen, by German account. A breakthrough here would link up infantry with parachute troops which the Nazis said had landed in the Troarn area earlier. Heightening the prospect of encirclement of Caen was the German report of other parachute troop landings south of the town.

Yanks Gain Near Port.

Supreme Headquarters said further gains were made around Montebourg on the southeast route to Cherbourg.

The Americans were cracking the Cherbourg peninsula line in the center, and a Berlin broadcast reported seaborne forces had landed at St. Vaast la Hogue, fifteen miles east of Cherbourg port.

In the widening hole in the center of the beachhead to the southeast Berlin said British formations were concentrating in the Balleroy area, twelve miles inland, flanking Cerisy forest to the east, thus in position to aid the American drive on St. Lo.

In the center of the 50-mile-long front, American troops were advancing toward St. Lo, prize communications hub 20 miles inland.

As the American frontal attack across the Merderet River on Cherbourg Peninsula reached within 12 miles of the west coast roads—whose capture would seal off Cherbourg—Vichy radio said doughboys had pushed into Quineville on the east coast.

This would put Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's flank within 14 miles of Cherbourg on a 4-mile front between Quineville and Monteburg, where street fighting was reported.

The Germans said 300,000 to 400,000 Allied troops already had been poured into the bridgehead and that these represented only a third of the amphibious assault forces poised in Britain to hammer home attacks against the continent.

"The bulk of the huge forces of the 21st Amphibious Army group is still standing by to pounce on some important harbor," the German radio declared.

Orne Estuary Crossed.

The Germans said the Allies had crossed the Orne Estuary, ferrying over tanks and threatening Caen, which Marshal Rommel by his counterattacks had made a testing point.

The crossing of the estuary forced the Germans to evacuate two towns before the Allied onslaught was checked near Troarn, by German account. A break-through here would link up infantry with parachute troops which the Nazis said had landed in the Troarn area earlier.

Heightening the prospect of encirclement of Caen was the German report of other parachute troop landings south of the town.

To the west, British troops also were flanking the town by a thrust through Tilly-sur-Seulles, where armored columns were engaged in fierce combat.

Still farther west American forces were said by Allied headquarters to have smashed with gathering force beyond the flooded Merderet River at several points and into the Forest de Cerisy, a defense point for St. Lo.

Nazis Rushing Up Reserves.

Field Marshal Karl Gerd von Rundstedt was rushing reserves up from as far back as Paris to meet this mounting menace, but his new men and guns, and the roads over which they moved, were under bomb, cannon, rocket and machine-gun fire of an Allied air armada which before noon had flown more sorties than all day yesterday.

Allied warships—among them the United States battleships Texas and Nevada and the cruisers Tuscaloosa and Quincy, and the British battleship Warspite—hurled tons of explosives miles inland on German guns which still were able to subject the invasion beachhead to sporadic fire.

The targets of the warships were principally the Nazis' mobile guns, for by now virtually all fixed position defense batteries were knocked out.

The invasion beachhead was regarded as secure and progress inland along the whole front was viewed officially today with "sober satisfaction."

The fight had reached the phase of exploiting the beachhead success and now, favored by the best weather since D-day, the team of Gens. Montgomery and Bradley was expected to accelerate operations.

Situation at a Glance.

Sector by sector, this was the latest position:

Cherbourg—Whatever the basis of enemy-reported parachutist landings east of the post, the Americans already were only 14 miles away in the outskirts of Montebourg.

Valognes-Carentan—A broadened foothold across the Merderet River brought Gen. Bradley's doughboys within 10 or 12 miles of the Nazis' last road up the west side of the peninsula.

Carentan-Isigny — Less progress was made as the Americans slugged on yard by yard through water up to 7 feet deep.

Lison-Trevieres — American gains rivaling the pace of the Merderet push penetrated the Cerisy Forest some 10 miles from St. Lo.

Both Sides Run in Tanks.

Tilly-sur-Seulles—held firmly as both sides poured armor into a tank battle for control of firm, rolling country 12 miles or more inland.

Caen—British and Canadians took all Marshal Rommel has yet been able to hurl at them, and fought forward doggedly to bypass the town on both sides.

The German radio declared the Allies had thrown 20 regular divisions and four to five airborne divisions into their 55-mile front.

Eisenhower, Marshall, King and Arnold Land on Beachhead for Inspection Tour —Yanks Now 18 Miles Inland.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (A. P.).—American troops have captured Carentan, stronghold at the narrowest neck of the Cherbourg peninsula, field dispatches said today, and others have reached a point eighteen miles inland at the center of the faltering Nazi line in Normandy.

The Allies made gains on all three main sectors with the support of 1,400 American heavy bombers, blasting sixteen airfields and six bridges in the greatest single aerial mission of the war.

Meanwhile it was revealed that the Allied commander in chief, Gen. Eisenhower landed on the beachhead at 11:17 A. M. today and toured the American sector for five hours, accompanied by Admiral King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet; Gen. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, and Gen. Arnold, chief of the United States Air Forces. The party returned to an English coastal town tonight.

Besides occupying the floodgate-control city of Carentan, the Americans were within fourteen miles of Cher-

The Germans asserted their bombers sank a 7,000-ton Allied troop transport in the Bay of the Seine last night and damaged another.

Despite German claims of E-boat attacks on a powerful Allied convoy guarded by cruisers as it was crossing the western part of the Bay of the Seine, SHAEF regarded the enemy's overnight E-boat action as on a diminished scale.

It was pointed out, however, the fight against the torpedo sting of German small boats must be regarded as a continuing battle, since the Germans have hundreds of them and so far have not dared to bring into the invasion zone anything larger than E-boats and destroyers.

Admirals in Conference.

Yesterday Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, head of Allied naval forces, visited the assault area on the British destroyer Kelvin, conferred with Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk and Rear Admiral Sir Philip Vian and declared himself "very satisfied with developments and the progress made."

Headquarters followed up its midnight communique with an official tribute to American progress yesterday on the beachhead's right wing. It called the situation "excellent—could not be better."

On the American's left wing, in the middle of the Allied front, the doughboys liberated Lison, 10 miles from the coast below captured Isigny, and pressed south and east to the forest of Cerisy.

It was indicated the strategy of Marshal Rommel and Marshal von Rundstedt was to check and contain the Allied beachhead, rather than to throw everything into an effort to wipe it out.

Yanks' Stand Gratifying.

Trying hard to hold the railway junction of Valognes, the Germans battered at American airborne troops who had crossed the railway west of Ste. Mere Eglise. Headquarters said it was "very gratifying" that these Americans had stood their ground and that the Germans did not have the force to break their lines.

The 1st and 29th Infantry Divisions and the 32d and 101st Airborne Divisions were in the van of the rolling American offensive under Gen. Bradley.

A senior British staff officer at 21st Army Group headquarters declared the outcome of the battle depended on which side could build up its forces quickest—and the Allies already control the sea, while German communications have taken a beating from Allied planes.

In a message to his 21st Army Group Gen. Montgomery declared: "The Allied armies have secured a good and firm lodgement on the mainland of France. * * * First, we must thank Almighty God for giving us a good beginning; * * * second, we must pay tribute to the Allied navies and air forces for their magnificent support; * * * third, I want to personally congratulate every officer and man on the splendid results of the past four days."

Sixteen German Airfields, Six Bridges Among Targets of Yanks.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Tuesday, June 13.—(AP) Cologne was reported by DNB today to have been bombed just before midnight in an after-dark sequel to daylight invasion attacks Monday in which Allied air fleets flew up to 10,000 sorties against German holdings in France.

A strong force of R.A.F. bombers crossed Dover strait to northern France and flashes of bomb explosions and anti-aircraft fire were seen in the Pas De Calais area by English coastal watchers. For nearly an hour the explosions were heard and later there were blasts west of Boulogne.

Radio Stations Shut Down

Many Nazi-controlled radio stations in France and Germany shut down, suggesting widespread activity by the R.A.F.

A record 1,400 U. S. heavy bombers participated in the daylight attacks, which met rising German air force resistance. Sixteen enemy airfields and six bridges were among the targets.

DNB, reporting the raid on Cologne, Rhineland industrial city of 750,000 which has been bombed 130 times previously, said British planes "flying in several batches" attacked targets in west Germany and "dropped bombs on residential areas of Cologne."

A number of the bombers were declared by DNB destroyed by Nazi night fighters and by anti-aircraft guns.

Fierce Resistance Offered

During the day German fighters offered their fiercest aerial resistance since the invasion began but still failed to throw great numbers into the battle, possibly because of the terrific beating the Allies have given their bases immediately behind the front lines.

Incomplete reports on today's operations showed 53 German planes destroyed in the air and 17 on the ground. Allied losses were placed at seven bombers, one medium bomber and 31 fighters, four pilots of which were safe.

The American Fortresses and Liberators loosed the greater part of their bomb loads on 16 airfields in a belt from Lille to Dreux, about 45 miles west of Paris, and on half a dozen bridges in the Paris and St. Nazaire areas.

Medium bombers, fighter bombers and fighters ripped targets on the tip of the Cherbourg peninsula, over the battle area and southeast to Juvisy, just south of Paris.

Many of the medium and fighter bombers concentrated on the rail system and highways ringing the base of the Cherbourg peninsula and extending part way across the base of the Brest peninsula.

The heavyweights, in the greatest force ever sent on a single mission, lost seven planes to flak while their fighter escort shot 17 of the enemy from the sky at a cost of 14 fighters.

The Supreme command threw every class of bomber and fighter into close support of the expanding Normandy beachhead, and the Germans, putting up their stiffest opposition since the channel crossing, were unable to check this whirlwind of Allied aerial might.

U. S. Fortresses and Liberators scourged air fields from St. Nazaire to Lyon to which the Germans had been shuttling their lean air force, and one pilot declared that "every airfield within a radius of 50 miles of our target seemed to be under attack."

Other heavyweights planted explosives on six bridges and other installations, while clouds of lighter bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters filled the skies over northern France, some engaging in dogfights with as many as 20 enemy planes.

Air fields pounded were at Lille-Nord, Montdidier, Evreux-Fauville, Dreux, Vitry-En-Artois and Bauvais-Tille, all landing fields the Germans need for any sort of serious defense against the Allies.

Record U. S. Bomber Force Strikes Back of German Line

Sixteen Airfields and 6 Bridges Hit by 1400 Fortresses and Liberators—Luftwaffe Springs Into Action.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (A. P.).—More than 1,400 Flying Fortresses and Liberators—the greatest number ever dispatched on a single mission—struck at sixteen German airfields and six bridges in France today.

Only seven bombers and fourteen fighters were reported missing from the mission, on which seventeen enemy aircraft were shot down by the fighters.

The armada sailed out during a day in which the Allied air forces were dealing the heaviest blows since D day with sorties approaching 10,000.

The Fortresses and Liberators were escorted by thick swarms of Lightnings, Thunderbolts and Mustangs which strafed and bombed eleven locomotives, sixty-three railway cars, 102 trucks and eleven other vehicles, three anti-aircraft towers and several freight yards and railroad junctions.

On the other hand, the German Air Force also came powerfully into action, and tonight headquarters of the Eighth United States Air Force announced that American pilots over France encountered today the strongest resistance since the invasion began. However the statement added the pilots succeeded for the most part in carrying out their dive-bombing and strafing missions behind the German lines.

Flying in fine weather, the Allied Air Forces by noon had run up more sorties than all day yesterday—when 7,000 planes were out. After a night in which the Royal Air Force pounded four key railroad centers in France and went to Berlin, the Allied heavies, mediums, lights, fighter-bombers and fighters today raced over the battle lines and far into France, bombing and strafing.

Then a force of 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators, with swarming hundreds of escorting fighters, swept in upon some of the air bases into which the Germans were belatedly shuttling part of their lean air force. The American bombed the fields at Lille-Nord, Montdidier, Evreux-Fauville, Dreuk, Vitry-en-Artois and Beauvais-Tille, and also battered bridges while the escorting fighters strafed small targets.

A significant new point in the support campaign became apparent. Squadrons of R. A. F. fighters were attacking specific targets in rapid-fire order on calls from ground units—which meant that newly established air bases on French soil were clicking.

Besides the speedy knockout of particular objectives immediately in front of the troops, the campaign was proceding along two main lines—disruption of transport lines within 100 miles of the battleline over which Marshal Erwin Rommel is trying to bring up his tactical reserves and the bombardment of rail centers beyond the 100-mile radius through which the Germans might draw on strategic reserves in southern France.

Every bridge between Rouen and Paris is either down or damaged as a result of the Allied aerial attack, and the Germans are resorting to the use of ferries. Today R. A. F. rocket planes attacked these, and sank two ferry boats and set the ferry slips on fire at Bierville.

A high R. A. F. officer disclosed today that Allied Air Forces began clearing the way for the western front on March 7, by attacking the railroad bridges. In the next three months fifty out of the eighty-two railroad bridges leading to the battle area were destroyed, eight others were made unserviceable and seventeen were heavily damaged. By D day the Germans were unable to move troops on any railway west of Paris toward the battle zone.

German Air Force in Action.

The German Air Force was responding with heightening strength. About 100 enemy planes were over the battle area last night and American Thunderbolt fighter-bomber pilots returning from an early morning foray reported opposition "the roughest yet."

The Thunderbolts were jumped by about fifty German fighters, but the Allied pilots said enemy flak still was the biggest hazard.

The Germans also claimed to have sunk one small troop transport in the Seine Bay last night.

American Marauders and Havocs bombed railroad and highway bridge targets at Aunay Sur Odon, southwest of Caen, La Haye Du Puits, west of Carentan, and Conde Sur Noireau, south of Caen, without loss, and panicked concentration of troops at Failaise, southeast of Caen, flying so low that a sergeant gunner reported, "you could pick out German lieutenants from sergeants and shoot the lieutenants."

Before breakfast time railroad yards, German road convoys and a seaplane base near Caudebec had been attacked by R. A. F. mediums.

The superiority of American fighter pilots over the Germans was illustrated sharply when a squadron of twelve Thunderbolts broke up an attack of twenty ME 109's and shot down ten of them in twenty minutes at a cost of one Thunderbolt. Lieut. Charles Carter of Norfolk, Va., and Lieut. Charles Ray of Bement, Ill., shot down two Germans each.

"Our pilots and our airplanes are better," Lieut. Carter said. "we can definitely outrun and outdive them. Besides, the Germans are a little yellow. Once you start to hit them, they give up and bail out."

Lieut. Carter was on his forty-first mission and it was the first time he had seen a German plane.

Strike from Russia.

Across Europe United States heavy bombers took off from new bases in Russia and bombed Balkan air fields of the Axis yesterday during their return trip to the Italian bases they left on June 2.

Both on the outbound trail-blazing shuttle trip to Russia and on the homeward journey the American heavy bombers were personally commanded by Lieut.-Gen. Ira C. Eaker, chief of the Allied Mediterranean Air Force.

"Every inch" of the enemy positions along the fifty-mile-long Normandy battlefront was declared scourged by yesterday's blows.

A force of 1,000 United States heavy bombers spearheaded yesterday's aerial operations in support of the Normandy beachheads. These Flying Fortresses and Liberators smashed at nine enemy airfields, eight bridges, a German Army headquarters and other objectives in an area stretching from the beachhead to Paris and as far north as the Pas de Calais area.

Allied aerial losses over France yesterday were twenty-six planes, most of them victims of German anti-aircraft guns. In all operations, a total of nine German planes were reported knocked down—five of them by the Eighth Air Force.

At 9 a.m. the Paris radio left the air in the middle of its news broadcast, indicating that area again was under attack.

Mosquitos Attack Berlin.

RAF bombers, in their seventh straight night of invasion-supporting raids, ranged over France last night all the way from the Paris area to the west coast port of Nantes.

They bombed the rail junctions at Evreux, Nantes, Tours and Massy-Palaiseau. Nantes and Tours, respectively 225 and 130 miles southwest of Paris, are junctions through which Rommel might receive reinforcements from the German Army group in the south of France. The Evreux and Massy-Palaiseau junctions are potential channels for German reinforcements to the area of heavy fighting around Caen. Evreux is only 70 miles east of Caen.

The blow against Berlin was delivered by twin-engined Mosquitos which pounded the German capital with 4,000-pound bombs.

Across Europe United States heavy bombers took off from new bases in Russia and bombed Balkan airfields of the Axis yesterday during their return trip to the Italian bases they left on June 2.

Both on the outbound trail-blazing shuttle trip to Russia and on the homeward journey the American heavy bombers were personally commanded by Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, chief of the Allied Mediterranean Air Force.

Axis Airfields Smashed.

"Every inch" of the enemy positions along the 50-mile-long Normandy battle front was declared scourged by yesterday's blows. These attacks, plus flight from Russia, provided the final dramatic touch to a week end which saw the Allies give further demonstrations of their mastery of the air over Europe.

A force of 1,000 United States heavy bombers spearheaded yesterday's aerial operations in support of the Normandy beachheads. These Flying Fortresses and Liberators smashed at nine enemy airfields, eight bridges, a German Army headquarters and other objectives in an area stretching from the beachhead to Paris and as far north as the Pas-de-Calais area.

Allied aerial losses over France yesterday were 26 planes, most of them victims of Geran antiaircraft guns. In all operations a total of nine German planes were reported knocked down—five of them by the 8th Air Force.

The RAF lost 20 heavy bombers during attacks Saturday night on French rail yards near Paris and Orleans while six German night fighters were brought down. A Mosquito raid on Berlin Saturday night and mine-laying operations cost two planes. Patrolling Allied fighters meanwhile shot down 10 Junkers 88s.

Oil Storage Tanks Bombed.

In other operations from Italian bases yesterday, Liberators bombed oil storage facilities at the Romanian Black Sea port of Constanta and Giurgiu on the Danube River south of Bucharest. Liberators and Fortresses also bombed rail yards and oil installations at Smederovo in Yugoslavia.

Allied headquarters in Italy named only the Focsa[illegible] dromes near Galati, Romania, as the targets of the bombers flying back to Italy from Russia.

However a communique from the eastern command, United States Strategic Air Forces in Russia, announced that more than 1,000 American planes, based in Russia and Italy and supported by Russian fighters teamed up to blast targets at Constanta and Giurgiu in Romania and Smederovo in Yugoslavia.

This suggested the possibility that planes from Russia crossed with those from Italian bases continuing on to Russia.

French Bridges Gone, Nazi Ferries Bombed

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (AP)—Every bridge between Rouen and Paris is either down or damaged as a result of air attack, and the Germans are resorting to the use of ferries.

Today RAF rocket planes attacked these and sank two ferry boats and set the ferry docks on fire at Bierville.

A high RAF officer disclosed that Allied air forces began clearing the way for the Western Front on March 7 by attacking railroad bridges. In the three-month period, 50 out of the 82 railroad bridges leading to the battle area were destroyed, eight others were made unserviceable and 17 were heavily damaged.

By D-day the Germans were unable to move troops on any railway west of Paris toward the battle zone.

General Wood Takes Post Of Demoted Air Officer

9th Service Command Chief Rose From Ranks

LONDON, June 12 (AP).—Brigadier General Myron R. Wood, fifty-one years old, is commander of the 9th Air Force Service Command, it was announced today. He succeeds former Major General Henry J. F. Miller, who was reduced to the rank of lieutenant colonel and sent back to the United States for loose talk about the Allied invasion date at a London party.

Lieutenant General Lewis H. Brereton, commander of the 9th Air Force, said Wood, who rose through the ranks, had been head of the Service Command since before D Day.

Before joining the 9th in his present post Wood was director of administrative services for the Air Service Command of the United States Strategic Air Force in Europe. He was assigned as chief of supply for the 9th Air Force shortly after it arrived in England.

Wood, a native of Colorado, enlisted as a private in 1918 and in the same year won a commission as second lieutenant and became a pilot. Between the wars he served in administrative command positions. At one time he was aircraft procurement chief in the office of the Under Secretary of War.

Gen. Wood Heads Ninth Air Service

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (A. P.).—Brig.-Gen. Myron R. Wood, 51 years old, was announced today as the commander of the Ninth Air Force Service Command.

Gen. Wood enlisted as a private in January, 1918.

PILOT MISSING ONLY SEVEN HOURS

At a Fighter Base in England, June 12 (A. P.).—After crash-landing near the British beachhead in France because of engine trouble yesterday, a Thunderbolt pilot from Sewickley, Pa., "hitched" a plane ride and got back to his base in seven hours—in time not to miss a single meal.

Lieut. Edward Gross rode back in style with an R. A. F. air marshal, a British Army brigadier and two American lieutenant-colonels, in a pair of unarmed C-47 transports, escorted by sixteen Mustangs and Spitfires. They put him down at his base right at lunch time, and just in time to intercept a letter from the adjutant to his parents to tell them he was "missing in action."

Two Yanks Kill 200 Germans In One Day

A United States Fighter Base, England, June 12 (AP)—Lieut. Maurice Martin, Bluefield, W. Va., and his wing mate estimated they killed 200 Nazis in a bombing and strafing attack on a German column yesterday on a road south of Baeus.

Lieutenant Martin and Lieut. E. W. Sanders, of Houston, Texas, flying Thunderbolts, dropped two 500-pound bombs in front of the column and then two in the rear, trapping the enemy soldiers between the two craters.

"They tried to run for it, but couldn't get out," said Sanders. "We flew up and down over them, strafing with our machine guns. Very few got out alive."

American ground [illegible]

Almost Across Peninsula

Hurling their massive shells with deadly accuracy, the battleships gave the German mobile batteries inland a rough day. The two ships can fire almost across the peninsula.

The Allied navies have been carrying out the most persistent and heaviest bombarment in naval history the past two days, providing heavy-weapons coverage for the ground forces comparable to coverage by Allied aircraft.

The 10,000-ton British cruiser Belfast supported the inland advance of the Third Canadian Division on the third day of the invasion, while two other cruisers are supporting the 50th British Division.

Rodney, Ramillies Aid British

At the same time the 33,900-ton battleship Rodney and the 29,150-ton battleship Ramillies of the British fleet did notable work in aiding the Third British Division hold off a determined German ground counterattack. They were assisted by the British cruisers Frobisher and Sirus, and the Polish cruiser Dragon.

The firepower of a heavy destroyer with eight 4.7-inch guns and other armament is equivalent to a regiment's field artillery; a full salvo from a 6-inch-gun cruiser is equivalent to medium regiment artillery, and there is no land equivalent to the firepower of an 8-inch-gun cruiser or battleship.

Battleships are capable of giving effective support to the army at ranges up to approximately 17 miles.

Berlin Blames Nazi Retreats On Guns of Allied Warships

14-Inch Guns Of Battleships Engage German Field Pieces

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Tuesday, June 13 (AP)—The twenty 14-inch guns of the United States Battleships Texas and Nevada engaged German field batteries in Normandy yesterday in one of the unique duels of this war.

The 27,000-ton Texas and the 29,000-ton Nevada, the latter returning from the wreckage of Pearl Harbor to fight, moved in support of American air-borne troops on the Cherbourg peninsula between Ste. Mere Eglise and Quineville on the extreme west flank of the American ground [illegible]

LONDON, June 12 — (AP) The Germans admitted loss of Carentan today, and said great Allied drives were impending on both ends of the Normandy front with possibly leap-frog landings planned to hasten the choking off of the port of Cherbourg.

Berlin blamed Nazi retreats chiefly on the constant hail of shells from giant guns of Allied warships," and gloomily forecast there would be "an armada of bombers to support Anglo-American land forces when the fighting moves farther inland."

Claim Supply Ship Waiting

The enemy broadcasts said the real weight of Allied power would be felt only after a port like Cherbourg has been captured, for "giant Allied supply ships still are waiting at sea for capture of a port which would permit landing of men and material."

German reports drew this picture of the battlefront:

West—new seaborne landings at the Vire river mouth and near St. Vaast La Hougue, due east of Cherbourg, and airborne landings south of Valognes. Artillery duels are increasing.

To hasten this drive on Cherbourg, said the commentator Capt. Ludwig Sertorious, the Allies might "attempt leap-frog landings in the rear of the Germans' Montebourg-Quineville positions to open yet another road for attack on Cherbourg."

Center—the main weight of the Allied attack shifted to the immediate vicinity of St. Lo, upon which American and British armies were advancing with the aim of linking up.

New Battle Imminent

East—"a new major battle is imminent on the blood-drenched battlefield of Caen. Both sides have concentrated powerful tank and motorized artillery formations. (Gen. Sir Bernard L.) Montgomery has tried in the last 24 hours to surround Caen, but the town still is in German hands." British troops have pushed nearly nine miles east of Caen, and airborne troops were landed south of Caen, Berlin said.

From the German radio commentators came such expressions as these:

"This campaign is as full of surprises as the whole of this war has been."

"Field Marshals Rommel and von Runstedt apparently are trying to lure the Allies away from the covering screen of heavy naval guns."

Warship fire has made it difficult "to bring up reinforcements and supplies. German tank columns also have been knocked out by naval batteries."

Claim Battle Vicious

"German officers and soldiers, veterans from Russia, North Africa, and Italy, are unanimous in saying the vicious battle in Normandy is the grimmest fighting they've experienced in this war. Four-engined bombers hover all day over the battlefield and plaster German communication lines with heavy bombs."

"At times the German command has been forced to stop the flow of reinforcements and supplies to the front line in daylight and wait until there is a lull in Allied air activity at night."

"Fighting in the Carentan sector is in a critical phase and even German officers are fighting side by side with privates. Clerks, messengers and cooks also are taking part in fighting against American paratroops who are receiving support from Allied tanks."

And the veteran Transocean Correspondent Gunther Weber declared "there's no doubt that the form of the American soldier has improved since the first landing in Sicily a year ago. And the British soldier has put aside his principal of safety first. He has been trained to exploit the weak spot in the enemy's positions by a quick punch."

7,000 PRISONERS TAKEN IN FRANCE

Some Japanese Captured Montgomery Reports; Many Nazis Killed.

WITH ALLIED TROOPS IN FRANCE, June 11—(Delayed)—(AP) Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery announced tonight that approximately 7,000 prisoners have been captured in the battle in France, including some Japanese.

"A great many of the enemy have been killed," Gen. Montgomery added at a press conference.

Jap Prisoners Included

The Japanese—regular soldiers, not merely observers—were fighting alongside their Axis partners, Montgomery said, and small numbers of them have already been taken prisoner and others killed.

Outspokenly pleased with the feats of American troops, Montgomery said the "beach where the landing of the Americans took place east of the Carentan estuary was found being defended by a German division which was not a coastal division. It was a very good division and fought very well. German prisoners said the division had just been brought up from behind to thicken the crust of the coastal defenses and it actually was in the process of carrying out exercises when the American attacked.

There was very heavy fighting on that American beach all D-day, swaying back and forth, and by the end of the day the Americans were not more than 100 yards inland and were hanging on by their eyelids.

"You can imagine Americans doing that. It was very unpleasant, very tricky. There is no doubt about it that the American troops did absolutely magnificently in recovering from that very unpleasant situation, and today these same troops are miles inland—very good, very good indeed."

3 Things Helped

Montgomery said the situation was retrieved by three things:

"First, by the gallantry of the American soldier who is a very brave man.

"Second, by the grand supporting fire given from the sea and by the Allied navy.

"And third, by the support given from the air by the fighter-bombers who knew the situation and came down low to shoot up Germans at close range.

"The retrieving of that situation is probably one of the finest things done in this operation—very fine, very fine indeed. Wonderful!"

Wearing a gray turtle-neck sweater, fawn-colored corduroy trousers and his famous black tank corps beret, the Allied ground force chief spoke to a group of some 40 frontline correspondents for more than an hour while Allied warplanes roared overhead and the guns of battle thundered across the gently rolling Normandy hills in the distance.

"The beaches are now behind us," he said. "The violence, power and speed of our initial assault carried us over the beaches and inland very quickly.

"That was my initial instruction to the senior officers. I said that every man must be imbued with one idea to penetrate quickly and deeply into enemy country and peg out claims inland. And that was done.

"The conception that you land on the beaches and get a little bridgehead and then dig in—that is no good. You must penetrate quickly and deeply.

Suffered Losses

"We have suffered losses because the Germans in pillboxes remained behind our lines. Also there were a considerable number of German snipers. All that had to be cleaned up.

"There is still one pocket of Germans holding out, but I think they are leaving at the moment."

Montgomery said the snipers included women—who had been killed in the act of shooting at Allied troops.

"Perhaps they are German women who have been brought over here," he said.

The wiry, twinkling-eyed commander said he was "very pleased and quite happy with the progress so far.

"Our soldiers, American and British, are in tremendous form," he declared. "Their tails are very high up in the air. They are full of beans. And they have already got the measure of the enemy."

Churchill, Eisenhower Tour Front in France

Army, Navy Chiefs Accompany Leaders on Visit to Battle Areas.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 12.—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill set foot on French soil for the first time since 1940 today and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in chief of the Allied invasion forces, led a party of top U. S. military and naval commanders on a tour of the American-held section of the Normandy battlefront.

Britain's Prime Minister was accompanied by Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, premier of South Africa, and Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial general staff.

Accompanied By Officials

In General Eisenhower's party were Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. army chief of staff; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, American air chief; Admiral Ernest King, commander in chief of the U. S. Fleet; Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of American ground forces in France; and Rear Admirals Alan G. Kirk and John Leslie Hall, commanders of naval task forces in the invasion.

On his visit today Churchill followed liberating armies. Four years ago he made a dramatic flight to a France collapsing under blows of a victorious German army to plead with French leaders to carry on the fight.

Churchill and his companions crossed the channel today on the destroyer H.M.S. Kelvin and while they were aboard the ship joined in bombarding a German position on the northeastern Normandy flank.

Arriving on the beaches shortly before noon, they spent three hours ashore; lunched with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander in chief of Allied ground forces in France; visited army headquarters; watched troops and supplies land, and then steamed through the battle fleet which was bombarding the shore.

Aerial Dogfight Witnessed

During the day Churchill witnessed an aerial dogfight and saw a German raider shot down.

In visiting the beachhead the persistent Churchill had his own way. Admiral Sir Bertram H. Ramsey, naval commander in chief, disclosed that the Prime Minister had wanted to go along on D-day, and "it took a great deal of persuasion" to leave him behind.

In Commons last week the Prime Minister refused to give assurance that he would not visit Normandy.

Churchill's last visit to France was on June 13, 1940. This was his ninth overseas trip since he became Prime Minister.

Eisenhower, Military Leaders Tour Front

By EDWARD V. ROBERTS

[American War Correspondent]

Allied Supreme Headquarters, June 12 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower visited the beachhead of his Allied forces in Normandy today, including the shattered town of Isigny, which the Americans had taken two days before.

With Gen. George C. Marshall, United States chief of staff; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, air force chieftain, and Admiral Ernest J. King, commanding the United States fleet, Eisenhower spent five hours touring American sectors of the front.

He talked with Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commanding American field forces; Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk and Rear Admiral John Leslie Hall, commanding American naval forces, and other American military and naval leaders.

Tour In Subchaser

The general and his party were transferred from his distroyer to a submarine chaser in which they toured the shore area for 45 minutes, inspecting installations—many of them secret.

Admiral Kirk joined us aboard the subchaser and hailed an amphibious duck driven by a Corporal Grady E. Godfrey, La Grange, Ga. In this craft Eisenhower and his party went ashore near St. Laurent.

In three minutes the duck was up the beach, bogged down in soft sand. Three soldiers in a tractor appeared to pull us out. General Eisenhower suggested that the party get some French soil on their shoes so everybody left the duck and walked up a steel carpet road.

Met By General Bradley

Admiral King lingered behind to thank Godfrey personally for the lift and Eisenhower wished him good luck.

As we left the beach, General Bradley met the group and greetings were exchanged.

The group stood in a close knot talking. Frequently the sound of their talk was drowned by explosions, including those of enemy mines in the vicinity. Robin Duff, British broadcasting correspondent who joined us on the beach, said the area was riddled with mines and that engineers had been working for days to clear them out.

At 11.30 A. M. a command car convoy took Eisenhower and his party to a United States headquarters. Arnold bounded into the front seat of the first car and then, turning laughingly to Eisenhower, apologized.

Inspects Hospital Planes

A five-minute ride brought us to one of the American beachhead airfields, where big transports filled with wounded were taking off. Eisenhower's party went into a C-47 hospital plane which was about to take off and talked briefly with the wounded. I saw one boy with a bandaged arm hoist himself up on a stretcher and talk earnestly with General Marshall.

Despite the dust French civilians came out of the wreckage of their little stone houses to wave and shout: "Good day!"

Over the caravan a group of British Spitfire fighter planes roared in circles in the clear sky.

Luncheon At Headquarters

We entered headquarters through a farm yard and an apple orchard in full bloom. General Bradley, with a strip of adhesive tape across his nose and looking professional behind his steel-rimmed spectacles, briefed the entire party upon the progress of today's operations and the American leaders went out of his tent smiling. At headquarters the rumble of guns was clear, distant but constant.

After beans and biscuits for luncheon, Bradley conducted the supreme commander and his party through some captured German positions. There were some Nazi dugouts with clothing still in them, and a big-gun emplacement that drew Eisenhower's close attention.

DE GAULLE TO VISIT FRANCE PRIOR TO WASHINGTON TRIP

LONDON, June 12 — (AP) Gen. Charles de Gaulle is expected to visit France in an effort to obtain evidence of popular backing for his National Liberation committee before leaving for Washington to continue his fight for full recognition, it was reported today.

French quarters here said de Gaulle, still dissatisfied with his relations with the British and American governments, was willing to gamble on a popular demonstration and the qualities of his fighting French troops—if and when used—to strengthen his hand.

One of these men said Allied plans for administering civil affairs in liberated parts of France were "AMGOT under another name" and took the position it would mean dealing with "a whole series of Darlans" with results dangerous to the military.

A report from Spain said the Nazis were adding rigid food control to repressive measures against occupied France which were climaxed yesterday when Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudlof Gerd von Rundstedt decreed that all French caught fighting the Germans behind the lines would be summarily shot.

A dispatch from the French-Spanish border said the Nazis ordered Vichy authorities yesterday to cease sending supplies to civilians by railroad and motor vehicle, leaving them to fall back on emergency stocks which in most parts of France are enough for only a week.

Border reports from Paris claimed the city was close to panic. Black market food prices, which fell with the first news of invasion, reportedly were soaring four times beyond pre-invasion levels.

They asserted the Nazis had refused a Vichy request to keep food trains running to Paris—which had enough supplies for only several days.

The Vichy radio did not go this far. It said all motor traffic except for physicians and food trucks, was suspended in the Haute Loire, Allier and Puy De Dome districts, and that curfew was extended at Limoges, where patriots were reported yesterday to have seized strategic centers.

Few Allied Dead in Normandy

Millions of Poppies Grow There but Graves of Flanders Fields Are Lacking.

By ROGER GREENE.

With the Allied armies in France, June 10 (Delayed) (A. P.).—In Normandy the poppies blow—millions upon millions of them. But, unlike those of Flanders Fields, immortalized in John McCrae's poem, the poppies here in Normandy mercifully conceal few Allied dead.

On this the fifth day of battle we are pushing inland by sheer weight of massed fire power, by land and air, and the hand-to-hand fighting that marked the 1914-18 conflict is comparatively rare today.

We have left the chateau of our kindly hostess, Madame la Vicomtesse, whose eyes were bright with tears as she waved us goodby. Now we are billeted in a cathedral town, with press quarters set up in the former headquarters of a German commandant. Here again signs of the hasty German departure are evident. Bureau drawers are ripped out and left half full. Food and supplies are on the kitchen shelves, and half-empty wine glasses are still on the dining table. Tonight I am sleeping in the German commandant's soft, big double bed.

I can never forget the look of utter disbelief in the eyes of 11-year-old Charlot, a French boy, when I gave him 100 francs for running an errand. In the last four years all he had known were kicks and jeers and the barked commands of the German officers billeted on the farm.

"For me?" he said, obviously suspecting some cruel joke.

"For you, Charlie," I said.

He gave me a long, slow look, dead serious, and then grinned and fled.

Then there was the French girl, about 17, pretty, raven-haired and red-eyed from weeping. I was looking for a table for my typewriter when I came across her in a storeroom. She was lying against a crumpled up mattress, staring at a photograph, with tears streaming down her cheeks.

Quickly she thrust the photograph out of sight, but not before I caught a glimpse of it—a bullet-headed young German officer with cold, imperious eyes and a sword slash across the mouth. I saw his body an hour later, half tumbled out of a shell-wrecked car along the road.

He expressed belief that along the center of the French front the Germans had no immediate prospect of throwing in a major tank counterattack because of the present shortage of sufficient infantry to hold the ground evacuated by an armored force in lunging forward.

He expressed the opinion that the Germans are disorganized in their rear, mainly along the center of the front, and "pretty tidy" up at the front, but nevertheless unable to extract sufficient forces to mount a comprehensive counterattack. Moreover, their bridges all along the Seine river have been destroyed by Allied bombing and they are unable to bring up reinforcements from the east except by a long detour around Paris.

Part of Nazi Forces Believed Pulled Back In Battle for Caen

Allied Troops Press Forward to Within Few Miles of City

BY ROGER GREENE,
Associated Press War Correspondent.

WITH ALLIED FORCES IN FRANCE, June 11 (Delayed).—Allied troops in this blazing northern sector pressed forward to within a few miles of Caen today after blasting the Germans out of town late yesterday.

240,000 Germans In Battle

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

Twenty-first Army Group Headquarters, June 12 (AP)—German forces now fighting in France were estimated by a senior British staff officer tonight to total 240,000.

[The Nazi command yesterday declared that the Allies had 350,000 to 400,000 troops engaged in the invasion battle.]

The staff officer said every development of the battle indicated that failure to halt or delay the Allies at length along the beach line had forced the Nazis to expend ahead of time and in scattered fashion the force which, properly husbanded and marshalled, might have been used by now in a tremendous counterattack, of which there is as yet no sign.

(This news dispatch did not enlarge on this point. London dispatches said there was no suggestion there that Caen was yet in Allied hands, but the field report was taken as indicating the heightening Allied flanking threat had prompted the Germans to pull back at least the main body of their armored force from the stronghold.

(A dispatch from Ross Munro, Canadian press correspondent with troops in the Caen sector dated June 12 said "although Caen is not captured yet a considerable German force has been brought to battle and hit hard.")

Nazis Trying to Rush Reserves.

Marshal von Runstedt is feverishly attempting to rush forward reserves from as far distant as Paris to combat the deepening Allied beachhead, it was reported at advanced Allied field headquarters.

Vast armadas of Allied warplanes churned the roads, railways and bridges into chaotic ruins, however, and along one road a column of German transport being rushed into the area was able to move only 15 miles in 4 hours.

A powerful encircling sweep is developing around Caen with Allied columns driving ahead from both flanks.

The atmosphere at headquarters was one of mounting confidence.

Von Rundstedt's failure to uncork a smashing counterblow against a thinly held Allied beachhead in the first few days was believed here to have been a result of his being completely outsmarted by Gen. Eisenhower's strategy.

The whole German defense structure apparently was based on the conviction that the Allied would have to attempt to capture a big port such as Cherbourg or Le Havre.

Instead, the Allies landed at a comparatively isolated area and pushed supplies through shallow-draft beaches, leaving Von Rundstedt sitting tight in his powerfully defended ports. Now the great Allied air fleets are methodically paralyzing Nazi communications.

French Underground Reported Sabotaging Nazi Communications

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 12.—Advices from Spain today said authority in Southern France is disintegrating, except where it is close to German protection, and that French underground forces are cutting communications between enemy garrisons.

Meanwhile, in the harshest of a series of German steps aimed at subduing the increasing resistance behind Nazi lines, Field Marshal Gen. Karl Gerd von Rundstedt proclaimed last night that Frenchmen resisting the Germans would be executed when captured.

The German commander in France, in a decree broadcast by the Paris radio, based his action on "Article 10 of the French-German Armistice Convention (of 1940) providing that French citizens who, after conclusion of this convention, are fighting against the German Reich will be treated by German troops as Franc Tireurs (Partisans)."

Call for Resistance.

French resistance leaders, in a broadcast last night from the United Nations radio at Algiers, directed "all Frenchmen and women" to consider themselves mobilized to hamper the Germans by every means possible and to give all possible aid to the Allies.

It was disclosed that Gen. Charles de Gaulle's official radio spokesman in London has visited the liberated town of Bayeux in Normandy and addressed several thousand Frenchmen in the market square.

Earlier reports from Spain said French resistance groups had occupied strategic centers in Toulouse, Limoges and Tarbes in southern France but these were questioned in part by Frenchmen at the Spanish border. The latter said liberation of Limgoes and Periguex by guerrillas was quite likely and that seizure of Tarbes was possible, but that Toulouse remained a strong German garrison city and it was unlikely the French would challenge the Nazis there.

Spanish advices agreed, however, that everywhere in southern France where the Germans entrusted the control to Vichy authorities and collaborationist military formations uprisings either had taken place, were occurring or imminent, or that the French collaborationists simply had fled.

Little Mass Fighting.

All reports agreed there was little mass fighting. Guerrilla units and memerbs of the underground were said to be avoiding direct clashes with German strongholds.

Fighting in a number of towns and cities was expected when the French feel sufficiently strong to challenge the local German or Vichy authorities, it was said.

The cities of Vichy, Lyon and Grenoble were pictured as islands of collaborationist strength. Elsewhere in Southern France there were whole departments left without prefects, mayors and militia leaders, travelers arirving at the Spanish border said.

Montgomery Avenges Old Surrender Demand

Turns Tables on Nazi Major Who Fought at Alamein

GENERAL MONTGOMERY'S COMMAND POST, June 12 (AP).—General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery has gained revenge for surrender demands which Major Van Der Heydte, a German parachute commander, made on an 8th Army unit less than two months before the 8th Army's desert victory at Alamein. Americans fighting under the general's command turned the tables for him.

Yesterday, fighting toward an enemy bulwark which had been the scene of as bitter battling as any on the Cherbourg Peninsula, the Americans sent in a captured German prisoner waving a white flag. He carried this ultimatum: "Surrender or withdraw immediately, or we level your position with the full weight of our entire air force."

The German commander—he was Major Van Der Heydte, but that name meant nothing to the Americans—thought it over for a few hours, and then, under cover of night, withdrew his parachute troops.

Nazi Women Snipers Captured In Normandy

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (AP)—A small number of women fighting on the side of the Germans, mostly as snipers, have been captured and some were killed and wounded in the Normandy fighting, field dispatches said today.

Some of these women were identified as Germans, while others were camp followers of the Nazi defense forces in France.

Special prison camps have been prepared in Britain for these women, while others who were wounded are in Allied military hospitals.

Most of these women were reported as not being in uniform.

The London press said German women were manning some of the coastal guns in France.

British Third Infantry Fights In France Again

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (AP)—The British Third Infantry Division, which fought in France and Flanders under General Sir Bernard Montgomery in 1940, is part of the Allied force in Normandy, it was announced today.

It fought all through the French campaign in the first months of the war and came off the beaches at Dunkerque five days before the last troops were withdrawn.

Censors in Normandy Cut Less Than 1 P. C.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expenditionary Force, June 12 (A. P.).—The Allied censors here scrutinized 2,500,000 words in the first five days of the invasion. An official estimated that they deleted an average of less than one word from every hundred.

They also viewed 35,000 still pictures and 106,000 feet of movie film.

Sergeant's Dream Of Major's Ire Comes True

By the Associated Press.

A UNITED STATES 9th AIR FORCE BASE IN ENGLAND, June 12.—Harold McGrath, Manchester, N. Y., top sergeant of a 9th Air Force troop carrier squadron, saw his commanding officer shot down over the sea in the initial phase of the Normandy landings, so on returning here he reported the officer, Maj. Kenneth L. Glassburn, Turlock, Calif., "missing in action."

That night Sergt. McGrath dreamed the major had returned from the dead to read the riot act to him.

The next morning, as he was telling the adjutant of his nightmare, the telephone rang.

Sure enough, it was Maj. Glassburn, who had been rescued from a dinghy in the Channel and wanted to ask Sergt. McGrath how that report started about his being missing in action.

Correspondent Fished Out Of Chilly Channel

At a British Port, June 12 (AP)—Robert Miller, a United Press correspondent, escaped uninjured today when his vessel, en route to France, was torpedoed by a German E-boat.

He was picked up and brought ashore by a corvette after spending two hours in the chill waters of the English Channel.

WSA Group Reaches France

London, June 12 (AP)—War Shipping Administration employes have reached France and are directing the control and movement of merchant shipping and British-bound convoys from the Normandy beachhead.

Big Berthas Shell Dover

Folkestone, England, Tuesday, June 13 (AP)—German long range batteries at Cap Gris Nez opened up against the Dover area early today, sending over single shells from time to time for an hour.

DOVER STRAIT BARELY RUFFLED

London, June 12 (A. P.).—The sky over Dover Strait was blue and cloudless today. Visibility was good and the surface of the sea was barely ruffled by a light westerly wind.

The barometer rose steadily during the night, after a drizzle of rain, and there were indications that a period of fair weather might be expected. The temperature was in the seventies at 8 A. M.

SAILORS BURY MASCOT BUFFEY

London, June 12 (A. P.).—Seaman Charles Smith of Trenton, N. J., says that after his LCI left the beachhead in Normandy the crew put the flag at half-mast in honor of Buffey, the ship's cocker spaniel mascot and the first dog to land in France in the invasion.

"As our men gathered around, our mascot was covered in a United States mail bag and lowered beneath the surface," Seaman Smith said.

Buffey was the only casualty on the ship. Exploding land mines deafened her and the official report said death was caused by nervous reaction to enemy action on the beach.

Official Soviet Bulletin Hails Invasion of France

Says It Will More Firmly Cement 'Great Fellowship in Arms'

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—The official Soviet information bulletin published here hailed today the invasion of France, declaring that it will cement "still more firmly the foundation of the great fellowship in arms of the freedom-loving nations, which, by concerted blows, will definitely crush Hitler Germany."

In an article by Major General M. Galaktionov, the bulletin said:

"The Soviet people and the Red Army, who for three years have known the hardships and dangers of a war fought single-handed with Hitler Germany, are following with the keenest sympathy the stern struggle on the northern coast of France."

Ignoring previous indications of Russian impatience for opening of a second front, Galaktionov wrote of the "considerations which explain the thorough preparations which were made for the invasion and which demanded considerable time and immense effort."

JAP END SEEN BY PRESIDENT

Opening Bond Drive, He Hails Pace Of World Strategy

Washington, June 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt said tonight we can force the Japanese "to unconditional surrender or to national suicide much more rapidly than has been thought possible."

The President, speaking on a national radio program opening the $16,000,000,000 Fifth War Loan drive, said our original strategy of eliminating Germany first and then turning our full war strength into the Pacific can hasten the day of our victory on all fronts.

Germany, he said, is "first on the list for destruction," and added:

"Germany has her back against the wall—in fact, three walls at once.

South, East, And Over Head

"On the south—we have broken the German hold on Central Italy. . . . On the east—our gallant Soviet Allies have driven the enemy back from the lands which were invaded three years ago. Great Soviet armies are now initiating crushing blows.

"Over head vast Allied air fleets of bombers and fighters have been waging a bitte rair war over Germany and western Europe. They have had two majojr objectives: To destroy German war industries which maintain the German armies and air forces, and to shoot the German Luftwaffe out of the air. As a result German production has been whittled continuously and the German fighter force now has only a fraction of its former power.

Air Campaign To Go On

"This great air campaign, strategic and tactical, will continue with increasing power.

On the West—The hammer blow which struck the coast of France last Tuesday morning was the culmination of many months of careful planning and strenuous preparation."

The President said, "We still have a long way to Tokyo," but he reviewed the relentless Pacific smashes which have taken the initiative away from the Japanese.

"Today we are on the offensive all over the world—bringing the attack to our enemies."

Many Jap Forces Cut Off

Declaring we have deprived the Japanese of any power to check the momentum of our forces, Mr. Roosevelt said we have reduced Japanese shipping by more than 3,000,000 tons and have cut off from their homeland tens of thousands of Japanese troops "who now face starvation or surrender."

The President recalled the dark, early days of the war and reminded his listeners that he was called "crazy" when he first suggested United States plane production of 50,000 airplanes a year.

"Today," he said, "we are building airplanes at the rate of 100,000 a year."

The President, stressing that the Allies have attained a general offensive position all over the world, said "everyone who bought a war bond helped—and helped mightily."

Money "Needed To Win"

"All of the things which we use in this war, everything we send to our fighting Allies, costs money—a lot of money," the President continued. "One sure way every man, woman and child can keep faith with those who have given, and are giving, their lives, is to provide the money which is needed to win the final victory."

Mr. Roosevelt, speaking from Washington, joined in an hour-long radio program opening the big bond drive. Most of the radio show, in which Secretary Morgenthau, movie stars and others took part, originated in Texarkana on the Texas-Arkansas border. Officials explained Texarkana was chosen because of its position on the line between two States.

$57,000,000,000 In Year

Morgenthau told the radio listeners the Treasury will have to borrow $57,000,000,000 during the next year. Illustrating the costs of the war, he gave these estimates:

"To march from Naples to Rome cost us $6,700,000,000, including equipment, training, etc. I leave it to you to imagine what it will cost to march from Rome to Berlin.

"The cost of taking the Marshall Islands was $6,000,000,000. That includes planes, oil, ammunition, ships and the training and equipping of personnel—$6,000,000,000. Again I leave it to you to imagine what it will cost us to go from the Marshall Islands to Tokyo.

Requirement Of Victory

"The harder we fight the sooner we're going to win. If our armed forces don't get the money they need—all the money they need—they can't fight as hard, and they can't win as soon. It's just as simple as that.

"The very life of democracy is the people's trust in themselves. The people can finance their security in a free world.

"The war isn't over yet. Our military leaders and the men fighting under their command ardently hope and sincerely believe that there are no Americans who need to be told that this is the wrong time to relax.

JUN 13 1944

"Time For New Effort"

"Tonight let us tell each other what we dare not forget; this is the time for new effort; this is the time for fresh exertion, the time for more from all of us—more of everything — everything we're called on to give for this great crusade — everything we're called on to make for it with our hands—everything we must hold steadfast in our hearts.

"This is a time for reaffirming that faith by which we live, that fighting faith with which our country—together with all free countries—defends its life today, that marching faith by which free peoples are moving into the future."

Text of Address

The complete text of the President's address follows:

"All our fighting men overseas today have their appointed stations on the far-flung battle fronts of the world. We at home have ours, too. We need, and are proud of, our fighting men—most decidedly. But during the anxious times ahead let us not forget that they need us, too.

"It goes almost without saying that we must continue to forge the weapons of victory—the hundreds of thousands of items, large and small, essential to the waging of the war. This has been the major task from the very start. It is still a major task. This is the very worst time for any war worker to think of leaving his machine or to look for a peace-time job.

"And it goes almost without saying, too, that we must continue to provide our government with the funds necessary for waging war not only by the payment of taxes—which, after all, is an obligation of citizenship—but also by the purchase of war bonds—an act of free choice which every citizen has to make for himself under the guidance of his own conscience.

"Whatever else any of us may be doing, the purchase of war bonds and stamps is something all of us can do and should do to help win the war.

"Nearly Every One" Buys

"I am happy to report tonight that it is something which nearly every one seems to be doing. Although there are now approximately 67,000,000 persons who have or earn some form of income (including the armed forces) 81,000,000 persons have already bought war bonds. They have bought more than 600,000,000 individual bonds; their purchases have totaled more than $32,000,000,000. These are the purchases of individual men, women and children. Any one who would have said this was possible a few years ago would have been put down as a starry-eyed visionary. Of such visions, however, is the stuff of America fashioned. Of course, there are always pessimists with us. I am reminded of the fact that after the fall of France in 1940 I asked for the production by the United States of 50,000 airplanes a year.

"I was called crazy—it was said that the figure was fantastic: that it could not be done. Today we are building airplanes at the rate of 100,000 a year.

"There is a direct connection between the bonds you have bought and the stream of men and equipment now rushing over the English Channel for the liberation of Europe. There is a direct connection between your war bonds and every part of this global war today.

Can Speed Victory

"Tonight, therefore, on the opening of this Fifth War Loan drive, it is appropriate for us to take a broad look at this panorama of world war. For the success or failure of the drive is going to have so much to do with the speed with which we can accomplish victory and peace.

"While I know that the chief interest tonight is centered on the English Channel and on the beaches and farms and cities of Normandy, we should not lose sight of the fact that our armed forces are engaged on other battle fronts all over the world, and that no one front can be considered alone without its proper relation to all.

"It is worth while to make overall comparisons with the past. Compare today with just two years ago—June, 1942. At that time Germany was in control of practically all of Europe, and was steadily driving the Russians back toward the Ural Mountains. Germany was practically in control of North Africa and the Mediterranean, and was beating at the gates of the Suez Canal, the route to India. Italy was still an important military and supply factor—as subsequent, long campaigns proved.

"Japan was in control of the western Aleutian Islands, and in the South Pacific was knocking at the gates of Australia and New Zealand—and also threatening India. She had seized control of nearly one-half of the central Pacific.

"American armed forces on land and sea and in the air were still very definitely on the defensive and in the building-up stage. Our allies were bearing the heat and the brunt of the attack.

"In 1942 Washington heaved a sigh of relief that the first war bond issue had been cheerfully over-subscribed by the American people. In those days America was still hearing from many "amateur strategists" and political critics, some of whom were doing more good for Hitler than for the United States.

"On Offensive All Over World"

"Today we are on the offensive all over the world—bringing the attack to our enemies.

"In the Pacific, by relentless submarine and naval attacks, amphibious thrusts and ever-mounting air attacks, we have deprived the Japs of the power to check the momentum of our ever-growing and ever-advancing military forces. We have reduced their shipping by more than three million tons. We have overcome their original advantage in the air. We have cut off from a return to the homeland tens of thousands of bleaguered Japanese troops who now face starvation or surrender. We have cut down their naval strength, so that for many months they have avoided all risk of encounter with our naval forces.

"True, we still have a long way to Tokyo. But, carrying out our original strategy of eliminating our European enemy first and then turning all our strength to the Pacific, we can force the Japanese to unconditional surrender or to national suicide much more rapidly than has been thought possible.

"Turning now to our enemy who is first on the list for destruction, Germany has her back against the wall—in fact, three walls at once!

"On the south we have broken the German hold on central Italy. On June 4 the city of Rome fell to the Allied armies. Allowing the enemy no respite, the Allies are now pressing hard on the heels of the Germans as they retreat northward in ever-growing confusion.

"On the east, our gallant Soviet allies have driven the enemy back from the lands which were invaded three years ago. Great Soviet armies are now initiating crushing blows.

"Overhead, vast Allied air fleets of bombers and fighters have been waging a bitter air war over Germany and western Europe. They have had two major objectives: to destroy German war industries, which maintain the German armies and air forces, and to shoot the German Luftwaffe out of the air. As a result German production has been whittled down continuously, and the German fighter force now has only a fraction of its former power.

Blows to Continue

"This great air campaign, strategic and tactical, will continue—with increasing power.

"On the west, the hammer blow which struck the coast of France last Tuesday morning was the culmination of many months of careful planning and strenuous preparation.

"Millions of tons of weapons and supplies and hundreds of thousands of men assembled in England are now being poured into the great battle in Europe.

"From the standpoint of our enemy, we have achieved the impossible. We have broken through their supposdly impregnable wall in northern France. The assault has been costly in men and materials. Some of our landings were desperate adventures, but from advices received so far, the losses were lower than our commanders had estimated would occur. We have established a firm foothold and are now prepared to meet the inevitable counter-attacks of the Germans—with power and confidence. We all pray that we will have far more than a firm foothold.

"Americans have all worked together to make this day possible. The liberation forces now streaming across the Channel and up the beaches and down the highways of France are using thousands and thousands of planes and ships and tanks and heavy guns. They are carrying with them many thousands of items needed for their dangerous, stupendous undertaking. There is a shortage of nothing—nothing! This must continue.

"What has been done in the United States since those days of 1940—when France fell—in raising and equipping and transporting our fighting forces, and in producing weapons and supplies for war, has been nothing short of a miracle. It was largely due to American teamwork—teamwork among capital and labor and agriculture, between the armed forces and the civilian economy—indeed among all of them.

And every one who bought a war bond helped—and helped mightily!

"There are still many people in the United States who have not bought war bonds, or who have not bought as many as they can afford. Every one knows for himself whether he falls into that category or not. In some cases his neighbors know also. To the consciences of those people, this appeal by the President of the United States is very much in order.

"All of the things which we use in this war, everything we send to our fighting Allies, costs money—a lot of money. One sure way every man, woman and child can keep faith with those who have given, and are giving, their lives, is to provide the money which is needed to win the final victory.

"I urge all Americans to buy war bonds without stint. Swell the mighty chorus to bring us nearer to victory!"

The President's broadcast was part of the Treasury Department bond opening at Texarkana, U. S. A. The Treasury said the official opening took place at Texarkana because the "Civilian D-Day idea" was born in that town, which lies partly in Texas and partly in Arkansas.

London Has First Alert Since April

NIGHT

London, Tuesday, June 13 (AP). London had two alerts early today, the first in nearly seven weeks.

Hardly had the all-clear sounded after the first alarm, which brought only a brief burst of fire from the big anti-aircraft guns fringing the city, than the second alert sounded.

This time a heavier barrage went up. The German raiders approached nearer downtown and the gunfire was steady and more widespread. This also, however, ended quickly. The two alerts covered less than an hour.

It was the first time Londoners had heard the sirens since April 27.

The Nazi raiders did not penetrate the city's band of defenses, although first reports indicated at least one bomb was dropped in a London suburb during the first alert. Rocket guns participated in the anti-aircraft barrage.

REDS ADVANCE UPON VIIPURI

LANDSTROM
JUN 13 1944

Seize Raivola, 40 Miles From Finnish Port

London, June 13 (AP)—Russian tanks and picked troops poured through breaches in the Mannerheim line yesterday and seized Raivola in an eight-mile advance that carried them to a point about 40 miles from the port of Viipuri, Finnish city second only to Helsinki.

Fighting through woods laced with lakes, the Russians also overran Kivennapa, about ten miles northeast of Raivola, in the new offensive which has the capital of Helsinki as a goal.

30 Other Places Taken

Raivola lies eight miles beyond the coastal strong point of Terijoki, whose capture was announced yesterday. More than 30 other populated places were taken as the Russians swept up along the western side of the Karelian isthmus, the Soviet communique announced.

Twenty enemy planes were reported shot down.

From Stockholm came reports, unconfirmed elsewhere, that the Finnish Government might resign, presaging the capitulation of Helsinki.

NIGHT

Reports Tanks Behind Lines

[A London broadcast said that "the Russians have landed tanks by air behind the Finnish troops" and this force was disrupting the Finnish communications.]

In a midnight supplement to the communique, the Russians said that although the Finns were putting up increasingly stubborn resistance the Red army's Karelian offensive continued successfully yesterday with infantry and tanks overcoming all obstacles. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy, the communique stated.

The Russians said the Red air force was playing an increasingly larger role in the operations.

Fleet Joins In Shelling

Churning up the Karelian isthmus, Russian artillery, bombs and guns of the Baltic fleet cracked the defenses along a 25-mile front and stunned the Finns with a cannonading which echoed through Leningrad, more than 25 miles away.

Dispatches from Moscow said the Red army had seized several large railroad centers beyond the 1938 Russo-Finnish border and that Finnish casualties, heavy from the start, were increasing.

More enemy positions were being rolled up hourly as the Russians under Col. Gen. Leonid Govorov, liberator of Leningrad, struck repeatedly in the virtually constant daylight of the northern summer.

Pravda declared the breakthrough was "great and significant" and that "now the hour of severe revenge has arrived."

Painter's Studio Ruined

Among the points taken was Kuokkala, six miles east of Terijoki on the gulf, where dispatches said the studio of the famous Russian painter Ilya Repin was found in ruins.

The big Russian guns also blasted the hopes of an armistice which the Soviet Union has been trying to negotiate since mid-February.

The Stockholm correspondent of the Finnish newspaper, the Helsingin Sanomats, reported United States-Finnish relations were growing worse and speculated that there might be a diplomatic break shortly.

Edmund D. Guillon, American charge d'affaires, returned to Helsinki after a three-day visit with legation officials at Stockholm and is expected to make a first-hand report on the situation in Finland.

Swedish reports said the Finns were deeply dejected by the turn of events.

Not Summer Drive

A German high command spokesman declared the Karelian drive could not be considered the start of the Russian summer offensive, and that the Red army had so far used only "several divisions."

DNB's commentator, Colonel Ernst von Hammer, said aerial reconnaissance showed the Russians had massed the bulk of their forces on the lower Dnestr for an offensive whose start would be determined "by the present good weather." He said other drives were being prepared in the center and far to the north around Lake Peipus.

RUSSIANS GAIN IN NEW DRIVE AGAINST FINNS

JUN 13 1944

Capture Town 40 Miles From Viipuri in Advance on Karelian Isthmus.

ATTACK LINKED TO INVASION

100,000 Germans Face Isolation as Reds Strive to Knock Finland Out of War.

DAY

London, June 12 (A. P.).—The Russians announced in a communique broadcast from Moscow tonight that troops continued to drive into Finish defenses on the Karelian Isthmus today and captured Kivennapa, Raivola and more than thirty other strongpoints. No changes on other parts of the Russian front were announced.

Raivola is eight miles northwest of Terijoki, which the Russians announced yesterday they had captured in the initial stages of their offensive, and is about forty miles southeast of Viipuri, Finland's second most important city which was recovered by the Finns in their 1941 offensive.

Kivennapa is about ten miles northeast of Raivola.

Both towns are on the western side of the Karelian isthmus north of Leningrad and were captured in a drive through thick wooded country intersected by streams and lakes.

and isolate approximately 100,000 Nazi troops in the northern part of that country, the Red Army rolled forward along the Karelian Isthmus above Leningrad today after cracking Finnish defenses on a 25-mile front.

A communique last night announcing the new drive said Soviet troops already had advanced 12 to 25 miles, and indicated they were moving forward everywhere in high gear.

This offensive evidently was coordinated closely with Allied operations in France, and represented a step in the grand Allied strategy worked out at the Teheran conferences.

82 Towns Captured.

Troops under Col. Gen. Leonid Govorov, who lifted the siege of Leningrad, launched the push Friday, just one month after the fall of Sevastopol—a month devoid of major activity along the long front.

The Soviet communique declared Russian forces had captured 82 towns and villages, including the rail junction of Teriojoki, 27 miles airline northwest of Leningrad and 160 miles east of the Finnish capital of Helsinki.

Also captured, the bulletin said, was Yappilya, described as "an important strongpoint" 7 miles northeast of Terijoki.

Terijoki, situated on the Leningrade-Helsinki Railway, is about 6 miles west of the 1938 Russian-Finnish border, and 70 miles east of the frontier established by the peace treaty which ended the war between the two countries in the winter of 1939-1940.

Terijoki also served for a short time as the capital of the Finnish People's government, headed by Otto Kuusinen, which was established under Russian protection in December, 1939.

The Soviets said the offensive was being supported not only by masses of planes, but also by guns of the Russian Baltic fleet, and that heavy losses in men and material were being inflicted on the Finns.

Premier Stalin himself acclaimed the opening of the offensive in a special order of the day in which he praised Govorov and his men and ordered 20 salvoes fired from 220 artillery pieces in Moscow to celebrate initial successes.

It was disclosed that the first word of the drive was given American and British officials here by Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov Saturday at a luncheon in Spiridonovka Palace, held to observe the 2d anniversary of the signing of the Russian-American lease-lend agreement.

Stiff Fight Reported—Nazis Claim Drive Halted

London, June 12 (AP) — Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisans have launched an offensive in Serbia and caused more than 400 German casualties in stiff fighting on other fronts, the Free Yugosiav communique said tonight.

The Germans, in a broadcast, acknowledged the Partisan drive on the Croat-Serbian frontier, but declared it had been halted.

Both sides reported violent fighting in eastern Bosnia with Partisians claiming the Nazi bases at Majevica and Semberija in peril.

Reports Other Blows

Marshal Tito also announced that Partisan forces were striking hard in the Sandjak and Montenegro areas, attacking the Prijepolje-cajnice line of communications, storming the right bank of the Lim, and "successfully clearing the territory of the enemy."

Severe fighting was reported by the communique in the Tuzla-Zvornik sector of eastern Bosnia, about 80 miles southwest of Belgrade.

The communique said the enemy was suffering heavy casualties in this sector.

Counteroffensive Gains

The western Bosnia Partisan counteroffensive, meanwhile, was declared continuing with Yugoslav units recapturing Sisevo.

"In Croatia, the initiative is in the hands of our units," the bulletin said.

Tito's communique said the Allied air force was "very active on many sectors of the front in Yugoslavia." The Allied navy also was active in support of the Partisans, the communique said, recently destroying several enemy ships along the Adriatic coast.

Tito Liquidates Strongholds On Tuzla-Zvornik Line

JUN 13 1944

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 12.—Marshal Tito announced yesterday that his Yugoslav Partisans had liquidated enemy strongholds on the Tuzla-Zvornik line about 80 miles southwest of Belgrade and that Partisan batteries were successfully shelling strong points at Koraj and Celici 10 miles north of Tuzla.

The broadcast communique recorded in London declared further that "in the Majevica Mountains northwest of Zvornik-Tobut an enemy stronghold has been captured with a large quantitiy of ammunition."

DAY

Violent fighting was said to be continuing in Western Bosnia.

The Germans were declared to be withdrawing from Glamoc and its surrounding strong points. Glamoc is 40 miles northeast of the Adriatic port of Split. The communique said the Partisans in other sectors were attacking "in ever increasing strength."

REPORT WEYGAND SHOT BY GERMANS

JUN 13 1944

London, June 12 (A. P.).—French officers imprisoned at Koenigsberg were told by the Germans that Gen. Maxime Weygand, former commander in chief of the French Army, was "shot while attempting to escape," a Reuters dispatch from Zurich reported today.

Gen. Weygand was made commander of the Allied armies just before the fall of France, succeeding Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin after the disastrous German breakthrough in May, 1940. He disappeared soon after the Germans overran all of France after the Allied landings in North Africa in November, 1942. Some reports said he had been arrested by the Germans and held as a hostage for Gen. Henri Giraud, who escaped the Nazis and went to North Africa.

Born 77 years ago, he succeeded Gamelin as French commander-in-chief when the Germans were only eighty miles from Paris, and directed the fierce but failing battle to halt the steamroller that engulfed the capital and crushed France. He served as Minister of National Defense in the Petain Cabinet, and later was made delegate-general and military commander of French North Africa. German pressure forced his retirement from this post a full year before the North African invasion.

NAZIS' 14TH ARMY VIEWED AS BROKEN

Clark Describes Depletion Of Foe Fleeing To Florence

Rome, June 12 (AP)—The German 14th Army has been "dispersed to the four winds," Allied headquarters declared today as Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American and British forces, pursuing the disorganized Germans up the Italian west coast, approached Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome.

As depleted enemy units fell back toward the Florence area with the greater part of their equipment lost, the Nazi high command faced the immediate necessity of sending heavy reinforcements from France or elsewhere in Europe if any real attempt was to be made to hold northern Italy.

Units Steal Others' Trucks

"It is now quite clear," the Allied announcement said, "that the original 14th Army . . . has been dispersed to the four winds. All that remains is a few scattered remnants who mainly are engaged in stealing one another's transport to get away as fast as possible. Prisoners describe the situation as wholly chaotic."

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring not only has been forced to throw all but one of the 24 divisions he had in Italy into a desperate effort to slow the Allied steamroller but has brought in three fresh infantry divisions, it was disclosed today.

What is left of the Nazi 10th Army appears to have been put on an every-man-for-himself basis in the flight toward Florence.

Prisoners Carry Passes

"The most striking evidence of the degree of disintegration was provided by the fact that captured stragglers were provided with passes saying the bearer was authorized to proceed either alone or in small groups to an assembly place near Florence," the Allies announced.

Across the breadth of Italy the Allied Fifth and Eighth armies met organized resistance only where the Nazis badly needed time to extricate their troops. The countryside was littered with abandoned enemy equipment.

Fifth Army troops pushed through the important road junction of Montefiascone near the shores of Lake Bolsena and fought on toward the town of Bolsena, eight miles beyond. Eighth Army columns moving up both sides of the Tiber river north of Rome neared Bagno Reggio and Rieti.

Cleared Below Pescara River

In the central sector the Eighth Army overran Avezzano and nearby Lake Fucino, which was drained some years ago and now is a 45,000-acre farm development. In the Adriatic sector all Germans had been cleared from the lower side of the Pescara river.

Headquarters disclosed that the Sixth South African armored division participated in the Eighth Army's drive up the Liri and Sacco valleys to Rome and that it now is fighting more than 50 miles north of the capital.

The South Africans, who played a prominent part in the desert warfare in North Africa, entered the fighting near Cassino with zest. Only two days ago they broke into a German position held by two battalions, killing about 200, capturing a like number and adding new stores of enemy equipment to the Eighth Army's collection.

While the Allied advance continues relentlessly, it is recognized that the Allied lines of supply are becoming daily more extended. In future fighting much will depend on the speed with which Allied engineers can repair dynamited bridges and roads and put the battered Italian railways back in working order.

Strong forces of Allied heavy bombers attacked targets in Romania and Yugoslavia yesterday, concentrating on rail yards and oil installations. Twelve heavy bombers and five escorting fighters were lost as against 15 Nazi planes shot down. Last night heavy bombers hit objectives in Bulgaria. Not an enemy plane was sighted over the Italian battle area yesterday.

15-Mile Advance On Coast Toward Orbetello Reported

KENNEDY

By the Associated Press.

ROME, June 12.—Fifth Army troops have occupied Montefiascone, an important road junction near Lake Bolsena, and other columns pushing along the Italian west coast are approaching Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome, Allied headquarters announced today.

Eighth Army columns advancing up both sides of the Tiber neared Bagno Reggio west of the river and Rieti east of it.

DAY

In the mountainous central sector, Avezzano and its neighboring villages have been occupied, while in the Adriatic sector all Germans have been cleared from the area south of the Pescara River and Allied troops have pushed ahead to maintain contact with the withdrawing Germans.

JUN 13 1944

Gain of 15 Miles

A gain of 15 miles was announced for 5th Army units along the west coast. Near Nunziatello the Germans counterattacked with two companies, but the Americans beat them back and continued the drive.

Among the areas to fall into Allied hands was Lake Fucino near Avezzano, which some years ago was drained and now is a 45,000-acre tract of rich farmland.

Headquarters disclosed that the 6th South African Armored Division was among the 8th Army units which advanced through the Liri and Sacco valleys.

After distinguishing itself in engagements there, this division made a "ghost move" by entering 5th Army territory, passing swiftly through Rome despite the congestion of the city and then shooting northward more than 50 miles up the west banks of the Tiber.

"It is now quite clear," a headquarters announcement said, "that the original 14th Army of (Col. Gen. Eberhard) Von Mackensen has been dispersed to the four winds.

"All that remains is a few scattered remnants who mainly are engaged in stealing one another's transport to get away as fast as possible. Prisoners describe the situation as wholly chaotic.

"The most striking evidence of the degree of disintegration was provided by the fact that captured stragglers were provided with passes saying the bearer was authorized to proceed either alone or in small groups to an assembly place near Florence."

What is left of the German Army, which once included the 4th Parachute, the 65th and 362d Infantry and 3d Panzer Grenadier Divisions, thus appears to have been put on an every-man-for-himself basis in a retreat to Florence.

President Praises 5th Army's Work

Rome, June 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt, in a telegram of congratulation to Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, said that "the Fifth Army made the American people very happy."

"The Fifth Army made the American people very happy. My congratulations to you and all your officers and men for a grand job well done."

Clark replied:

"All members of the Fifth Army deeply appreciate your message of congratulation. It is an inspiration to us all. We reaffirm our pledge of unrelenting blows against the enemy until his final defeat."

Nazi Tank Troops Overrun.

With the Fifth Army Near Lake Bolsena, Italy, June 11—(Delayed)—(A. P.).—The enemy dug deep into his bag of tricks to delay the Allied drive up the eastern shore of this picturesque lake today, but in spite of such obstacles as blasted bridges and anti-tank guns firing at point blank range, American armor and infantry units pushed steadily toward the town of Bolsena itself.

The Allies ran into desperate delaying action all the way up from the large road junction of Montefiascone, eight miles to the south, which Tank Lieut. George H. Spires of 7121 Tenth avenue, Brooklyn, explained he captured Saturday night with two tanks, a couple of tank destroyers and a few soldiers.

The tanks were commanded by Lieut. Allan Dill, Centralia, Ill., and Sergt. William Arola, Angora, Minn.

ROOSEVELT KIN HID FROM NAZIS

Many Others in Rome Flee From Germans.

Rome, June 12 (A. P.).—Mrs. Margaret Roosevelt Pallavicini, cousin of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, escaped harm at the hands of the Germans by hiding in a convent in Rome with her 6-year-old daugnter, Julia, throughout the German occupation of the capital.

Mrs. Pallavicini is one of several hundred American women, mostly wives of Italians, who have spent the war in Italy. As far as can be learned none of them was harmed, although many were hounded by the Gestapo and Fascist police and had to go into hiding.

Mrs. Pallavicini is the daughter of George Emlen Roosevelt of 1001 Park avenue, New York city, who is a first cousin of Mrs. Roosevelt and a more distant cousin of the President. She married Alessandro Pallavicini, an Italian newsreel producer, in 1935 and has lived in Italy since.

Enters Vatican City.

"When the Germans took over in September, we both had to hide," Mr. Pallavicini said today. "My wife went to the convent of the Sacred Heart and lived with the sisters. I got into Vatican City. The Germans knew of my wife's connections and had her name on a special list. The Fascists were after me. The Germans came to our house five times while we were away, looking for us."

Mrs. Pallavicini emerged from the convent and her husband came from Vatican City after the Americans entered Rome.

"We are all in good health, including our daughter," Mr. Pallavicini said.

Among other American women who lived under German terror in Rome are Princess Jeannie Perkins Colonna, formerly of Dutchess county, New York, and her 72-year-old mother, Mrs. Mary Beard Perkins. Miss Perkins married Prince Fabrizio Colonna, one of Rome's most distinguished families, in 1923.

"You don't know what a thrill it was when the Americans came into Rome," Princess Colonna, a vivacious and charming lady, said. She and the Prince had perhaps their narrowest escape just as the Americans entered. Upon hearing American Sherman tanks rumble into a square near their home, they ran out to greet them. A German armored car at the other end of the square opened fire which the American tanks returned. The Prince and Princes found themselves in the midst of a battle until the German car was knocked out.

Secret Wall Panels.

The Prince, like so many other Italians, eluded the Germans by moving from house to house.

"Of course, there was always this," he said, moving an innocent looking bookcase. There was a hole in the wall behind leading to a tiny hiding place.

In homes of almost all American women in Rome, there are such escape ways—holes in the roof, secret panels and various other ingenious ways of hiding or leaving the house when gestapo agents knock at the door. Such hatches were necessary household equipment under German occupation.

A sister of the Princess, Marchesa Olive Perkins D' Amico, now living at 14 East 60th street, New York city, and another sister, Senora Argenta Pena Herrera, was the wife of the Ecuadorean Minister at Rome, but she left with her husband early in the war and now is in Ecuador.

"I spent the last war in Washington and it certainly was a much different war for me," said Princess Colonna. "We were worried about my mother, but despite her age she is well and has been very brave through it all."

Request Word Be Sent.

All these American women had the same request—to send word to their relatives in America that they were safe. Most of them had no word from their families since Pearl Harbor. They were extremely happy over the arrival of American troops, but still hardly able to believe that they could walk about and say what they liked without fear of the Gestapo.

And they readily talked of their experiences of the past nine months.

Among the other American women who passed the war in Rome were:

Countess Natalie Coe Vitetti, formerly of Long Island.

Mrs. Lydia Macy Bodrero, formerly of San Francisco, Cal., and her 17-year-old daughter, Edith Macy. Mrs. Bodrero's former husband, Valentine Macy, and two sons live in New ork.

LIFE IN ROME TOPSY-TURVY

But the Americans Work to Restore Order.

e, June 12 (A. P.).—A f Allied occupation finds topsy-turvy in some respects but surprisingly normal in others.

The Romans by now have become accustomed to the sight of doughboys in the streets, boisterous and friendly and they apparently like them infinitely more than the Germans, who were well-behaved—and contemptuous.

Generally the Romans have welcomed the Americans with open arms and in lively anticipation of getting something out of them. Giving them something in return seemingly does not fit into the Roman conception of being occupied; already they made their sacrifice in the long wait they suffered for the Allies to deliver them, they point.

While the arrival of the Americans has been accompanied by astronomical increases in the prices of goods sold to soldiers, black market prices generally have fallen, as the Romans expect the Allies to flood the city with food and other necessary supplies.

Flour, which was $1.40 a pound just before the city fell, now is 20 cents. Gasoline, which was $5 a gallon, now is only $4.

The capital has trolleys running but no buses, as the Germans carried them off. Lights and power have been restored to some parts of the city. Houses in the center of the city have running water but in the outlying sections water must be drawn from street hydrants.

The telephone system is intact but not yet restored to civilians for security reasons—telephones might aid German agents in reporting troop movements.

Most interesting distraction to Romans are spy hunts. One by one, known spies, and especially wanted Fascists, are being taken from their hiding places by soldiers and carried off in Army trucks.

One arrest Saturday on the Via Del Macelli (street of the two butchers) attracted a crowd of several hundred.

As a frightened, spectacled, middle-aged man was dragged from a drug store where he was hiding, the crowd hurled wild imprecations, sought to grab him and doubtless would have torn him to pieces if soldiers had not held them back.

No doubt many of those now bravely joining in the hunt for Fascists were among those who cheered loudest for Mussolini.

Portugal Halts Wolfram Export

Lisbon, June 12 (AP)—Production and export of wolfram, used in the manufacture of armament steel, was halted in Portugal today by official decree.

The law, published in Portugal's official bulletin, fixed penalties of imprisonment up to a year or deportation to penal colonies for violation, and said those attempting to export wolfram would be treated as smugglers.

Approximately 25,000 miners, including 7,000 employed by two British-owned mines, became unemployed by the decree. All existing wolfram in the mines today will be bought by the Government's metal control committee and held until the end of the war.

PORTUGAL HALTS WOLFRAM EXPORTS

Lisbon, June 12 (A. P.).—Portugal's official bulletin tonight published a law halting all production and exports of wolfram, a hardening constituent of steel important in the manufacture of armament.

Portuguese Vessel Sinks

LISBON, June 12 (AP).—The 1,600-ton wooden Portuguese freighter Marinela, en route to Philadelphia, sank in the Atlantic, it was reported here today, but the crew was saved by the steamship Portitas. The Marinela was reported on fire near Bermuda late Saturday.

Japanese Hammer at Gates Of Beleaguered Changsha

CHUNGKING, June 12 — (AP) Invader troops are pounding incessantly at all sides of besieged Changsha against heroic Chinese resistance and the battle around the outer defenses has reached its "fiercest proportions," a Chinese communique said tonight, indicating virtual encirclement of the Canton-Hankow rail city.

Far to the west, however, near the Burma border, Chinese troops were scoring further successes and were mopping up enemy remnants in the outer areas of Lungling, important Yunnan province base whose fall was announced yesterday. The Japanese still held strongly-fortified positions on three hills outside the town, and attempted an unsuccessful flank attack from the south, a communique declared.

Allies Blast Troops

While American bombers and fighters blasted enemy troops, river craft and installations over a wide area of the Hunan front, the Chinese still were holding in the area 15 miles northwest of Changsha, while directly north of the city the Japanese were fought to a standstill, the high command said.

The Japanese also were driving on Changsha from the east only six miles away, an fierce fighting was reported in all these sectors, with casualties heavy on both sides.

At the same time a new Japanese drive was developing far to the south, this one northward along the Canton-Hankow railway, in what Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, U. S. 14th air force commander, called a new push to establish an impregnable defense in China. With this new thrust, he said, the Chinese war has been brought to its greatest pitch since 1938.

This southern Japanese drive advanced five to ten miles, reaching Fengtsun on the railway 30 miles north of Canton and about 325 south of Changsha. Chennault declared that if the Japanese were successful in clearing the entire Canton-Hankow railway and building defensive positions on it, the Asiatic war could be prolonged for years.

Fifty miles northwest of Changsha, the Japanese were again beaten back in a drive against Yiyang, just below Tungting lake, the Chinese commuique said.

1,000 Japs Killed

Fourteenth Air force and Chinese-American composite wing fighters, bombers, some of the latter armed with rocket guns, were thrown into the battle for Changsha. In one attack on a concentration of enemy troop and supply boats north of Changsha, the pilots reported killing or drowning 1,000 Japanese.

On the Yunnan front, Chinese troops yesterday drove stubborn enemy defenders from fortifications six miles north of Tatangtzu, killing 75 and pursuing the remnants to the south and west, a communique said, adding that the action cleared a trail from Tatangtzu over the crest of the Kaoli mountains.

Farther south, Chinese heavy artillery, directed by an American officer in a liaison-type plane, blasted enemy positions on the Burma road, west of Lameng and about 20 miles northeast of Lungling, the bulletin said.

In Honan province, fighting continued south of Lingpao on the Lunghai railway, about 35 miles east of Tungkwan, and at the same time a bitter battle was in progress just east of Sunghsien, about 80 miles southeast of Lingpao.

Enemy Believed Trying To Set Up 'West Wall' On Canton Rail Line

By the Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, June 12.—An indication that the city of Changsha was encircled was contained tonight in a communique of the Chinese high command, which announced the Japanese were assaulting the Hunan Province capital incessantly "from all directions."

Invaders attacking from the east reached a point only 6 miles from the city, but attempts to cross the Liuyang River directly to the east were repulsed, the high command said.

Japanese troops, apparently striving to establish a "west wall" along the Canton-Hankow railway to protect their home islands, were reported authoritatively to have opened a drive northward along the rail line to match their southward offensive in the Changsha area.

A dispatch from United States 14th Air Force headquarters quoted Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault as saying the new enemy push from the Canton area, combined with the battle for beleaguered Changsha, had brought the China war to its greatest pitch since 1938. Gen. Chennault added that the Asiatic war could be prolonged for years if the Japanese cleared the railway and built defensive positions along it.

Hammering at Changsha.

In the drive south along the railway the Japanese are hammering at the very gates of Changsha, the Chinese high command announced last night. The Japanese have claimed capture of Changsha, but there was no confirmation of this from the Chinese.

It was announced at 14th Air Force headquarters that the Japanese, bolstered by puppet troops, have advanced to the north from 5 to 10 miles beyond their previous Kwangtung Province positions and now are at Fengtsun, on the railway about 30 miles north of Canton and some 325 miles south of Changsha, and at Fansien and Tsungfa, on highways paralleling the railway.

Lungling Occupied.

Meanwhile, in Yunnan Province Chinese troops have occupied Lungling, scoring "the greatest success to date for our troops in the Salween offensive," the Chinese high command said.

Lungling, second most important Japanese base in Yunnan, fell to troops of an 11th Army group led by Maj. Gen. Sung Hsi-lien. Field dispatches have indicated its capture would cut off large concentrations of Japanese at the main enemy base of Tengchung, 40 miles to the northwest.

Chinese troops in the Salween offensive are driving west to clear the Burma road and hook up with Allied forces in North Burma.

miles east of the town along the Jessami track, and eight miles southeast of Kohima, near Viswema.

Unsuccessful attacks on Allied positions were reported on the Imphal plain, where an Allied advance continued north of Kanglatongbi, the communique said.

The war bulletin made no mention of ground fighting in north Burma in and around the besieged Japanese bastion of Myitkyina, but a field dispatch reported Chinese troops 40 miles to the west had advanced to within two miles of Kamaing, bringing the city under heavy shellfire.

In the air, however, planes Saturday damaged the track and southern approach of a railway bridge 12 miles west of Myitkyina and strafed enemy positions within the beleaguered base and in the Mogaung area to the west.

RAF and IAF fighters, fighter bombers and dive-bombers struck targets in the Manipur, upper Chindwin, Arakan and Akyab areas, scoring direct hits on a bridge northwest of Tamu and on another southeast of Kalewa. Long range RAF fighters carried out low-level attacks on enemy communication lines on the Arakan coast and in central and southern Burma, the communique said.

Today's communique from headquarters of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten said Allied troops advancing from Kohima in India encountered Japanese resistance 24

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 12 (A. P.)—British troops, engaged in clearing the enemy out of India, have driven to a point twenty-four miles east of Kohima, almost to the Burma border, thirty miles east of that city where renewed resistance has been encountered, a communique from Admiral Mountbatten's headquarters said today.

Japs Cleared From Biak Posts

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Tuesday, June 13 (AP)—Japanese are being cleaned from their strong positions on Biak island west of Mokmer airstrip, headquarters announced today.

American infantry troops were advancing westward from captured Mokmer drome Sunday against enemy machinegun fire coming bunkers.

Headquarters also disclosed that Palau and Truk again were bombed Saturday night. Palau's airstrip was hit and installations on Truk were attacked by planes from southwest Pacific bases.

Starvation Kills Man

Truk and Palau are 1,000 miles apart in the Caroline Island group.

At Sarmi in Dutch New Guinea, patrols reported 173 more enemy dead Sunday and 223 more at Hollandia.

Sarmi is o nthe New Guinea mainland opposite Wakde Island.

Many of the enemy dead were victims of starvation and disease. Headqquarters announced known enemy casualties in the Sarmi-Maffin Bay area now total 1,911, and in the Hollandia-Aitape sector 4,795, including 629 prisoners.

On Biak Island, largest of the Schouten group off northwestern Dutch New Guinea, Allied heavy bombers, attack planes and tanks aided the infantry advance.

Shoot Down 2 Interceptors

Of the Palau raid, the headquarters communique said:

"Our heavy units continued night and day attacks on the main airdrome, inflicting further damage on installations and parked aircraft. Two of 15 enemy planes attempting interception were shot down. One of our planes is missing. A total of 24 planes have been destroyed on the ground."

Liberators from the Admiralty Islands bombed Truk's Dublon Island at night. One failed to return, but its loss was partially avenged by the destruction of an enemy bomber, on patrol to the south, by an Allied reconnaissance plane.

JAP AIRFIELDS HIT ON PALAU ISLAND

LUNSFORD

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 12 (A. P.).—Opening the aerial prelude to the battle for the Philippines, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's land-based Liberators destroyed twenty-two grounded Japanese planes in their first daylight raid on Palau, southeastern guardian of the former American archipelago.

Driving from newly acquired bases in the Dutch New Guinea area, headquarters announced today, the Fifth Army Air Force bombers also blew up many buildings, near the Palau airdrome Friday.

Palau, at the western end of the Caroline Islands, is only 563 miles southeast of the Philippines. It first was raided March 29, 30 and 31, carrier-based planes sinking twenty-eight Japanese ships and destroying more than 160 aircraft.

Friday's assault preceded by one day the United States Navy carrier task force strike at Guam, Saipan and Tinian islands, in the southern Marianas, other Philippine flank bases approximately 800 miles northeast of Palau. This emphasized the aerial co-ordination between Southwest and Central Pacific forces in the smash toward the Philippines.

The Liberator attack apparently caught Palau's garrison by surprise, for no challenging Japanese planes arose.

Ground warfare was static at Hollandia and Aitape, on Dutch New Guinea, and on Biak Island, in the Schouten Islands, where American forces have captured one of three airdromes within fighter range of Palau.

Allied aerial units maintained their watch over Geelvink Bay waters off Manokwari, Dutch New Guinea, and destroyed a 1,000-ton enemy freighter, six coastal vessels and a barge in the harbor. Four destroyers were sunk and another damaged in this area Thursday when aircraft smashed a Japanese task force attempting to reinforce beleaguered forces on Biak.

YANK PLANES HIT MARIANAS ISLES

McMURTRY

Submarines Deal New Blows to Japanese Merchant Fleet.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 12.—(AP) American carrier planes, striking at the Marianas islands for the second day, and United States submarines have dealt new blows to Japan's island empire and her shattered merchant fleet.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced the continuing action against the islands within 1,600 miles of Japan while a Navy department communique at Washington reported submarines had sunk 18 more enemy vessels.

Subs Sink Many Ships

The bag by submarines, operating in the far flung Pacific, was the largest number so far reported in a single communique. It brought the war's total of enemy ships sunk by United States submarine action to 607. The newest sinkings included a large tanker, a body blow to the Japanese navy, a medium transport and 16 cargo ships.

Admiral Nimitz reported the powerful carrier task force that struck at the southern Marianas islands Saturday also was in action Sunday. It again attacked Guam, former American naval base, and Saipan and Tinian islands and extended the strike to Rota islands. Rota is half way between Guam and Saipan. The four islands are at the southern end of the Marianas group. Guam is less than 1,600 miles east of Manila.

Results of the Saturday and Sunday smashes in the Marianas still were shrouded in secrecy, presumably because the warships were observing a rigid radio silence.

The size of the force attacking the Marianas still was undisclosed. The fact that the foray had been extended into the second day, however, was seen as a strong indication that Admiral Nimitz was engaged in a very powerful blow at one of Japan's strongest defenses in his announced intention of driving straight through the central Pacific to the China coast.

Bombers Attack Base

Coordinated attacks by bombers of all services saw a majority of the enemy's central Pacific bases also blasted on Friday and Saturday.

Airfields on Param, Eten, Dublon and Moen islands were the principal targets in a concentrated bombardment of the Truk group in the eastern Carolines. Ponape town and gun positions on Ponape, also in the Carolines, were pounded in the aerial offensive.

To the south, Nauru and Ocean islands, both producers of phosphate, were attacked. Several fires visible for 20 miles were started on Nauru, where planes dived low to strafe small craft. One Mitchell medium bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft fire but a Navy Catalina rescued the crew.

The Japanese also were harassed in the Marshall islands, where bombers attacked coastal defense guns and anti-aircraft batteries.

Lebanon Charter Guide Of New Greek Regime

New York, June 12 (AP)—Premier George Papandreou told the new Greek Cabinet in Cairo today that his Government of National Unity must show itself worthy of Greece by carrying out the national program as laid down by the Lebanon Charter, the Cairo radio said tonight.

The Greek Premier outlined as the first aim the "reconstruction and restoration of the morale among the armed forces of the Middle East under the flag of the Greek motherland," said the broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

All Greek naval units as well as the Greek air force were declared in action against the enemy and "winning laurels."

Papandreou said that, under the Lebanon Charter, the Government would press for the "abolition of a 'class' army and the creation of a national army" and the "insuring of personal safety and political liberty throughout Greece."

Death Of Capt. Dickson, Long Missing, Reported

New York, June 12 (AP)—Army Captain Jefferson Davis Dickson, Jr., 47, sports promoter previously reported missing, was killed in an air battle last July over Paris, the city in which he conducted numerous sporting events, his widow said tonight.

The death of Dickson, often called "the Tex Rickard of France," was reported in a War Department casualty list today.

His widow, the former Louise W. Edell Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, lives here with a 3-year-old daughter, Christine Lee. The couple were married in 1938 and Dickson applied for a commission in 1941.

"Six medium cargo transports.
"Six medium cargo vessels.
"Four small cargo vessels.

Largest In Single Report

"2. These actions have not been reported in any previous Navy Department communique."

The 18 sinkings accounted for in the latest announcement is the largest total reported in any single communique.

The submarine fleet in the Pacific now has stepped its average of sinkings up to better than two a day, with 63 ships accounted for in communiques during the last 30 days.

The Pacific submarine fleet is under the command of Vice-Admiral Charles A. Lockwood.

U. S. SUBCHASER LOST IN ACTION

Skipper Of Craft Has Wife Residing In Baltimore

Washington, June 12 (AP)—Loss of the submarine chaser PC-558 during action in the Mediterranean on May 9 was announced today by the navy.

The department did not disclose details on personnel losses, saying only that "next of kin of casualties have been notified." Vessels of that class usually have a complement of about 60 men.

The United States now has lost 159 naval ships in the war, 81 of them combatant vessels.

Wife Of Commander Lives Here

The PC-558 was commanded by Lieut. (j. g.) Edward C. Leber, of Blauvelt, N. Y., whose wife now is living at 100 West University Parkway, Baltimore.

Leber was wounded in the action but is among the survivors, it was reported.

The PC-558 was a 178-foot vessel built at the Luders Marine Construction Company, Stamford, Conn., and commissioned in November, 1942.

American Submarines Sink 18 More Jap Cargo Ships

JUN 13 1944

Washington, June 12 (AP)—The toll of Japanese ships sunk by American submarines rose today to 607 with a navy announcement that 18 more enemy vessels had been sent to the bottom.

All the ships reported in today's communique were cargo vessels or merchantmen needed by the enemy in supplying outlying posts.

The communique said:

"Pacific and Far East:

"1. United States submarines have reported sinking 18 vessels as a result of operations against the enemy in these waters, as follows:

"One large tanker.
"One medium transport.

SEES SECURITY PACT IN MAKING

JUN 13 1944

Allies Expected to Discuss Plans During Summer.

Washington, June 12 (A. P.).—A mid-summer meeting at Washington of American, British, Russian and Chinese representatives to discuss the formation of an international security organization apparently is in the making.

The State Department reportedly has received informal assurances that Britain and China are ready to talk business on implementing the Moscow pact and a Russian acceptance is expected as soon as it can be cleared through diplomatic channels. Andrei A. Gromyko, the Russian Ambassador, is returning to Moscow and officials here expect him to report on the matter there.

Meanwhile, Allied diplomats are known to be working on an agreement for the handling of a defeated Germany in the time immediately to follow the fighting. While there is no evidence here that any early collapse of Germany is expected, the attitude is: Be prepared for any possibility.

Terms for Germany are understood to call for its complete industrial demobilization, the dismantling of all war plants that cannot be devoted to peaceful production.

Plans for the big-four meeting in Washington, which President Roosevelt has insisted cannot be classed as a full-dress conference, are still indefinite, but the British are reported to favor conducting the preliminary conversations on an ambassadorial level.

The Moscow conference called for establishment as soon as practicable of a general international organization "based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving States, and open to membership by all such States, large and small."

While that declaration is expected to form the core of discussions, there have been indications that both the American and British plans contemplate initiative action by the big four, with smaller States to be invited into membership as soon as possible after the foundation is laid and the sidewalls go up.

President Roosevelt has indicated that the United States expects to preserve a certain freedom of action in cases where it otherwise might be called upon to move diplomatically or militarily against its wishes.

His statement at a recent press conference that the proposed organization would not impinge upon the integrity or independence of the United States in any way has been interpreted widely as strengthening the stand of those who have insisted that American sovereignty must not be surrendered to an assembly of nations.

Nazi "Savagery" Assailed

JUN 13 1944

Washington, June 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today the Nazis, facing defeat, are carrying on a "fiendish extermination campaign" against the oppressed peoples of Europe and added that this Government is determined to punish "all participants in these acts of savagery."

"This nation is appalled by the systematic persecution of helpless minority groups," the President said in a report to Congress.

"As the hour of the final defeat of the Hitlerite forces draws closer, the fury of their insane desire to wipe out the Jewish race in Europe continues undiminished. This is but one example: many Christian groups also are being murdered."

Reports On Refugee Work

"Knowing that they have lost the war, the Nazis are determined to complete their program of mass extermination. This program is but one manifestation of Hitler's aim to salvage from military defeat victory for Nazi principles—the very principles which this war must destroy unless we shall have fought in vain."

The President reported, in a message to Congress, on the work done by the United States to find temporary haven for refugees of the European war. He explained that the nearly 1,000 refugees who will be cared for in a military camp near Oswego, N. Y., will be returned to their homeland in southern Italy as soon as possible after hostilities cease.

New Hope, He Says

Mr. Roosevelt said the War Refugee Board—composed of the Secretaries of State, Treasury and War—has "brought new hope to the oppressed peoples of Europe."

The board, he said, is intrusted "with the solemn duty of translating this Government's humanitarian policy into prompt action, thus manifesting once again in a concrete way that our kind of world and not Hitler's will prevail. Its purpose is directly and closely related to our whole effort."

Meanwhile, Senator Holman (R., Ore.) questioned in the Senate today the authority of Mr. Roosevelt to provide a haven here for the refugees.

LATIN AMERICANS REASSURED BY HULL

Washington, June 12 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull said today any post-war use of military bases in Latin America would be a matter for decision on a mutally satisfactory basis and to the interest of all nations concerned.

He offered this comment in response to a press conference question as to whether he could allay reported apprehension by some South American spokesmen as to this country's post-war use of bases.

No names were mentioned, but Dr. Hernane Tavares de Sa, Brazilian educator, said last week that the relations of the United States with South America were deteriorating, as a result, among other things, of such apprehension.

Mr. Hull said that any apprehension about our future plans, purpose or theory regarding the bases was utterly absurd.

has been estimated at from $3,000,000,000 to $6,500,000,000.

Senator George (D.-Ga.), chairman of the finance committee, told his colleagues the Senate conferees had agreed reluctantly to House insistence that any benefits a veteran gets under the bill be deducted from any bonus he may be voted after the war.

Under the measure, a veteran would be entitled to $20 a week unemployment compensation for fifty-two weeks if he or she be out of a job during the first two years after discharge.

If his or her education was interrupted upon entering the service the veteran could get a year's schooling and in some cases a complete college education, with the Government paying $500 for a year's tuition, plus $50 a month for subsistence and another $25 for dependents. The Government would guarantee 50 per cent of private loans, at 4 per cent interest, up to a maximum of $2,000 to enable veterans to enter business or farming or to buy a home.

50,000 Names Are Listed at Sedition Trial

JUN 13 1944

Mrs. Roosevelt's Included; Nothing to Show Any of Them Sought Literature

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—The names of 50,000 Americans, including that of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, went into the records of the mass sedition trial today as addresses of foreign printed matter which the Post Office Department ruled was non-mailable.

There was nothing to indicate that persons named in a fourteen-volume mailing list offered by the prosecution had requested the literature.

Prosecutor Joseph W. Burns said the purpose was to show that "co-conspirators" in Germany attempted to maintain contact with certain of the twenty-nine defendants and with members of the armed forces, but defense attorneys immediately started reading other names aloud.

The list was compiled by the Los Angeles customs office between March 24 and Dec. 16, 1941. After compiling a so-called key code, showing the name of the sender, addressee and the nature of the publication, the mail itself was destroyed.

The entire list went in after defense attorneys argued that it was "unfair to pick out names here and there and withhold other names."

Names of most, but not all of the defendants, appeared on the list.

In addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, addresses included members of Congress, judges, government officials, editors, libraries, and corporations as well as private citizens. Much of the "non-mailable" matter came from Germany, but other countries were represented, including Russia.

Albert W. Dilling, attorney for and former husband of Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, remarked that while Mrs. Dilling's name appeared she never subscribed to any of the 2,000 publications mentioned. He said she received them "merely because her fame as an anti-Communist crusader had been spread to the four corners of the world."

The mail Mrs. Roosevelt didn't get was "The Japan Weekly Times" of Tokyo.

J. Austin Latimer, a defense attorney, said the names of Senators Ellison D. Smith and James F. Byrnes were among those listed for South Carolina. (Mr. Byrnes left the Senate to become an associate justice of the Supreme Court and now is director of war mobilization.)

Another defense atorney, Maximilian St. George, said "even J. Edgar Hoover and Justice Hugo L. Black of the Supreme Court" were listed.

Kellems Letters Yielded By Price Under Subpoena

Senators Find Scores Had Access to 'Secret' War Files

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—Byron Price, censorship director, in response to a subpoena from a Senate Post Office subcommittee inquiring into mail intercept leaks, today presented letters which he had previously declined to supply without that formal order because he said they are "part of the secret files of war."

The correspondence involved was an exchange between Miss Vivien Kellems, Connecticut war-plant operator, and Count Frederick von Zedlitz. Their publication by a Washington columnist and discussion by a Congressman led to the investigation.

It was developed by the committee through witnesses today that scores of employees had access to confidential letters in the secret war files of the State Department. The disclosure came with the questioning of George P. Shaw, assistant chief of the department's division of foreign activity.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, then remarked:

"One of 100 people could have made copies of these letters," and added: "Anybody from the office boys to the charwomen could have read them."

"The office boys couldn't," Shaw replied. "Neither could the charwomen."

Supreme Court Overrules Spy Act Conviction

JUN 13 1944

Decides for Defendant in Espionage Case, Then Adjourns for Summer

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—In two decisions the Supreme Court today set aside the conviction of a Chicago statistician on charges of violating the espionage act by circulating pamphlets allegedly aimed at inciting insubordination in the armed forces, and revoked cancellation of citizenship of a German-born critic of the government accused of falsely pledging allegiance to the United States.

At the conclusion of today's meeting the court adjoined for the summer.

The espionage case, the first prosecution under the 1917 espionage act to reach the Supreme Court in the current war, involved Elmer Hartzel, a native of Pennsylvania. He was charged with circulating three pamphlets to many prominent persons and to at least four high-ranking Army officers, aimed at attempting to produce insubordination, disloyalty mutiny or refusal to serve in the armed forces.

The court split, 5 to 4, Associate Justice Frank Murphy, who wrote the majority opinion, saying that while ideas expressed by Hartzel were "odious," the American citizen "has the right" of discussion "either by temperate reasoning" or by "invective." The opinion said there was not sufficient evidence to show that Hartzel intended by the pamphlets to bring about insubordination or other disturbances in the military services or that there was a "clear and present danger" that his activities might bring about the "evils" prohibited by the act.

"No direct or affirmative appeals are made to that effect and no mention is made of military personnel or of persons registered under the selective training and service act," Justice Murphy said. "They (the pamphlets) contain instead vicious and unreasoning attacks on one of our military allies, flagrant appeals to false and sinister racial theories and gross libels of the President."

Associate Justice Stanley F. Reed, with Associate Justices Felix Frankfurter, William O. Douglas and Robert H. Jackson concurring, dissented, contending there was ample evidence to warrant a conviction.

Effect on Sedition Trial

[There was immediate speculation that the ruling might have an effect on the current sedition trial in which twenty-nine persons are charged with conspiracy to undermine moral of the armed forces and promote insubordination, The United Press said. It was believed that the high court's decision might tend to define more closely what the government must prove.]

In the citizenship case, settled unanimously by the court, Justice Frankfurter declared that a naturalized citizen has as much right as a native-born American to criticize public men and measures.

"That means not only informed and responsible criticism, but the freedom to speak foolishly and without moderation," Justice Frankfurter said, adding that there was not "sufficient proof" of the allegiance reservations charged by the Justice Department.

The decision reversed the 1942 cancellation by the Western Missouri Federal Court of the citizenship granted in 1932 to Carl Wilhelm Baumgartner, of Kansas City, Mo., former German officer taken prisoner by the British in the World War, who was accused of praising Hitler, while criticizing President Roosevelt and becoming an organizer for the German Bund.

Among other actions today the court:

Unanimously ruled that a member of a labor union may not refuse to produce records of his union before a grand jury on the contention they might incriminate him.

Ordered reargument in October of a case involving Texas legislation which requires paid labor union organizers to register with the Secretary of State before soliciting for members. R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliate, has challenged validity of the state law.

Refuses Hartford Company

Refused the Hartford-Empire Company, of Hartford, a rehearing on the tribunal's decision last month which set aside a Circuit Court finding that a disputed plant held by Hartford-Empire was valid.

Unable for lack of a quorum to rule on the government's anti-trust suit against the Alumnium Company of America, the Supreme Court sent the litigation to the 2d Federal Circuit Court for action pursuant to legislation signed Saturday by President Roosevelt.

Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone and Justices Reed, Murphy and Jackson disqualified themselves in this case. The law requires that Supreme Court business must be transacted by at least six of the nine justices. Why Justice Stone declared himself ineligible was not announced. Justices Jackson and Murphy were Attorneys General, and Justice Reed was Solicitor General when the case was prosecuted by the Justice Department.

The Federal District Court at New York, after a trial lasting twenty-six months, held at the Justice Department had failed to prove its charges that the aluminum company had violated the Sherman act by possessing a monopoly in the production and sale of aluminum.

Under the law signed last week, Congress provided that the issue may be determined by the Circuit Court.

Byrnes Urges Tax Slash As Soon as the War Ends

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP) Senators looking for a way to ease the economic change-over from war to peace began perfecting demobilization legislation today after hearing James F. Byrnes say it ought to be enacted promptly but that he didn't want the job of directing reconversion.

To members of a special Senate committee and a military sub-committee, each of which is considering demobilization measures, the war mobilization director submitted half a dozen recommendations. One was that Congress put in "spade work" now on a post-war tax bill because "war taxation should end with the end of the war."

Bill Ready This Week

Chairman Murray (D-Mont) of the Military subcommittee said a demobilization bill would be ready for the full committee before the close of the week. He and Chairman George (D-Ga) of the special post-war committee are joint authors of a demobilization plan and Senator Kilgore (D-WVa) has introduced another.

All of them want to create an office of war mobilization and post-war adjustment, and Byrnes indorsed that proposition. If President Roosevelt should offer him the directorship, Byrnes said, "I feel that at that time the mobilization situation will be such that I could decline to accept, and I would so decline."

He explained to a reporter that he gave up a place on the Supreme court to direct mobilization and that when mobilization was completed "I've got some other things I want to do in life."

In addition to a start on post-war revenue legislation now, Byrnes asked for:

Early House passage of a Senate-approved war contract termination bill.

An inducement to states, in the form of Federal financial help if necessary, to liberalize unemployment compensation laws during the war-to-peace transition period.

Unemployment compensation for Federal industrial workers—such as those who work in Navy yards and arsenals.

Transportation of war workers back to their homes.

Aid for Small Plants

Greater authority and lending powers for the smaller war plants corporation.

Prompt enactment of legislation setting policies for disposing of surplus war property.

Many of Byrnes' proposals duplicated recommendations submitted to the Senate today by George's special post-war committee. The committee devoted a large segment of its report to the problem of employment, figuring full employment must be available at the end of the war for 54 to 56 million people. That is 8 to 10 million more than ever have been employed in peacetime.

The committee listed 16 ways the committee could help avoid "economic chaos." It mentioned, as did Byrnes, legislation in the fields of post-war taxes (perhaps with "drastically lower" rates) and unemployment compensation.

Navy Acts to Halt Propaganda Against Receiving Station

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Naval authorities yesterday described what they termed an organized attempt by the enemy to impair the morale of United States naval forces by means of a propaganda and whispering campaign against the naval receiving station here—largest of its kind in the country—and the station's officers.

Capt. William H. Pashley, commander of the receiving station, said the propaganda was calculated to impress sailors with the hardships of naval life. It characterized living conditions at the station as "dirty and intolerable."

To offset this propaganda, Capt. Pashley took newspapermen on a tour of the spick and span receiving station, where tens of thousands of seamen are assigned each year to vessels, and of Harts Island, where 1,600 seamen are confined in disciplinary barracks.

Capt. Pashley said the propaganda line sometimes takes the form of personal attacks by word of mouth and anonymous letters libeling him and members of his staff as well as their wives.

"This is a swell place, from the enemy's point of view, to start that prapaganda," Capt. Pashley said. "Disaffection could spread through the fleet because so many men pass through here for all sorts of assignments."

He added, "We are continually getting anonymous letters. We don't know who writes them, although we made several attempts to find out. We do know, from the complaints we have received, that the propaganda has reached into the homes of our sailors."

Morgenthau Discloses War Has Cost U. S. 200 Billion

Another 95 Billion Needed This Year, He Says in Opening Bond Drive.

TEXARKANA, U.S.A., June 12.—(AP) The United States has spent $200,000,000,000 on the war so far and before the year is out another $95,000,000,000 will be spent, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., said here tonight to officially open the Fifth War Loan drive.

"General Marshall told me last Wednesday before he left for England that our war expenditure for the last three months of this year will be the highest yet and that we've just started," the Treasury head said in a script prepared for delivery on a four-network broadcast that opened the campaign for $16,000,000,000.

"To march from Naples to Rome cost $6,700,000,000. I leave it to you to imagine what it will cost to march from Rome to Berlin.

"The cost of taking the Marshall islands was $6,000,000,000. I leave it to you to imagine what it will cost us to go from the Marshall islands to Tokyo."

Urging support of the Fifth War Loan drive, Morgenthau stated: "The harder we fight the sooner we're going to win. If our armed forces don't get the money they need—all the money they need—they can't fight as hard, and they can't win as soon. It's just as simple as that.

"The very life of democracy is the people's trust in themselves. The people can finance their security in a free world."

"The war isn't over yet," Morgenthau stated as he unleashed the nation's newest bond drive, a drive which had already achieved considerable momentum in many sections of the country with invasion-spurred sales.

"Our military leaders and the men fighting under their command ardently hope and sincerely believe that there are no Americans who need to be told that this is the wrong time to relax.

"Tonight let us tell each other what we dare not forget; this is the time for new effort; this is the time for fresh exertion, the time [illegible] for more from all of us—more of everything — everything we're called on to give for this great crusade — everything we're called on to make for it with our hands—everything we must hold steadfast in our hearts.

"This is a time for reaffirming that faith by which we live — that fighting faith with which our country — together with all free countries—defends its life today—that marching faith by which free peoples are moving into the future."

Medical Care in Pacific Held Better Than at Home

Col. Finney Says Equipment in Hospitals Is Excellent

BALTIMORE, June 12 (AP).—Army medical care in the South Pacific is "way above the average at home at any time," in the opinion of Colonel George G. Finney, commanding officer of the Johns Hopkins hospital unit in that area.

Colonel Finney, who returned to Baltimore on a thirty-day leave, said he based his appraisal on his observations during visits to a dozen other hospitals in addition to that at his own base, which he remarked had played a "non-glamorous" part in the Pacific war to date.

In the tropics, he reported, medical men had approached the job of caring for battle casualties with the idea that wounds would not heal as readily and that there would be more infections than encountered elsewhere.

"We've found that is not so," he continued. "Morbidity—illness and deaths of casuals—is very low and a lot of that is the result of preventive medicine. . . .

"Medical care of the Army as a whole is way above the average of home at any time, peace or war. The equipment supplied to us—and I saw this after seeing ten or twelve hospitals—is uniformly excellent."

Ship Will Be Named For Nicaraguan Poet

By the Associated Press.

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 12.—Ruben Darco, well known Nicaraguan poet, will be honored here in the near future when a Liberty ship bearing his name is launched.

The poet, who died in 1916, was one-time Minister to Spain for his country.

Senora Lillian Samoza de Sevilla Sacasa, daughter of the President of Nicaragua and wife of the country's Ambassador to the United States, will christen the vessel. She will be accompanied by her husband, Guillermo Sevilla Sacasa, and his brother, Alberto Sevilla Sacasa, first secretary of the Embassy at Washington.

The program is to include an address by Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress.

Tells Graduates Navy Faces Long War

Sewanee, Tenn., June 12 (A. P.).—Vice-Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of naval personnel, told Navy V-12 graduates today that they need have no fear that the major part of sea fighting will be ended before they are ready for duty as officers.

In an address prepared for delivery at the University of the South's commencement, he said "No officer with whom I have talked, who has come to grips with the enemy, expects anything but a bitter struggle of mounting ferocity.

"We have begun to assume the offensive on a scale that has hitherto been impossible," he said, "but we are still a long way from Tokyo. Before victory is won, I expect you to be experienced, competent naval officers."

Alice Leone Moats Formally Readmitted

Miami, Fla., June 12 (AP)—Alice Leone Moats, journalist who spent three weeks in France in April, was formally admitted to the United States today after being questioned at length by various Government agents.

She arrived by clipper last Thursday night.

John Burling, deputy administrator of foreign control, said the questioning is routine in the case of all civilians who enter enemy territory.

The United States Immigration and Naturalization Service at Philadelphia reported that Miss Moats' pasport was canceled at Lisbon last month, but the writer said ia was returned to her there.

Miss Moats, author of "Blind Date with Mars" and a correspondent for Collier's Weekly, said she entered and left France by walking across the border at night. She told of spending five days in Paris.

WE WERE LIKE SITTING DUCKS, DUE TO THE SLOWNESS OF THE CONVOY, BUT SKIPPER MAC LEOD KEPT HIS COURSE AND MAINTAINED THE SAME SPEED UNTIL THE SHIPS BEHIND HIM WENT DOWN. THEN WE SPED UP TWO KNOTS.

THE LSTS THAT WENT DOWN WERE IDENTIFIED AS NUMBERS 314 AND 376. WE HAVE NO INFORMATION ABOUT SURVIVORS, ALTHOUGH WE COULD SEE SEVERAL BLOBS IN THE WATER WHICH LOOKED LIKE SMALL BOATS.

WHEN WE ARRIVED OFF THE BEACHHEAD WE FOUND THE WARSHIPS STILL SHELLING THE SHORE, AND SCORES UPON SCORES OF ANCHORED SHIPS WAITING TO BE UNLOADED. THE CONGESTION OFF SHORE INDICATED THAT THERE WAS A SERIOUS SITUATION ASHORE.

THE CRUISER TUSCALOOSA WAS FIRING HIGH ARCHING SHOTS ASHORE, WITH THE QUINCY STANDING BY AS WELL AS THREE BRITISH CRUISERS AND A NUMBER OB DESTROYERS.

FROM THIS VIEWPOINT WE WERE A LONG WAY FROM SECURING THE PROPER UNLOADING PLACE FOR OUR SHIPS.

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-IT IS A ROUGH WAR IN THIS SECTOR. ALL DAY AND ALL NIGHT SHELLS ARE DROPPING ON THE PLEASANT FRENCH COUNTRYSIDE AND THE DIN OF GUNFIRE IS TERRIFIC.

GERMAN SNIPERS GRADUALLY ARE BEING WEEDED OUT. ONE OF THEM WAS BROUGHT INTO HEADQUARTERS TODAY, HIS FACE CHALK WHITE AND TREMBLING WITH TERROR.

"THEY WILL SHOOT ME," HE KEPT MUMBLING OVER AND OVER.

--DASH--

THERE ARE SOME COMPENSATIONS FOR THE ROUGHNESS OF THE SITUATION, HOWEVER. TODAY OUR HOSTESS CAME IN BEAMING. AFTER FORAGING FOR HOURS SHE HAD MANAGED TO PRODUCE THESE LUXURIES FOR DINNER: FRESH ASPARAGUS, ARTICHOKES, LETTUCE, TWO POUNDS OF CREAMY BUTTER AND A GREAT BOWL OF CAPTURED GERMAN BEEF.

IT SURPASSED ANY DINNER I HAVE HAD IN MONTHS.

NOW, HOWEVER, I'M WEARING A COMFORTABLE PAIR OF GERMAN SLIPPERS, ABANDONED BY SOME NAZI IN FLIGHT. I ALSO HAVE ON A CLEAN GERMAN ARMY SHIRT AND SOCKS. IN MY KIT IS A GOOD GERMAN FLASHLIGHT.

JUST A MOMENT AGO A LITTLE FRENCHMAN, HIS FACE WREATHED IN SMILES, CAME IN WITH TWO DUST COVERED BOTTLES OF CHAMPAGNE, VINTAGE OF 1923. THE PRICE? ONE HUNDRED FRANCS--TWO DOLLARS FOR BOTH BOTTLES WHAT A WAR!

WHEN THE AMERICANS SWARMED ONTO THE BEACHES THROUGH MURDEROUS SURF, ANGRY GERMAN GUNS MOWED THEM DOWN. THE COLD GREEDY WATER OF THE WRATHFUL CHANNEL, LASHED BY A THREE-DAY WIND, CLUTCHED AT SOME, SUCKIN THEM DOWN.

THIS BATTLE WAS SO FIERCE THAT OUR GRAVE REGISTRATION OFFICERS--MEN WHO BURY THE DEAD AND TELL THE FOLKS HOME ABOUT THEM--HAD TO SPEND MOST OF THEIR TIME IN FOXHOLES. WHEN THE ENEMY RETREATEI INTO THE HILLS THESE OFFICERS GATHERED THEIR WEARY MEN AND BEGAN BRINC BODIES TO THIS PLACE--WHERE THE GREEN GRASS IS TURNED BLACK FROM THE FURY OF HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

ANOTHER CEMETERY IS BEING PREPARED NEARBY BECAUSE THIS HALLOWED GROUND IS TOO SMALL TO CARE FOR THE MEN WHO WILL NOT FIGHT AGAIN.

WITH CANADIAN FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 12--THE ROAR OF AIRPLANES THUNDERED IN THE BLUE, CLOUDLESS SKY OVER THE ALLIED BEACHHEAD IN THIS SECTOR OF NORMANDY TODAY AS THE ALLIED AIR FORCES TOOK FULL ADVANTAGE OF EXCELLENT FLYING WEATHER.

THIS MORNING LARGE FORMATIONS OF BOMBERS, FLYING IN TIGHTLY-PACKED GROUPS, WINGED OVER US GOING SOUTH AND FROM THE CAEN AREA CAME GERMAN FLAK WHICH BURST BLACK AROUND THE BIG PLANES. CAEN IS A MAIN ALLIED OBJECTIVE IN THIS REGION.

ALLIED FIGHTERS ARE SWARMING ALL OVER THIS PART OF NORMANDY AND EACH DAY BRINGS MORE FIGHTERS ON PATROL.

IT MUST HAVE AN EXTREMELY DEMORALIZING EFFECT ON THE GERMANS HOLDING THE CAEN BULGE. THE ENEMY NOW IS ON THE DEFENSIVE ALONG A LINE RUNNING WEST AND NORTHWEST FROM CAEN.

EAST OF THE RIVER ORNE SOME ADVANCES WERE MADE. BRITISH AND CANADIAN AIR-BORNE TROOPS OF THE BRITISH 6TH AIRBORNE DIVISIONS CONTINUE TO DO A SPLENDID JOB ON THAT FLANK.

DURING THE NIGHT THERE WAS MORE SHELLFIRE AND ALLIED NAVAL GUNS ALSO WERE IN ACTION.

IT IS ESTIMATED THAT ON THE BRITISH-CANADIAN SECTOR GERMAN PRISONERS TAKEN SINCE D-DAY TOTAL ABOUT 3,200 EXCLUSIVE OF THE WOUNDED. CANADIAN AND BRITISH CASUALTIES CANNOT BE GIVEN YET, BUT THEY ARE CONSIDERABLY LESS THAN THE GERMAN LOSSES.

MOST ENEMY POCKETS OF RESISTANCE HAVE BEEN CLEANED UP, WITH ONE NOTABLE EXCEPTION, IN THIS SECTOR AND THE SNIPER MENACE BEHIND THE FRONT NOW IS PRACTICALLY ELIMINATED. YOU CAN DRIVE TO THE FRONT NOW WITHOUT THE CONTINUAL THREAT OF BEING SHOT AT BY SOME ENEMY LURKING IN THE WOODS, SITTING IN TREES OR HIDDEN IN THE ROOF OF A BAR

THIS HAS BEEN A HECTIC BUT HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL WEEK'S CAMPAIGNING AND ALTHOUGH CAEN IS NOT CAPTURED YET A CONSIDERABLE GERMAN FORCE HAS BEEN BROUGHT TO BATTLE AND HIT HARD.

AN AMERICAN FRONT LINE SECTOR IN FRANCE, JUNE 12--AMERICA'S TOP RANKING ARMY AND NAVY AND AIR FORCE CHIEFS ACCOMPANIED GEN. DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER ON A VISIT TO THE AMERICAN BEACHHEAD, TODAY TO SEE IT FOR THEMSELVES.

THE PARTY ARRIVED ABOARD A DESTROYER AT 11:17 A.M. IN ADDITION TO GEN.EISENHOWER, THE GROUP INCLUDED GEN.GEORGE C.MARSHALL, U.S. CHIEF OF STAFF; GEN.HENRY H.ARNOLD,U.S. AIR CHIEF; ADMIRAL ERNEST J. KING, COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE U.S. FLEET;LT.GEN.OMAR N. BRADLEY, COMMANDER OF AMERICAN GROUND FORCES IN FRANCE, AND REAR ADMIRAL ALAN G. KIRK AND REAR ADMIRAL JOHN LESLIE HALL, COMMANDERS OF NAVAL TASK FORCES IN THE INVASION.

IMMEDIATELY UPON LANDING THE MEN DROVE TO AN EMERGENCY LANDING FIELD DIRECTLY ABOVE THE BEACH ON A PLATEAU, WHERE THEY WATCHED EVACUATION HOSPITAL PLANES TAKING OFF FOR ENGLAND WITH WOUNDED.

THEY THEN DROVE TO WITHIN FIVE MILES OF BIERCE FIGHTING BEING WAGED IN THE CARENTAN SECTOR AND SAW BLOCK-LONG ROWS OF SHATTERED BUILDINGS--RUINS STILL BURNING AND SMOKE RISING FROM ALL THE TOWN.

GEN.EISENHOWER CLAMBERED IN AND OUT OF HIS COMMAND CAR. HE GOT OUT IN ISIGNY, CAPTURED ONLY TWO DAYS BEFORE BY HIS ASSAULT TROOPS. HE SAW BLASTED BUILDINGS, ROWS OF STONE NOW TUMBLED TO THE GROUND. FIRES WERE BURNING IN SEVERAL STRUCTURES AND THE ORANGE FLAMES STOOD OUT AGAINST THE BRIGHT BLUE NORMANDY SKY.

WHEN THE PARTY PULLED UP THE VILLAGERS BROKE INTO CHEERS.

AT ONE MAIN ARMY HEADQUARTERS THE EISENHOWER PARTY HAD LUNCH-- AMERICAN ARMY "C" RATIONS, WHICH ARE STANDARD FOR ALL TROOPS IN THE AREA.

JUN 13 1944

THEY WERE TAKEN TO A CAPTURED GERMAN 155-MILLIMETER GUN EMPLACEMENT WHICH COMMANDED THE HARBOR AND EVEN NOW POINTED TOWARD THE NORTHERN PART OF THE AMERICAN BEACH STRIP. EISENHOWER TESTED THE GUN WITH HIS HANDS AND INQUIRED ABOUT DEFACING MARKS ON THE BARREL.

AFTER DRIVING THROUGH GRANDCAMP, ISIGNY AND ALONG THE CIRCUITOUS ROUTE THROUGH THE BEACHHEAD, THE PARTY BOARDED AMPHIBIOUS DUCKS AND WERE TAKEN TO ANOTHER BEACHHEAD SECTOR, WHERE THEY MADE A FURTHER INSPECTION, AND THEN REJOINED THEIR DESTROYER, LYING OFF SHORE, FOR DEPARTURE TO ENGLAND.

GWARTNEY TRIED TO GET OFFICIAL PERMISSION FOR THE FLIGHT. WHEN IT DIDN'T COME THROUGH, HE STOWED HIS HELMET AND RIFLE IN THE REAR OF THE GLIDER WHICH HE KNEW WOULD BE FIRST TO TAKE OFF LAST MONDAY NIGHT.

THEN THE RUGGED, 5-FOOT-11-INCH CORPORAL, A FORMER MARINE, MINER AND OIL FIELD LABORER, WATCHED HIS CHANCE AND, ABOUT TEN MINUTES BEFORE THE TAKEOFF, CRAWLED INTO THE TAIL.

ONCE THE GLIDER TRAIN HAD CROSSED THE CHANNEL, GWARTNEY REPORTED TO THE FLYING OFFICER AND, AS HE RECALLS, THE CONVERSATION RAN SOMEWHAT LIKE THIS:

"HAVE YOU GOT ROOM FOR A HITCHHIKER?"

"WHAT THE HELL ARE YOU DOING HERE?"

THE GLIDER LANDED UNDER GERMAN FIRE. ITS UNDERCARRIAGE WAS SMASHED AND ITS CONTENTS OF ONE ANTI-TANK GUN AND QUOTA OF SOLDIERS WERE DUMPED INTO A DITCH.

AMERICAN PARATROOPERS NEARBY OPENED FIRE ON THE GERMANS. GWARTNEY, DESPITE THE BROKEN RIB SUFFERED IN THE LANDING, AIDED HIS COMPANIONS IN SALVAGING A JEEP FROM ANOTHER WRECKED GLIDER AND HALING THEIR GUN OUT OF THE DITCH.

"GERMAN FIRE SLACKENED AND ANOTHER GLIDER WAVE CAME IN," GWARTNEY SAID. "ONE BIG GLIDER HIT A TREE. THE CO-PILOT'S PARACHUTE GOT HUNG UP IN THE TREE. I CUT HIM DOWN AND GOT A MEDIC."

ROME, JUNE 12-(AP)-MRS.MARGARET ROOSEVELT PALLAVICINI, COUSIN OF PRESIDENT AND MRS.ROOSEVELT WHO ELUDED GERMANS BY HIDING IN A CONVENT DURING THE NAZI OCCUPATION OF ROME, SAID TODAY SHE ONCE SAW A GERMAN PLANE BOMB A NEARBY HOSPITAL "APPARENTLY SO IT WOULD BE BLAMED ON THE AMERICANS."

WITH HER DAUGHTER, JULIA, 6, MRS.PALLAVICINI REMAINED IN THE CONVENT TO AVOID CAPTURE BY THE GERMANS, WHO KNEW SHE WAS RELATED TO PRESIDENT AND MRS.ROOSEVELT. SHE IS THE DAUGHTER OF GEORGE EMLEM ROOSEVELT OF NEW YORK, WHO IS A FIRST COUSIN OF MRS.ROOSEVELT AND A MORE DISTANT COUSIN OF THE PRESIDENT.

"THE CONVENT IS NEAR THE TIBURTINA RAILROAD YARDS," SHE RELATED, "AND LOTS OF BOMBS FELL NEARBY. WE USUALLY RAN THROUGH THE GARDEN TO AN AIR RAID SHELTER. ONE DAY IN MARCH I LOOKED OUT SEE PLANES COMING STRAIGHT FOR US. WE DIDN'T HAVE TIME TO LEAVE THE CONVENT AND THIS WAS LUCKY, AS SEVEN BOMBS FELL IN THE GARDEN. IT'S A TERRIBLE THING TO BE BOMBED BY YOUR OWN PEOPLE."

RELATING THE INCIDENT OF THE HOSPITAL BOMBING BY GERMANS SHE SAID: "WE ALWAYS KNEW, OF COURSE, THE AMERICANS WERE AIMING FOR MILITARY OBJECTIVES AND THEIR BOMBING WAS AS ACCURATE AS POSSIBLE, I SUPPOSE, EVEN THOUGH A FEW BOMBS HIT OTHER PLACES."

MRS.PALLAVICINI WAS MARRIED TO ALESSANDRO PALLAVICINI, AN ITALIAN NEWSREEL PRODUCER, IN 1935 AND HAS LIVED IN ITALY SINCE. TO AVOID THE GERMANS AND FASCISTS HE ENTERED VATICAN CITY. THE COUPLE WAS RE-UNITED AFTER THE AMERICANS ENTERED ROME.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY BEYOND NUNZIATELLA, JUNE 12-(AP)-RETREATING GERMANS HAVE THROWN UP A NEW LINE OF FORTIFICATIONS BETWEEN LAKE BOLSENA AND THE TYRRHENIAN SEA BUT THE FIFTH ARMY DOUGHBOYS ADVANCING NORTHWEST OF ROME WERE BARGING RIGHT THROUGH THEM.

IN THE PAST 24 HOURS THE U.S. TROOPS HAVE TORN SOME OF THE ENEMY FORTIFICATIONS APART, KILLED 100 GERMANS AND TAKEN MORE THAN 100 PRISONERS, SOME OF THEM MONGOLIAN AND TURKESTAN TROOPS.

THE GERMAN LINE WAS MUCH MORE HASTILY PUT TOGETHER THAN THE LINES THE ALLIES CRACKED BEFORE REACHING ROME.

CHIEF ACTION DURING THE PAST 24 HOURS WAS FOUR MILES NORTHEAST OF HERE. AMERICANS TANGLED WITH THE 162ND DIVISION WHICH THE NAZIS RUSHED INTO THIS LINE AND WHEN THE BATTLE WAS OVER ONE UNIT OF THE ENEMY OUTFIT BROUGHT TO ITALY FROM RUSSIA WAS VIRTUALLY WIPED OUT.

LT.JOSEPH DINE, WORCESTER, MASS., SAID HIS SOLDIERS COUNTED THE BODIES OF 35 GERMANS IN ONE DRAW ALONE.

FIRST EVIDENCE THE NAZIS HAD DUG NEW SET POSITIONS TURNED UP WHEN THE ENEMY COUNTERATTACKED ALONG THE COASTAL ROAD ABOVE NUNZIATELLA EARLY YESTERDAY, TURNING LOOSE BLISTERING FIRE FROM ARTILLERY AND SMALL ARMS AND SOME ARMOR. ALTHOUGH THE ATTACK FAILED TO TURN BACK THE AMERICANS IT TEMPORARILY HALTED THEIR DRIVE, WHICH HAD PUNCHED FORWARD MORE THAN 15 MILES IN A SINGLE DAY.

AFTER THE COUNTERATTACK THE ENEMY MAY HAVE FALLEN BACK, SINCE AIR RECONNAISSANCE TODAY SHOWED NEITHER GUNS NOR TROOPS ALONG THE NEXT FEW MILES ALONG THE HIGHWAY.

SOME OF THE MONGOLIAN AND TURKESTAN TROOPS SAID THEY HAD BEEN IMPRISONED SINCE THEY WERE CAPTURED IN THE FIRST BATTLE OF STALINGRAD IN 1942 AND HAD BEEN PRESSED INTO SERVICE ONLY RECENTLY.

NEW YORK--FIRST ADD DICKSON DEATH XXX IN 1941.

DICKSON WAS A JACKSON, MISS. BOY WHO MADE GOOD IN THE BIG CITY. HE WAS KNOWN ON BOTH SIDES OF THE ATLANTIC AND THE FIGHT CROWD ON BROADWAY WAS SADDENED BY NEWS OF HIS DEATH.

AL WEILL, PROMINENT FIGHT MANAGER, EXPRESSED THE BROADWAY SENTIMENT BY DECLARING "HE WAS A VERY SMART FELLOW AND A VERY GOOD PROMOTER. HIS WORD WAS HIS BOND. THE LAST TIME I SAW HIM WAS IN 1941 WHEN WE HAD HAD CHAMPAGNE TOGETHER IN LOS ANGELES."

HIS RICKARDIAN LUCK HELPED IN HIS PROMOTION OF BIG OUTDOOR BOUTS. "IT'S SIMPLY NOT GOING TO RAIN WHEN I'M HAVING A FIGHT," HE SAID FIVE YEARS AGO. "I'VE NEVER EVEN TAKEN OUT RAIN INSURANCE."

JUN 13 1944

"I AM VERY PROUD," HIS WIDOW, MRS.LOUISE DICKSON SAID IN HER SUITE AT THE WALDORF ASTORIA TOWERS WHERE SHE IS STAYING WITH THEIR THREE-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER, CHRISTINE LEE. "I WOULD NOT HAVE HAD IT ANY OTHER WAY.

AFTER DISTINGUISHED SERVICE IN THE SIGNAL CORPS IN WORLD WAR I, CAPT.DICKSON RETURNED TO THE UNITED STATES, WHERE HE PRODUCED A MOTION PICTURE FOR MARION DAVIES, AND THEN WENT BACK TO FRANCE

WHERE, IN PARIS, HE ESTABLISHED THE PALAIS DE SPORTS.

CAPT.DICKSON OPENED OFFICES IN BARCELONA, MADRID, BRUSSELS, AND LONDON IN CONNECTION WITH HIS SPORTS PROMOTIONS. IN LONDON HE FOUNDED THE JEFFERSON DICKSON SPORTS PROMOTION COMPANY.

DURING WORLD WAR I, HE ALSO SERVED AS A MEMBER OF GENERAL PERSHING'S STAFF. LATER, HE PRODUCED MORE THAN 100 TRAVELOGUE PICTURES IN ALGIERS, MOROCCO, TUNISIA, EGYPT, ROUMANIA, RUSSIA, GERMANY AND FRANCE.

JUN 131944

IN THE LATTER THIRTIES HE RETURNED AGAIN TO THE UNITED STATES AND FOUNDED THE NATCHEZ HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION AT NATCHEZ, MISS.

CAPT.DICKSON WAS THE RECIPIENT OF NINE DECORATIONS FROM THE GOVERNMENTS OF FRANCE, TUNISIA AND MOROCCO.

(ADVANCE)..NEW YORK, JUNE 10-(AP)-THERE IS ENOUGH FOOD TO SUPPLY ACTUAL RELIEF DEMANDS OF INVADED EUROPE DURING THE NEXT 15 MONTHS "WITHOU CURBING CIVILIAN CONSUMPTION IN THE UNITED STATES," THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF FOOD DISTRIBUTION DECLARED TODAY.

ALTHOUGH SUPPLYING MILK WILL BE A "SERIOUS PROBLEM," THE FOOD INSTITUTE SAID OTHER RELIEF FOODS--WHEAT OR FLOUR, SUGAR, FATS, DRY BEANS AND PEAS, PORK AND SALT--HAVE BEEN ACCUMULATED BY THE ARMY AND THROUGH GOVERNMENT BUYING OR SHOULD BE AVAILABLE FROM DOMESTIC OUT-PUT.

"FOOD STOCKPILES HAVE BEEN BUILT UP IN GREAT BRITAIN, NORTH AFRICA AND ITALY. THE BRITISH ALSO HAVE MADE AVAILABLE FOOD RESERVES HELD AS PROTECTION AGAINST RETURN OF THE U-BOAT MENACE," THE AGENCY SAID IN ITS WEEKLY DIGEST TO APPROXIMATELY 3,000 FOOD WHOLESALERS, RETAILERS, CANNERS AND PROCESSORS.

THE INSTITUTE SAID NO DRIED FRUITS OR SEMI-LUXURY FOODS WERE TO BE DELIVERED TO EUROPE FOR RELIEF AND NO BUTTER AND LITTLE CHEESE WILL BE USED AT FIRST--"UNLESS THERE IS A GREATER SHORTAGE OF FATS OR HIGH PROTEIN MEATS THAN SEEMS POSSIBLE."

IN OUTLINING THE JOB AHEAD FOR THE AMERICAN MILITARY GOVERNMENT (AMG), THE INSTITUTE COMMENTED:

VANDEGRIFT, MARINE CORPS COMMANDANT SAID TONIGHT IN A PREPARED ADDRESS BEFORE THE COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY DIVISION OF THE NEW YORK WAR FINANCE COMMITTEE.

30.24— 16195

"AFTER THE NAVAL BATTLES OFF GUADALCANAL IN NOVEMBER, 1942, ADMIRAL HALSEY HAD ONLY ONE AIRCRAFT CARRIER, WHICH HAD BEEN HIT, ONE BATTLESHIP, ONE CRUISER AND SOME DESTROYERS.

"TODAY, WE ARE TOLD, THE ALLIES HAVE 68 AIRCRAFT CARRIERS IN THE PACIFIC. WE NOW CAN MOUNT THOUSAND-PLANE ATTACKS ON JAPANESE STRONGHOLDS FROM THESE CARRIERS."

JUN 131944

THE DRIVE IN NEW YORK CITY OPENED WITH CEREMONIES ATTENDED BY 10,000 PERSONS, ON THE LOWER LEVEL OF ROCKEFELLER PLAZA.

ONE OF THE FIRST BOND BUYERS AS 900,000 VOLUNTEER WORKERS WENT INTO ACTION IN THE STATE WAS PETER PAPPAS, A CENTRAL PARK CONCESSIONAIRE.

HE BOUGHT A $1,000 BOND AT A "WEAPONS FOR WAR" EXHIBIT AND WAS ASKED WHAT HE WOULD LIKE AS A MEMENTO OF THE PURCHASE.

"A RIDE IN A JEEP," HE SAID.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES HE WAS IN A JEEP. OTHER BOND BUYERS AT THE EXHIBIT ALSO GOT RIDES.

GOV. THOMAS E. DEWEY IN A MESSAGE TO NEVIL FORD, STATE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOND DRIVE, SAID THE GOVERNMENT IN EACH WAR LOAN DRIVE HAD ASKED FOR "SEEMINGLY IMPOSSIBLE SUMS" BUT THAT THE RESPONSE OF THE PEOPLE HAD BEEN WARMER AND MORE GRATIFYING EACH TIME.

HE EXPRESSED CONFIDENCE THAT THE PEOPLE OF NEW YORK STATE WOULD OVERSUBSCRIBE THEIR $4,001,000,000 QUOTA.

"VICTORY IS IN THE AIR," FORD TOLD THE RALLY. "IT REMAINS FOR US TO BRING IT DOWN TO EARTH."

"SUCH ARE THE MIRACLES PRODUCED IN LARGE PART BY THE ALADDIN'S LAMP OF OUR WAR BONDS.

"HOWEVER, NO GENII IS GOING TO HAND US THE $16,000,000,000 TOTAL OF THIS DRIVE. WE WILL HAVE TO RUB THAT LAMP--AND RUB IT HARD."

BY ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON, JUNE 12-(AP)-CURRENT JAPANESE SUCCESSES IN THE ASIATIC MAINLAND GIVE THE SUCCESSES OF THE AMERICAN CAMPAIGN IN THE PACIFIC A SIGNIFICANCE BEYOND THEIR IMMEDIATE VALUE.

STUDYING THE FORECEFUL OFFENSIVE OF THE JAPANESE IN HUNAN PROVINCE, SOME MILITARY MEN SEE THE OUTSIDE POSSIBILITY THAT THE ENEMY MIGHT SUCCEED IN ESTABLISHING HIMSELF FIRMLY ACROSS CHINA TO CUT OFF AN ALLIED APPROACH TO THE ASIATIC COAST FROM BURMA AND INDIA.

SUCH A DEVELOPMENT WOULD MEAN THAT THE WAY TO THE JAPANESE MAINLAND WOULD BE OPEN FROM ONLY ONE DIRECT APPROACH, THE PACIFIC.

THE PROGRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN THE PACIFIC IS POINTED UP BY THE TERSE NAVY ANNOUNCEMENT THAT A POWERFUL CARRIER TASK FORCE ON SATURDAY ATTACKED GUAM, SAIPAN AND TINIAN ISLANDS AT THE FOOT OF JAPAN'S MARIANA GROUP, BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES POSITIONS IN THE MARSHALLS AND THE JAPANESE-HELD PHILIPPINES.

THE NAVY'S INITIAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE OPERATION NOTED THAT IT WAS AN AIR STRIKE, GIVING RISE TO THE POSSIBILITY THAT IT WAS THE BEGINNING OF SOFTENING UP OPERATIONS DIRECTED AT GUAM, THE FORMER AMERICAN NAVAL BASE, AND OTHER ENEMY STRONG POINTS IN THE MARIANAS.

AMERICAN, BRITISH AND CHINESE TROOPS ARE PUSHING THE JUNCTURE OF THE LEDO AND BURMA ROADS NEARER, BUT THE ROADHEADS STILL REMAIN FAR APART. MEANWHILE, CHINA MUST FIGHT WITH WHAT EQUIPMENT SHE CAN RECEIVE BY AIR OR MAKE IN HER OWN SCANTY ARSENALS.

THE JAPANESE, KEENLY AWARE OF THIS, ARE PRESSING IN THROUGH THE CHANGSHA AREA, 400 MILES EAST OF THE PROVISIONAL CAPITAL OF CHUNGKING.

THIS IS THE FOURTH TIME THE ENEMY HAS MOUNTED OFFENSIVES AIMED AT CHANGSHA. BUT NOW IT BECOMES MUCH MORE IMPORTANT THAN EVER BEFORE FOR JAPAN TO CONTROL THE CENTRAL AND COASTAL AREAS OF CHINA. AIRFIELDS AND POTENTIAL AIRFIELDS IN THOSE AREAS ARE OF PARAMOUNT CONCERN, NOT SO MUCH FOR JAPAN'S OWN USE AS TO TAKE THEM FROM, OR KEEP THEM OUT OF, THE HANDS OF CHINA AND HER ALLIES.

IT WAS THE FIRST REQUEST NAMING TRAFFIC GENERATING AREAS INSTEAD OF INDIVIDUAL CITIES.

Nazis Counter-Attack Before Cherbourg

Eisenhower Says Germans Face New Blows

Battle Still In Balance

Struggle Swaying Back And Forth 10 to 14 Miles of Coveted Seaport.

BERLIN SIGHTS INVASION FLEET

Reported Off Southwestern France in Recent Hours —No Allied Confirmation.

By James M. Long

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Wednesday, June 14 (AP)—U. S. troops fought a swaying battle 10 to 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg in northern France yesterday, and at 2:30 A.M. (8:30 P.M. Tuesday, E.W.T.), the Vichy radio quoted a Berlin military spokesman as saying important Allied shipping had been sighted "in the last few hours" off the southwestern French coast near the Spanish border.

NIGHT

There was no Allied confirmation of the Vichy broadcast suggesting new Allied landings, although Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has hinted they might occur, and Berlin has expected them.

Patrols Reach Valognes Outskirts

Regular U. S. Army troops captured the stronghold of Montebourg yesterday, and sent patrols into the outskirts of Valognes, 10 miles from the prize port of Cherbourg before German counterattacks left the situation obscure, field reports said. There was one German report that the Nazis had recaptured Montebourg. An Allied spokesman, however, said that even if the town had changed hands it no doubt would end up firmly in U. S. hands.

The Americans also sent troops fanning out half-way across the Cherbourg Peninsula, smashed in the center of German lines east of St. Lo, at point five miles below captured Balleroy, and fought against German counterattacks in the Carentan sector.

More than 10,000 Axis prisoners now have been seized.

British Outflank Caen

British troops outflanked Caen on the eastern end of the Allied front by capturing Troarn, and communique No. 16 told of general advances all along the expanding Normandy line, "particularly south of Bayeux between the Forest De Cerisy and Tilly-Sur-Seulles."

Still pouring equipment into Normandy, 11 big sky trains of gliders last night landed at advanced air strips of the U. S. Ninth Air Force in France, unloading rations, ammunition, and other material. All the powered craft used returned to England safely early today.

The Vichy broadcast was made more interesting because of a message from General Eisenhower to President Roosevelt telling of initial successes in Normandy. The general said "other" openings would be made in German defenses, forcing the Germans "to fight throughout the perimeter" of their European stronghold.

The Gulf of Gascony, where Vichy said the Allied ship movements had been sighted, is at the lower end of the Bay of Biscay, and 400 miles south of the Normandy battlefront. The French coast in that area of which the Biarritz playground is a part, is a region of flat, sandy beaches.

The German spokesman was quoted by Vichy as saying that it was too early to tell whether the movement was a feint or prelude to a new invasion.

Eisenhower's Hopes Surpassed

As the second week of invasion got under way, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander, said in a message to his hard-fighting commanders and troops that "the accomplishments in the first seven days of the campaign have exceeded my brightest hopes."

Field dispatches told of German counterattacks near Montebourg and also at Carentan, midway along the American front at the narrowest part of the peninsula.

Montebourg, 14 miles from Cherbourg, fell after a bitter two-day street fight, field dispatches said. German troops rallying at Valognes, four miles above Montebourg and 10 miles from Cherbourg, later counterattacked. Although the situation was fluid, Allied commanders viewed the overall picture as satisfactory.

Americans 20 Miles Inland

At the opposite end of the American front the regular first and second U. S. divisions stabbed from five to seven miles through broken woodlands in the Balleroy area east of St. Lo, putting them almost 20 miles inland from the sea.

Still farther east the British outflanked Caen with the capture of Troarn.

The Allies now have a foothold of 600 to 700 square miles in France.

Engaged in the swaying battle on the approaches to Cherbourg was the U. S. fourth division of World War renown. Opposing this veteran division was the badly-mauled 709th Infantry division.

Nine miles south of the battle area between Valognes and Montebourg other American troops had cut half-way across the Cherbourg peninsula, capturing Ponte L'Abbe in a drive to seal off thousands of Germans. Ponte L'Abbe is only five miles from the last German-held railway supplying the Germans anchored at Cherbourg, France's third largest port.

The heaviest Allied penetration was between Cerisy forest and Tilly-Sur-Seulles where the American and British-Canadian wings join. Great numbers of surrounded German troops engulfed in the Allied onrush there surrendered, field reports said.

British Outflank Caen

At the eastern end of the long Allied line moving into Normandy, British troops lanced six miles across the Orne river estuary and outflanked the German anchor point of Caen by capturing Troarn, road junction seven miles east of Caen.

Fierce fighting by British-Canadian troops also was reported at Tilly-Sur-Seulles. The Canadian Third Infantry, the British Third and Fiftieth Infantry Divisions, and the British Sixth Airborne were in action at the eastern end of the front, pitted against the German 21st Tank and 12th Elite Tank Divisions and the 716th Infantry.

Bad weather slowed the Allied air offensive but heavy day bombers continued their attacks on airfields west of Paris at Evreux-Fauville, Dreux and Illiers L'Eveque, the communique said. Medium bombers also slashed at the Rennes airfield and for two and a half hours strafed a vast area between the channel and Tours.

Allied warships and planes kept German E-boat interference to a minimum as reinforcements poured into the widened invasion area on the eighth day of attack.

American Gunfire Too Much

A big German counter-attack developed near Carentan, said a field dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead, as the enemy tried to split the middle of the American line. It was preceded by an artillery barrage against the town, 'but the enemy was unable to match the strength of American gunfire and there was confidence that the attack will be beaten back," Whitehead said.

German broadcasts said the Americans again had planned airborne troops during the night on the west side of the peninsula near Coutances. This would be at the rear of the Axis troops fighting near Carentan, 20 miles to the northeast. It was known that the U. S. Ninth Air Force troop carrier command had dropped more American troops in the battle area, but the sector was not officially disclosed.

Spread Out on Cherbourg Approaches

As the Ivy Leaf Fourth U. S. Division spread out on the approaches to Cherbourg, engulfing Le Ham, two and one-half miles southwest of fallen Montebourg, other American troops striking up the coast apparently were beyond Quineville, four miles east of Montebourg, and nearing St. Vaast-La-Hougue, 15 miles due east of Cherbourg.

A German broadcast said fresh Allied troops had landed by air and from the sea near St. Vaast under cover of the big guns of Allied warships hammering Nazi coastal fortifications.

U. S. troops under Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley also took Balleroy, a road junction east of the Cerisy forest in their fourth significant gain of the day. This broadened their destructive arc moving on the mid-Normandy communications hub of St. Lo, six miles away.

In Moscow Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin of Russia praised the Allied strike by saying "the history of war does not know any such undertaking so broad in conception, so grandiose in scale, and so masterly in execution."

Caen's East-west Lines Cut

The capture of Troarn by the British cut Caen's east-west communications on both sides of the city, but Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel's troops still had possession of several roads leading into Caen from the south.

The British were fighting a terrific road-blocking and offensive action at the eastern hinge of the front, keeping German reserves of Rouen and other inland areas from interfering with the American drive to choke off the entire top of the peninsula and grab Cherbourg as a means of speeding the landing of Allied equipment and reinforcements.

JUN 14 1944

Allied airmen still were pounding heavily at German supply roads to the south in the direction of Brittany as a means of blocking German reserves in that area.

Fierce tank battles still raged at Tilly-Sur-Seulles, midway between Caen and the Cerisy forest. Tilly continued to change hands with each British-Canadian attack and German counterattack, dispatches said.

A "big advance" was reported southeast of Bayeux in the Tilly direction as the Allies strove to get commanding high ground around that junction.

250,000 Nazis In Fighting

It was estimated officially that the Germans had hurled 250,000 men into the Normandy fighting—one-fourth of the total Axis strength in western Europe.

The presence of the U. S. Fourth Division was disclosed for the first time Tuesday by headquarters. The Fourth carries French battle honors of the Meuse-Argonne and St. Mihiel conflicts in the first World War.

Six American divisions now are known to be in action. Besides the Fourth, there are the First and the Indian Head Second Divisions, which also participated in the first World War. The latter two are teamed up in the push on St. Lo. The others, operating in the middle of the American lines and fanning out across the narrow part of the peninsula, are the 29th Infantry, and the 82d and 101st airborne divisions.

Yanks Make Important Seizure

The American seizure of Ponte L'Abbe put the Americans within five miles of the mid-peninsular road between Valognes and La Haye du Puits, and within eight miles of La Haye which is a junction on the western coastal road leading into Cherbourg.

Caen in the east, which has been an Allied objective from the beginning, was rocked Monday night by a heavy bomber attack, and the Allies also were shelling it with their artillery. The capture of Troarn was the first big gain in this desperately defended area since the British air-borne division landed on D-Day, June 6.

In the past three days the Allies have put two more Normandy air landing strips into use, bringing their total on the peninsula to five.

An increasing overcast after Tuesday noon was expected to hold the pulverizing Allied aerial offensive somewhat under Monday's 7,000 sorties.

A concentration of attacks upon German airfields already has caused the enemy to abandon some of them. There are 12 enemy fields within 100 miles of the invasion front and up to 15 more within 150 miles of the battle area.

One heavy attack knocked out a key bridge at Ponte-au-Bault, near Avranches at the foot of the west coast peninsula where it joins the Brittany peninsula. This bridge feeds the St. Lo area as well as all the rest of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Strike photographs showed "severe damage" to seven of the 16 airfields attacked Monday by more than 1,400 U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators, and heavy damage to others, it was announced.

A German tank concentration in the Grimbosq forest, 10 miles southwest of Caen, was heavily bombed during widespread assaults Monday day and night. An enemy ammunition dump blew up in the forest.

The Germans were known to be using mere sod strip runways in some areas, hiding their fighters in adjacent woods. It is estimated the Germans have some 500 fighters now in France.

The Germans also have some 500 bombers which have been little used.

Surprising to Allied officers is the astonishingly small amount of German aerial reconnaissance. As far as aerial eyes are concerned, the German defenders in Normandy are operating almost blindly.

American Force There Has Enemy Outgunned—Allies Capture Four Towns—Cherbourg Defenses Pierced.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13 (A. P.).—American troops, cracking Cherbourg's defenses, captured three towns and smashed on today to the outskirts of Valognes—ten miles from the great port—but a front dispatch declared that the Germans further south had launched their first major counter-attack.

DAY

Striking below the Cherbourg sector in a bold thrust aimed at slicing the Allied beachhead in two, the Germans poured a heavy artillery fire on American-held Carentan, "but the enemy is unable to match the strength of the American gunfire and there is confidence that the attack will be beaten back," Don Whitehead of the Associated Press said. However, the German build-up of counter-forces is now beginning, he added.

At the other end of the eighty-mile battlefront, a deep-biting British power drive outflanked the eastern bastion of Caen, capturing Troarn, nine miles to the east. Near the center, Americans captured Balleroy, and the Allies battered south of Bayeux in a big advance, flanking Caen from the west.

Americans Take Montebourg.

The American Fourth Division captured Montebourg after bitter street fighting, and smashed on four miles to the outskirts of Valognes, their advance patrols driving to within ten miles of Cherbourg. Another spearhead sweeping up the coast apparently had carried some six miles beyond Quineville, close to St. Vaast la Hougue. Berlin reported new sea and airborne landings there, and heavy pounding of coastal defenses by big Allied naval guns.

Two U. S. Columns Halfway Across Peninsula

Two other American columns slashed halfway across the top of Cherbourg peninsula in deepening threats to lop off the port.

One of these, driving inland 11 miles near Ste. Mere Eglise captured Pont l'Abbe, only five miles from the west coast railway still in German hands and 14 miles from the western shore. The other fought beyond Carentan and was roughly halfway across the peninsula at its narrowest, 20-mile neck.

Other Americans captured Le Ham, three miles southwest of Montebourg.

Supreme headquarters described the day's sweeping advances as "very, very satisfactory."

The fall of Troarn in a seven-mile advance by the British was the first big gain made in this desperately-defended area since a British air-borne division landed there on D-day a week ago.

The British in another 3½ mile advance took a village on the outskirts of Caen itself.

Allies Drop More Air-Borne Troops

New air-borne troops were dropped in France. The Germans reported air-borne landings on the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula, presumably as part of a pincers to snip off the cape.

The crumbling of Nazi defenses coincided with unconfirmed reports that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, the "Desert Fox," had been removed from his command.

Five landing strips have been constructed and are in use in France, the air forces announced.

The road junction of Balleroy, taken by American forces, is on the edge of the captured Cerisy Forest and nine miles southwest of Bayeux. The Germans reported a developing drive on the communication hub of St. Lo, and said the Americans were only six miles away.

Six United States divisions now have been identified as fighting with the powerful invasion armies—with perhaps 600,000 men engaged on both sides.

Battle For Montebourg Described

Larry LeSueur, a CBS correspondent with the Americans in France, said the fighting for Montebourg was the stiffest that the Fourth Division had yet encountered.

"After smashing German storm battalions which bicycled over from Cherbourg," LeSueur reported, "leading elements of the division were held up outside Montebourg for two days while they bombarded the town heavily with artillery, and called on the navy to destroy the tower of the medieval church which the Germans were using as an observation post.

"It was only after knocking the Germans out of the tower that we could advance without coming under direct artillery fire. The Germans counterattacked repeatedly with a small number of tanks and fought stubbornly in the streets of Montebourg all last night until they were mopped up at noon."

The Fourth Division was spearheading the attack below Cherbourg in the area previously entered by the 82d and 101st American Air-borne. The American First and 29th Divisions are also fighting in France.

JUN 14 1944

Second Division Farthest Inland

A dispatch from the front said the United States Second Division had made the gain past Cerisy Forest to the northeast of St. Lo, making the deepest inland penetration of 18 miles.

These Americans, bursting into the center of the sagging Nazi line, "are still pushing forward" and captured a huge ammunition dump near the forest, the dispatch said. The Germans were falling back so rapidly that they did not even have time for demolitions and placing mines, it added.

The Reuter news agency heard the Vichy radio say this afternoon that "General Montgomery is launching powerful thrusts from Carentan toward St. Lo."

Berlin radio announced officially today that German General of Artillery Marcks, "commander of the Cherbourg peninsula, met death in fierce fighting at the head of his troops."

The Germans were reported to be concentrating fresh troops around St. Lo. German reinforcements also were rushing up the west coast of the peninsula toward Cherbourg to contest the American drive for the opposite shore from the Carentan and Montebourg areas.

Tilly-Sur-Seulles Changes Hands Repeatedly

On the eastern flank, supreme headquarters said Tilly-sur-Seulles, west of Caen, had changed hands several times. Berlin reported particularly heavy fighting in this sector, and said a wedge had been driven into Nazi lines east of the Orne river.

Maintaining thunderous aerial support, several hundred Flying Fortresses hammered Nazi airfields in France today, and other planes hit battlefront positions. Rain lowered visibility in the English Channel—the Allies' supply line—and the sea was choppy.

One Berlin broadcast said that the signal "for starting the obviously impending battle for Caen has not yet been given on either side," but that both the Allies and Germans were bringing up "special units."

Nazis Believed To Be Using Fourth Of Strength

It was estimated here that a fourth of the entire German Western front strength of 60 divisions of more than 1,000,000 men have now been thrown against the American, British and Canadian forces.

The enemy high command was said to be relying on a patchwork defense, a policy of throwing in reserves at the most threatened points—a clear indication, supreme headquarters said, that the Germans do not know Allied strategy and fear other strong offensives and new landings.

Nazi Airfields Damaged

The Allied air forces in their blows to halt the flow of German reserves knocked out a key bridge at Pont au Bault near the west coast town of Avranches. This bridge fed St. Lo area as well as the part of the Cherbourg peninsula remaining in German hands.

Photographs showed severe damage to 7 of the 16 enemy airfields back of the fighting zone that were attacked yesterday by a record of 1,400 American heavy bombers. Last night British bombers hit railroad centers on the routes to Normandy.

The comparatively feeble challenge presented by the German air force in the past 24 hours has resulted in destruction of 74 enemy planes for a loss of 66 Allied craft.

Nazi E-Boats Still Active

German E-boats were active in the English Channel last night, but in less strength than the previous night, and their attempts to reach the big Allied convoys were frustrated.

Among a score of targets attacked last night by more than 1,000 British heavy bombers were bridges near Caen. Mediums augmented the assault with a blow at a great German tank assembly center in the Grimbosq Forest, southwest of Caen, showering the area with 150 tons of bombs. Ferry installations across the Seine also were attacked.

Nazis Credit Allies' Planes

German broadcasts acknowledged that Allied air power had delayed the arrival of reinforcements for the Atlantic Wall defenders. An Allied announcement said that this was true—that "the enemy has been unable to build up his attacking forces as rapidly as anticipated."

Seemingly trying to explain the German reverses to those at home, a Berlin radio commentator declared the German commanders "apparently are trying to lure the Allies away from the covering screen of heavy naval guns."

Warships' Aid Cited

"Allied warships have been giving deep supporting fire in the center and close support on the flanks of our armies," Supreme Headquarters stated.

An official headquarters announcement last night said the Allies had taken more than 10,000 prisoners. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Allied ground commander, said a number of regular Japanese soldiers were among the captives.

GERMANS CLAIM CHERBOURG FIGHT IN DECISIVE PHASE

KASISCHKE

LONDON, June 13—(AP) German broadcasts said tonight the Allies had "half a million first class troops" in Normandy and that the battle for Cherbourg peninsula was entering the "decisive phase" with the Americans halfway across the peninsula's neck.

The Berlin radio said "everybody is waiting for the start of a great new tank battle" at Caen and DNB acknowledged the Allies had driven a narrow wedge into German positions in Bois De Bevant, about seven miles northeast of Caen on the east side of the Orne estuary.

Lt. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, DNB commentator, said the continent was "in a crisis," the first landing "has succeeded" and "others will follow." He said the British and Americans had enormous forces and materials just off the continent.

Picked German troops, the Germans said, were now meeting the Americans on the Ponte L'Abbe—on the Valognes-Perier road—front and "the intensity of the fighting may be regarded as a prelude to a great decisive battle which will develop soon."

Ludwig Sertorious, the military commentator, said the Americans here were the toughest, most seasoned troops "including some formations which fought the Japanese in the Solomons."

In the center, German front line dispatches claimed the Allied thrust southwest of Bayeux toward St. Lo had been checked but admitted some progress by Americans north of St. Lo in the Carentan-Isigny sector.

"Front Unchanged"

LONDON, June 13 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that the invasion front had not changed in the last twenty-four hours, and reported heavy fighting raging around Montebourg "which still is in German hands." A Paris radio broadcast earlier said Montebourg, fourteen miles southeast of Cherbourg, had fallen.

American troops "have not advanced a single step in the direction of Cherbourg," Berlin said.

"Particularly heavy" fighting raged west of Caen and south of Bayeux as the Allies sought to widen their bridgehead, the German high command communique said.

The Berlin radio said that German light naval forces torpedoed two destroyers in the Seine Bay off the Normandy beachhead early today. There was no Allied report of such an action.

Eisenhower Says Nazis Face More Invasions

JUN 14 1944

By Howard Flieger

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—General Dwight D. Eisenhower served grim notice on the Nazis tonight that more invasions of Europe are in preparation.

"Until Overwhelmed"

"The Nazis," he said in a report to President Roosevelt, "will be forced to fight throughout the perimeter of their stronghold, daily expending their dwindling resources until overwhelmed by the hopelessness of their position."

The report of the supreme Allied invasion commander, made public at Mr. Roosevelt's news conference, spoke of the drive into Normandy as "a mere beginning."

"Although the cross-channel landing operation was attended," Eisenhower said, "by hazards and difficulties greater, I believe, than have ever before faced an invading army, this initial success has given us only a foothold upon northwestern France. Through the opening thus made, and through others yet to come, the flood of our fighting strength must be poured.

"Our operations, vast and important as they are, are only part of the far larger pattern of a combined assault against the fortress of Germany by the great Russian armies from the east and our forces from the Mediterranean."

First Vital Step

Eisenhower spokeof the breaching of the beach defenses of Normandy as "the first vital step leading to the decisive battle of Europe," and spoke highly of the gallantry of the American, British and Canadian forces involved. In a message to the troops, made public at supreme headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, he said the "accomplishments in the first seven days of the campaign have exceeded my brightest hopes."

Besides Eisenhower's report, President Roosevelt disclosed that he had received this message from Premier Stalin of Russia:

"The history of war has never witnessed such a grandiose operation (as French landings)—an operation Napoleon himself had never even attempted."

President Roosevelt, along with his report from Eisenhower, made public a statement from the Foreign Economic Administration showing Allied progress in shutting off alloys vital to the German war effort.

The report brought out that vast quantities of manganese have been lost to the Germans through the Russian capture of Nikopol and Turkey's stoppage of chrome shipments. Spain has cut down its tungsten exports and Portugal has agreed to suspend them entirely.

Eisenhower and Churchill Made Inspection Trip to Beach Sectors.

JUN 14 1944

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill, often called the war's foremost reporter, has seen for himself how the battle for Normandy is going and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme invasion commander, has toured American-held sectors of the battlefront with the top commanders of the United States armed forces.

Gen. Eisenhower's companions on his historic visit of inspection yesterday were Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Chief of Staff; Admiral Ernest King, Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of American Army Air Forces; Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of American Ground Forces in France, and Rear Admirals Alan G. Kirk and John Leslie Hall, commanders of American Naval Task Forces for the invasion.

On return to England Admiral Ernest J. King, was received by King George.

[Prime Minister Churchill also had lunch with King George VI today and told him all about the fighting on the Normandy beachhead, according to a London broadcast heard here by NBC.]

Mr. Churchill steamed to France in the destroyer H. M. S. Kelvin, which used its guns en route to bombard a German position ashore. With him went Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa, and Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Supreme General Staff.

During his visit ashore Mr. Churchill had a chance to see that this, too, is "a very dangerous war," as he once said about the last one. He watched a dog fight in the air and saw a German plane shot down.

The Prime Minister was ashore three hours. He lunched with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of Allied Ground Forces, watched troops and supplies being landed, then steamed home through a battle fleet whose guns even then were blazing away at German positions on shore.

It was the first time in four years that Mr. Churchill had visited France. On his last trip, on June 13, 1940, he presented tottering France with an invitation to merge with Britain as a union to carry on the fight against Hitler. Marshal Petain and other French leaders refused.

"A Good Fellow" to Russians

MOSCOW, June 13 (AP).—The Russians obviously were deeply stirred today by news of Churchill's visit to the Normandy beachhead. "A good fellow! What a person! A real leader!" were some of the exclamations heard from people buying newspapers.

Nazis Fear Invasion In Gulf of Gascony

JUN 14 1944

LONDON, June 14 (Wednesday) (AP).—The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio quoted a Berlin military spokesman today as saying that important Allied shipping movements had been observed in the Gulf of Gascony, in the Bay of Biscay near the Spanish frontier, in the last few hours.

A region of flat, sandy beaches, the Gulf of Gascony lies in the Biarritz region of France's west shore, some 400 miles south of the Normandy beachhead.

It is too early to say whether the shipping movement is a feint or a prelude to a new invasion, the German spokesman was quoted.

Thought He Was Looking at the Milky Way When Allied Leaders Arrived for Battle Tour.

JUN 14 1944

With American Troops in France, June 12 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Tech. Sergt. Alex Stout of Opelousas, La., is still seeing stars.

The sergeant thought he was looking at the milky way when at close range he saw Gen. George C. Marshall, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Admiral Ernest King, Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk and lesser lights when they paid an unexpected visit to the beachhead to see the progress of the American advance.

They stayed more than three hours visiting the second front and the sergeant helped them prepare a lunch of hot C rations, the regular G. I. Joe diet.

Alex supervised the task of providing hot water and towels for the four-star and less generals, but after it was over he did not have much to say. It was pretty much of a shock.

Photographer Jittery.

Private Louis Weintraub, 397 St. Johns Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., a former Washington Post photographer now with the Army Signal Corps, was taking pictures of the evacuation plane.

"I looked up," said Private Weintraub, "and saw all that brass coming toward me. I almost dropped my camera, but I managed to start shooting them. But brother, I was shaking like a leaf."

Sergt Reg Kenny, Somerville, N. J., photographer for the Army newspaper Yank, felt pretty much the same as Private Weintraub, but they had presence of mind enough to ask the Generals for a ride and climbed into the convoy with them.

Criticizes Nazi Positions.

Gen. Eisenhower climbed into the evacuation plane and looked it over. He expressed pleasure with the setup. He viewed the German coastal defenses—machine gun nests, blockhouses and gun emplacements.

Inspecting the location of an 88-millimeter gun, he remarked: "That's terrible. Our boys wouldn't do it that way."

From the landing strip the Generals drove to American headquarters, where the Sergeant had hot water and towels waiting for them.

"I didn't expect to find hot water at the front," Gen. Eisenhower told the Sergeant.

After washing up and having lunch, the officers drove to Isigny, which was captured by the Twenty-ninth Division. The town was still burning as they entered it. A French policeman saw the four stars on the leading car and saluted. The civilians sensed this was an unusual visit and waved and clapped while police kept them on the sidewalk.

Troops Look Shocked.

Gen. Bradley jumped out of the car and looked about, but the others kept their seats in the cars, viewing the ruins, talking to civilians and waving to passing soldiers.

The troops along the road looked up with shock in their faces as they recognized the high-ranking generals. Then they grinned and saluted.

From Isigny the generals drove back to the beach and took an amphibious duck out to the ship which had carried them to France.

29th's Capture Of Isigny Followed By Chiefs' Visit

With American Troops in France, June 12 (AP—Delayed)—Four generals, two admirals and other Allied officials today drove to Isigny, which was captured by the 29th Division. The town was still burning as they entered it.

They were Gen. George C. Marshall, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Admiral Ernest King and Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, paying an unexpected visit along with lesser lights to the beachhead to see the progress of the American advance.

French policeman in Isigny saw the four stars on the leading car and saluted. Civilians sensed that this was an unusual visit and waved and clapped hands while police kept them on the sidewalk.

General Bradley jumped out of the car and looked about while the others kept their seats in the cars, viewing the ruins, talking to civilians and waving to passing soldiers.

Frenchwoman Wounded As a Sniper for Nazis

Brought to British Port, She Denies Aiding Foe

JUN 14 1944

A BRITISH PORT, June 11 (Delayed) (AP).—Audette Chraud, a Frenchwoman, declared to have been shot while serving as a sniper for the Nazis in the Cherbourg Peninsula sector was brought into this port today on a United States Hospital ship carrying 279 other wounded, mostly American soldiers, but including thirty-eight injured Germans.

She denied she had aided the Germans and asserted she had not fired on American troops, but her status as a hired German sniper was accepted without question by the commanding officer on the ship, Major Edward Wagenaar, a native of Constantine, Mich.

Sitting in his cabin after bringing his shipload of wounded across with but a single death—that of a sixteen-year-old Nazi soldier—the Major told bitterly: "Our own men over there have told us of scads of French women who get so much a head for killing Yanks. You'd be surprised at the number of casualties that were hit by women. It just looks like in that particular area there are too many French women who are

4TH FOUGHT HARD FOR MONTEBOURG

JUN 14 1944

By LARRY LESUEUR.

CBS Correspondent.

(Distributed by the Associated Press.)

With the American Forces in France, June 13.—Troops of the Fourth Division, with which I entered Normandy, took the Old World city of Montebourg late yesterday afternoon, after the stiffest fighting they had yet encountered.

After smashing German storm battalions, which bicycled over from Cherbourg, leading elements of the Fourth Division were held up outside Montebourg for two days while they bombarded the town heavily with artillery, and called on the Navy to destroy the tower of the medieval church which the Germans were using as an observation post.

It was only after knocking the Germans out of the tower that we could advance without coming under direct artillery fire. The Germans counter-attacked repeatedly with a small number of tanks and fought stubbornly in the streets of Montebourg all last night until they were mopped up at noon.

FIGHTING FOURTH ON ITS WAY BACK

Somewhere in England, June 13 (A. P.).—The Fourth United States Infantry Division, by the appraisal of its own commande "the hottest fighting outfit o world war 1," is going back t Germany to wind up some unfin ished business.

"The fourth was hot in the las scrap—it beat sixteen of the Kaiser's divisions at one time or another—and it is hot now," said the Major-General, who cannot be identified, before he and his boys shoved off from a British base for the Normandy beaches.

This was the division which captured Montebourg, on the Cherbourg peninsula.

The unfinished business for this outfit is rehoisting the Stars and Stripes over the Rhineland's fortress Ehrenbreitstein, where it was pulled down in 1923 when the last American troops including two companies from the fourth marched out of Germany. The same two companies—with new faces—are on their way back.

The fourth, whose history dates back to Pickett and Longstreet, particip ed in 1918 in such major b les as Aisne-Marne, Sergy, , St. Mihiel, the Meuse-Argo , Champagne rraine.

Most Prisoners Believe War Will End by Autumn

ABOARD A HOSPITAL SHIP OFF BRITAIN, June 13 (AP). — Corporal George Fiene, of Palatine, Ill., who learned a smattering of German from his parents, made these observations today about Germans after several trips to Normandy bringing back wounded prisoners:

They denounce Hitler and say they were forced to fight.

Most believe the war will end by fall.

The prisoners are either very young or quite old. They would like to be sent to the United States.

Some were surprised by the invasion; others had been warned in time to make last-minute preparations.

Not all churches in Germany are closed. Most prisoners had some sort of religion.

Younger prisoners experienced little social life. The older Germans were skilled craftsmen. They wish to return to their jobs and families. They do not stand pain as well as Allied soldiers and they appear to have less spirit. They are healthy, not underfed.

Satisfied with Progress, He Tells Troops

JUN 14 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 13. — (AP) Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said tonight the "accomplishments in the first seven days of the campaign have exceeded my brightest hopes."

Eisenhower expressed his satisfaction with the progress of the Normandy invasion in a message addressed to the commanders and troops which participated in the assault on France.

The text of the Supreme commander's message:

"One week ago this morning there was established through your coordinated efforts our first footholds in northwestern Europe.

"High as was my pre-invasion confidence in your courage, skill and effectiveness in working together as a unit, your accomplishments in the first seven days of this campaign have exceeded my brightest hopes.

"You are truly a great allied team, a team which in each part gains its greatest satisfaction in rendering maximum assistance to the entire body, and in which each individual member is justifiably confident in all others. No matter how prolonged or bitter the struggle that lies ahead, you will do your full part toward the restoration of free France, the liberation of all European nations under Axis domination and the destruction of the Nazi military machine.

"I truly congratulate you upon a brilliantly successful beginning to this great undertaking. Liberty-loving people everywhere would like to join me in saying to you: I am proud of you."

The general's message was addressed to General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, chief of the Allied ground forces; Admiral Sir Bertram H. Ramsey, Allied naval commander; Air Chief Marshal Trafford Leigh-Mallory; Lieutenant General Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the United States Strategic Air Force, and to the soldiers, airmen, sailors and merchant sailors and all others of the Allied Expeditionary Force.

U. S. Heavy Bombers Hit Nazi Airfields

Two Heavy Blows Loosed at German Airdromes in Effort to Rub Out Aerial Resistance Around Normandy.

By Austin Bealmear

LONDON, June 13 (AP) — American heavy bombers struck two heavy blows at the network of German airfields behind the Normandy battlefront today in an effort to rub out Nazi aerial resistance which had been bolstered by moving up an estimated 500 enemy fighter planes to front line bases.

Hundreds Take Part

Hundreds of Flying Fortresses and Liberators with escorts of Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings took part in the double operation against tactical invasion targets while strong forces of Italy-based U. S. heavyweights hammered the Munich area in old Austria.

NEW YORK, June 13. (AP)—Three United States four-engined bombers landed in Switzerland today and the 28 men making up the crews have been interned, the Swiss radio said tonight in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

The number of landing strips on French soil available to Allied units was increased to five and lighter craft operating from these fields increased their support of the advancing ground forces despite deteriorating weather.

German fighter opposition in general was light.

The day's first mission for the U. S. heavy bombers striking from British bases was against airfields at Evreux-Fauville, Dreux and Illieres-L'Eveque. Late in the day they swept across the channel again and attacked two more airfields north of Paris and several railroad bridges south of the beachhead.

The two blows brought to 20 the number of good enemy air bases in northern France blasted in the last two days following up aerial reconnaissance which had shown new concentrations of single-engined fighters.

Weather Cuts Flights

Although the big bombers went out twice, the change in the weather reduced the scale of Allied aerial operations to less than Monday, when 7,000 planes took to the skies.

American medium and light bombers also lashed out two ranging over a widespread area of northern France. One of the targets was the airfield at Rennes, some 30 miles inland at the base of the Brest peninsula.

The only serious fighter resistance reported in the day's operations, as well as intense anti-aircraft fire, was encountered by crews of Marauders and Havocs in striking at fuel dumps and vital highway junctions just behind the German front lines.

225 Bombers Participate

More than 225 of these medium and light bombers hit junctions at Canisy, St. Pierre-Sur-Dives, Maringy and Cambremer and fuel dumps at Domfront, St. Martin and Forest Dandaine.

Two Marauders were lost at St. Martin, where crewmen said the flak was the heaviest some of them ever had encountered. Three fighter planes also were missing, with one fighter pilot safe. Only one enemy kill was reported. No announcement was made immediately of the losses or victories in the two missions by heavy bombers.

One group of Havocs was attacked from the rear by eight Focke-Wulfs over Canisy, but the Nazi interceptors were driven off by Spitfires and Thunderbolts without scoring any hits.

Sgt. Thomas R. Norris of Avondale, Ariz., gunner aboard a Havoc said "five silver FW190s attacked my flight and closed to within 1,000 yards. I was ready to squeeze my triggers when they peeled off."

Photo reconnaissance of Monday night's 1,000-bomber RAF attack on France and Germany showed severe damage to two bridges near Caen and the railroad yards at Amiens and Arras.

At Arras all buildings adjacent to the rail yards were damaged or destroyed and at Amiens all buildings in the target area were hit, supreme headquarters announced.

There was no indication of the number of heavy bombers taking part in the two daylight raids, but it appeared the two flights together were less than the record force of more than 1,400 heavies which struck 16 airfields in France Monday.

The escort of Mustangs, Lightnings and Thunderbolts also flew offensive patrols against a number of enemy installations, while U. S. medium, light and fighter-bombers ranged over France from the beachhead to as far south as Tours, even firing at ground gunners in fox holes.

Losses

First reports of the day's losses listed two Marauders and three fighters missing, with one fighter pilot safe. Only one enemy kill was reported, indicating the Germans were not putting up the rugged defense of last night when the R.A.F. resumed its saturation raids on Germany.

More than 1,000 R.A.F. bombers began putting the Reich on a round-the-clock bombardment schedule after a three-week lull by pouring 1,500 tons of explosives and incendiaries on the synthetic oil center of Gelsenkirchen, touching off great explosions and fires. They lost 17 bombers and 23 other planes were lost in raids on bridges and railroad centers in Belgium and France.

Then the American heavies from Italy followed up today and hit hard at oil facilities, enemy airdromes, factories, and rail yards around Munich, Innsbruck and Porto Marghrera near Venice. Flak was heavy.

Not only were the air strips in France providing bases for close support, but they sped up reinforcements. Both skilled technicians and combat troops were landed on them last night.

American Marauders and Havocs attacked twice before noon, striking at rail bridges, armored concentrations and ferries. Just before noon they penetrated deeper and destroyed three hangars at an air field near Rennes.

Because of the low ceiling, Marauders had to bomb from altitudes of 3,000 to 4,000 feet and some ran into heavy anti-aircraft fire. Havocs bombed intersections, moving vehicles and supply dumps in the battle area.

Despite the thick weather, the RAF flew numerous successful missions against German transport and gun emplacements.

RAF rocket-carrying fighters made two attacks on E-boats standing off Pas De Calais and Le Touquet menacing Channel traffic, destroying three and hitting another. Both attacks were made without loss.

Flyer Hangs By Feet To Free Controls

JUN 14 1944

A Ninth Air Force Troop Carrier Base in England, June 13 (AP)—Sergt. John J. Nick, Clifton, N. J., was credited today with saving his plane and the lives of fellow crewmen by hanging by his feet from the plane in the flak-filled sky over France and freeing a jammed control.

When a parachute bundle caught on the underside of the troop carrier, two crewmen held Nick's ankles while he hacked away at the parachute with a hunting knife.

"We were flying so low it seemed I could put out my hand and touch the ground," Nick said. "There was a lot of firing but all I was thinking was that my knife was terribly dull."

Nick's efforts enabled the pilot, Lieut. Philip Andrews, Camargo, Okla., to regain control of the plane.

Rommel Thought Ousted From Command

GALLAGHER

JUN 14 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports reaching this headquarters today said Marshal Erwin Rommel had been removed from command of the German 7th and 15th mobile armies, formed for strategic counterattacks against the invasion.

Rommel and his superior, Marshal Karl von Rundstedt, the overall German commander in the west, are known to have been at odds over defense plans.

The younger and more impulsive Rommel has been reported anxious to throw everything into an attempt to break up the Allied beachhead. Rundstedt, 69-year-old Prussian long steeped in German military lore, has favored a policy of holding back in order to wait and see if further Allied landings are made elsewhere in France or the Low Countries.

Rundstedt A Strategist

Rommel has been glamorized in German broadcasts as a master Nazi tactician, despite the decisive defeats administered him over thousands of miles of North Africa, Tunisia, Sicily and Italy by his present counterpart, General Sir Bernard Montgomery. Rundstedt, on the other hand, is a strategist.

Units of both the 7th and the 15th armies, predominantly armored striking forces, have been reported opposing the Allies in Normandy. Just before the invasion started a week ago, Rommel's main force was reported bivouacked around Aachen, western German rail center near the Belgian and French borders.

Some front-line dispatches have placed Rommel himself at the front in the Cherbourg peninsula.

Came Up From The Ranks

Rommel is an up-from-the-ranks soldier who developed in the last war and who advanced meteorically after Hitler came to power. Rundstedt, on the other hand, is a product of the Prussian military caste which has been reported from time to time as relatively aloof from the Nazis.

Leslie Randall, of the London Evening Standard, reported in a dispatch from Montgomery's headquarters that "it is now believed that Rommel is out." The story added:

"No definite news of him reached this headquarters since the invasion began, but all poin that he is not in command."

Nazi Cherbourg Area Commander Killed

London, June 13 (A. P.).—The Berlin radio announced officially today that the German General of Artillery Marcks, commander of the Cherbourg peninsula, has met death in fierce fighting at the head of his troops.

Munich And West Front Targets Pounded Anew

London, June 13 (AP)—American bombers from Italy struck long-range targets in Germany today as hundreds of other planes on the western front provided closeup support of American forces sweeping toward Cherbourg on the Normandy peninsula.

Italy-based bombers in strong force, escorted by fighters, penetrated into Germany from the south, attacking targets in the Munich area and at Innsbruck in old Austria.

Several hundred Fortresses from England set the pace of the strategic attack by pounding German airdromes behind the battle lines in France.

Tactical Support

Lighter planes gave the beachhead forces tactical support by smashing at targets in the Normandy peninsula as well as far inland.

Supreme headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force announced that five landing strips were in use on the Normandy beachhead. Yesterday's sorties from England and the beachhead totaled more than 7,000.

In airborne operations last night, skilled air personnel and combat troops were flown to the beachhead.

Second Munich Blow In Week

Striking at the Munich area for the second time within a week, 15th Air Force bombers pounded airdromes, factories and rail yards as well as oil plants.

Among the targets were the airdrome at Oberpfaffenhofen, 15 miles southwest of Munich; a field used to assemble ME-410 twin-engined fighters; the Milpertshofen ordnance depot at the west side of Munich, and two aircraft engine plants of the Allach Motor Works, eight miles northwest of Munich.

Rail yards at Innsbruck and oil factories at Porto Marghera, near Venice, were attacked by other formations. Intense flak was reported.

Ruhr Oil Center Target

The daylight precision attacks from Britain and Italy followed a night attack by more than 1,000 RAF bombers against German transport facilities and the synthetic oil-manufacturing center of Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr.

On Gelsenkirchen, the RAF dumped 1,568 tons of high explosives and incendiaries.

In a series of broadcasts, the Berlin radio told of heavy air battles raging over the whole invasion area and said that Allied planes surging over the Alps had penetrated to Bavaria and Fraconia. Other raiders were reported in small numbers over western and northern Germany.

Bridges Near Caen Hit

Included in the RAF night targets were bridges near Caen, center of some of the heaviest fighting in the Allied invasion drive, and Cologne in western Germany—an important railway hub.

The campaign against German transport, which reached a new crescendo yesterday, went on through the night virtually unabated and expanded eastward into the lowlands.

Railroad centers at Arras, Amiens and Cambrai—key points on the route from Flanders to Normandy—and Poitiers, France, as well as bridges near Caen were pounded by the heavies.

Panzer Yards Lashed

Mediums dropped 150 tons in a few minutes on the great Panzer marshaling area in the Forest de Grimbosq, southwest of Caen.

They also hit the railroad center at Mezidon, and ferry installations over the Seine at Caudebec, in a continuation of the campaigns against ferries, apparently calculated to prevent the Nazis from staging a successful "Dunkirk" if Allied forces succeed in trapping them.

The Gelsenkirchen raid marked the first return of heavy bombers to strategic targets since the invasion.

"Tremendous Explosions"

The bombing was reported highly concentrated with several "tremendous" explosions and great fires started and smoke towering more than three miles as the flyers left.

The Gelsenkirchen works, largest of ten plants in the Rhine-Ruhr area, had a capacity of 400,000 tons of oil yearly. It was hit repeatedly in past months by American and RAF bombers, but it was such a vital source the Germans consistently tried to keep it operating.

Plane Over London.

At the same time, evidently trying to save face after its weak showing in Normandy, the German Air Force sent a few planes over the south and east of England and got one lone plane through to London for the first time since April 27.

A few casualties were caused when some people were trapped in a building hit by a high explosive bomb. The German-controlled Paris radio reported: "Two raids on London during the night were extremely violent."

The channel coast had one of the noisiest nights of the war, as German guns lobbed over shells from Cap Griz Nez.

The R. A. F. lost twenty-three heavy bombers in the attacks on France and seventeen more at Gelsenkirchen and Cologne and in mine-laying. Four of the medium bombers and fighter-bombers participating in the assaults on the German communication lines were shot down. On the other hand, Allied night-fighters nailed ten Germans, and one of the German raiders over Britain also was downed.

Previous incomplete reports of yesterday's operations said that fifty-three Germans had been shot down in the air and seventeen on the ground. Allied losses were placed at seven heavy bombers, one medium bomber and thirty-one fighters.

Typical of the scenes of chaos that Allied support operations are visiting upon the Germans was the coup of rocket-packing Typhoons. They swooped down, shot up an ammunition truck which crashed into a military building and blew it sky high. A second truck, burning fiercely, plunged into a quarry.

Reconnaissance pictures showed that yesterday's record assault by American planes against sixteen German air bases in France severely damaged seven bases and caused considerable damage to the rest. The bombers also smashed a two-track railroad bridge at Pontaubault at the western base of the Cherbourg peninsula leading to the Breton peninsula, where the Germans had earlier reported Allied landings. Approaches to a bridge at Montfort also were smashed.

A sampling of targets hit just by American medium bombers and fighter-bombers since late yesterday: Railroad yards at Bretigny-sur-Orge, a railroad overpass at Mantes-Gassicourt, a railroad bridge at Breux, a railroad pass at Epernon, railroad yards at Sauveur-le-Vicomte, only fourteen miles from the Carentan fighting area, and gun emplacements at Granville and radar installations at St. Meloir.

The R. A. F. dumped 1,568 tons of high explosive and fire bombs on Gelsenkirchen. The attack was highly concentrated and several tremendous explosions were reported and great fires with smoke towering more than three miles in the air. The Gelsenkirchen Works, largest of ten plants in the Rhine-Ruhr area, had a capacity of 400,000 tons of oil a year. It was hit repeatedly in past months by American and British bombers, but it was such a vital oil source that the Germans consistently tried to keep it operating.

Weaknesses Appearing In Hitler War Machine

New Quarrel Breaks Out between Rommel and von Rundstedt.

By WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 13—(AP) Carefully-studied reports reaching here from the continent tonight indicate that some weaknesses have begun to appear in Hitler's war machine under the impact of the first week of Allied invasion.

One indication of this is a new quarrel reliably reported to have broken out between Marshal Erwin Rommel, immediate commander of the defending forces, and his superior, Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt, although reports that Rommel had been removed from his command were received here with skepticism.

Rommel Stresses Attack

Marshal Rommel, who is described as always eager to commit himself early in battle, was reported by underground sources to have insisted that Von Rundstedt, the overall German commander in the west, throw in strategic reserves to break the Allied beachhead.

Von Rundstedt, however, fearing further Allied landings, is said to have declined, ordering Rommel to sit along with what he had. Hitler himself was reported to have arrived on the scene and set up a headquarters at Lessay, about 100 miles behind the lines, where the two leaders took their quarrel to him.

It was considered unlikely here that Hitler removed his old favorite Rommel, who long has been one of his closest Nazi henchmen.

The Allied landings have indicated, however, that serious cracks are developing in the German war machine. The German armored divisions, even the first-rate 21st, are using 1940 model French tanks extensively, and the German ground divisions have been none too good in performance. They are well sprinkled with foreigners under German non-commissioned officers.

Germans React Slowly

To the Allied surprise, the Germans have reacted much more slowly than expected to the Allied landings. They have brought up divisions so slowly that they have been thrown into the line immediately to plug gaps instead of being marshalled for big counterattacks.

The German command has been forced to use its tanks defensively because it did not have enough infantry to hold the lines. This tactic when used by the Americans and British in the early days in Tunisia resulted in the temporary defeat of the third American Armored division.

The German command is said to have been almost blind as far as reconnaissance is concerned. The air forces report that not only in the past six days but in the past two months the Germans have not had enough reconnaissance planes in the air to obtain even a partial picture of the operations.

Repair Ability Lost

The once-famous German ability to repair bomb damage quickly also is lacking now, the air forces report. Photo reconnaissance indicates that the Germans have been unable to repair and keep in repair a single bridge over the Seine west of Paris.

Although famous for its motorized and armored columns, the German army in the Cherbourg peninsula has been depending largely on horsedrawn artillery.

While the German soldier is still a formidable fighting man, all these factors which have come to light in the first week of the newly-opened western front are leading many military men to believe the Germans are much weaker than they first thought.

The Germans have thrown in roughly one-fourth of their available troops in western Europe to try to halt development of the Allied beachhead, and these have failed completely. As yet the Nazi Seventh and Fifteenth armies have not developed one single old-fashioned German counterattack.

Nazis Reshuffle Vichy Cabinet, Remove King Leopold to Germany

LONDON, June 13.—(AP) Nazi-occupied Europe was in ferment tonight as the puppet Vichy cabinet was reshuffled to hold down the lid in France and the Germans carried off Belgian King Leopold to captivity in Germany—an act apparently inspired by fear the Allies soon will drive into Belgium.

Official French sources reported patriots had smashed important German communication lines and were increasingly attacking the Germans in the interior of invaded France.

The German-controlled Paris radio announced Marcel Le Moine had resigned as Vichy's secretary of state for the interior, and French sources here suspected his job would go to the collaborationist Joseph Darnand—the "Himmler of France"—who was promoted to cabinet rank.

Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium told his homeland in a broadcast that the removal of King Leopold was "one of a series of measures decided upon by the Germans in anticipation of the arrival of the armies of liberation."

Nazi broadcasts have predicted

gium would be invaded "between Dunkerque and Ostend."

A French provisional government broadcast from Algiers credited patriots with aiding the Normandy invasion by harassing the Germans and called for multiplication of these attacks toward a crescendo "which must end in a national rising."

Enemy losses have been greater than those of the patriots, Algiers said, while in many localities gendarmes and members of the mobile reserve guard—and in some cases even members of chief of government Pierre Laval's dreaded militia—joined the patriots.

Guerrillas Storm Fortress

Diplomats reaching Spain from Switzerland said the fortress of Bellegarde, dominating the road and rail links between Lyon and Geneva, had been stormed by guerrillas who overpowered the German garrison of 100 with the help of Vichy gendarmes and mobile guardsmen.

Broadcasting over the Belgian national station in London, he declared the Germans, "feeling Belgium is about to escape them, hasten to put the finishing touch to their work of disorganization and destruction."

Pierlot said Leopold "consistently refused to exercise his high function under enemy domination."

Belgian sources said the King, kept under heavy guard in his palace since Belgium's capitulation in 1940, was removed to Germany the day after invasion broke because the enemy feared he was a potential rallying point for Belgian resistance.

The Belgian news agency reported railway workers had joined in the spreading underground resistance in Europe by sabotaging German transport in spite of threats against their lives and those of their families.

Frenchmen Cross Border

Frenchmen and other travelers crossing the border into Spain said that Tarbes, the capital of the upper Pyrenees department with a population of 35,000, was in the hands of French Maquis, who had taken 300 Germans of the Tarbes garrison prisoners after bitter fighting.

They reported strong forces of mobile guards and gendarmes in the pay of Vichy had been dispatched by special train to Tarbes from Bayonne and Biarritz, but upon their arrival Saturday night the entire force promptly joined the guerrillas.

Reports from the continent tonight said French guerrillas had been working hand-in-hand with the invading Allies since D-Day, striking so savagely at enemy communications that the Germans were forced to multiply guards on rails and roads.

Intensified underground resistance was recounted by responsible French quarters, who said communications were paralyzed in Savoy and Jure while patriots harassed the enemy's rear in Brittany and in the Pyrenees and sabotaged rail lines in Cote D'Or.

NG LEOPOLD REMOVED

JUN 14 1944

LONDON, June 13 — (AP) Premier Hubert Pierlot of the Belgian government in exile told the homeland in a broadcast tonight that the Nazis had removed King Leopold "in captivity to Germany."

Pierlot, speaking over the Belgian national station here, described this action "as part of the measures decided upon in expectation of the approaching arrival of the armies of liberation."

Since the Allied landings in Normandy, King Leopold had been confined to his palace in Brussels under heavy German guard.

French Prisoner Release Promise Heard

JUN 14 1944

London, June 13 (AP)—The German-controlled Paris radio declared today that "because of the exemplary attitude of the Marseille population during recent events" Adolf Hitler had decided to free a large number of French prisoners of war whose homes are in that city.

The prisoners will be permitted to return home shortly, said the broadcast.

(The broadcast apparently was intended to create the impression that the French population has not been aroused to increase resistance by the landing of Allied troops in Normandy. Neutral reports, on the contrary, all have told of mounting French Partisan activity and sabotage.)

Paratrooper No Match For Cow in Normandy

JUN 14 1944

LONDON, June 13 (AP).—Private Herbert Sather, of Tacoma, Wash., a paratrooper who fought in Sicily and landed in Normandy without a scratch, returned to England today for treatment as the invasion's oddest casualty.

A cow fell on him in a foxhole.

U.S. 'Chutists Held Tortured

JUN 14 1944

New York, June 13 (AP)—Stanley Richardson, NBC reporter from London, said in a broadcast from London last night that there is "indisputable evidence that the Germans tortured and murdered" American paratroopers during the early hours of the Normandy landings.

Richardson, who had just returned from headquarters of an American air-borne division near Carentan, said in one instance the bodies of three American enlisted paratroopers, stripped to the waist, with their hands bound, were found in a heap beside the wall of a former German command post.

"There is every indication," said Richardson, "that these Americans were executed after they had been captured, in violation of the rules of war."

In a second case the body of a second lieutenant was found with his throat cut and a German army knife beside him. Richardson said that, according to the men of the command post who discovered the body, the officer "landed in a tree and was murdered as he hung helpless there."

A third case concerned a major who was found in a village "dead of multiple stab wounds," Richardson declared.

Advised to Give French Women a Hand With Housework

LONDON, June 13 (AP).—The United States War Department, looking ahead to the time when American troops may have leisure hours in France, advises them, in a thirty-six-page booklet distributed on the Normandy beachhead, to give the women a hand with the housework. "French women still talk about how your fathers did," it states.

The soldiers were advised also not to wink at the French girls and to keep hands off "if you want to keep out of trouble."

Nazis Call Back West Wall Publicity

JUN 14 1944

Moscow, June 13 (A. P.).—A Russian Tass New Agency dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, today quoted neutral arrivals from Germany as saying that books, pamphlets, and pictures of the Atlantic Wall have disappeared from German bookshops and newsstands since the Allied invasion of Normandy.

"They were reported to have been withdrawn from circulation on instructions of the Propaganda Ministry," the broadcast said.

Lee's Command Redesignated

LONDON, June 13 (AP)—The services of supply of the European theater of the United States Army has been re-designated as the communications zone of the ETOUSA with Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee as the commanding general in addition to his duties as deputy theater comander, it was announced tonight.

Retreat From Cerisy Too Fast For Demolition, Mines

JUN 14 1944

By Don Whitehead

With American Forces Near Serisy Forest, June 12 (AP—Delayed)—The Germans pulled back so rapidly through the Cerisy Forest area before the advancing United States Second Division that they had no time for demolitions and, in contrast to Nazi withdrawals in Africa and Italy, the enemy left few mines behind.

(This was the first disclosure that the American Second Division was fighting in France.)

Deepest Penetration

Keeping steady pressure on the enemy, the doughboys have made fast gains through the green hedge-grown Norman countryside and, still pushing forward past the Cerisy Forest, have driven the Germans back to a point where only their long-range guns will be able to shell the landing beach.

(In this area the Americans have made the deepest armed penetration of France—some 18 miles from the landing beaches.)

We had suspected Cerisy Forest to be a hiding place for German armor, infantry and anti-tank defenses, but the American troops swept through with only light opposition. East of Cerisy Forest the doughboys captured one of the largest ammunition dumps to fall into Allied hands.

There was growing belief the Allies gained a strategical surprise in landing and caught the Germans without any reserve strength in this area.

The Second Division showed up exceptionally well. They were trigger-happy and nervous at the first shooting and at the slightest movement ahead of them, but after the first half day of hearing guns, seeing shells explode and hearing bullets whiz by, they settled down.

Capture Of Trevieres

The division had its shakedown battle in capturing Trevieres, four and one-half miles from the coast. The Germans had turned the town into a strong point. In bitter fighting the Americans left it a shambles of bullet and shell-pocked buildings.

After capturing the town the boys of the Second Division drove on and through the Cerisy Forest, wiping out pockets of German snipers and resistance as they moved forward in a swift advance.

I have just made a tour of the central beachhead and what I saw left me with the belief the Germans have lost their chance to push us back into the sea. They lost that chance during the first three days. Now our armies have landed in such strength that the most perilous period has passed.

The swiftness with which American troops, guns and supplies were put ashore this past week, despite many handicaps, is reassuring for the future.

ALLIED INVASION 'MASTERLY' SAYS MARSHAL STALIN

JUN 14 1944

MOSCOW, June 13—(AP) Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin praised the Allies highly tonight for their invasion of France, declaring that "the history of war does not know any such undertaking so broad in conception, so grandiose in scale, and so masterly in execution."

Stalin was in high spirits and rare form, describing Hitler as "an hysteric" who bragged for two years that he would cross the channel but never risked the attempt. He also pointed out that Napoleon failed in his plan to cross the channel and conquer Britain.

Great Achievement

"Only the British and American troops succeeded in honorably fulfilling the grand plan of crossing the channel and making a mass landing of troops," Stalin said. "History will record this as an achievement of the highest order."

Stalin's estimate of the Western invasion was made in a statement given to foreign correspondents and later put on the Moscow radio to be, repeated several times and broadcast through the land.

American and British diplomats and militarists in Moscow called the statement a masterly utterance characteristic of the Soviet leader in its directness and sharpness.

His statement said:

"Answering a question from a Pravda correspondent how Comrade Stalin considers the landing of the Allies in northern France, Comrade Stalin answered:

"On summarizing the seven days battles for liberation by the Allied troops invading northern France, one can without hesitation say that the wide crossing of the channel and the mass landing operations of the Allies in northern France have succeeded fully. This is doubtless a brilliant success of our Allies.

Grandiose in Scale

"The history of war does not know any such undertaking so broad in conception, so grandiose in scale, and so masterly in execution.

"As is known, the 'invincible' Napoleon in his time shamefully failed in his plan to cross the channel and capture the British isles. Hitles, an hysteric who for two years bragged that he would carry out a crossing of La Manche (the channel), did not even risk making an attempt to carry out the threat.

"Only the British and American troops succeeded in honorably fulfilling the grand plan of crossing the channel and making a mass landing of troops.

"History will record this as an achievement of the highest order."

ALLIED INVASION HAILED BY STALIN

JUN 14 1944

Moscow, June 13 (A. P.).—Premier Stalin paid tribute tonight to the western front, declaring: "The history of war does not know any such undertaking so broad in conception, so grandiose in scale and so masterly in execution. History will take note of this achievement."

Stalin's statement was given to foreign correspondents at the Soviet Press Department.

De Gaullists Win New Recognition

JUN 14 1944

Irun, Spain, June 13 (AP)—French patriots have seized the whole city of Tarbes, capital of the upper Pyrennes department, and taken 300 German prisoners, Frenchmen and other travelers said today. The Maquis captured the town after a brief but bitter battle Saturday and Sunday, they said. Tarbes is a city of 35,000.

London, June 13 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today won recognition of his Committee of National Liberation as the "provisional Government of the French Republic" from four governments in exile.

Poland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Luxembourg announced their actions, and the French leader was seeking the same recognition from all United Nations.

Signed By Ministers

Letters of recognition have been signed by Foreign Ministers Hubert Ripka for Czechoslovakia, P. H. Spaak for Belgium and Joseph Beck for Luxembourg.

De Gaulle was expected to pay an early visit to France, where the Allied invasion has spurred resistance of the underground forces, in hope of winning public support for his committee and to strengthen his hand before leaving for Washington to seek recognition by the United States.

Meets Polish Leader Again

De Gaulle conferred yesterday for a fourth time with President Wladyslaw Rackiewicz of the Polish Government in exile.

Reports from Spain, meanwhile, said that a German order that Frenchmen caught with arms would be shot had boomeranged and that thousands of new recruits are joining the underground. Many Frenchmen who took their arms home after the 1940 armsitice have joined the guerrillas, since they figured a search of their homes would mean death anyhow, the dispatches said.

New Anti-Nazi Blows Planned

Vichy officials were reported hiding in all areas outside localities garrisoned by the Germans, while the underground organized for new blows against the Nazis.

Forts around Garonne, in the Bordeau area, were packed with thousands of prisoners, word from Irun, on the Spanish border said. Trains reaching the border brought reports of rail lines being knocked out by saboteurs, and dynamiting of some bridges.

One report from Spain said the Nazis were adding rigid food control to repressive measures against occupied France.

FDR SAYS NO ANSWER YET FROM DEGAULLE

JUN 14 1944

WASHINGTON, June 13 — (AP) President Roosevelt said today he has not yet heard anything from his offer of last week to [illegible] General Charles de Gaulle [illegible] the French Committee of National [illegible]eration.

The President dispatched an invitation to de Gaulle after the French leader requested a conference. Mr. Roosevelt added to his news conference that there is no change in the attitude of this country toward the de Gaulle committee.

Russ Push Deeper Into Finn Lines

JUN 14 1944

Moscow, June 13 (AP)—Backed by terrific gunfire provided by Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov, an artillery specialist, Red army mobile units moved steadily over roads and forest defiles deeper into the Karelian Isthmus today, reaching points beyond captured Raivola, about 36 miles from Viipuri.

A front dispatch to Izvestia reported the surrendering of many Finns who appeared dazed by the offensive. Raivola, like Terijoki, was not burned.

So rapid was the advance that Raivola fell in 40 minutes. But the Finns were reported hurrying many reserves to the isthmus and hard fighting appeared in store for Soviet units just now beginning to reach the hard core of resistance.

63 Tanks Claimed

(A Finnish communique broadcast by Berlin said the Finns had repelled all attacks against their Karelian defenses and that 63 Soviet tanks were destroyed in three days.

(Helsinki dispatches reaching Stockholm declared rainy, misty weather had set in on the Karelian Isthmus, benefiting Finnish troops, who now are "stabilizing the front.")

The Russians already were moving down both roads toward Viipuri.

Beyond Raivola they made good progress. Great sectors of the road running along the Gulf of Finland from Terijoki to Viipuri was under heavy fire from Soviet guns, an Izvestia dispatch said.

Litsa Activity Reported

The Russians were blasting their way through deep lines of fortifications, one of the most striking of which was a series of German self-propelled "Ferdinand" guns dug into the earth.

(Increased Russian activity was reported along the Litsa river in the Petsamo sector in the Far North of Finland, the Stockholm Aftonbladet reported. This river which empties into the Arctic Sea is about 15 miles east of the 1940 Finnish border. German troops have been stalled there since 1941.

Estonia Attack Hinted

(The German communique, meanwhile, reported a resumption of Russian attacks on the Estonian front. Reuter News Agency said.

(The German high command report said the Russians had attacked at a number of points simultaneously southwest of Narva, adding that the attacks had been repelled at all points.

(Yermashov, Moscow radio commentator, warned that the Russian breakthrough in the Karelian isthmus, was the "first thunderbolt in the storm lowering over the Germans in the east."

(Yermashov added that it was "a sharp reminder to the Germans of what they may expect this summer on the Soviet front.)

JUN 14 1944

Highway Area Cleared

Red army mobile units which captured Kivennapa 13 miles north of Terijoki pushed on between lakes and cleared a sector at the end of the highway which runs between Kivennapa and Leningrad, eliminating any flank threat.

Long, white nights have descended on the Finnish front. There are hardly any dark hours. But the fighting is incessant in the deep, black woods.

...s In France Thought Studying Allied Methods

JUN 14 1944

By Russell Brines

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Reports of Japanese combat dead and prisoners in France appear to indicate a Nipponese determination to learn, regardless of cost, Allied methods of large scale amphibious landings.

Japan has neither the men nor the inclination to bulwark German armies, even if the Nazis wanted help.

However, while spending the first two war years as a Japanese prisoner, I was convinced my captors would make every possible effort to prepare against Allied strategy before their time came.

Thrusts Against Japan

The European invasion offered unparalleled opportunities for studying Allied amphibious tactics which might be duplicated in future thrusts against Japan's major possessions, perhaps in the Philippines or the China coast, where the range of operations will not be confined by the narrow battlegrounds of past Pacific campaigns.

The information Tokyo's war lords want cannot come fully from observers at command posts behind the lines or second hand testimony. From their viewpoint, it can be gathered only by fighters at the front.

If a few of these men live and return, their experiences and observations will be incorporated into a rigorous new training program for the Pacific's D-day. Japanese militarists would consider the loss slight if all are killed; for the individual's life does not count to them.

Experienced Men

Individual Japanese repeatedly have demonstrated their willingness to undergo personal hardship and danger in a continual quest for information. Men chosen for the European mission would be only the most experienced and trustworthy, not from the lower ranks. It is likely many officers are among the fighters, regardless of their insignia. Plenty of Japanese captains and majors would volunteer for this assignment.

Considerable submarine traffic still continues between Japan and Germany, and fighters could be transported this way.

Will Go Along With Washington on Policy Toward Free French Leader—Notice Untangles Diplomatic Snarl of Long Standing.

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—Great Britain has officially indicated that it will go along with United States policy toward General Charles de Gaulle, it was learned today.

Untangles Snarl

The notice, untangling a year-long diplomatic snarl, arrived not long ahead of an announcement in London that the exile governments of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Luxembourg and Belgium, are recognizing DeGaulle's French committee as a provisional government. It served to offset the embarrassment created by the exiles' action.

The United States has held out against such recognition for the Algiers committee before a liberated French people can make their own views known. The contention here has been that General Dwight D. Eisenhower should be free to deal with whom he chooses in French areas his invading troops set free.

Britain had leaned a good deal further toward acceptance of DeGaulle's demands for recognition.

The British message presumably was a reply to President Roosevelt's formula for dealing with DeGaulle, sent to London three months ago. A less official indication of British disposition to accept the United States' view was given by Prime Minister Churchill in a speech three weeks ago.

Expected Here

General DeGaulle is expected to come here late this month or early next month to confer with President Roosevelt. It is believed that he will renew his request for at least an operative agreement, similar to those which have been made with Norway, Belgium and Holland, if not for recognition as a provisional government.

DeGaulle has signified his intention to meet with the President, it was learned, but has not yet chosen one of the two dates suggested by the President.

The lack of Anglo-American agreement on a formula for civil administration in France has been considered a serious gap in Allied diplomacy, touching dangerously close to the military situation now that Allied troops are on metropolitan French soil.

Partisans of collaboration with Germany.

In Washington, Ambassador Fotich said he had no comment at this time but that he would issue a statement tomorrow.

Meanwhile today, Marshal Tito's Free Yugoslav radio said that Major Randolph Churchill, son of the British Prime Minister, has gone to Rome. He has been a British liaison officer with the Yugoslav Partisans.

In a broadcast recorded by the FCC, Major Churchill was quoted as saying:

"What Marshal Tito and the Partisans have done should serve as a model, an example, to all the enslaved countries of Europe. The way in which, starting from scratch, they built up such a magnificent army has caused the greatest admiration on the part of the people of America and England.

"I have seen a land completely despoiled. I came from Bosnia and shuddered at seeing devastated places all along the journey. These villages were burned down and destroyed by the enemy without provocation."

YUGOSLAV ENVOY'S RECALL REPORTED

JUN 14 1944

DAY

London, June 13 (A. P.).—King Peter II of Yugoslavia was today reported to have recalled Constantin Fotich as Ambassador to Washington, a post the 53-year-old former soldier has held since 1935. Mr. Fotich was regarded here as a supporter of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, who has been accused by Marshal Tito's

Russian Army Spearhead Advancing Upon Viipuri

JUN 14 1944

By Russell Landstrom

LONDON, Wednesday, June 14 (AP)—The spearhead of the Red Army's northward drive into Finland plunged to within 30 miles of the important port of Viipuri during fierce fighting Tuesday, Moscow reported early today, and enemy broadcasts said Russia's whole northern front from the Arctic to the White Sea and Gulf of Finland was blazing into action.

NIGHT

Russians Attack Lisa

Finnish and German radio reports said the Russians were attacking in the Lisa sector between Murmansk and Petsamo and that there was strong reconnaissance activity in the Kandalaksha and Loukhi sectors some 250 miles southward. Berlin also asserted the Russians were striking southwest of Narva.

Kandalaksha is on the shore of the White Sea and Loukhi is farther south on the railway from Archangel across Finland to the Gulf of Bothnia.

Moscow's midnight supplement to the regular nightly communique concerned itself only with the fighting on the Karelian Isthmus, saying there "our troops continued their offensive, crushing resistance of the Finns holding prominent defense fortifications and widely developed field fortifications, and fought their way forward."

The Russians announced they had captured several Finnish strongpoints during Tuesday's battling and listed five in the area of Kivennapa, which they had taken Monday. These were Steklyannaya, Kelrola, Ronnukjula, Vehmajnen and Tijranmjaki.

Through Second Belt

The Russians, already through the second belt of fortifications guarding the approaches to the [illegible] on [illegible] Mannerheim line [illegible] are within 20 miles of this main defense barrier across the isthmus, the Moscow bulletins indicated.

(The Finnish radio has warned civilians in Helsinki to leave the capital and ordered those already evacuated not to return during the present state of emergency, said a British broadcast reported by NBC.)

Finnish sources reported through Stockholm that a stout defense was being thrown against the Soviet forces in the Kivennapa sector. They said the Vammelsuu river front still was intact.

Behind Kivennapa there is hilly country with elevations up to 300 feet and many small lakes, and on the eastern side of the isthmus a natural obstacle to the Red Army's advance is presented by marshland about 20 miles long and three to four miles wide.

One dispatch from Helsinki said some sections of the Finnish press were defiant and the conservative newspaper Kaupalehti declared the country 'must be defended to the last man." However, other advices relayed through Stockholm said the Finns were resentful because Nazi help had not been forthcoming and were ready to evacuate not only Viipuri but virtually the entire isthmus.

The Russian supplement mentioned the use of planes in the onslaught against the Finns, saying "our aircraft in unfavorable weather conditions continued to strike at communications and Finnish reserves coming to the front."

Mighty Operation

Other Moscow accounts of the great northward drive by the troops of Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov were more expansive and called the attack by artillery, tanks, infantry and planes one of the mightiest combined operations the Soviets have yet attempted.

Finnish troops were fleeing so fast before the Red Army's advance that the Moscow radio said towns were being abandoned intact and there were predictions that Finland would be knocked out of the war by July 1.

Izvestia, official Soviet government newspaper, said the Finns were surrendering in ever-growing numbers.

German military commentators showed a tendency to deprecate the Russian drive against Finland as a mask for bigger operations yet to get under way elsewhere along the front. However, the Moscow communique said there were no changes in other sectors during the day.

Reports both from Stockholm and from Berlin said the Finns admitted there was little doubt of the result. Soviet forces, plunging through thick forests, already had reached points beyond captured Raivola, about 36 miles from Viipuri, Finland's second largest city.

A Stockholm dispatch said the Finns had begun evacuating Viipuri and other regions in the path of the Soviet offensive, although Helsinki dispatches reported Finnish troops were in process of "stabilizing the front."

Have To Bear Brunt

It appeared obvious that the Finns would have to bear the brunt of the Russian blow and would receive little help from the 15 German divisions recently reported to be stationed in the country. The Nazi troops are said to be of poor caliber, indifferent to Finland's fate. There was a belief in London, also, that the Finns had grown a little soft in the last two years and were weary of German overlordship.

Moscow dispatches said the Russian advance was so swift that Raivola fell yesterday after only 40 minutes of fighting. Neither Terijoki, captured yesterday, nor Raivola was burned, the Finns apparently not having had time to apply the torch.

Russian troops were reported moving down two main roads toward Viipuri, making steady progress. Big sectors of the road running along the Gulf of Finland from Terijoki to Viipuri were said to be under fire of Russian artillery. The Russians said many captured Finns had been dazed by the terrific artillery barrage laid down by Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov, an artillery specialist.

Mobile Russian units which captured Kivennapa, 13 miles north of Terijoki, pushed on between lakes and cleared a sector at the end of a highway which runs between Kivennapa and Leningrad, thus securing the Soviet flank.

Bitter Fighting

The bitter fighting was in progress in almost continuous daylight, the long, white summer nights offering hardly any dark hours. The Russians were blasting their way through deep fortifications, which included German self-propelled guns dug into the earth, and only now were reaching the core of the Finnish defenses.

There was some surprise among theBritish that the Russians chose to strike first against the Finns, the general belief having been that Stalin would aim his initial blow at Romania. It was agreed, though, that the Red army would be in better position to smash westward once it had eliminated the Finnish threat to its northern flank.

Once the Finns are out of it, Russian warships would be able to work out of the Gulf of Finland, and Russian planes based in Finland would be a great menace to German positions in the Baltic states.

British press dispatches from Sweden suggested the present Fin[illegible]

fash government, which turned down a Russian armistice proposal less than two months ago, might retire in favor of a set of peacemakers. This was regarded as plausible here.

King Receives Churchill, Adm. King

London, June 13 (Reuter)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Admiral Ernest J. King, commander of the United States fleet, were received by King George at Buckingham Palace today.

Churchill gave the King a first-hand account of what he saw during his visit to the Normandy beachhead yesterday.

CHURCHILL CITES NEED FOR UNITY

LONDON, June 13 — (AP) Prime Minister Churchill, in a United Nations day message, declared tonight that as final victory is approached it is fitting "we should emphasize unity which alone can make it possible."

"We honor the cause of the United Nations," Churchill said. "This is the cause of good men throughout the world. It is the cause which inspires energies and claims the loyalties of the greatest alliance that history has ever assembled to do battle against the powers of evil.

"As we draw towards the final victory for which we long, it is fitting that we should emphasize unity which alone can make it possible.

"Divided we can await nothing but confusion and ruin. United we have brighter hopes than have ever cheered mankind."

Wallace Sees Siberia As Model For Future

London, June 13 (AP)—The Moscow radio said today that United States Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, speaking in Novosibirsk, had declared his "hope for a better future was considerably increased" by seeing "the splendid efficiency with which Siberia has been organized during the past 15 years."

"I was told that the total production of Siberia increased ten times during the past 15 years," said Wallace according to the broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor. He added:

"I'd like the people of the Western States of America and the territory of Alaska to be able to see what I've seen here." Wallace is en route to China.

Nazi Minesweepers Sunk by Saboteurs

Stockholm, June 13 (A. P.).—The free Danish press service reported today that four German minesweepers were sunk yesterday by saboteurs in the Svendborg harbor, at Fyen Island, Denmark. This presumably accounted for a declaration of a state of emergency at Svendborg, announced officially by the Swedish news agency, Tidningarnas Telegrambyra, last night.

Germans Dig In Around Bolsena

Nazi 14th Army, Attempting to Protect Vital Road Junction Is Offering Stiff Resistance To Allied 5th in Italy.

By Lynn Heinzerling

ROME, June 13 (AP) — Remnants of the German 14th Army fleeing northwestward from Rome have dug in before the road junction town of Bolsena, on the northeastern tip of the lake of that name, and for the past 48 hours have been offering stiff resistance to the Allied Fifth Army, a front dispatch said tonight.

Anti-tank Fire

Bolsena, 60 miles from Rome and eight miles from the important center of Orvieta, is cradled in the half-moon of commanding hills, and the Nazis have been touring anti-tank and machinegun fire at the American tanks and infantry since Sunday.

The enemy's position commands the only approach to Bolsena by highway.

"Until we ran into this fire," reported Associated Press Correspondent Sid Feder, "we had traveled 17 miles from Viterbo in slightly more than 24 hours along a road littered with German transport and the bodies of horses.

"Although the Allies have suffered some casualties in this stand of the Germans to protect the vital highway 74 miles beyond Bolsena—the route connecting eastern and western enemy forces—the stand also is proving costly to the Nazis. Some 50 prisoners have been brought in, in the past 24 hours."

Smash Makeshift Line

Allied forces driving up the western shore of Lake Bolsena, a large, beautiful body of water, had smashed through a makeshift enemy defense line and again threw the Germans into retreat.

The pursuing Allies captured Valentano, highway junction on the western shore of the lake, and pressed on toward Latera, four miles farther north. In a sharp and bloody engagement east of Orbetello, on the Tyrrhenian coast 71 miles from Rome, Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces captured 142 prisoners from the German 162nd Turcoman division and killed 100.

Clark told his troops they had broken the German armies opposing them in Italy and said, "I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart."

On the eastern side of Lake Bolsena, South African armored forces of the Eighth Army ran into a stiff battle for Bagno Regio, five miles from the important center of Orvieto.

East of Rome the Eighth Army had all but cleared Highway No. 5, the broad transpeninsular route leading from the capital to the port of Pescara on the Adriatic Sea. Two more cities on the highway, Popoli and Carsoli, were captured yesterday, and Allied troops crossed the Saline river, some five miles north of captured Pescara, at several places.

Would Facilitate Supply

Opening of the highway from Pescara to Rome would greatly facilitate the supply of Lt. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese's Eighth Army, just as it once formed the backbone of the Nazis' communications behind their defense line across Italy.

Front dispatches said German forces in the Adriatic sector now were in almost as precipitate retreat as those along the west coast, fleeing through many towns and villages without putting up a fight. British troops who occupied Popoli yesterday advanced 10 miles in less than 24 hours.

The Mediterranean tactical Air Force flew about 1,100 sorties during the day, shooting up what enemy transport tried to sneak by on the roads in daylight. Allied engineers were reported restoring the port facilities of Civitavecchia on the west coast.

Allies Smash Up Both Sides Of Lake Bolsena

Rome, June 13 (AP)—The Germans north of Rome fought bitterly today along a new line of defenses from Lake Bolsena to the sea, but Fifth Army troops smashed through and occupied nearly all the western shore of the lake and all but wiped out a strong point east of Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome.

Moving up both sides of Lake Bolsena, Allied forces on the western shore captured Valentano, junction of three highways some 55 miles north of Rome and pushed on, nearing Latera, four miles further north.

Northwest of the lake, South African forces moving toward Orvieto ran into a stiff battle in Bagno Regio.

Drive On Highway

On the Tyrrhenian coast American doughboys encountered a new series of dug-in defenses east of Orbetello and attacked through high ground directly toward lateral Highway 74, which is about 90 road miles from Rome at that point. In a sharp and bloody engagement they captured 142 prisoners from the German 162d Turcoman Division and killed 100 more of the enemy.

The advance was considerably more rapid on the Adriatic sector, where Eighth Army troops crossed the Saline river, some five miles north of captured Pescara, at several places.

Villages Captured

These Allied forces took Popoli, on the Rome-Pescara road, ten miles north of Sulmona.

South of Terni, in the center of the advance line, the enemy continued to put up a fight but some progress was made there, also.

The Eighth Army forces in the Tiber Valley advanced to the southwest of Carsoli, reaching high ground across Highway No. 5 and taking a number of villages.

Port Repairs Rushed

It was announced by the Allied naval command that a port party was established at Civitavechhia June 9 to begin restoring the facilities which had been heavily battered by Allied bombing and enemy demolitions. Many mines have been swept up from the coast from Anzio northward.

Last night RAF bombers swept over Hungary and attacked the Almasfuzito oil refineries near Komarom, northwest of Budapest, starting large fires.

Yesterday tactical aircraft hammered transport and other targets in the battle area and further north to impede the German withdrawal. The Mediterranean Allied air force flew about 1,100 sorties in all.

Even Ex-Duce Duped By Fascist Corruption

By Edward Kennedy

Rome, June 13 (AP)—Corruption within the Fascist regime in Italy, it is now becoming apparent, was even greater than the most rabid anti-Fascists have averred.

This corruption undoubtedly was the prime cause of the poor showing which Italy made in the war, and it increased as the war progressed. The full story is now beginning to come out, for many ex-Fascists are only too ready to tell all about it and incriminate those who did them wrong.

Defective Equipment

Italy apparently went to war with a badly disorganized and ill-equipped army. It did not have the "eight million bayonets" about which Benito Mussolini boasted, and much of its equipment was defective due to graft.

According to one ex-Fascist, the Fascist setup was so corrupt that even Mussolini himself was a victim. On one occasion when the former Duce was making a tour of military airfields, this informant asserted, planes were rushed from one field to another and new numbers were quickly painted on them to give Mussolini the impression he was seeing a lot of different aircraft when in reality he was seeing the same ones over and over again.

$1,000 Draft Bribes

Even conscription was said to have been rotten. Although all able-bodied men of military age were supposed to have been in the armed forces, one could have himself recorded as "deceased" for a bribe of about 20,000 lire (about $1,000) and thus escape the draft.

After Mussolini's Government collapsed and the Germans and the puppet "Fascist republic" took over, affairs got still worse. The Italians knew the so-called republic had no future, and it attracted only men who had to join up to save their own skins or crooks who saw a chance for a quick cleanup, letting the future take care of itself.

Black Mart Extended

In Rome the black market became so extensive that it overshadowed all legitimate sources. Outside of bread, no food could be purchased with ration cards because it all went into the black market, where it was sold openly at astronomical prices.

The poor suffered the most, of course; but to save themselves, many of the poor became black marketers, going out in the country to buy up food which they carried back and sold or bartered.

Toward the end of the German occupation in Rome officials were charging as high as $100 for seats in trucks bound for Florence which were supposed to be free. Bribes of all sorts were being passed around and many people were denouncing their personal enemies to the Germans.

'No Wonder Nazis In Italy Are In Flight'

Rome, June 13 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark told his Fifth Army troops today that they had broken the German armies opposing them in Italy and "it is no wonder they are in full flight."

"You men who captured Rome, I want to congratulate you from the bottom of my heart," Clark said in welcoming British, French and American troops of the Fifth Army to a spacious new rest center on the outskirts of Rome.

Urging the men to visit and study places of historic interest in Rome, Clark added, "Watch your step. Don't raise too much hell."

Legations Moving To Rome

Vatican City, June 13 (AP)—The diplomatic staffs of 14 legations to the Holy See who have been confined to Vatican City are planning to move shortly to their legations in Rome.

Their places will be taken inside Vatican walls by diplomats of six other countries—Germany, Japan, Slovakia, Hungary, Romania and Finland.

Moving out are the legations of the United States, Britain, Belgium, Bolivia, China, Colombia, Cuba, Ecuador, Italy, Yugoslavia, Peru, Poland, Uruguay and Venezuela.

French Situation

The French Ambassador to the Vatican, Leon Berard, will remain inside the Vatican representing the Vichy Government, but members of his staff have resigned and affirmed their allegiance to Gen. Charles de Gaulle and will move out.

The German and Japanese Ministers to the Holy See and those of other pro-Axis countries have been accorded diplomatic courtesy by Allied authorities. American soldiers on motor cycles yesterday escorted the car of the Japanese Ambassador from his embassy to the Vatican and back.

Status Of Full Ally Asked For Italy

Washington, June 13 (AP)—The House Affairs Committee called for open discussion today of a proposal that Italy be recognized as a full ally of the United States with diplomatic ties and entitled to lend-lease aid.

A resoluion by Representative Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), urged by Italian Americans, was brought up for public hearing by Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.)

"We're trying to do all we can for Italy," he said.

Roosevelt's Support Asked

The plan calls for "full diplomatic relations" and a place for Italy in the United Nations. President Roosevelt is requested specifically to urge the other Allies to recognize Italy now as a copartner against the Axis.

The resolution says that the new Italian government reflects the will of the Italian people, including those in the areas still held by the Germans. It adds that recognition of Italy as an ally will "release untold energies of the Italian people, thus striking a hard political and military blow against Hitler and his agent, Mussolini.

30.24— 16205

Problems Foreseen

Committee members told reporters, however, that the idea presents several knotty problems.

One member said it is highly improbable that the Administration would ask other United Nations to recognize Italy at this time; that extension of lend-lease would be unnecessary because "the army is providing all they need now;" and that the primary task of ridding Italy of Germans should be handled before any other steps are considered.

"Would Inspire Italians"

Marcantonio told the committee that Italy "for the first time in 21 years has a pro-democratic and anti-Fascist Government" and full recognition now "will inspire the Italian people."

A score of witnesses from New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Italian-American societies and labor unions joined in the appeal.

TERMS KEPT SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 13 — (AP) President Roosevelt said today that reasons of military security forbid publication of the terms of the armistice which took Italy out of the war. Last week the President said there appeared to be no reason to keep the armistice terms secret after the fall of Rome, but today he said further inquiry showed that the military considers it unsafe to make the document public.

Gandhi Going to Poona

BOMBAY, June 13 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi shortly will leave Juhu, a suburb of Bombay, for a short stay in Poona, it was disclosed here today. In July he will take up residence at Mahableshwar, a popular hill resort seventy miles from Bombay.

Allies Take Points In Myitkyina

New Delhi, June 13 (AP)—Press dispatches from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said today that Chinese troops have occupied the rifle range in Myitkyina, main Japanese base in North Burma, and other Allied units have taken an enemy strong point in the southern part of the town.

To the northwest Kamaing is under attack by Chinese units which have pressed down the Mogaung Valley and other elements are strengthening a circle around the town, these dispatches said.

JAP MENACE TO KOHIMA ENDED BY ALLIED UNITS

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 13. — (AP) The Allies have won a two-months battle for control of heights above and below their east India base of Kohima with the capture of Aradura on the south and Japanese withdrawal from Naga village on the north, it was announced today.

The removal of the Japanese menace to Kohima was described officially as "of vital importance to operations throughout the whole of the eastern theater."

A communique from Lt. Joseph W. Stilwell's forces said Chinese troops with mortar and artillery support occupied a rifle range strong point in the northwest section of Myitkyina, main Japanese base in north Burma, while Americans took a strong position in the south part of the town.

The Chinese were attacking Kamaing, Mogaung valley stronghold, from the north. British and American bombers and fighters kept up widespread attacks on enemy communications both in Burma and east India.

Japs Withdrawn

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 13 (AP)—The Japanese have withdrawn from positions commanding Naga village, north of Kohima, on the Assam front, and Allied troops have occupied Aradura, south of Kohima, it was announced today.

The two-month battle for control of the Kohima region ridges thus was said to have ended in favor of the Allies after fighting officially described as "of vital importance to operations throughout the whole of the Eastern theater."

CHINESE REPULSE JAPS AT CHANGSHA

CHUNGKING, June 13. — (AP) The Chinese announced that heavy fighting raged on the outer defenses of the Hunan capital of Changsha today after the defenders beat off a Japanese attempt to cross the Liuyang river east of the city in what may have ben an attempt to take it from the south.

The High command announced 300 Japanese were killed in one sector and severe fighting proceeded. One Japanese force shifted to the Siang river, which runs north and south through Changsha, to atack Wusha, 12 miles northwest of the provincial capital.

While the battle for the Rice Bowl continued, Japanese forces to the north in Honan province threatened the Shensi province gateway city of Tungkwan, advancing along the Lunkhai railway on the town of Wensiang, 20 miles east of Tungkwan.

A communique said Chinese and American air forces raided Loyang and Sikung, in a blow apparently aimed at the base of this striking force, starting fires in enemy barracks.

Far to the south, the air forces bombed enemy fortifications and supply depots at Ichang and Shasi in Western Hupeh.

In Honan province the Japanese pushing south scored a considerable advance east of the Peiping-Hankow railway and are attacking the important city of Chowkiakow, a focal point for eight highways about 40 miles east of Yencheng on the railroad.

Major Gen. Clair L. Chennault's Liberators sank a 16,000-ton freighter and damaged a cruiser off the southeast China coast and continued hard-hitting support of Chinese forces on the Changsha front, a communique said.

Japs' Threat To Tungkwan Grows

Chungking, June 13 (AP)—Heavy fighting for Changsha continues, with the Chinese in one sector killing more than 300 Japanese, the Chinese high command announced tonight, while in Honan province the enemy threat to Tungkwan, funnel town of northwest China, increased.

A communique said the invaders were advancing on Lunghai railway town of Wensiang, only 20 miles to the east of Tungkwan.

Japanese pushing southward from the sector east of the Hankow-Peiping railway scored a considerable advance and are now attacking the important city of Chowkiakow, junction point of eight roads, the communique disclosed.

Yanks Put Biak 'Drome Into Action

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Wednesday, June 14 (AP)—Mokmer airdrome on Biak island in the Schouten group has been put into operation, General Douglas MacArthur announced today.

Infantry troops on Biak pushed westward toward Borokoe airstrip as airplanes started using Mokmer Tuesday.

Mokmer strip is approximately 880 miles from the Philippines, closest point to that enemy stronghold now held by the Allies.

Americans landed on Biak island off Dutch New Guinea May 27, and took the important airstrip June 7 after hard fighting.

Japanese raided Biak Sunday night with six planes, damaging an American destroyer and causing several casualties on land. Mitchell medium bombers sank four small Jap merchantmen off Manokwari, Dutch New Guinea, Monday.

Liberators attacked Palau again Sunday and Monday, starting fires. They also heavily hit Truk in daylight Monday.

American casualties on Biak Island up to June 6 were announced as 85 killed and 340 wounded. It was previously disclosed that 670 Japanese were killed during the first three days of the invasion.

From Mokmer airstrip, Allied planes can dominate all western Dutch New Guinea, including such important enemy air bases as Manokwari, 135 miles to the west, Nabire, 160 miles away, and Babo, 205 miles distant. Palau, at the western end of the Carolines, is only 595 miles from the Schoutens.

Of the six Japanese planes which raided Biak Sunday, three were shot down and two others probably destroyed by Allied fighters.

The B-25s which struck enemy shipping in Geelvink Bay off Manokwari sank four 1,000-ton cargo ships and three coastal vessels and sank or seriously damaged a 2,000-ton cargo vessel.

who are now striving to take two other enemy landing fields a few more miles to the west, was not clear on the basis of latest reports.

Gains Measured In Yards

However, he added, the troops have moved more than 1,000 yards north, inland from Mokmer, and along ridges to the east they have advanced northward 2,000 yards.

Supported by tanks, the American infantrymen have mopped up enemy pockets to the west and northwest of Mokmer drome and on Sunday were pushing toward the other airstrips against strong enemy machine-gun and artillery fire. Liberators and Boston A-20s meanwhile attacked Japanese rear positions.

New Raids Announced

Today's communique announced Liberator raids on the Truk and Palau islands in the Caroline group Saturday night. At Palau, 15 enemy planes intercepted and two were shot down. One Liberator failed to return. Another Liberator was missing from the Truk raid. An enemy bomber was downed south of Truk.

The communique also reported the capture of 629 Japanese prisoners to date in the Hollandia-Aitape sector of Dutch New Guinea, the greatest number ever taken in the Southwest Pacific battle theater. Enemy casualties in the Hollandia-Aitape sector and Sarmi-Maffin bay area 100 miles west now total 6,706, almost 400 of whom were counted within the last few days. In addition to battle dead, the total includes hundreds of victims of starvation and tropical ailments.

10 Planes Sink 4 Jap Warships In 15 Minutes

By Spencer Davis

An Advanced Fifth Air Force Base Off Dutch New Guinea, June 8 (AP—Delayed)—Ten Mitchell medium bombers on reconnaissance high over the western tip of Dutch New Guinea today sighted the trim outlines and dashing wakes of seven Japanese warships racing eastward toward Biak Island, where the Nipponese garrison is in trouble.

It was 1.15 P. M. Broken clouds obscured the formation, but the protective covering came too late. The leader of the Mitchells signaled an attack and down the formation plunged for a deadly skip-bombing run.

In 15 Minutes

By 1.30 it was all over. In spite of a hail of defensive fire, the Mitchells had sunk four destroyers and left a fifth smoking and wallowing dead in the water, and had put a cruiser and sixth destroyer to rout.

The performance drew from Maj. Gen. Ennis Whitehead, commanding the Fifth Air Force Bomber Command, this commendation:

"Congratulations to you all. You men have this date performed one of the finest military feats of the war."

The attack was made in the face of 10-to-1 odds. Three of the Mitchells, including the formation's dashing leader, failed to return.

As the bombers twisted and weaved toward their target, the major leading the flight radioed:

"My wingman and I will hit the destroyer and cruiser on the left flank and divert their fire. Pick your targets."

"So Long, Boys"

A moment later he was heard again for the last time, saying: "So long, boys. I'm taking the big one."

Five-inch shells riddled his plane as he passed over the cruiser and he fell burning into the sea. His wingman also perished in the wall of flak which the warships were hurling at him. But the diversion succeeded and their sacrifice was not in vain.

Following on the tail of the lead planes were Lieut. Wesley A. Strawn, Claringdon, Texas, in Miss Cue, and Lieut. Frederick E. Rimmer, Knoxville, Tenn., piloting Little Stinker.

Strawn's navigator, Lieut. Norval D. Jennings, New York city, shouted, "Wes, do you see anything you like?"

"Oh, I'm just shopping around," the Texan laughed as Miss Cue slammed a thousand-pounder square amidship on a destroyer.

Chewed By Flak

Rimmer's tailgunner, Staff Sergeant Robert M. Tenkman, St. Bernard, Ohio, confirmed the kill. Little Stinker, badly chewed by flak, returned to its base with the left engine hitting on only four cylinders.

Eager Wolves, piloted by Lieut. Alfred Wolfram, Detroit, and Dragon, with Lieut. Glenn Pruitt, Tracy, Cal., at the controls, closed on the second destroyer. Pruitt skipped a 500-pounder on the bow and Wolfram scored a direct hit on the stern.

"They were throwing up a water barrage at us by firing five-inchers directly ahead of us," said Pruitt's navigator, Lieut. Kenneth J. Anderson, Trenton, Mich. "We saw the flash, then the splash, but flew right through it."

The Dragon's tailgunnner, Carl F. Boehme, San Jose, Cal., raked the sinking destroyer's decks with his twin fifties.

Pruitt's radioman, Staff Sergeant Leonard Trompke, Fresno, Cal., said he heard the Japanese on the radio shouting in English, "Turn right, what angels (altitude) are you?" It was a futile attempt to confuse the American flyers.

Third Ship Sunk

The third destroyer was sunk by the Mad Missourian, flown by Lieut. Archie P. Trantham, Cape Girardeau, Mo., and Sacramento Belle, with Lieut. Robert A. Beck, New Albany, Ind., piloting.

Lieut. Paul R. Sciortino, New Orleans, saw two enemy ships smoking and settling and another about to go under. To the right he saw a fourth destroyer billowing smoke. It had been attacked from masthead level by Mitch the Witch, piloted by Ronald E. Machnikowsky, Evanston, Ill.

A destroyer which was providing a close screen for the cruiser made a 90-degree turn, exposing the plane on the Witch's wing—The Straggler—to a stream of fire. The Straggler blew up in midair and winged over into the sea.

Lightnings flying top cover for the Mitchells lingered after the engagement and confirmed the sinkings. Pilots reported that only the cruiser and a damaged destroyer survived the savage 15-minute attack.

ATTACKS LAST OVER 3 DAYS

Nimitz Reports Action as In or Near Marianas. 1,500 Miles From Tokyo.

JUN 14 1944

By Leif Erickson

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 13 (AP)—A daring U. S. carrier task force, operating for three days within 1,500 miles of Tokyo, cut a wide swath in Japan's dwindling sea and air power, sinking 13 ships, damaging 16 others and destroying 141 planes with a loss of only 15 American aircraft.

Centers Near Marianas

This action, centering in and near the Marianas Islands, was announced today by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, supreme commander of the mid-Pacific area. It extended from last Saturday through Monday. The comunique supplemented previous terse reports that the Marianas had again been raided.

Stealing into the Southern Marianas, the powerful force loosed its carrier planes in a devastating attack Saturday on Guam, Saipan and Tinian Islands. The assault stirred up a hornet's nest of resistance as the enemy sent scores of fighter planes aloft to contest the strike.

124 Planes Destroyed in Day

Navy Hellcat fighters tied into the enemy all over the sky as other planes bombed and strafed ground objectives. A total of 124 Japanese planes was destroyed that day, mostly in aerial combat. Eleven Hellcat fighters and eight pilots were lost.

After nightfall a handful of enemy planes approached the task force, readying its guns and planes for the second day of the assault. The enemy failed to press home an attack, however, and one was shot down by ship's anti-aircraft fire.

Yanks Strike On Sunday

Aircraft of the carrier force struck again Sunday at the same islands, and extended the attack to Rota island. Sixteen more Nipponese planes were destroyed. Two small cargo ships were sunk at Saipan, largest enemy harbor in the Marianas, and a small oiler sent to the bottom northwest of the island. The first day of the assault apparently had knocked out most of the enemy's available plane strength.

Ten Sunk, Ten Damaged

A formation of Japanese ships, attempting to flee from Saipan, was surprised and ten sunk and another ten damaged. Those sunk were a large oiler, a destroyer, three corvettes, one large cargo vessel, one medium cargo and three small cargoes. Damaged were five medium cargoes and five escort vessels of unidentified type.

In all of the Sunday operations but four American planes and seven flight personnel were lost, Nimitz reported.

A second formation of enemy ships was spotted Monday several hundred miles away. Again the navy aircraft swooped to the attack and heavily damaged six more vessels, apparently all that were in the convoy. They were a destroyer escort, three destroyers and two cargo craft.

Large Measure of Surprise

The carrier force apparently achieved an important measure of surprise in knifing into the Marianas on Saturday, in contrast to the attack last February when the approach of a similar task force was detected by enemy scouting planes. In the February smash, the first of the war, 135 enemy planes were destroyed, two ships sunk and nine damaged. American losses were six planes.

The second strike, however, was more successful in catching enemy shipping, always a primary objective of carrier task force operations. Attacks on two convoys in the area indicated the Japanese are making an earnest effort to strengthen their positions on Saipan, Tinian, Rota and Guam, the former American naval base.

Very Strong Force

The make-up of the task force was not indicated but it probably included battleships, cruisers and destroyers in addition to carriers.

In striking this second blow at the Marianas, key enemy position guarding the sea approach to Japan, the China coast and the Philippines, the American Navy again drew no challenge from the reluctant Japanese fleet.

In a separate announcement, Nimitz reported a continuation of Army and Navy plane raids on enemy positions throughout the central Pacific Sunday and Monday. Truk and Ponape in the Carolines, Nauru and Ocean islands west of the Gilberts and by-passed Japanese in the Marshalls were bombed and strafed. In all these attacks one American plane was reported damaged and all returned to their bases.

Gun at Nauru Hits Liberator With First Shot on Two Occasions

A NAVY REST HOME, Oahu, Hawaii, June 8 (Delayed) (AP).—American bomber pilots, says Commander John T. Hayward, of Great Neck, L. I., rate Japanese anti-aircraft gunners as very good, mainly because they get a great deal of practice shooting at American planes.

A liberator of Hayward's squadron flew over Nauru, and the first shot by a Japanese gun knocked out the No. 3 engines. The first shot from the same gun knocked out the same engine on the second visit.

Brazilian Flyers Train At U. S. Base in Panama

Learn Combat Flying Under American Instructors

AT AN OUTLYING BASE, Panama Canal Department (AP).—This fighter-plane base, which has turned out American pilots ready for front-line duty, has been taken over lock, stock and barrel by the Brazilian Air Force on a fifty-fifty basis.

But it has been a good-neighborly invasion. Under seasoned American instructors the officers and men of the first Brazilian squadron to be activated for training with the United States 6th Air Force in this area are making rapid strides learning combat flying.

Most of the Brazilian officers speak English, which they learned in high school and college in Brazil. Now they are brushing up on their colloquial English. When correspondents visited the base the Brazilians were tackling the interpretation of "that's no skin off my nose."

At the control tower it isn't strange nowadays to hear a Brazilian sign off with "Okey dokey."

Besides the language, the Brazilians have learned some American horseplay. Water poured out of windows and tumbling down from doors and some versions of the "hot-foot" are common tricks now for the Brazilians.

ATLANTIC U-BOAT SUNK

Ottawa, June 13 (A. P.).—A United States destroyer and destroyer escort, and a Grumman Avenger plane from an American aircraft carrier assisted the Canadian frigate Prince Rupert in destroying a Nazi U-boat in a recent mid-Atlantic action, the Canadian Navy Minister, Angus Macdonald, announced today.

Sent to the bottom by a barrage from the guns of the new frigate, the U-boat was the fourth victim of the Canadian Navy in the last ten weeks. Fourteen of the German crew were taken prisoners.

"This was an excellent example of combined operations," Mr. Macdonald commented, "not only between the sea and air power, but between ships of the Canadian and United States navies.

FINNS TO PAY WAR DEBT

WASHINGTON, June 13 — (AP) The United States has decided to let Finland pay the June 15 installment on her World War I debt to this country, government officials said today.

The Treasury's foreign funds control division will grant the little European nation a license to tap her funds tied up in this country to meet the payment of $148,445.06 and so maintain her unique record of never defaulting.

Finland, maintaining diplomatic relations with this country although at war with Russia and Britain, still owes the United States around $9,000,000.

Finns Seek Fund Held By U.S. To Pay On Debt

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Finland intends to pay the June 15 installment on her World War I debt to this country—to keep her record intact.

The little European nation, said its legation today, wants to use some of her funds in the United States to meet the payment of around $140,000.

In order to touch these funds, Finland has to get a license from the Treasury's foreign funds control division. An application has been filed.

Never Has Defaulted

Finland never has defaulted, although some postponements have been arranged voluntarily by this country, as during the Finns' 1939-40 war with Russia

Although again fighting Russia and at war with Britain, Finland still maintains diplomatic relations with this country. However, the State Department's attitude toward Finland has stiffened in recent months. Recent evidences were the blacklisting of numerous Finnish firms and a statement in which the Finnish Government was termed "Pro-Nazi."

Totals About Nine Millions

Finland, only nation still paying on World War I debts to this country, owes about $9,000,000.

Said Urho Toivola, counsellor of the legation:

"Finland intends scrupulously to fulfill her international obligations and will continue to do so as long as possible.

Ball Bearing Shipments To Germany Cut

Special Economic Envoy To Sweden Wins Agreement With SKF.

WASHINGTON, June 13. (AP)—In a major diplomatic-economic victory, the United States has won an agreement from Swedish ball-bearing manufacturers to cut down substantially on sales to Germany. ing output sharply reduced by

Depend on Swedes

The Nazis, their own ball-bearbombings, have been heavily dependent on imports from Sweden for bearings to keep planes and tanks in battle, and truck and factory wheels turning.

The Swedes agreed to reduce their shipments, it was learned, as a result of negotiations between Stanton Griffis, American movie executive and special representative of the Foreign Economic Administration, and officials of the SKF Ball Bearing Company.

Previously, the American, British and Russian governments had demanded that Sweden cut off all shipments of ball bearings and other strategic materials to Germany. To this, the Swedish government replied that it could not make any reductions.

Blow To Nazis

In addition to depriving the Nazis of much needed bearings, the agreement is regarded here as an important psychological blow at the enemy. It assuredly reflects Swedish recognition that the Germans are so far along on the road to defeat that they are unlikely to try to strike at Sweden.

Griffis has been in Sweden more than a month. He was sent there by the FEA with a virtual blank check to see what he could do on a man-to-man basis after it became apparent that diplomatic dealings were making little headway.

Presumably with millions of dollars at his disposal, Griffis was able to use preclusive buying as a powerful weapon against the Germans. This means simply that Griffis agreed to buy most or all of the ball bearings which otherwise the Germans would have bought.

Economic Victory

The economic warfare victory in Sweden is the first since the invasion affected the diplomatic balance in Europe.

It is the fourth, however, of recent weeks. Previously, Turkey cut off chrome shipments to Germany, Spain cut shipments of wolfram (tungsten ore) to token quantities, and Portugal stopped wolfram shipments.

Nazis' Ferro-alloy Supply Is in Danger

JUN 14 1944

President Makes Detailed Public Report of Conclusions of Investigators of German Metal Supply.

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt today made public the following summary of the conclusions of Germany's ferro-alloy position which have been made by the Foreign Economic Administration.

Growing Vulnerable

"1. One of the most significant developments in Germany's war production is the growing vulnerability of her ferro-alloy position. Germany's supply of these alloys required in the manufacture of special steels essential for her production of shells, tanks, artillery and other finished munitions, as well as for her war plants, is showing signs of deterioration. This situation is developing as one after another the sources of these vital metals are being cut off through United Nations military, political and economic action.

"2. Manganese and chrome are used in greater quantities than other alloys. With the Russian recapture of the Nikopol manganese deposits and the action of Turkey in stopping chrome shipments, important Nazi sources of these metals have been eliminated. When the Balkan supplies to Germany are cut off by the United Nations armed forces the last substantial source of chrome and the only remaining source of these will be gone.

"3. Tungsten is practically indispensable for tips on tools used in armament production and for projectile cores.

"4. Spain has thus far stopped a portion of its tungsten exports to Germany. Further substantial reductions and absolute control of smuggling are necessary.

Portugal Suspends

"5. Considerable quantities of tungsten were being shipped from Portugal to Germany, but Portugal has agreed to suspend these shipments.

"6. The importance of this suspension of Portugese shipments and of completely shutting off the remaining Spanish shipments to the Nazis can be appreciated when it is kept in mind that during 1943 about 90 per cent of Germany's tungsten supplies came from Spain and Portugal. So highly do the Germans prize this metal that they have even resorted to equipping U-boats as blockade runners in an attempt to bring in small quantities from the Far East.

"7. A substantial part of Germany's supply of nickel, molybdenum and cobalt is now coming from Finland. Cobalt is almost unique in bonding tungsten carbide in tool steels and shell cores. Nickel and molybdenum can be used to some extent to replace manganese and chrome in some steels. The shortages which the Nazis are experiencing in manganese and chrome have thus increased her dependence on nickel and molybdenum from Finland. The stoppage of these Finnish ferro-alloys from getting to Germany would help the United States.

Norway Source

"8. Norway is presently a major source of molybdenum for Germany.

"9. In the event that the Balkan supplies of chrome and manganese and the Norwegian supplies of molybdenum are cut off by combined military operations—and the remaining Spanish tungsten supplies are eliminated through political and economic action — it is estimated that Germany's war production would be materially affected within six months.

'I know that you will agree that this picture should not be permitted to result in any slackening of the country's all-out effort through over-optimism, but rather should be the stimulus for renewed and greater efforts to shorten the conflict.

COFFEE URGES U. S. BREAK WITH SPAIN

Washington, June 13 (A. P.).—Representative John Coffee (D.-Wash.) suggested today that the United States sever diplomatic relations with Spain in order to protect future good relations with the countries of Latin America.

He said Fascism with a Spanish flavor is spreading throughout the republics to the south despite the apparent friendly attitudes of those governments toward the United States and the good neighbor policy.

Furthermore, he asserted, "our diplomatic flirtation with Fascism in Spain has discouraged the underground residents of occupied Europe who believed in democracy despite their observation of what they regard as two-timing, double-dealing deception and hypocrisy."

By this reference he said he referred to recent United States and British policy of dealing on the one hand with the Franco government of Spain and on the other declining to deal with Gen. De Gaulle and the Free French.

In an interview, Mr. Coffee also said the recent election of Ramon Grau San Martin as President of Cuba was a manifestation of the strength of Latin American Fascist tendencies within an apparently friendly nation. He said the elements that elected Grau were "covertly unsympathetic to the United States" and called the election of the Cuban professor a "backward step" for the good neighbor policy.

SAYS INDIA GETS U. S. FARM TRUCKS

Washington, June 13 (A. P.).—Senator Gillette (D.-Iowa) promised a Senate committee today an investigation of the entire Government export program of scarce farm machinery, including reports that the Tennessee Valley Authority is sending trucks to northern India for use in building power dams.

As chairman of an agricultural sub-commitee studying the farm equipment distribution situation, he said at a session of the committee that it would be necessary to determine the possible diversion of implements needed by farmers at home.

He read to the subcommittee an excerpt from a magazine article reporting that TVA trucks were being used in India in construction dams in the foothills of the Himalaya Mountains. Senator Rushfield (R.-S. D.) said he had read the article and already had begun an investigation on his own with Government agencies.

Argentina Is Seeking Synthetic Rubber Plant

Stettinius Says U. S. Won't Export Equipment

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP).—An internationally-advertised bid by the Argentine government for the installation of a synthetic rubber plant in Argentina is regarded with suspicion in official quarters, and the possible interest of Germany in the project is not considered to be too remote.

Appearance of the advertisement in a Washington newspaper promptly brought an official warning from Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, who declared that:

The United States embarked on a synthetic rubber program primarily for war-emergency reasons and many secret processes have been developed as the result of the program. It, therefore, is impossible for this government to agree to export equipment, patents and "know-how" on synthetic rubber at the present time.

The advertisement was published simultaneously in at least two other countries, Great Britain and Switzerland, it has been learned. It is pointed out that the formula for synthetic rubber is similar to the formula for high octane gasoline, the vitally-needed fuel for warplanes. Such information, therefore, should it fall into the hands of the Germans, would be tantamount to a serious military defeat for the Allies, providing the Nazis with secret information on the war-making ability and methods of the United Nations.

INVASION MONEY EXPLAINED BY FDR

WASHINGTON, June 13. — (AP) President Roosevelt said tonight the invasion currency Allied troops are carrying into France was issued only after consultation with representatives of the French Committee of National Liberation.

Declaring we don't want to cheat anybody, Mr. Roosevelt told his news conference the supplemen... currency is intended to be used only until France can set up its own stable government.

General Charles De Gaulle, head of the French committee, is reported to have criticized the use of the specially-printed money on the grounds it might force inflation upon France. The President said, however, that representatives of the French committee both in London and in this country were consulted along with the British treasury.

In a carefully worded, schoolroom-simple discussion of the money, the President said repeatedly the currency was issued chiefly because (1) there wasn't enough printed money in France to support the invasion, and (2) there was no established French government with authority to issue currency.

When such a government is set up arrangements will be made for dealing in fairness with everybody concerned, the President said.

Remarking that soldiers need to have a little money in their pockets when they land on French soil, the President said currency sometimes can be just as important as ammunition and rifles.

The supplemental currency was issued at the approximate ratio of fifty French francs for one dollar and two hundred francs to the British pound sterling. The money was printed in this country, bears the French motto and tricolor on one side and the legend "issued in France" on the other. It is backed the President said, by the combined chiefs of staff who issued it on the authority of Allied governments.

Ship Sunk on First War Trip

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP).—The Liberty ship Meyer London, delivered by Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard, Inc., of Baltimore, last Feb. 4, was sunk by enemy action on her first voyage to a war zone, the War Shipping Administration announced today. There was no loss of life. The ship, commanded by Captain Fred H. Rylander, of New Orleans, was torpedoed in the Mediterranean Sea. A British corvette picked up the ships personnel.

SECRET WAR FILES OPEN TO HUNDREDS

Washington, June 13 (A. P.).—Senators trying to find the source of censorship leaks pursued today a trail crowded with potential suspects. Convinced, he said, that hundreds of employees of the State Department alone had access to secret war files, Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) confessed he felt lost.

Less pessimistic, Senator Reed (R.-Kan.) said that while the post office subcommittee hasn't struck pay dirt, it may have hit a vein.

The committee learned from questioning State Department division heads yesterday that scores of employees, down as far as the $1,620-a-year level, could have had access to correspondence between Miss Vivien Kellems, Connecticut war plant operator, and Count Frederick von Zedlitz

In one of the letters Miss Kellems purportedly wrote the Count, a German living in Buenos Aires, and now on the State Department blacklist as a representative of Hermann Goering's metals syndicate, Mettalgesellschaft:

"Don't give that stupid blacklist another thought."

House Passes War Veterans

Bill of Rights

Measure Awaits F. D. R. Signature After Record Vote.

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—With the unanimous backing of Congress, the "G. I. Bill of Rights"—an overall war veterans' benefits measure—went to the White House today for President Roosevelt's approval.

Record Vote

A 379 to 0 record vote in the House completed action on the compromise approved unanimously yesterday by the Senate. A Senate-House committee had compromised differences between the two branches on the big bill estimated to cost between $3,000,000,000 and $6,500,000,000.

As it left Capitol Hill after almost three months of consideration, the bill provided for government-financed education, government-guaranteed loans, job-finding assistance, hospitalization, and unemployment compensation for veterans of the present war.

Under its provisions, any veteran whose education was interfered with by his war service may resume schooling after his discharge, provided he has served 90 days or longer. In the case of a veteran who was not over 25 at the time he entered service, the legislation presumes his education was interfered with; those over 25 must prove interference. Maximum schooling is limited to four years, dependent upon the veterans' length of service. The government will pay not more than $500 annually for tuition and fees in addition to $50 monthly subsistence allowance if there are no dependents and $75 where the veteran has dependents.

To Help Veterans

To help veterans purchase homes, farms or small businesses, the legislation provides for government-guaranteed loans by private or public lending agencies at not more than four per cent interest, repayable in 20 years, with the Veterans' Administration absorbing the interest charges for the fiscal year. The government guarantee may not exceed fifty per cent of the principal of a loan and no gaurantee may exceed $2,000.

The unemployment section guarantees to a veteran weekly payments of $20 for not more than 52 weeks during the first two years after discharge. It provides for creation of a job-finding agency under the director of selective service, the chairman of the War Manpower Commission and the Veterans' Administrator.

To pro... facilities for the hospitalization of veterans, the legislation authorizes a $500,000,000 hospital construction program.

CAB Outlines Air Routes For U. S. After War

WASHINGTON, June 13. — (AP) After a year of study, the Civil Aeronautics board outlined today the international air routes which it thinks should be flown by United States air carriers after the war.

The routes extend around the globe and to virtually every important country. They would add about 60,000 route miles to the mileage now certified to American companies for regular commerce.

Includes N. Y. to Cairo Flight

Included in the CAB blueprint is a New York to Cairo flight via London, Berlin, Prague, Vienna and Istanbul.

Another goes from New York to Calcutta, linking Paris, a point in Switzerland, Rome, Athens, Cairo, Basra and Karachi.

Both of those routes, after leaving New York, touch on some undetermined point in Newfoundland or Labrador, and some point in Eire.

Still another route sweeps from New York to Newfoundland or Labrador, then to Greenland and Iceland, and on to Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Teheran and Basra.

CAB Chairman L. Welch Pogue, announcing the post-war "basic pattern" at a news conference, emphasized that it is tentative and d... pends heavily on the granting of landing rights by foreign governments.

But he said that, having arrived at this basic draft, the board will proceed to hold hearings on about 100 applications by United States carriers to provide international service.

President to Receive Decisions

Decisions of the board on particular applications will be sent to the President. Negotiations with foreign countries for landing rights will then be handled through the State department.

The 100 applications may be consolidated into 15 or 20 hearings, Pogue said. No dates have been set, but they will go ahead "as speedily as the circumstances of w... will permit.

Pogue said the list of air routes is not rigid, and airlines may apply for other routes not listed. But he said the basic draft should be a valuable guide in the hearing. Questions such as whether more than one company will be permitted to fly the same route are yet to be decided.

One proposed route would cut across the eastern end of the Soviet Union. It would leave Chicago, hop to St. Paul-Minneapolis, then to Alaska, pause in one or more intermediate points in Siberia and proceed to Vladivostok, Mukden, Shanghai, Hongkong (or Canton), Hanoi, and Calcutta.

Many Proposed Routes

This would be varied at the start by leaving Seattle instead of Chicago. And after reaching Alaska, another flight could branch off like this; Alaska, Kiska, Paramushiro, Tokyo, Shanghai and Hongkong (or Canton).

The CAB suggested still another variation: From Mukden, in Manchuria, the route could swing down through Peiping and Chingking.

Some of the other proposed routes:

New York, Bermuda, Azores, Lisbon (so far, this route is already certified); then (A) Lisbon, Madrid, Marseilles and Rome, (B) Lisbon, Algiers, Tunis, Tripoli, Cairo, (C) Lisbon to London.

New York to Paris via a southern route, including Puerto Rico, Trinidad, Brazil, Dakar, Casablanca, Tangier, and Madrid.

New York to Capetown (veering south instead of north at Dakar).

The CAB blueprint also extends the already-certified routes in Latin America and the Pacific.

SENATE RESTORES CUT TO UNRRA BILL

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP) The Senate restored a $350,000,000 House cut in allowances for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration today.

The extra fund was given swift, unanimous approval in passage of a $3,920,570,000 appropriations bill to finance Lend-Lease, the Foreign Economics administration and UNRRA for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Without a word of debate, the Senate adopted an amendment authorizing President Roosevelt to transfer up to $350,000,000 in Lend-Lease funds to UNRRA in addition to $450,000,000 appropriated out right. Such an amendment was stricken in the House.

Leo T. Crowley, Foreign Economics administrator, told the Senate Appropriations committee that the $800,000,000 represented the "minimum needs" for the next six months and that failure to provide it would be "a terrible blow to the morale of peoples in occupied territory."

The lion's share of the total appropriations—$3,451,000,000 in new money—was ear-marked for Lend-Lease. It boosted to $28,134,629,000 funds appropriated for supplies for our Allies since March, 1941.

In addition to new funds, it authorizes the use of $3,879,225,000 previously appropriated but not spent, in effect giving Lend-Lease $7,000,000,000 for the invasion year.

Hatch Says FDR Would Give Up Office for Ideals

JUN 14 1944

WASHINGTON, June 13 — (AP) In a heated Senate debate on foreign policy, Senator Hatch (D.-N. M.) declared today that President Roosevelt is "ready to sacrifice his political life" if that would bring American unity behind peace aims.

But the Democrats would not permit him to retire, Hatch added.

The New Mexican asserted that the Republicans have a past record of repudiating proposals for an association of nations — whereupon Senator Vandenberg (R.-Mich.) jumped to his feet to denounce what he called the injection of partisanship into "the utterly desperate question of foreign policy."

Bridges Challenges Stand

Challenged by Senator Bridges (R.-N. H.) to say where the President and the Democratic party stand, Hatch drew this declaration of principles from the President's statements, his acts and private conversations:

"Franklin D. Roosevelt believes this world is too small for any nation to isolate itself from the rest of the world.

"Mr Roosevelt believes that we should demonstrate the same interest, the same courage, the same willingness to suffer and sacrifice, if necessary, in times of peace that we do in times of war—and that means taking our proper place among the nations of the world.

"Mr. Roosevelt believes in a court of justice. He believes that the issues and disputes which arise among nations should be settled according to the principles of law and justice, instead of according to the power of might and destruction.

"Yes, and he also believes in the independence of nations. He believes no more in the domination by this country of other nations than he believes in the domination of other nations by Germany."

Would Sacrifice Position

Hatch said that "to provide the necessary machinery for the peaceful settlement of disputes among nations without recourse to war, I am sure Franklin D. Roosevelt is today ready to sacrifice, if necessary, his political life."

Bridges interrupted to ask if Mr. Roosevelt felt strongly enough "so that in order to have unity in this country he would be willing to announce today or tomorrow that he is through with public office—that he would put peace aims above partisan politics and that he would pass from the political picture in order to gain a uniform agreement concerning peace aims?"

"I personally believe that Mr. Roosevelt would be willing to make that sacrifice," Hatch replied, "because he believes so strongly in the principles which he has announced. But I would not be willing for him to make that sacrifice and neither would the Democratic party."

"Why?" Bridges demanded.

G.O.P. Destroyed Hope

"Because we remember 20 years ago," Hatch replied. "We remember how the people of America were led out on a limb of united support for an Association of Nations for the prevention of war. We also remember how the Republican party destroyed that hope."

"I will not sit idly by," Vandenberg declared, "and let the suggestion be made here that there is any less devotion to the ideals of peace among the Republicans here, within the Republican party or among the Republican sons who are fighting on the battlefield, than there is among those who are Democrats."

The Michigan Senator said Hatch had taken words out of their context and historical background in discussing the 1920 G.O.P. platform which endorsed an association of nations.

Vandenberg recalled President Roosevelt's 1940 campaign speech in which he promised fathers and mothers their sons would not be sent into a foreign war, but Hatch said the pledge had been kept—"it is our war."

The discussion was touched off by Hatch's request that two articles by Wendell L. Willkie, the 1940 G.O.P. nominee, on platform ideas be placed in the record. Hatch said he wished potential Republican candidates would speak out "frankly, candidly and forthrightly" as he indicated Willkie had done.

Senators Hear Hillman Defend Political Action

He Says C. I. O. Committee Broke No Law, but Admits It May Drop Some Work

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP).—The Congress of Industrial Organizations' Political Action Committee argued at a Senate hearing today that its "political education" activities in behalf of a fourth term are legal, but Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, contended the organization "clearly has violated" the corrupt practices act.

Senator Ferguson said the violation occurred when the P. A. C. accepted $100,000 each from the C. I. O. and four of its big unions. The law, he said, forbids contribution or receipt of more than $5,000 by labor organizations for political purposes, and forbids labor unions to participate in elections of Federal officials.

It was a rough and tumble session of a special campaign investigating committee before which Sidney Hillman, P. A. C. chairman, appeared at his own request to answer what he termed some "lurid stories."

The Senate committee seemed to be divided strictly along party lines as to whether there should be an investigation of the P. A. C. There were indications that it might branch out to scrutinize other organizations, as Mr. Hillman suggested.

Mr. Hillman said the P. A. C. was created last July to spread political education by "bringing the issues at stake to the attention of the voters, urging them to go to the polls, and stimulating widespread consideration and discussion of the qualifications of the candidates."

He said it has collected $669,764, and spent $189,112. He mentioned $5,000 contributed to the primary campaign chest of Senator Claude Pepper, Democrat, of Louisiana.

Such contributions in primaries are legal, Mr. Hillman contended, although he conceded that some P. A. C. work may have to be curtailed after the Presidential candidates are nominated. Senator Joseph H. Ball, Republican, of Minnesota, predicted the P. A. C. would be backing President Roosevelt actively in November.

John J. Abt, P. A. C. co-counsel, said the P. A. C. had made no contribution to the election of a Federal official because "there is no election before us," and "all we have done is urge the nation and the Democratic party to draft President Roosevelt."

Senator Ferguson said he was going to demand that the Senate committee do more investigating, and that it have a look, too, at any corporations that might be violating the corrupt practices act.

Answering a reporter's question, he said he would ask the Senate committee to look into activities of the Committee for Constitutional Government initiated in 1936 by Frank Gannett, Rochester newspaper publisher.

Mr. Hillman had suggested that if there were to be any investigating, it cover not only labor "but the less publicized, the more obscure efforts of some of the representatives of big business and high finance."

He mentioned the Gannett committee, the National Association of Manufacturers, "the du Ponts and the Pews," and even the Republican and Democratic parties.

OPA POWERS CUT BY AMENDMENTS PASSED BY HOUSE

JUN 14 1944

WASHINGTON, June 13. — (AP) Ignoring the prospect of a presidential veto, the House today approved amendments curbing the Office of Price Administration's powers.

At the urging of Rep. Dirksen (R-Ill) it tacked on to a bill extending OPA's life for one year an amendment providing that the agency's orders may be challenged in Federal District courts. At present the regulations may be reviewed only in the emergency court of appeals, composed of Federal judges appointed by the Supreme court.

Dealer Suspension Forbidden

Another amendment approved forbids OPA to suspend a dealer's license because he violates price ceilings. Rep. Wolcott (R-Mich), who offered the amendment, said it would halt OPA "kangaroo courts."

Both changes were approved tentatively, subject to a later roll call vote.

Dirksen said his court amendment, passed 127 to 115, would "restore due process of law as guaranteed by the Constitution."

Fighting the proposal, Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts shouted "we're writing a bill to bring about inflation, not to control it."

OPA contended the amendment would open OPA regulations to separate rulings by 500 Federal judges, and that in large areas of the country this would tie up price control through court injunctions—with goods flowing to the unrestricted price areas and the controlled areas suffering scarcity.

Might Have Something Worse

Rep. Dondero (R-Mich) told the House that what is taking place in the body "is nothing but an expression of resentment by the people against the mal-administration of OPA," but he warned against damaging amendments, saying "unless we preserve this law we might have something worse."

Still another amendment approved tentatively would relieve merchants of punitive damages or fines if they could establish that price ceiling overcharges were "neither willful nor the result of failure to take practicable precautions to prevent the occurrence of the violation."

The long debate again deferred a final vote on the price measure. The House recessed until tomorrow after giving the right of way to the controversial amendment of Rep. Brown (D-Ga) to set up a new cotton textile ceiling price formula.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 13-(AP)-HE GERMAN AIR FORCE NOW HAS SOME 500 SINGLE-ENGINED FIGHTERS WITHIN ACTICAL RANGE OF THE NORMANDY BATTLEFIELDS, IT WAS DISCLOSED AT UPREME HEADQUARTERS TONIGHT, AND THEIR RELATIVE INACTIVITY IS BAFFLING O OBSERVERS.

THE FIRST OF THREE MAJOR MYSTERIES WAS THE SMALL AMOUNT OF AIR ECONNAISSANCE OVER BRITAIN BY THE GERMANS DURING THE WEEKS BEFORE NVASION. GERMAN RECONNAISSANCE WAS SO "ASTONISHINGLY" SMALL, ONE IR EXPERT SAID, THAT THE GERMANS COULD HAVE HAD LITTLE IDEA OF THE AST-SCALE INVASION PREPARATIONS UNDER WAY.

THE SECOND MYSTERY IS WHY THE GERMANS, LOSING GROUND IN THE BATTLE F NORMANDY, HAVE NOT MADE MORE USE OF 500 BOMBERS THEY OFFICIALLY RE BELIEVED TO HAVE DISTRIBUTED AMONG THE FIELDS BETWEEN THE BATTLE

RONT AND GERMANY.

THE THIRD IS WHY THE GERMAN AIR FORCE HAS NOT DECIDED WHETHER O FIGHT OR NOT TO FIGHT. SINCE D-DAY SWARMS OF GERMAN FIGHTERS AVE SOMETIMES SWOOPED DOWN TO TANGLE WITH OUR FIGHTER-BOMBERS WHIL N OTHER OCCASIONS, INCLUDING THIS MORNING, SIZEABLE FORMATIONS OVERED IN THE CLOUDS DURING AN ALLIED ATTACK AND OUR PLANES WERE NABLE TO COAX THEM INTO A FIGHT.

THE 500 FIGHTERS IN THE BATTLE AREA ARE MORE THAN THE RAF HAD IN HE BATTLE OF BRITAIN, BUT SUCH A CONCENTRATION IS PUNY COMPARED TO HE ALLIES' CURRENT 11,000-PLANE FRONT LINE FORCE.

ALLIED BOMBARDMENTS IN THE LAST TWO DAYS HAVE PUT MANY OF THE ERMAN AIR FIELDS OUT OF OPERATION AND THE NAZIS HAVE ABANDONED THERS BUT STILL ARE STAYING IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD.

THE FIGHTER FORCE WITHIN GERMANY HAS BEEN DIMINISHED BUT THE NAZIS TILL HAVE A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER THERE. THE GERMANS ALSO HAVE A ERTAIN AMOUNT OF NEW AIRPLANE PRODUCTION AND A SMALL RESERVE, IT WAS EPORTED AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS.

FURTHERMORE, IF ABLE TO BASE THEIR PLANES IN FINLAND, THE RUSSIANS WOULD STRENGTHEN THEIR HAND AGAINST GERMAN POSITIONS IN THE BALTIC STATES. SOVIET WARSHIPS AND SUBMARINES WOULD BE FREE TO WORK OUT OF THE GULF OF FINLAND, WHICH THE GERMANS HAVE LACED WITH ELABORATE ANTI-SUBMARINE NETS.

JUN 14 1944

ANOTHER OBVIOUS PURPOSE OF THE DRIVE IS TO CUT GERMANY'S SUPPLY INES TO FAR NORTHERN FINLAND, FORCING THE NAZIS TO USE THE MORE ANGEROUS ROUTE AROUND NORWAY, AND MAKING MORE HAZARDOUS GERMAN IRON RE SHIPMENTS THROUGH THE GULF OF BOTHNIA.

REPORTS FROM STOCKHOLM AND EVEN FROM BERLIN SAY THE FINNS ADMIT RANKLY THEY STAND LITTLE CHANCE AGAINST THE RED ARMY OFFENSIVE, AUNCHED TWO MONTHS AFTER THE HELSINKI GOVERNMENT REJECTED MOSCOW'S RMISTICE TERMS.

FINNISH RESISTANCE IS PICTURED AS FIERCE BUT FUTILE, WITH THEIR IGHT ARTILLERY DESIGNED FOR MOBILE FIGHTING LITTLE MATCH FOR THE EAVY ARTILLERY EMPLOYED BY THE RUSSIANS.

SINCE THE RUSSIAN-FINNISH WAR OF 1939-40 AND THE SIEGE OF LENINGRAD HE FINNS HAVE RECOUPED, AND THEIR KEEN NATIONALISM ASSURES BITTER PPOSITION TO THE RED ARMY DRIVE. BUT THERE IS A BELIEF HERE THAT THE INNS HAVE GROWN A LITTLE SOFT IN THE LAST TWO YEARS, AND THAT THEY ARE ARY OF GERMAN OVERLORDSHIP.

IT SEEMED APPARENT THAT THE FINNS WOULD HAVE TO FIGHT ALONE. THE GERMAN DIVISIONS IN FINLAND ARE SAID TO BE SLOVENLY AND INDIFFERENT AND PROBABLY WILL BE OF LITTLE HELP.

BRITISH PRESS DISPATCHES FROM SWEDEN SUGGESTING RETIREMENT OF THE PRESENT FINNISH GOVERNMENT IN FAVOR OF PEACEMAKERS ARE REGARDED HERE AS PLAUSIBLE.

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, JUNE 10-(DELAYED)-(AP)-WHILE THE INVASION ASSAULT ALONG THE ENTIRE ALLIED FRONT WAS MADE WITH FEWER CASUALTIES AND SMALLER LOSS OF EQUIPMENT AND MATERIAL THAN ANTICIPATED, THE COST WAS STILL HIGH.

THE GREATEST LOSSES WERE SUSTAINED ON A BEACH WHERE AN AMERICAN FORMATION MADE A LANDING AND RAN HEAD-ON INTO A REINFORCED ENEMY DIVISION WHICH HAD BEEN PRACTICING MANEUVERS ON THE BEACH.

THIS STRIP OF THE BEACH IS A GRAVEYARD OF SMALL BOATS, TANKS, HALF-TRACKS, TRUCKS AND JEEPS. THE SANDS ARE LITTERED WITH A VAST AMOUNT OF EQUIPMENT. MUCH CAN BE SALVAGED, BUT MILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN RUINED WAR MATERIAL LIES IN THE SANDS.

AND THE ROUGH CHANNEL WATERS WERE A GRAVEYARD FOR MANY AMERICAN TOUTES.

MANY HEAVILY-LADEN DUCKS, CARRYING AMMUNITION AND SUPPLIES, WERE NEVER ABLE TO NEGOTIATE THE HEAVY WATERS. SOME OF THEM DROPPED INTO THE WATER FROM LCTS MORE THAN 10 MILES FROM SHORE. WHERE THE LCTS AND OTHER CRAFT CARRYING VEHICLES APPROACHED SHORE, SOME OF THEM RAN ONTO SANDBANKS, AND WHEN THE VEHICLES STARTED THEY SANK OUT OF SIGHT.

MOST OF THE DRIVERS AND TROOPS ABOARD THEM WERE ABLE TO SWIM TO SHORE, BECAUSE THEY WERE ONLY A FEW YARDS FROM SHALLOW WATER. MANY OF THESE VEHICLES ARE BEING SALVAGED AT LOW TIDE.

PFC. MARTIN HANDLEN, FT. ANN, NEW YORK, ROLLED HIS JEEP OFF AN LCT INTO SIX FEET OF WATER AND HAD TO SWIM TO SHORE, WHERE HE LAY FOR SEVERAL HOURS UNDER ENEMY FIRE. THE INITIAL BUILDUP OF TROOPS AND SUPPLIES AND WERE SET FOR THE ENEMY'S FIRST MAJOR COUNTERATTACK TODAY AIMED AT SLICING THE BEACHHEAD IN TWO PARTS.

JUN 14 1944

THE ENEMY PUT IN AN ATTACK TOWARD CARENTAN WITH ELEMENTS OF AN SS DIVISION DRIVING TOWARD THE VIRE RIVER FLOWING BETWEEN THE BEACHHEAD ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA AND THE BEACHHEAD EAST OF THE PENINSULA. THE ATTACK WAS PRECEDED BY AN ARTILLERY BARRAGE ON THE TOWN OF CARENTAN, BUT THE ENEMY WAS UNABLE TO MATCH THE STRENGTH OF AMERICAN GUNFIRE AND THERE WAS CONFIDENCE THAT THE ATTACK WILL BE BEATEN BACK.

THE BEACHHEADS WERE LINKED TWO DAYS AGO, BUT NOW THE GERMANS ARE TRYING TO SPLIT THEM AGAIN. BUT THIS COUNTERATTACK HAS COME SIX DAYS AFTER IT WAS ANTICIPATED BY THE COMMANDERS.

PLANS WERE MADE TO MEET A HEAVY COUNTERATTACK BY D-DAY PLUS ONE, BUT IT DID NOT DEVELOP BECAUSE THE ENEMY WAS UNABLE TO MOVE TROOPS INTO THE AREA FAST ENOUGH. THE AIR FORCES HAD BATTERED SUPPLY LINES SO HARD THEIR MOVEMENT WAS SLOW. AND ONLY NOW ARE AMERICAN TROOPS BEGINNING TO FEEL STRONG ENEMY PRESSURE.

EXCEPT FOR BITTER FIGHTING ON THE BEACH AMERICAN TROOPS SINCE THE LANDING HAVE KEPT THE INITIATIVE AND THIS COUNTERATTACK DOES NOT MEAN THEY HAVE LOST IT. BUT FOR THOSE WHO MIGHT BE OVERLY OPTIMISTIC IT IS A WARNING THAT THE GERMAN BUILDUP IS BEGINNING AND THERE IS BLOODY FIGHTING AHEAD.

THE ATTACK BEGAN AGAINST THE AMERICAN 101ST AIRBORNE DIVISION EAST OF THE VIRE RIVER-- AND IT CAME SIX DAYS AFTER ANTICIPATED. DURING THESE PRECIOUS DAYS OUR ARMY HAS BEEN ABLE TO BUILD UP RESERVES OF MEN, GUNS, ARMOR AND SUPPLIES. THOSE WERE DAYS OF DECISION WHEN THE ENTIRE OPERATION HUNG IN THE BALANCE. BUT THE ENEMY WAS UNABLE TO MOVE SWIFTLY ENOUGH AND WITH SUFFICIENT PUNCH TO DISRUPT THE LANDINGS.

"GOD AND THE AIR CORPS ARE ON OUR SIDE," ONE OFFICER SAID. "GOD GAVE US THE WEATHER AND THE AIR CORPS TOOK CARE OF THE ENEMY'S MOVEMENTS BY STRAFING ROADS AND BLOCKING LINES OF TRANSPORT. ONLY MILITARY IDIOTS WOULD HAVE MADE A LANDING WHERE WE DID ON THE PENINSULA. BUT WE KNEW THE GERMANS THOUGHT THAT, TOO, SO WE DID IT. THE PARATROOPERS DID A MAGNIFICENT JOB OF TYING UP ENEMY RESERVES WHILE THE ASSAULT TROOPS GOT ACROSS THE CAUSEWAYS AND LAGOONS AND MOVED INLAND FOR A JUNCTION."

THE TROOPS ASSAULTING THE PENINSULA MOVED SO SWIFTLY THE ENEMY WAS UNABLE TO DESTROY CAUSEWAYS AND LEFT MANY GUNS WHICH HAD NEVER EVEN BEEN MANNED.

JUN 14 1944

ONCE THE LANDINGS WERE MADE, THE ENEMY BEGAN THROWING IN DEFENDERS, BUILDING UP FROM THE LEFT FLANK OF THE BEACHHEAD TO THE RIGHT AS THEY WERE ABLE TO MOVE THEM INTO THE AREA, AND RESISTANCE IS STIFFENING AS THE DAYS PASS.

ON THE OTHER HAND, THE ALLIES WERE ABLE TO BUILD UP BEACHHEAD STRENGTH DURING THE PERIOD THE GERMANS WERE UNABLE TO OFFER ANY REAL RESISTANCE BEYOND HARD FIGHTING ON THE BEACH WHERE THE FIRST DIVISION AND ELEMENTS OF THE 29TH DIVISION LANDED.

THE AMERICANS HAVE MET FEW OF THE NAZI FANATICAL DIEHARDS. THE TROOPS HAVE BEEN A STRANGE MIXTURE OF POLES, CZECHS, AUSTRIANS, TARTARS AND MONGOLIANS. THE AVERAGE GERMAN PRISONER TAKEN ON THIS BEACHHEAD HAS NO REAL FAITH IN A NAZI VICTORY.

ONE OLD GERMAN SOLDIER CAPTURED HAD BEEN IN THE SERVICE FOR 14 YEARS. WITH TEARS STREAMING DOWN HIS LEATHERY FACE, HE SURRENDERED

BECAUSE HE SAID HE BELIEVED THAT GERMANY WAS WHIPPED.

" THE GERMANS ATTACKED UNDER GRAY, DRIPPING SKIES WHICH HAMPERED OBSERVATION AND KEPT OUR PLANES OUT OF THE SKIES DURING THE EARLY PART OF THE DAY. THE MUFFLED THUNDER OF CANNON ROLLED OVER THE COUNTRYSIDE.

THERE WAS LITTLE TRAFFIC MOVING. SODDEN MILITARY POLICE WERE DIRECTING VEHICLES ROLLING ALONG THE NARROW LANES. JUN 14 1944

"IT'S GOOD TO SEE AN AMERICAN UNIFORM ON THESE ROADS," LAUGHED MAJOR PAUL WILLIAM KRZNARICH (CORRECT), MESA, ARIZ. "THIS IS WORSE THAN MANEUVERS."

"YEAH," SAID PVT.LEONARD MC MILLIN, BAUDETTE, MINN., "AS EASY TO GET LOST IN THIS COUNTRY AS IT IS IN ENGLAND."

THERE WAS A COMMOTION IN THE NEXT FIELD. EVERYONE LOOKED OVER A HEDGE AND THERE WERE TWO SOLDIERS MARCHING A GERMAN PRISONER AHEAD OF THEM.

LT.ERNEST GENDREAU, PROVIDENCE, R.I., AND PVT.ANATOLE KOPP, NEW YORK CITY, HAD CAPTURED HIM IN A HEDGE ROW NEAR WHERE CORRESPONDENTS WERE WRITING. DIRTY AND SCARED, THE GERMAN SAID HE LOST HIS UNIT A WEEK AGO AND HAD BEEN HIDING SINCE. GENDREAU AND KOPP WENT BACK AND IN A DITCH FOUND A MAUSER RIFLE WITH SNIPER'S TELESCOPIC SIGHT, AMMUNITION AND FOOD.

BY ROGER D.GREENE
WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE, JUNE 12-(DELAYED)-(AP)-ALLIED TROOPS, TANKS AND HEAVY EQUIPMENT WERE MOVING UP EVERYWHERE ALONG THE MINE-CLEARED ROADS IN THE NORTHEAST SECTOR OF THE FRONT TODAY AND THE GERMANS ALSO WERE REPORTED BRINGING REINFORCEMENTS, INCLUDING TANKS, TO THIS AREA. JUN 14 1944

(THIS APPARENTLY REFERRED TO THE CAEN REGION WHERE THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN HOLDING THE BRITISH IN HEAVY FIGHTING EVER SINCE THE ORIGINAL LANDINGS A WEEK AGO. THE ARRIVAL OF ARMOR REINFORCEMENTS FOR BOTH SIDES SUGGESTED THAT STILL HEAVIER TANK CONFLICTS WERE IN PROSPECT).

IN THIS REGION JUST UNDER 100 TANKS ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN DAMAGED, ALTHOUGH SOME OF THESE POSSIBLY ARE RECOVERABLE. MORE THAN 3,200 PRISONERS HAVE BEEN CAPTURED IN THE SECTOR.

HARD HIT BY CASUALTIES IN ABSORBING THE VIOLENT SHOCK OF THE INITIAL ALLIED ATTACKS, SOME GERMAN UNITS HAVE BEEN BADLY DEPLETED.

THE TOWN OF TARBES, IN THE FOOTHILLS OF THE PYRENEES BETWEEN THE RAILWAY AND THE FRONTIER, WAS DECLARED FIRMLY HELD BY THESE UNDERGROUN GUERRILLA FIGHTERS.

THE TRAVELERS SAID THE GERMAN COMMAND IN SOUTHWESTERN FRANCE WAS OMENTARILY TOO PREOCCUPIED TRYING TO MAINTAIN ORDER AND REOPEN SHATTER COMMUNICATIONS TO SEND TROOPS NECESSARY TO RECAPTURE TARBES.

ONE TRAVELER SAID NOT A SINGLE TRAIN HAD MOVED OVER THE DIRECT RAILWAY FROM PARIS TO BORDEAUX, NAZI-FORTIFIED ATLANTIC PORT, SINCE THE ALLIED INVASION BEGAN. HE SAID FRENCHMEN WERE PACKED IN A DOZEN CONCENTRATION CAMPS ABOUT BORDEAUX, BUT SABOTAGE CONTINUED BOTH WITHIN AND WITHOUT THE CITY.

A GROUP OF 25 TRUCKS SENT FROM BIARRITZ TOWARD BORDEAUX LAST THURSDAY WITH TROOPS AND SUPPLIES WERE AMBUSHED BY MAQUIS (CORRECT) RIFLEMEN NORTH OF BAYONNE AND, AFTER A BRIEF SKIRMISH, THE GERMANS ABANDONED 17 OF THE TRUCKS AND FLED, A FRENCHMAN REPORTED.

rome,june 13 (ap)--maj.robert c.hendrickson,chief officer for rome under the Allied Military Government,held a class in law today lecturing to 1,000 members of the roman bar on the procedure they will have to follow in practising before allied military courts.

maj.hendrickson,whose peace-time law office was in woodbury, n.j.,was president of the new jersey senate and acting governor in 1939. he xkxs has lectured on municipal law in classes held under the auspices of princeton university.

JUN 14 1944

entering rome with the fifth army hendrickson set up AMG courts to try offenders against military regulations. he also began an investigation of the civil courts and found them on a higher level than had been expected.

AMG courts with nine officers serving as judges were ready to operate within a day after the army entered the capital but so far not a single case has been brought before them .

"this is quite a tribute to the law and order ~~reigning~~ existing inrome," the major said, apra rca 2330am805p hendrickson told the ~~italy~~ lawyers the AMG courts would not be impressed by eloquent appeals asking for acquittal of the accused on the grounds he was kind to his mother and had eight children.

JUN 14 1944

"italian lawyers are accustomed to a system where the judge does most of the examining and the lawyer waits until the end then makes a flowery speech," hendrickson ~~explained~~ said. "i explained the anglo-saxon rules we use in A'G courts which give the lawyer greater opportunity toe defend the accused."

on arriving in rome the AMG closed the military ~~tribunals~~ tribunals which had greatly increased their jurisdiction during the war until they were trying most of the penal cases.

hendrickson said that while some "vicious fascists" were found among the civil court judges many of them appeared to be of high standard.

"they owe their appointments to fascism," the major continued, "but it s like the situation in america where judges may be appointed by political achines yet be very good judges."

the civil courts now are under allied supervision, but will try offe gainst italian law.

JUN 14 1944

UNITED STATES AIR BASE, WESTERN YUNNAN, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE HAZARDS OF SUPPLY BY AIR ON THE MONSOON-SWEPT MOUNTAINOUS SALWEEN FRONT WERE CLEARLY SHOWN TODAY WHEN I RODE ON SUCH A MISSION OVER LUNGLING.

FIVE PLANES, LOADED WITH AMMUNITION FOR THE CHINESE OUTSIDE LUNGLING, HAD BEEN ALERTED ALL DAY LONG.

THE SIGNAL TO TAKE OFF FINALLY CAME AT ABOUT 5 P.M.

WHEN WE TOOK OFF AND HEADED WEST WITH PILOT CAPT.WILSON P.RODERICK, 600 BOWIE ST., SWEETWATER, TEX., THERE SEEMED A STANDING CHANCE WE MIGHT MAKE IT.

FLYING AT 12,000 FEET TO CLEAR THE MOUNTAINS THERE WERE MANY BREAKS IN THE CLOUDS BELOW US. BUT WHEN WE WERE OVER THE TARGET AREA THOSE GAPS FILLED IN WHILE FROM THE VICINITY OF ONE OF THE TWO DROPPING PLACES ANOTHER PLANE REPORTED DRAWING HEAVY ACK-ACK FIRE OUT OF LUNGLING.

FOR AN HOUR WE CIRCLED, BANKED, DIPPED AND ONCE DROPPED THROUGH A HOLE IN THE COVER AND FOUND OURSELVES JUST EAST OF LUNGLING BUT WERE UNABLE TO GET THERE BECAUSE OF CLOUDS BLANKETING THE LONE INTERVENING RIDGE.

FINALLY RADIOMAN SGT.EUEL V.HIGGINS, TULSA, OKLA., SAID: "WE ARE GOING BACK."

JUN 14 1944

ON RETURN TO BASE AFTER DARK WE LEARNED THAT TWO PLANES WERE ABLE TO GET THROUGH AND DROP AMMUNITION, WHILE 75 MILLIMETER FIRE HELD LTS.MARION T.PIECYNSKI, DENNISON, OHIO, AND TOMMY GRAHAM, 3457 LIBERTY BLVD., (NO CITY GIVEN IN DISPATCH) JUST OUT OF RANGE OF THE DROPPING SPOT.

(UX)..AN ADVANCED SOUTH PACIFIC BASE--(DELAYED)--A LUMBERING, VERSATILE LCI, NOW CONVERTED INTO A GUNBOAT, WITH THE HELP OF A "GADGET", SANK SEVEN JAPANESE BARGES IN ONE NIGHT AT BOUGAINVILLE.

JUST HOW THE LCI (LANDING CRAFT, INFANTRY) WAS EQUIPPED TO PLAY THE ROLE OF GUNBOAT AND JUST WHAT A "GADGET" IS ARE SECRETS THAT BOUGAINVILLE KEEPS TO ITSELF.

BUT IT DOES DISCLOSE THAT THE "GADGET" HAS A 13-MAN CREW, IS SMALLER THAN THE LCI AND IS HEAVILY ARMED. IT ADDS, BY WAY OF POSTSCRIPT, THAT A MAN COULD CRAWL THROUGH THE HOLES LEFT IN THE JAP BARGES BY THE AMERICAN ATTACK.

THE LCI, COMMANDED BY LT.DAVID C. WASHINGTON, JUNE 13-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF A REPORT TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT BY GENERAL DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, SUPREME ALLIED COMMANDER, ON THE PROGRESS OF THE INVASION OF EUROPE: (ABOUT 300)

JUN 14 1944

"ON JUNE 6 WE INITIATED THE FIRST VITAL STEP LEADING TO THE DECISIVE BATTLE OF EUROPE. THE FIRST GREAT OBSTACLE HAS BEEN SURMOUNTED -- THAT IS THE BREACHING OF THE BEACH DEFENSES THAT THE ENEMY BY LAVISH EMPLOYMENT OF ENSLAVED LABOR HAD INSTALLED IN FOREST-LIKE DENSITY ALONG THE ENTIRE LATERAL OF NORTHWEST EUROPE. GALLANTRY, FORTITUDE AND SKILL WERE CALLED FOR, AND THESE, IN ABUNDANT MEASURE, THE ALLIED FORCE HAS DISPLAYED SINCE THE OPENING DAY OF THE BATTLE. A PARTICULARLY SATISFYING FEATURE OF THE FIGHTING HAS BEEN THE FINE PERFORMANCE OF TROOPS -- AMERICAN, BRITISH, AND CANADIAN -- COMMITTED TO BATTLE FOR THE FIRST TIME. JUST AS THEY DID AND ARE STILL DOING IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, THESE UNTRIED ALLIED UNITS HAVE CONDUCTED THEMSELVES IN A MANNER WORTHY OF THEIR MORE EXPERIENCED COMRADS WHO CONQUERED THE GERMANS IN AFRICA, SICILY AND ITALY.

"WHAT IS MORE IMPORTANT, COMPLETE UNITY BETWEEN THE AIR, GROUND AND NAVAL SERVICES HAS PREVAILED.

JUN 14 1944

"SATISFACTORY AS IS THE PROGRESS OF THIS BATTLE TO DATE, IN MAGNITUDE IT IS BUT A MERE BEGINNING TO THE TREMENDOUS STRUGGLES THAT MUST FOLLOW BEFORE FINAL VICTORY IS ACHIEVED. ALTHOUGH THE CROSS-CHANNEL LANDING OPERATION WAS ATTENDED BY HAZARDS AND DIFFICULTIES GREATER, I BELIEVE, THAN HAVE EVER BEFORE FACED AN INVADING ARMY, THIS INITIAL SUCCESS HAS GIVEN US ONLY A FOOTHOLD UPON NORTHWESTERN FRANCE. THROUGH THE OPENING THUS MADE, AND THROUGH OTHERS YET TO COME, THE FLOOD OF OUR FIGHTING STRENGTH MUST BE POURED. OUR OPERATIONS, VAST AND IMPORTANT AS THEY ARE, ARE ONLY PART OF THE FAR GREATER PATTERN OF A COMBINED ASSAULT AGAINST THE FORTRESS OF GERMANY BY THE GREAT RUSSIAN ARMIES FROM THE EAST AND OUR FORCES FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN.

"THE NAZIS WILL BE FORCED TO FIGHT THROUGHOUT THE PERIMETER OF WASHINGTONCN JUNE 13-(AP)-CONFLICTING RECOMMENDATIONS ON POST-WAR DISPOSITION OF THE UNITED STATES MERCHANT FLEET WERE PRESE TODAY TO THE HOUSE MERCHANT MARINE COMMITTEE.

VICTOR B. BENDIX, NEW YORK SHIP BROKER, ADVOCATED SALE OF ALL GOVERNMENT-OWNED VESSELS ON THE OPEN MARKET TO THE HIGHEST CASH BIDDER.

BENJAMIN C. MARSH, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY OF "THE PEOPLES' LOBBY," OPPOSED TRANSFER OF THE FLEET TO PRIVATE OWNERSHIP. HE SAID "COMMON SENSE AND ECONOMY DICTATE THAT WE DON'T GIVE UP OUR SHIPS, BECAUSE WHATEVER OUR POSTWAR WORLD COMMITMENTS, AMERICA DOESN'T WANT AN OCEAN-GOING PORK BARREL."

THE COMMITTEE WAS CONSIDERING A BILL SETTING UP A FORMULA FOR THE SALE OF THE WAR-BUILT FLEET TO PRIVATE OPERATION.

BENDIX TOLD THE COMMITTEE THE UNITED STATES COULD NOT HOPE TO OPER ATE A MERCHANT MARINE OF MORE THAN 13,500,000 DEADWEIGHT TONS AFTER THE WAR, AS AGAINST AN ESTIMATE OF 15,000,000 TO 20,000,000 TONS FORECAST BY REAR ADMIRAL E.S. LAND, MARITIME COMMISSION CHAIRMAN AND WAR SHIPPING ADMINIRATOR.

BENDIX ADDED "WE MUST REMEMBER WE ARE NOT THE ONLY ONES BUILDING SHIPS."

SWEDEN, HE SAID, IS BUILDING SHIPS BETTER THAN ANY BEING BUILT IN THIS COUNTRY.

H.V. SIMPSON, REPRESENTING THE WEST COAST LUMBERMEN'S ASSO- CIATION, URGED THE COMMITTEE TO DIRECT THE MARITIME COMMISSION TO SELL A STATED NUMBER OF SHIPS FOR USE IN INTERCOASTAL AND OTHER DOMESTIC TRA AT SUCH PRICES AS IT FOUND NECESSARY TO PERMIT THE VESSELS TO OPER- ATE AND MAINTAIN COMPETITIVE COMMERCE.

HE SAID THE FORMULA IN THE BILL, WHICH "DOES NOT RECOGNIZE THE IMPORTANT FACTORS" OF PRODUCTS TO BE CARRIED AND MARKETS TO BE SERVED, WOULD RESULT IN "FREEZING" SURPLUS SHIPS IN IDLENESS AND STARVING OUT IMPORTANT DOMESTIC TRADE ROUTES.

WASHINGTON,JUNE 13-(AP)-THE SECOND DIVISION, SMASHING THROUGH GERMAN POSITIONS IN THE VICINITY OF CERISY FOREST AND ST.LO IN NORMANDY, IS ADDING NEW BATTLE HONORS TO THOSE GAINED AT BELLEAU WOOD AND CHATEAU THIERRY IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR.

DISPATCHES FROM THE INVASION FRONT REPORTED TODAY THAT THIS DIVISION, 18 MILES INLAND FROM THE BEACHES, WAS SPEARHEADING THE DEEPEST PENE- TRATION OF NAZI DEFENSES.

INACTIVE FROM THE END OF THE LAST WAR UNTIL PEARL HARBOR, THE DIVISION WAS REACTIVATED AT FT.SAM HOUSTON, TEX., ON MARCH 9, 1942, WITH MAJ.GEN.JOHN C.H.LEE AS COMMANDING GENERAL.

A MONTH LATER, LEE, NOW CHIEF OF SUPPLY AND DEPUTY COMMANDING GENERAL OF ARMY FORCES IN THE EUROPEAN THEATRE, TURNED THE DIVISION OVER TO MAJ.GEN.WALTER M.ROBERTSON, ITS LAST ANNOUNCED COMMANDER.

JUN 14 1944

WHILE IN TRAINING, THE SECOND DIVISION WAS STATIONED AT FT.SAM HOUSTON AND AT CAMP ACCOY, WIS. IT PARTICIPATED IN VARIOUS TRAINING EXERCISES, INCLUDING MANEUVERS IN LOUISIANA.

IT WAS ORGANIZED ORIGINALLY IN OCTOBER, 1917, AND COMPLETED ITS MOVE TO FRANCE EARLY IN MARCH, 1918. THE DIVISION AT FIRST WENT INTO A QUIET SECTOR OF THE LINE BETWEEN VERDUN AND ST.MIHIEL, MINGLING WITH FRENCH FORCES AND PARTICIPATING IN MINOR ENGAGEMENTS.

THEN ON JUNE 1 IT BEGAN 40 DAYS OF MAJOR ACTION, DURING WHICH IT TOOK THE VILLAGE OF BOURESCHES, OCCUPIED BELLEAU WOOD AND CAPTURED VAUX AND THE BOIS DE LA ROCHE AND LOST 9,000 MEN. RELIEVED IN JULY, IT WENT INTO REST AREAS BEFORE GOING INTO ACTION AGAIN IN THE AISNE- MARNE OFFENSIVES, IN WHICH IT PERFORMED BRILLIANTLY BUT AGAIN SUFFERED HEAVY CASUALTIES, LOSING 5,000 MEN.

DURING THE MEUSE-ARGONNE OFFENSIVE, THE SECOND DIVISION SERVED IN TWO DIFFERENT SECTORS, FIRST UNDER FRENCH COMMAND NORTHWEST OF SOMME-PY FOR TEN DAYS, THEN WITH THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY SOUTH OF ST.GEORGES, WHERE IT RELIEVED THE 42ND DIVISION. BY THE TIME THE ARMISTICE WAS SIGNED, THE DIVISION HAD CAPTURED SEVERAL VILLAGES AND CROSSED THE MEUSE RIVER. FOLLOWING THE ARMISTICE, IT WAS PART OF THE ARMY OF OCCUPATION IN GERMANY.

THE DIVISION'S INSIGNIA, AN INDIAN HEAD ON A STAR, WAS ADOPTED NEAR CHATEAU THIERRY IN MARCH, 1918, AS THE DIVISION MOVED UP FOR ITS FIRST FIGHTING.

WAITT SPOKE AT A LUNCHEON IN CONNECTION WITH DEMONSTRATIONS OF THREE RELATIVELY RECENT CHEMICAL WARFARE DEVICES, A MOBILE SMOKE GENERATOR, AN INCENDIARY BOMB USING A JELLIED GASOLINE, AND A FLAME THROWER WHICH USES A SIMILAR CONCENTRATED FUEL.

JUN 14 1944

THE GENERAL SAID THAT GERMAN FLIERS SHOT DOWN OVER ALGIERS COULD NOT BELIEVE THAT THEY HAD FAILED TO HIT THE HARBOR, BUT INSTEAD HAD DROPPED THEIR BOMBS HARMLESSLY AT THE EDGE OF THE FOG CREATED OVER THE CITY. HE ADDED THAT THE SAME WAS TRUE OF SALERNO, NAPLES AND OTHER IMPORTANT POINTS.

AT ANZIO, HE EXPLAINED, A CONSTANT FOG COVER WAS MAINTAINED OVER THE LITTLE HARBOR AND THE MAIN ARTERIES FOR TRUCK TRANSPORTATION WHICH SUPPLIED THE TROOPS. HE CREDITED THE SMOKE MACHINE WITH HAVING SAVED THOUSANDS OF LIVES.

"REPORTS HAVE NOT YET BEEN RECEIVED FROM THE FRENCH INVASION COAST," HE SAID, "BUT SOON WE WILL BE HEARING THAT SMOKE HAS PROTECTED OUR BEACHES AND SUPPLY OPERATIONS THERE."

FLAME THROWERS HAVE BECOME ONE OF THE MAJOR WEAPONS OF WAR, WAITT SAID, AND "WERE PRESENT ON TIME AND IN QUANTITY ON THE NORMANDY BEACHES WHERE THEY WERE USED TO DISLODGE ENEMY INSTALLATIONS WHICH NAVAL GUN FIRE HAD BEEN UNABLE TO REACH."

THE GENERAL SAID THE PROPORTION OF INCENDIARIES CARRIED ON BOMBING MISSIONS HAD INCREASED FROM FIVE PER CENT EARLY IN THE WAR TO ABOUT 60 PER CENT AT THE PRESENT TIME.

GERMANS RETAKE MONTEBOURG IN FURIOUS BATTLE

LONG

Americans Hold on to Positions on Both Sides of Normandy Town.

AIRFIELDS CAPTURED

Yanks Outbattle German Crack Troops in Hand to Hand Fighting.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Thursday, June 15.—(AP) Ferocious battles roared at both ends of the Allied lines in Normandy today, with the Germans pressing constant heavy counter-attacks against which the British-Canadian forces stood firm in the Tilly-Caen area but which cost the Americans their hold on Montebourg on the Cherbourg peninsula.

In the center of the zig-zag 100-mile beachhead, the Americans repulsed a German attack on Carentan, and the Allies generally advanced southward, it was announced.

The Germans have thrown at least two fresh armored divisions —making a total of four—into five successive counter-attacks in the 20-mile stretch from Troarn on the east through Caen and Tilly-Sur-Seulles in what headquarters described in its midnight communique as "a furious attempt to stem our advance."

The Allies there, however, are "holding firm and vigorously searching out weak points" in the enemy attacks, headquarters stated.

Tilly-Sur-Seulles was believed to be in German hands, but fighting there was fluctuating, and the British apparently retained command of high ground around the town.

Troarn had changed hands several times and was reported largely held by the Germans. An Allied spokesman said street fighting was continuing there.

The German DNB agency contended both Troarn and Tilly-Sur-Seulles never had been captured and remained in German hands.

Farther west, the Germans attacked viciously at Carentan, key rail, highway and canal floodgate hub at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, but were met headon and fought to a stand-still by the

NIGHT

JUN 15 1944

Americans.

Tanks Blast Paratroopers

The Americans brought up tanks to fire point-blank on German paratroopers at Carentan and then pushed forward themselves in hand-to-hand fighting and gained control of high ground south of the town, Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead reported in a dispatch sent from the Carentan front late Wednesday night.

He said the Germans attacked along the Vire river in an attempt to split the American bridgehead and isolate the Cherbourg peninsula from the Allied forces farther east. It was the first enemy attack in force in that area.

JUN 15 1944

Elite German parachute troops were given the job, but failed in a head-on collision with Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's doughboys.

The German attack was launched along a narrow strip of firm ground between two inundated lowlands west and south of Carentan, where the Americans were working hastily to drain the flood-zone through the control gates they now hold.

Heavy fighting also was developing west of Pont L'Abre, in the American sector between Carentan and Montebourg.

The over-all balance on the battlefront was still tipped in the Allied favor, with the mightiest daylight aerial onslaught in history—10,000 or more sorties—directed against the whole of the German western reinforcement system. Large forces of medium and light bombers blasted the battle area yesterday and 1,500 American flying Fortresses and Liberators — the greatest single bombing force of the war—hit strategic targets behind the German lines.

Airfields Captured

The Allies have captured German airfields in France, it was disclosed today, but are not using them yet because they were too badly damaged by Allied bombs. The exact number of fields taken was not disclosed.

Despite the loss of Montebourg, the Americans were declared by headquarters to be holding firmly onto positions on both sides of that Cherbourg peninsular town.

Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg and five miles inland, changed hands several times in the see-saw conflict.

Field dispatches said German reinforcements from up to 200 miles away were being thrown straight into battle.

In the 20-mile cauldron between Troarn on the east and Tilly-sur-Seulles, the Germans attacked appreciably against the Canadian forward lines, although they had thrown in these identified divisions of armor:

The Second SS. (Elite Guard) panzer, reputed to be the finest in western Europe; the 12th SS. panzer, also known as the Hitler Jugend (youth); the Lehr panzers; and Field Marshall Gen. Erwin Rommel's own old 21st panzer.

In a supreme effort, these four armored divisions launched attack after attack across the smouldering ruins of those that had come before, but Allied 21st army group headquarters declared the Allies still held the initiative on the ninth day of the invasion and pointed out that the enemy had been unable to offer the general massive counter-attack which had been expected earlier.

"The enemy is fighting our battle instead of his own," the army ground headquarters announced.

On the northwest of the bridgehead line, on the flank of the American Fourth division, German counterattacks pushed the Americans back slightly from positions they had taken up astride the road leading northeast from Montebourg toward St. Vaast, but the loss was counterbalanced by continuing American gains southwest of Le Ham, two miles southwest of Montebourg.

JUN 15 1944

Equally strong German blows failed to break the American 29th division's gains west of Carentan, road-rail hub at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, where the German radio acknowledged that the Americans had advanced several miles and taken several villages. With six divisions officially disclosed to be in action, the American army under Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley was the largest thrown into a single battle since 1918.

Along the southern bulge of the battlefront, from the Cerisy forest through the Illy woodlands reaching eastward, the Allies held firm and were credited with some indeterminate gains towards St. Lo, but their advanced patrols gave ground north of Caumont and of Villers-Bocage, 23 miles from the coast.

St. Lo in Flames

The Allies' deepest penetrations were slightly more than 20 miles inland in the hills east of St. Lo. The situation was too fluid to trace an exact line as rival patrols prodded foward and pulled back repeatedly. The Germans said St. Lo was in flames.

The Germans also broadcast that "heavy and super-heavy Allied naval guns shelled Le Havre today" and predicted new Allied offensive moves within the next 48 hours.

The Germans frequently since the landings of June 6 have declared that the Allies planned to seize le Havre, great port on the Seine river estuary at the east end of the Seine bay.

Whether the German report of the shelling of LeHavre was true or not, the Allies did maintain a ponderous weight of naval gunfire. The British battleships Rodney and Ramillies poured shells steadily inland upon the German positions around Caen, in the zone where the fresh German armor was brought up.

The two armored divisions previously there have been tied down because the British and Canadians have fully engaged the supporting German infantry.

Reserves Held Up

As explained at Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's headquarters, this meant that much of the German armor had been forced to play the unaccustomed role of digging in and hanging on, rather than punching as planned. This situation, which has operated against the Germans from the start, was declared to have worsened, due to heavily damaged communications which have delayed the arrival of German infantry reserves to take over the ground-holding job.

Arrival of the two new armored divisions might give the Germans enough striking power to disengage the other two long enough for a counterattack in strength.

German artillery several times has attempted to form for offensive maneuver in the Caen area but front dispatches said each time it had been scattered by British commandos and Canadian and British artillery and infantry.

A statement from Montgomery's headquarters said, "the enemy is doing all he can to plug leaks, while we are daily developing our beachhead and attacking him at every opportunity, both to kill Germans and to make room for ourselves.

Had the weather been better since D-Day, the Allied push would have been even farther along, it was said, "but the fighting as a whole seems to be going satisfactorily."

German field Marshal Gen. Karl Rundstedt's constant efforts to plug up the front were hammered notably today by the Allied air attacks.

New Carentan Gains Made; Montebourg Fighting Heavy

JUN 15 1944

London, June 14 (AP)—The Berlin radio said tonight that "heavy and super-heavy Allied naval guns shelled Le Havre today." There was no Allied confirmation of the report.

JUN 15 1944

By J. W. Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 14 (AP)—The Germans have flung four armored divisions into fierce fighting to hold their eastern battleline bastion of Caen, the Allied command announced tonight, and heavy fighting is raging at Montebourg and Troarn at opposite ends of the 100-mile front, with both towns changing hands in the last 24 hours.

The savage German counteraction on the eastern flank in Normandy followed a British drive 23 miles inland outflanking Caen from the west, and the armored struggle is rising in intensity.

The four Nazi armored divisions were hurled into the area between Caen and Caumont, 20 miles southwest, seized in the hard British punch.

Battleships' Guns Help British At Troarn

The United States Fourth Division fought the Germans fiercely for Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of the port of Cherbourg, and the great guns of the British battleships Rodney and Ramillies supported the British fight to hold Troarn, town seven miles from Caen taken in an outflanking drive on that bastion to the east.

Both the Germans and the Allies have fought into and been thrown out of Montebourg and Troarn in the last 24 hours, headquarters said.

The greatest single striking force of planes in war's history—1,500 American Liberators and Flying Fortresses—battered targets in France and Germany today in support of the invasion.

Nazis Forced Back Several Miles At Carentan

Meanwhile in the Carentan area south of Montebourg other Americans of the largest United States force ever thrown into fighting in this war chopped deep gashes in the Nazi defense of Cherbourg peninsula.

American armored forces there smashed the Germans back, and the Berlin radio acknowledged a withdrawal of several miles west and north of Carentan, with doughboys thus apparently cutting half to two thirds of the way across the narrowest neck of the peninsula.

Headquarters said Americans fighting in the Montebourg area had to give some ground along the road to the sea.

"In some areas we continued our advance and in others the Germans had some local successes," the supreme command said, in describing the whole battlefront.

Caen Reported Under Attack From All Sides And In Flames

The four Nazi armored divisions that were sent into battle around Caen, Tilly-sur-Seulles, Troarn and Caumont included the 21st and 12th SS divisions. It was not known whether all the armor of these units was committed in battle, but all their infantry was.

The Germans said Caen itself was in flames and was being attacked from all sides. Berlin also reported Allied armored thrusts south of Caumont.

General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery launched a squeeze on Caen with his thrusts reaching 23 miles inland into the area southwest of the big anchor city.

Striking as he often did against Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in the African desert, Montgomery sent tanks south of Bayeux. They smashed through Caumont and Villers-Bocage, then turned east and north to drive savagely into the German flank protecting Caen on the west.

Caen itself was under heavy naval bombardment from Allied warships. A flyer who flew over the city said it seemed "scarcely possible for life to exist there."

Villers-Bocage stands on a main highway to Caen, 16 miles to the southwest. Caumont, seven miles west and slightly north of Villers-Bocage, commands a secondary route, also leading to Caen.

A broadcast by the German Transocean News Agency said the Nazis had lost Tilly-sur-Seulles, which several times has changed hands. The German high command claimed recapture of a number of unidentified localities, and declared Nazi tanks breaking into the beachhead east of the Orne river had inflicted heavy casualties. The Germans said Allied tank thrusts near Tilly were broken up and destroyed.

Yanks Gain On St. Lo; Town Mass Of Rubble

The Allied advance to Caumont and Villers-Bocage was made southeastward from the Cerisy Forest area.

American troops who plunged through that forest pushed southwest several miles toward the road and railway hub of St. Lo. German broadcasts acknowledged two advances in that area as Allied forces attempted to throw a pincers around the town.

St. Lo Called Mass Of Rubble

The German radio said St. Lo was a mass of flaming rubble from Allied air bombings.

In a broadcast, the German Transocean Agency declared that Nazi forces broke through American lines and into Carentan late yesterday, but "Montgomery hastily ordered heavy British warships to the support, which, with all their guns, shelled the Carentan area, whereupon the Germans withdrew again to hill positions more advantageous for defense."

(A Reuter dispatch said that although the Americans once gave some ground at Carentan, they never abandoned the city.)

The Allies, aided today by fair weather, already have gained a foothold in France of 600 to 700 square miles, and captured more than 10,000 prisoners. Allied officers estimate that 250,000 Germans are engaged in Normandy. Berlin, apparently trying to picture Allied successes as due to overwhelming numbers, has placed the figure of Allied soldiers as high as 500,000.

3o. 24— 16229

More Glider Forces Land?

The weather first cleared late yesterday and about 2,000 planes, including American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, attacked before dusk, hitting airfields and a string of railroad bridges across the foot of the Brest peninsula from Vannes to St. Malo—a likely route for German reinforcements up the west side of the Cherbourg peninsula to the sector where the American Fourth Division is battling below Cherbourg. The German air force offered little resistance.

Using five new landing strips and open fields, fleets of Ninth Air Force transports poured in supplies and technicians by glider.

The lighter Allied warplanes providing ground support in Normandy were praised at supreme headquarters today as "marvelous and getting more satisfactory every day." Yesterday and today they scourged the German facilities and concentrations over the whole face of northwestern France.

"Absolute Hell" At Caen

The whole Normandy invasion has depended, to a great extent, on the Allied air superiority, it was said at headquarters, and the Allied bombardment and strafing attacks have had "marvelous" delaying action on German reserves, despite frequent bad weather.

RAF flyers who bombed a German armored concentration near Caen watched Allied warships send shells crashing into the city, and one of them commented: "It looked like absolute hell—scarcely possible for life to exist there."

German E-boats operating from Le Havre and Cherbourg continued to attack the flanks of Allied convoys moving across the Channel at night, but the British and Americans have thrown a sea blockade around the two ports.

Eisenhower Pleased

As the invasion of Europe went into its eighth day, General Eisenhower informed his commanders and troops that "the accomplishments in the first seven days of the campaign have exceeded my brightest hopes. . . . I truly congratulate you."

The American Fourth Division was said last night to have broadened its assault front from Quineville on the coast to captured Le Ham, two and one half miles southwest of Montebourg and eight miles inland. Yankee patrols penetrated the outskirts of Valognes, ten miles from Cherbourg.

The last miles between the Americans and Cherbourg embrace increasingly difficult battle terrain—sparsely populated country broken by craggy hills jutting up 500 or 600 feet.

No Solid Central-Front Line

On the central front there was no continuous line in the Allied teamwork thrust through the woodlands east of St. Lo, and the exact gains were difficult to measure, but it is known that the Americans have pushed advance forces at least five miles south of Balleroy and the British are believed to have penetrated up to seven miles southwest of Tilly-sur-Seulles.

About the time that President Roosevelt in Washington was making public General Eisenhower's report that the Normandy operations are only part of the "far larger pattern of a combined assault against the fortress of Germany by the great Russian armies from the east and our forces from the Mediterranean," the Berlin radio quoted a high command spokesman as saying:

"The invasion battle proper has yet to come, and the German people harbor no illusions about the extent and seriousness of the forthcoming struggle."

of Bayeux.

Their radios said Allied fleet movements in the channel and activity in English ports indicated new blows were coming, and a Berlin DNB broadcast reported Le Havre was bombed by "super heavy" Allied naval guns.

Other German broadcasts predicted an Allied drive to take this great port on the Seine estuary.

Berlin said "it is admitted that the town of Tilly-Sur-Seulles is not in German hands." The town, southeast of Bayeux, has changed hands several times.

"Surprise Blow"

American gains west of Carentan were described by the Berlin radio as "a surprise blow by the First United States Army which forded a river and gained ground in a drive west." The Americans were said to have "punched two wedges" into the German lines here after fighting of "unprecedented violence." Berlin said the Americans were receiving reinforcements for a new leap forward.

The Germans declared Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt had switched strong reserves to engage Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commanding Allied ground forces, at Caumont and Villers.

"Montgomery thinks he has found a weak spot in German defenses," said a correspondent at Rundstedt's headquarters. "This may have been so some days ago, but Rundstedt has switched powerful reserves to this sector and fresh reinforcements still are arriving for an imminent major battle."

Some Berlin broadcasts interpreted increased Allied pressure around Caen as a bid to open the way for a push east toward Le Havre.

A DNB commentator pictured Rundstedt as "completely satisfied with the course of events" and claimed that "the enemy's invasion troops nowhere have reached their ordered targets."

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 14 (AP)—American forces have lost their hold on Montebourg, but despite fierce German counterattacks they are holding firm on both sides of the town, it was disclosed tonight.

Another German counterthrust at Carentan was met headon and fought to a standstill by the Americans, who continued to expand their positions around this floodgate city.

GERMANS DECLARE RESERVE TROOPS RUSHED TO FRONT

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

LONDON, June 14.—(AP) German propagandists tonight forecast "important new events" on the Atlantic coast within 48 hours, reported limited U. S. gains on the Carentan front and said huge Nazi reserves were being rushed up for an imminent major battle at Caumont and Villers-Bocage, south

British Mow Down Nazis Tricked Into Ambush

By Leonard Mosley
[British War Correspondent]

[Released by British Information Service. Distributed by the Associated Press]

With British Sixth Air-Borne Division, France, June 12 (Delayed). Pafatroop Capt. Charles Bliss had that grin on his face that always means something brewing.

"This," said Charles, "is going to be good. Do you remember the gap we left in our lines just around Breville? Well, Jerry's found it at last and he's coming through. We have a report of at least 600 Panzer grenadiers advancing through the woods and believe they're going to try to drive through Ranville to break our line and gain the east bank of the river. Well, what we are going to do to those Jerries should make a nice little story for you. Look."

British Forces Everywhere

He pointed along the walls and through the orchards, and when you looked hard you could see British troops everywhere.

They were well dug in among bushes and grass, and only the green camouflaged tops of their helmets poked above the skyline—that and the muzzles of their Brens, heavy machine guns and Stens.

It was just before noon that we saw our first Germans. Over on the other side of the dropping zone you could suddenly see figures moving among trees. We watched them forming up into batches of 10 to 15 men.

No one fired at them. Only the dull boom of artillery from somewhere away in the distance, and the busy hum of fighting planes disturbed the placid Saturday morning.

Attack Began

Shortly after noon the German attack began. In those batches of 10 and 15, spread out over 200 or 300 yards, the German infantrymen came in at a run. They moved through the waving corn in the black plough-land until they reached a line of wrecked gliders. Then they fell on their faces and lay there. After a few minutes they got up again, ran forward, then fell flat again. It went on like that for about 400 yards. Still, no one fired.

From somewhere in the wood now a German mortar gun was going into action and its shells fell all around us and in the serried rows of gravestones in a churchyard. Splinters fell among us. There were casualties. But there was no retaliation.

Stretcher-bearers wriggled forward and dragged wounded men away, but never showed themselves against the skyline.

They Opened Up

Now the enemy was gaining confidence from the stillness. Smelling no danger, his loping advances were longer, his periods flat on the ground of only a few seconds' duration. He came on fast. He kept on coming until he was about 100 yards away. Then at a pre-arranged signal every automatic weapon, every rifle in the paratroops' line opened up. It was a roar that set your teeth chattering with shock.

You suddenly saw the Germans grimacing wildly, clutching their bodies, throwing up their hands, then falling by the dozens into the corn. They all flung themselves down and the British paratroopers continued their fire.

A rain of bullets surged across those 100 yards of French farm land and battered into the huddles on the grass. The earth was scuffed up in showers of corn and went down as if under a flail.

Tried It Again

But the Germans weren't beaten yet. One of their officers rose to his feet and called to his men, and those not wounded charged once more. This time the paratroops held their fire even longer, and it was 25 to 30 yards when the small arms barrage hit the enemy.

Fingers squeezed triggers almost simultaneously up and down the line. In writhing heaps the Germans went down again. And now the remnants turned and began to flee.

Bullets chased them across the field as they raced for the woods. But only a few made that shelter, for now our shells and mortars came into play and plastered a river of steel between the enemy and the sanctuary for which he was racing.

By 1 o'clock it was all over, and the dropping zone was littered now not only with gliders and containers, but with hundreds of enemy dead and enemy wounded.

Back in the woods those Nazi troops who had made it were joined by reinforcements, and there, among green shadows, they reformed and planned how to get out.

Not Given Chance

But they were not to be given the chance. All through the woods, hidden in trees, ditches and slit trenches, the camouflaged British paratroops were waiting for them. Around 4 o'clock a squadron of Sherman tanks rumbled up to where most of the Germans were concentrated, and poured a five-minute barrage from their big guns into the trees.

The Germans began to retreat. Their retreat was the wrong way for them, and once more it was massacre. Sten gun bullets hit them from such close range they were torn to pieces.

The terrified Nazis threw up their hands and tried to surrender. If they were in time they were allowed to. Some were too late and got a burst that flung them to the ground. Only a few snipers were left by Saturday evening, and their fire was sporadic.

On Sunday morning the Germans tried again to blast through to Ranville.

Mowed 'Em Down

Once more they came in batches, and once more the British mowed them down with the same grim efficiency. That same morning they had had enough and went limping away to the safety of the marshes beyond the Orne.

With the men who had killed them—boys from Lancashire, Yorkshire, Somerset—I went into the woods to see the flotsam and jetsam this short but bloody war had left. Everywhere was death. But it was Nazi death. At least 400 had been killed and nearly 2,000 made prisoners. And in breaking the whole of a German regiment and capturing its commander, British losses did not number over 50 all told, including wounded.

Our troops are hoping the enemy will try to break through the Breville gap again—and soon.

SOLDIERS WORRIED ABOUT HOME FOLKS

By DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, June 14.—(AP) More than anything else, the men who came safely through the bloody beach battle in our sector on D-Day want their sweethearts, wives and parents to know that they are all right.

As usual, a soldier is generally more worried about not worrying the people at home than about himself and his first thoughts are of those he loves, once the greatest danger is past.

Capt. William Collins, Chicago, was pinned on the beach by heavy enemy fire for more than four hours and somehow he came through it unscathed.

I saw him with his unit and he said, "look, will you pust say for me, 'Dear Marie, I am all right.' Will you?"

I told him sure I would. Then wisecracking, cheerful Capt. Max Zera who talks Brooklynese but comes from 1505 Grand Concourse, New York city, called me over and suddenly became serious.

"Mama's going to be awfully worried about me," he said. "She knows now that my outfit came in with the first waves. Just let her know that I am well and was not hurt."

Mrs. Zera, your son is getting along fine.

T/5 J. B. Johnson of Port Arthur, Tex., looked up from a foxhole and grinned, "tell 'em at home I'm having a happy birthday."

TROOPS QUESTION HOME OPTIMISM

By DON WHITEHEAD.

With American Troops in France, June 14 (A. P.).—The nightmare days of the beachhead landing are past, but everywhere I find the troops afraid that the people at home are too optimistic.

We hear that the reaction to the beachhead fighting in both England and the United States is that the war is all over except for a few messy details and that the public's feelings have bounced like a rubber ball.

They should be feeling good that the Allies grabbed a hold on the continent without the blood bath that many predicted. Actually, there was only one sector of the American front where there was any bitter fighting getting across the beaches—and that was where the fighting First Division and elements of the 29th smashed head-on into a reinforced German division waiting on the beach.

The assault troops who battled their way from the beach that first day should have a ribbon to wear as a special mark of distinction. It was a battle in which the doughboys overcame every obstacle the enemy could put in his way.

But this is only the initial phase of a giant operation. The greatest battles lie ahead with the enemy slowly being hemmed in on all sides. The real tests will come when divisions are hurled against divisions in titanic struggles.

While a most critical period is behind us, the situation cannot be regarded as past the dangerous stage until the Allies are able to build up huge reserves and burst out from their bridgehead.

Tunnels Are Nazi Death Traps

Doughboys Seal Entrances of Underground, Mile-long Shelters With Explosives.

By JOHN A. MOROSO.

Aboard LST 505 at a Normandy Beach, June 13 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Supplies are flowing almost uninterruptedly into our French beaches now and scores of ships stretch along the coast as far as one can see on this cloudy, wet morning.

Three days ago many fires raged along the beaches and the air was filled with explosions from ships bombarding the enemy inland and detonations of TNT as soldiers blasted enemy tunnels in the hills.

Most of these amazingly intricate tunnels—some of which extend as far as a mile inland—have been sealed up at the entrances, trapping an untold number of Germans who will die inside.

Our trip across was entirely uneventful except for four enemy planes which were shot down after they dropped flares in the area between us and the beaches. It was my third crossing since D day.

These LST's operate with incredible informality. Officers eat the same food as the crew. The Captain eats in a tiny ward room with the officers. Many men don't shave. Hurried trips with loading and unloading of men and supplies make it impossible to keep the ship clean.

Our skipper is Lieut. John Meadows, 29 years old, of New Bern, N. C., a graduate of North Carolina State University, who learned how to be a skipper of an LST by serving as an armed guard officer aboard merchant ships in the South Pacific. He also saw service on the carrier Saratoga.

The executive officer is Lieut. (j. g.) Loren Stanford, 37 years old, of Boston, Mass. Our chief engineer is red-haired Lieut. Jack Adair, 27 years old, of Dallas, Tex.

Sees Action in Two Months.

Less than two months after joining the Navy our doctor, Lieut. H. S. Dreher, 26, of Luray, Kan., a graduate of the University of Kansas, was in history's biggest invasion. He is assisted by Army Capt. L. W. Gregory, 47 years old, of Manitowoc, Wis.

We have aboard an Army ordnance evacuation company commanded by Capt. Fred Meng, 32 years old, Elyria, Ohio. His chief aid, a Pearl Harbor veteran, is Second Lieut. Paul Bachelor, Los Angeles, Cal.

LST 505, built at Jeffersonville, Ind., shouldn't even have been here. While on a run from New York to Boston in a gale she started breaking in two. Boston welders put her together again and she got across the Atlantic in time for the invasion.

On D-Day she was unable to load, so two days later Capt. Meadows started hailing passing LCTs and managed to unload 74 vehicles and 400 soldiers without official guidance.

Signalman 2nd Class W. J. Haas, 27 years old, of Minneapolis saw one enemy plane explode in midair and fall flaming amidst a hail of Allied tracer shells.

Allies Flown Deep Into France, Report

Port Bou, Spain, June 14 (AP)—Border reports today said the Allies were landing Commandos and Rangers, equipped with jeeps, light tanks and anti-tank guns, on air fields prepared by French Partisans deep within France.

The reports mentioned Plateau Millevaches, about 45 miles southeast of Limoges and about 80 southwest of Vichy, as one place where jeeps and light tanks had been put down.

(There is no Allied confirmation of these rumors.)

French Undermine Nazi Plans.

Madrid, June 14 (A. P.)—Reports out of underground France asserted today that a methodic, persistent rising by the greater part of the French nation is undermining the Germans' best laid plans to hold the Allied invasion.

These advices, filtering through many points on the Franco-Spanish frontier and through diplomatic channels, said that guerrillas and the organized underground were actively leading the French in making trouble and yet more trouble for the Germans.

That the Germans recognized the danger was demonstrated by an order placing eleven departments in central France and parts of four others under the same military rules as those prevailing in the Atlantic wall zone.

Tarbes Firmly Held.

From Irun came a report that Maquis still firmly held the city of Tarbes, in the foothills of the Pyrenees, thereby cutting off a large section of southern France from the Mediterranean road and rail route so important to the Germans. Travelers said the German occupation command was too busy with other troubles at present to send forces needed to recapture Tarbes.

It was reported that Limoges also was held by these Maquis fighters, while northeast of Bordeaux, Angouleme and Periguex were out of communication with the rest of France. In the Limousin Mountains and the plateau Millevaches in Vienne and Correze departments a powerful guerrilla army was reported organizing with arms and munitions supplied by plane.

From the Mediterranean frontier at Portbou it was reported guerrillas and Maquis of Savoy were moving westward across the Rhone toward the great central plateau, gathering volunteers from Vichy gendarmes and mobile guards. All little frontier points along the Pyrences reported that guerrillas who long had inhabited the foothills of the French side of that chain were moving northward.

With certain exceptions these French forces seemed to be avoiding open battle with the Germans. For the moment their main activity was sabotage. The Germans, too, were avoiding combat, but they were reported making mass arrests in both the Atlantic and Mediterranean wall areas.

Code Messages Come In.

Cryptic messages to London from the Algiers radio increased hourly:

"Ducks like water," says a voice in French, or "Jeanette washes her stockings"—perhaps a signal that another force of guerrillas or underground workers is moving closer to its own private D day.

However long they may have been getting ready for such a campaign, the Germans still seem insufficiently prepared. At Portbou there was no indication of German troop movements from the Riviera north to meet the guerrilla forces reported advancing west from the Savoy.

Big German garrisons apparently were liberally frozen in their places along the Mediterranean by fears of a new invasion from that direction. The same fear kept many divisions along the Atlantic Wall south of Normandy.

Guerrillas were said to be operating less than 15 minutes from Vichy by motorcar and many of the Vichy provincial officials seemed to have vanished.

SECRET QUARTERS CONTROL ALLIED INVASION MOVES

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

AN ADVANCE COMMAND POST OF THE ALLIED BUILDUP CONTROL ORGANIZATION IN THE WEST ENGLAND, June 14—(AP) In this underground cavernous highly secret command post— on which the very success or failure of the Allied invasion of France depends—I saw today the great traffic control system that shuffles troops about Britain and sends them across the channel.

An infinitely complicated timetable controls all movements of troops and supplies and when the units land they are ready to start fighting at the beachline.

This heavily guarded place, lined with tunnels and subterranean barriers, is rather like some tremendous and orderly series of filing rooms. In those rooms we were shown men who could pick up a card and tell where any one of the thousands upon thousands of military units was at that very minute.

Along the walls of one cave-like office there were hung chartboards with various colored dots. Each represented a ship, the various colors denoting the different types of chart and just where they were.

It is upon this lonely, rather shabby command Post Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower must depend for the most vital thing in all warfare —movement in time of the right number of men, the right amount of equipment and to the right area.

These men tell Eisenhower or his commanders how much they can have and when, giving the informations many days in advance.

The organization works by charts until an occasional urgent call comes in for vital replacements. Then they give those replacements "a red ball."

This term was used by Col. E. Stevens, Houston, Texas, in command of the American section of this organization. The "red ball," he said sends the needed replacements through, chart or no chart, and no matter how much trouble it makes in the previous plans of the Allied operations.

Allied Forces

"Allied" not "British" or "American" is used constantly and everybody is represented here—army commanders, the British War Office and Ministry of War Transport, the American War Shipping Administration, British and American Navies and the Allied Air Arms.

An air representative told me all was being worked out in synchronization as to the ground and air forces.

"The air force—fighters—can't go on operating on the British side of the channel indefinitely," he said. "One squadron in France is worth three in Britain. So the build up of the air force overseas is going right along with the build-up of the armies.

"We are not relying on captured German fields, they are being damaged too much by our bombing. But we are building our own air strips."

ALLIED LINE-UP IN NORMANDY

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 14 (AP)—Air Chief Marshal Trafford L. Leigh-Mallory, commander in chief of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force, visited units of his command in the Normandy battle area today, called at invasion headquarters and consulted with air officers, it was announced tonight.

At Montebourg, fourteen miles southeast of Cherbourg, the United States Fourth Infantry Division.

At Ste. Mere-Eglise and Carentan farther south, the United States Eighty-second and 101st Airborne Divisions.

At Isigny and to the south, the United States Twenty-ninth Infantry.

At Treviers and to the south, the American First and Second Infantry.

Bayeux sector, the Fiftieth British Infantry.

Between Caen and Bayeux, the Third Canadian.

Orne River sector, the Sixth British Airborne.

Air Marshal Visits Normandy

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 14 (AP)—Air Chief Marshal Trafford L. Leigh-Mallory, commander in chief of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force, visited units of his command in the Normandy battle area today, called at invasion headquarters and consulted with air officers, it was announced tonight.

ATLANTIC DEFENSES SMASHED BY BOMBING

LONDON, June 14.—(AP) Aneta, the official Netherlands news agency, said tonight that some 600 German soldiers were killed and the Nazis' Atlantic Wall defenses at Ijmuiden, in occupied Holland, were blasted apart during an Allied daylight air raid on the Dutch port, 17 miles north of Amsterdam, on April 26.

Aneta declared the devastating effect of the assault by U. S. Ninth Air Force and RAF medium bombers threw the German garrison into panic and the Allies, had they chosen to follow up the aerial attack with a landing, could "have had Ijmuiden for the taking" and penetrated as far inland as Amsterdam.

New Landings Due: Nazis

London, June 14 (AP)—The Germans are expecting a new Allied invasion in France, their propaganda indicated today.

Vichy radio, quoting a Berlin military spokesman, said important Allied shipping had been sighted in the Bay of Biscay off southwestern France, near the Spanish coast.

The Berlin correspondent of La Suisse in Geneva said German observers expected "important new events" on the Atlantic coast within 48 hours, with the expectations based on alleged reports of Allied fleet movements in the English Channel and activity in British invasion ports.

Possibly put out as feelers, the German hints drew no response from Allied quarters. The Bay of Biscay area is about 400 miles below the Normandy front.

WAR CORRESPONDENT FRACTURES HIS ANKLE

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, June 14. — (AP) John MacVane, NBC war correspondent, landed with waves of assault troops on the beachhead and came safely through all mortar, machine-gun and shell fire without even a scratch. But he stepped in a hole and fractured an ankle two days after landing.

M. P. UNIT PRAISED FOR INVASION DUTY

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, June 14.—(AP) Military Police who came in with assault troops to set up traffic control under direct enemy fire are being praised for the job they did.

A unit under Maj. Thomas F. Lancer of Madison, Conn., formerly with the New York State police at Babylon, L. I., N. Y., was among the first troops landing on the beach in this sector.

One of his men was killed and 17 injured working on the beach.

One of Lancer's men was wounded just after landing but he stayed on the job directing traffic. He set up a traffic control station and then pushed on behind the troops until he collapsed. He died a few minutes after he crumpled to the ground.

12,000 Sorties Flown In Support Of Invasion

JUN 15 1944

BEALMEAR

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Thursday, June 15 (AP)—More than 1,500 United States heavy bombers—the mightiest single air armada ever lanuched—spearheaded an aerial assault on Europe by more than 12,000 sorties yesterday and this record daylight attack was followed up at night by fleets of RAF night raiders.

A very strong force of British heavy bombers crossed the southeast coast at dusk and for a considerable period after midnight every radio station in Germany was off the air—indicating that the RAF was attacking targets in the Reich itself.

Attack In Battle Area

Hundreds of medium bombers swept across the Channel earlier in the evening to deliver at attack in the invasion battle area, returning within three quarters of an hour. Altogether the daylight raids mounted into the greatest all-day operations since D-day.

The wide-spread operations from Britain encountered a minimum of aerial opposition although anti-aircraft fire was heavy at sime points.

Reports up to midnight listed 15 United States heavy bombers, three emdium and 15 fighters and fighter-bombers as missing. Five enemy fighters were destroyed.

Nazi Airfields Captured

It also was disclosed at headquarters that a number of German airfields in France have been captured, but are not being used at present because of extensive damage caused by Allied bombing.

The greatest weight of planes and bombs came from Britain, where planes took off on an estimated 10,000 sorties that rained explosives and bullets on the enemy in France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Germany in both tactical and strategic support of the invasion ground forces.

Also Fly From Italy

Simultaneously another estimated 2,000 sorties were flown from Italy and Mediterranean bases against a half dozen oil refineries in Hungary and Yugoslavia.

In all, about 4,500 tons of bombs were cast on enemy territory during the day.

The Italian-based heavy bombers encountered considerable aerial opposition, but the British - based forces reported little trouble from the Luftwaffe.

Besides the great British-based mission of more than 1,500 heavy bombers escorted by some 750 fighters, medium, light and fighter-bombers were flying from dawn until dusk, closely supporting the cross-Channel ground assault.

Work Of Escorts Meager

Escorting fighters found only meager action in this role, shooting down two German interceptors, and later swing over to strafing numerous road, rail and military targets in and behind the battle area.

Medium and fighter-bombers ranged far into the interior of France. Traffic points and moving targets in Chartres, southwest of Paris, rail trucks west of Laval and railway guns south of the battle lines were pounded.

Approximately 400 Thunderbolts and Lightnings alone flew 15 missions between daybreak and 6 P. M.

Using Fields In France

Some of the Allied fighters and fighter-bombers, it was disclosed, were operating regularly from the new airfields established in the beachhead area. These have now been augmented by dispersal points and perimeter tracks, making them full-fledged operational bases.

The air fleet from Britain dumped tons of bombs on six airfields in another blow to keep the German air force grounded, and one force branched off and struck the Emmerich oil refinery in the Rhineland, ten miles inside Germany.

While this latter blow struck at one source of fuel to keep the German war machine running, the planes from Italy bombed the largest refinery in Hungary five miles south of Budapest.

United States Marauders and Havocs flew sortie upon sortie in bombing German communications and supply targets near Caen, scene of some of the heaviest ground fighting of the invasion beachhead.

Opposition Still Meager

German opposition was still meager and waves of American fighters and fighter-bombers swarmed over and beyond the battlefields.

One Marauder was lost from the strong force attacking around Caen, but no fighters were reported missing up to late afternoon.

Royal Air Force rocket-firing planes in hundreds of flights beat up all types of enemy transport in areas feeding the German front lines and furnished other close support to the troops.

Once today ground forces withdrew from a strongly defended village near Tilly-sur-Seulles and British Typhoons swept in and blasted the place to rubble.

Hit From Paris To Brussels

The heavies, branching farther afield, struck air bases from Paris to Brussels, including Le Bourget and Creil at Paris, outlying Etampesmondesir and Chateaudun, and Brussels-Melsbroeck and Eindhoven in Belgium.

First reports from the attack from the south said bombing results were good in raids on the Sheil Koolaz refinery—most important in Hungary—five miles south of Budapest; the Fanto refinery, 55 miles southwest of Budapest; Caprag refinery, 33 miles south of Zagreb, and the Osijek refinery in Yugoslavia due south of Budapest.

Lightnings at the same time appeared over the Kecskeney airfield 55 miles southeast of Budapest and destroyed some planes on the ground.

Ten Attacks In 90 Minutes

Marauders and Havocs made ten attacks in less than an hour and a half on German trains and supply dumps around Caen. Mustang and Thunderbolt fighter-bombers swept a great arc from Argentan to Tours, attacking bridges, roads, rail lines and yards and other targets.

Tuesday night bombers from the Mediterranean struck the Munich area again to make it the fifth straight night the British have been over Germany.

The heavies in Britain took the night off, but other night units maintained the close tactical support of ground troops.

Nazi Force Set At 2,000

It was authoritatively reported that the German air force had been reduced to around 2,000 planes to meet the Allied force of more than 11,000 first-line planes.

Aneta, the official Netherlands news agency, said that some 600 German soldiers were killed and the Nazis' Atlantic Wall defenses at Ijmuiden, in occupied Holland, were blasted apart during an Allied daylight air raid on the Dutch port, 17 miles north of Amsterdam, on April 26.

Aneta declared the devastating effect of the assault by United States Ninth Air Force and RAF medium bombers threw the German garrison into panic and the Allies, had they chosen to follow up the aerial attack with a landing, could "have had Ijmuiden for the taking" and penetrated as far inland as Amsterdam.

Supreme headquarters said Allied air units flew 56,000 sorties in direct support of the invasion in the first week of the campaign, dropped 44,280 tons of bombs and destroyed 396 German planes in the air. Allied losses were 554 planes, of which 139 were heavy bombers.

Loss Less Than 1 Per Cent.

The loss, less than one per cent. of the sorties flown, showed a steady decrease in the cost of air operations, which was more than one per cent. loss in the first three days of operation.

The Eighth Air Force on 16,000 sorties shot down 131 German planes and lost 31 heavies and 131 fighters and fighter-bombers.

The Ninth flew 15,500 sorties, destroyed 67 enemy planes and lost 155.

The RAF Bomber Command totaled 6,000 sorties, destroying 36 German planes at a cost of 108.

The Second Tactical Air Force, the RAF Transport Command and air-borne forces on 12,000 flights destroyed 106 enemy planes and lost 107.

The Air Defense of Great Britain on 5,500 sorties downed 56 planes and lost 22. The RAF Coastal Command flew about 2,800 sorties.

7 Refineries, 6 Airports Hit By Yanks

HILL

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 14 (AP)—Fifteen hundred American heavy bombers—the greatest single striking force in air history—attacked France and Germany today in concert with up to 750 American heavies which struck Hungary and Yugoslavia from Italy.

Hitler's oil lifelines were hit hard, part of the big task force from Britain raiding the refinery at Emmerich, Germany, while the Mediterranean force attacked six refineries in Hungary and Yugoslavia—including the Shell Koolaz, five miles south of Budapest, the largest in Hungary.

Six Bases Hammered

Other Britain-based Fortresses and Liberators bombed six air bases beyond the beachhead in the campaign to wipe out nests of German Air Force opposition. Others hit bridges in France and Belgium.

Supreme headquarters announced that in the first seven days of invasion 56,000 individual nights were made by the Allied air forces with the loss of 554 planes—less than one per cent. of the attacking force.

DAY

In that time 42,000 tons of bombs were dropped. The Eighth Air Force led with about 16,000 sorties and the Ninth had 15,500.

Fight Through Interceptors

Lightning, Mustang and Thunderbolt fighters fought through enemy fighters to lead the Mediterranean heavies into the Balkans.

Other targets hit were the Fanto refinery, near the Shell Koolaz, which was damaged in previous attacks; Szony refinery on the Danube, 45 miles northwest of Budapest; the Petfurdo refinery, 55 miles southwest of Budapest; Caprag refinery, 33 miles south of Zagreb and formerly owned by Shell, and the Osijek refinery in Yugoslavia on the Danube, due south of Budapest.

Good Results Reported

Lightnings attacked the Kecskenet airfield, 55 miles south east of Budapest, and destroyed some planes on the ground. Early reports said the bombers had good results on all targets.

The air armadas took advantage of ideal weather in stepping up the assaults on German fighting forces and strategic targets far inland.

It was described here as "a marvelous air-support campaign getting more satisfactory every day."

Nazis Report Air Battles

The German radio reported "violent air combats" between American bombers and German and Hungarian aircraft over the northern tip of Lake Balaton, southwest of Budapest. The American bombers, with a "strong escort," approached Hungary from the west, said the broadcast recorded by United States Government monitors.

A Berlin broadcast said the bombers attacked Budapest "and environs as well as several provincial places and industrial plants" in Hungary.

In direct support of troops battling in Normandy, large forces of American Marauders and Havocs and fighter-bombers swarmed across the Channel all day.

The fighters extended attacks to German shipping, while a separate force of American Lightnings patrolled defensively over the Allies' sea lifelines.

Allies' Air Aims

Supreme headquarters said Allied air chiefs planned to press the campaign across the Channel with tactical and long-range strategic bombing to split the Germans' dwindling air force into even greater feebleness than it has showed over the battlefield so far.

It was estimated that more than 30 Nazi air fields had been blasted in the past three days.

It is now authoritatively reported that the Luftwaffe has been reduced to around 2,000 planes against the Allies' front-line force of more than 11,000. The Germans are said to have 500 single-engined fighters massed at fields in the battle region now under intensive attack.

SINGLETON

London, June 14 (A. P.).—The British Press Association said that Gen. Charles de Gaulle landed in Normandy today.

JUN 15 1944

London, June 14 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill won today a postponment of a full-dress debate in the House of Commons on the controversial issue of Anglo-American relations with the French Committee of National Liberation, parrying a demand for a showdown with the assertion that it would do more harm than good now." In his first appearance before the House since his daring trip to the beachhead in Normandy on Monday, Mr. Churchill made only scant reference to the progress of the war, declaring that any anxiety over the De Gaulle Committee question "should properly be directed to our gallant soldiers and to the great operations which are in progress, which give hope, as well as anxiety."

DAY

The Prime Minister contended that full discussion of the subject should be held off until negotiations among the French Committee, the United States and Britain can be completed. The House of Commons turned to other subjects after Mr. Churchill said that he would not be seeking to delay the debate "if I had no hopes of a better solution than I can announce at the present time."

"The Government has taken great trouble over the conduct of this business and, on the whole, it may be said that it has been conducted with success," the Prime Minister declared, amid cheers. "When you look at the advance in Italy and the extraordinary advance across the channel, a fair-minded man would consider that the administration has a right to the confidence of the House when they state that they do not want this particular subject to be discussed."

Several Questions Posed.

Mr. Churchill, just back from a daring visit to the Normandy beachhead, took the floor in response to several questions pending before the House on subjects relating to Gen. de Gaulle. There has been a persistent editorial demand in the British press—a demand which has been intensified since the French leader's recent arrival in London—for a clearer understanding between the French and Anglo-Americans in the interest of all parties.

The Prime Minister said that if a large number of members desired to "bring these matters to a head, a suitable occasion for debate would have to be found, but I would advise strongly against this now." He added that though the Government was prepared to discuss the matter "in all detail and all severity," the result "might well be to emphasize any differences which might exist" with the French Committee.

The Prime Minister assured the members that "in this last week of great success" as much time had been given to discussions about Gen. de Gaulle and his affairs as to any other subject. In response to a request for assurance that nothing would be done to prevent Gen de Gaulle landing in France if he wished, Mr. Churchill said: "The question is one which I hope may be found capable of solution."

Bevan Cried Down.

He declined to discuss in detail the issuance of franc notes to invading troops on the ground that he had not had a chance to read President Roosevelt's statement, but added: "It seems, however, quite clear that if notes are given out to the French population in return for livestock or other services, that the responsibility of meeting them in the first instance, at any rate, would lie with the Government issuing them."

Cries of protest rose from the floor when Aneurin Bevan, a Laborite, pressing for further explanation of relationships in general with the French and the issue of notes in particular, asserted that the Government does not have the full confidence of all the people in political handling of the war. These protests turned to laughter when Mr. Churchill retorted that he "Never aimed at such a high idea" as entire agreement throughout the country, on methods of handling foreign policy and chuckles when he added, "And when I think of some of the persons who would have to be converted, equally I have never aimed at it."

He disagreed with one member's observation that the question was causing "great widespread anxiety," but added that if it existed, "it should be properly directed to our gallant soldiers and to the great operations which give hope, as well as anxiety."

"As to reports that cooperation between the French population and the Allied armies had been impaired—that is quite possible, but it is not our fault."

A de Gaulle authority said the general landed with a large party of Fighting French and other French officials.

Trip Approved by Eisenhower

He said the trip was made with the approval of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and that other details probably would not be made available until after de Gaulle's return to England, expected tomorrow.

It was believed at Supreme headquarters that the French leader, under sentence of death passed by the Vichy government for his work abroad in the last four years, went to his homeland to offer help in smoothing relations between the Allies and the French people.

De Gaulle came to London the week-end before the Normandy invasion from the seat of his Liberation committee in Algiers for consultation with Allied chiefs.

It was disclosed that he prolonged his stay to visit the west front, even if only for a few hours, as an inspiration to the French resistance movement.

Gen. de Gaulle Visits Beachhead in France

French Leader Receives Dramatic Ovation—Committee Declares de Gaulle Not to Blame for Withdrawal of French Officers on D-Day.

LONDON, June 14.—(AP) Gen Charles, de Gaulle landed on the Normandy beachhead behind the lines of the Allied armies of liberation today and a de Gaullist spokesman insisted that the French were not to blame for a shortage of liaison officers in the invasion.

It was understood in London that de Gaulle crossed the channel on the French destroyer La Combattante while Prime Minister Churchill was side-stepping in the House of Commons a debate on the issue of recognizing his Committee of National Liberation as the provisional government of France.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force announced simply: "It can now be said that General de Gaulle has landed in Normandy."

De Gaulle was accompanied by French army and navy staff officers, it was learned, and they were welcomed by British officers of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's headquarters.

From the beachhead, he toured liberated towns and villages.

A Washington report that the French leader had suddenly canceled orders for several hundred French officers to land with the first waves in the invasion was described by his press attache as "most incredible" because, he said, no agreement had been reached.

"We negotiated several months with the Allies prior to the invasion," he said, "but as the whole world knows we reached no agreement with the American government or with the Allied commanders either on the government of the liberated territories or on sending liaison officers with the invasion forces.

Last In France In 1940

De Gaulle was last in France June 18, 1940, when he flew from London to Bordeaux to urge the collapsing Reynaud Government, in which he was Under Secretary of War, to accept Churchill's offer of a national union of France and Britain to keep France in the fight. He arrived too late, for Marshal Petain and others had already decided to surrender.

Then he launched his Fighting French movement and ultimately assumed leadership of the combined resistance groups.

Wildly Cheered

ISIGNY, France, June 14.—(AP) Gen. Charles de Gaulle visited his homeland today for the first time in four years and countrymen lined the streets of beachhead villages shouting his name.

The ovation was dramatic.

The tall, lean leader of the French Committee of National Liberation appeared unexpectedly, but news of his trip across the channel swept through Allied-held territory in a few hours. Wherever he went, crowds gathered to catch a glimpse of him and call greetings.

Cries of "de Gaulle, de Gaulle" swept the streets. Old men and women came stumbling out of the wreckage of their homes and business houses. Children ran yelling out of the rubble and clambered across the debris to see this man whose name obviously was magic to them.

The people were begrimed and ill-dressed and the wreckage accentuated the dramatic background of the French fight for liberation. There was no mistaking the spontaneity of the welcome.

The voices of the people rose in a shout as de Gaulle appeared.

"Vive de Gaulle."

"Vive La France."

"Vive L'Amerique."

"Vive La Grande Bretagne."

"As bas les Boches, a bas les collaborateurs."

It was a chant that ran through the crowd and then as though it was a theme song for the occasion came the sound of voices singing "La Marseillaise."

De Gaulle stepped from a jeep and the gendarmes were unable to hold the crowd back. They surged forward to speak to the general and shake hands with him as he stood under a shell-dented street lamp in the town's battered square.

Urges People To Help Allies

[De Gaulle urged the people of Bayeux, the first city in France liberated by the Allies, to help in the battle to free the country, Canadain Press Correspondent William Stewart said in a dispatch from the beachhead.

[The general said he had come to Normandy to salute the city of Bayeux and he announced the appointment of a local representative.]

WASHINGTON, June 14.—(AP) United States officials complained today that Gen. Charles de Gaulle suddenly canceled orders for several hundred French officers to land in Normandy with the first Allied invasion waves. De Gaulle's headquarters quickly replied that it never entered any agreement to send the officers.

High authorities here declared de Gaulle was flatly refusing cooperation asked by General Dwight D. Eisenhower. They said arrangements had been made to send 300 to 500 French officers with the Allied invasion forces, to act as liaison men with the French population, but that de Gaulle balked at the last moment and allowed only 20 to go. This, it was said, impaired the liaison between the Allied forces and the French population.

An official here said:

"If they ever entertained any idea of not going through with the plans, they never let us know. All our plans were built around their cooperation and their refusal at the last minute to cooperate has caused plenty of trouble."

Meantime, de Gaulle himself has gone on a visit to the Normandy beachhead, it was disclosed in London.

In fact, British-American relations with de Gaulle have gone downhill steadily, in the opinion of military and diplomatic experts here, since the French leader arrived in London 10 days ago to seek a more prominent place in Allied councils.

French Leader's Refusal to Use Full Liaison Force Impairs Civil Co-operation in Normandy.

Washington, June 13 (A. P.).—In the final hours before the start of the invasion of France, Gen Charles de Gaulle is reported here to have suddenly canceled the orders of several hundred French officers scheduled to land with the first waves of Allied troops.

Reports from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters to the highest military officials here disclosed today that as a result, cooperation between the French population and Allied armies has been impaired in the occupied Normandy areas.

This is true, according to officials who are investigating the situation now, even though De Gaulle finally relented to the extent of allowing twenty French officers to go along with the forces assigned to liberate their homeland.

Gen. De Gaulle's action with respect to the officers is said to be probably the most important new factor entering into the background of a proposed meeting between President Roosevelt and the officers at his command, also is given as the reason why President Roosevelt dealt at length in his press conference yesterday on arrangements which had been made for French invasion currency.

How Situation Developed.

According to reports reaching here on Gen. De Gaulle's handling of the French liaison officers, the situation developed as follows:

Many months ago when plans were forming for the opening of a second front, officials of the French National Committee suggested that military officers representing the committee should serve as liaison between the invading forces and the French population.

Allied authorities agreed and the combined chiefs of staff, acting in the name of the British and American governments, directed Gen. Eisenhower to make use of the French officers. Subsequently the committee assigned several hundred officers to Gen. Eisenhower's command in Britain and they received special training with invasion forces. When Gen. De Gaulle arrived in London two days before D day he brought up for review this whole question of the use of French officers and the extent of co-operation between the committee and Gen. Eisenhower's forces.

Reversed Position.

As a result—and officials here say because he was trying to force recognition of the committee as a government—Gen. de Gaulle suddenly reversed the long-established French position and refused to let the officers go along on their assigned missions.

The insistence of Allied commands on having some representation for dealing with the French people finally forced him to relent to the extent of allowing twenty officers to make the trip. Officials here say Gen. Eisenhower's reports show that the officers who were forbidden to go were extremely disappointed.

These actions of Gen. De Gaulle were understood to have strengthened the White House and State Department decision against recognizing the liberation committee as France's provisional government.

Actions which have lessened the chances for a successful meeting between President Roosevelt and Gen. de Gaulle, according to highly placed officials, include Gen. de Gaulle's criticisms of Gen. Eisenhower's announced policy for administering liberated areas of France and his work with the exiled governments of Poland, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia and Luxemburg, which resulted in their recognizing the committee in London yesterday.

Concern Over Blocs.

The concern here is not over the fact of recognition by those governments, it was said, but whether Gen. de Gaulle is playing on the fears of small countries and exiled governments to form them into a bloc.

Another thorn in the side of the White House and State Department is the doubt being cast upon the validity of Allied invasion currency used by Gen. Eisenhower's troops. Although official reports on the subject have yet to be released, this is understood to be assuming serious proportions as a problem in the limited areas of France already liberated.

President Explains.

Mr. Roosevelt went into the currency question at his press conference.

The French Committee, he said, had urged that Allied troops fighting on French soil not use American dollars as they did in North Africa. So it was decided to issue francs at an exchange rate of 50 to the dollar and 200 to the pound sterling. This decision, as well as the design of the money and other details, the President said, was worked out with representatives of the French Committee. Behind the money, he said, is the authority of the Allied armies and a British-American guarantee of value.

3 MINE SWEEPERS OF NAZIS ARE SUNK

Four Others Damaged By Allied Destroyers

JUN 15 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Thursday, June 15 (AP)—Two Allied destroyers intercepted seven German mine sweepers off the coast of France early yesterday and sank three of them and seriously damaged the other four, supreme headquarters announced today.

The communique said the Polish destroyer Piorun and the British destroyer Ashanti intercepted the enemy vessels west of Minquiers rock and "of the seven three were observed to sink, and one was seen to receive such damage that its survival is considered unlikely. Of the remaining three, two were left stopped and burning fiercely."

Another Engagement

In another naval engagement yesterday northeast of Cap de la Hague, the communique said, light Allied coastal forces attacked three enemy patrol boats.

"The first ship in the enemy line was hit with a torpedo and the second set on fire," the communique announced.

The action off Minquiers Rock cost the Allies only four wounded on the Piorun.

Two Terrific Blasts Heard

As the Allied destroyers withdrew from the battle scene, two terrific explosions were heard, probably the finish of the two mine sweepers which they left burning. The seventh damaged mine sweeper limped off in the early morning darkness of the Channel near the Isle of Jersey.

In another action in the quickening naval clashes in the Channel area the German news agency DNB in a broadcast from Berlin said German speedboats set an Allied destroyer afire. German losses, the broadcast said, were one speedboat.

Fishermen Again Warned

JUN 15 1944

Belgians, Dutch, Danes and Norwegians Told to Put In LONDON, June 14 (AP).—Allied Supreme Headquarters in a new broadcast today to Belgians, Dutch, Danes, Norwegians and residents of northern and western France warned "fishermen now in port to remain there and any still at sea to return to port immediately."

"Failure to do so may cause danger to the fishermen and will hinder operations of the Allied Forces," the broadcast said.

Last week Allied broadcasts asked fishermen to cease operations for a week ending June 15 and today's warning extended the time until 9 p. m., June 22.

Warning On Fishing Is Extended For Week

JUN 15 1944

New York, June 14 (AP)—The Allied supreme command today extended for another week its warning to fishermen of Europe's northern coastal waters to stay in their ports so as not to "hinder the operations of the Allied forces," or cause danger to themselves.

The first request asked them to stop fishing for seven days until 9 A. M. tomorrow, and the new order extended that time another full week.

The request, broadcast by a spokesman for supreme headquarters and reported by the OWI, applied to fishermen using coastal waters of Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and the northern and western coastal waters of France.

WEATHER IDEAL IN THE CHANNEL

JUN 15 1944

London, June 14 (A. P.).—Weather conditions in the Dover Strait area were excellent today, with a warm sun shining from a cloudless sky and visibility excellent.

A light southwesterly breeze rippled the sea and the barometer was rising steadily. The night was unusually cool, but by 8 A. M. the temperature had risen to 70 degrees.

Senator Says Germans Have 'Maginot Minds'

Washington, June 14 (AP)—German military leaders adopted a "Maginot mentality" in attempting to hold off the Allied invasion of Normandy with fortifications, Senator Tunnell (D., Del.) declared in a Flag Day speech today.

In an Office of War Information overseas broadcast, the Delaware member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee paid tribute to the 34 United Nations and said: "The gathering offensive which President Roosevelt foretold has now fully materialized, has been launched and is rolling up victories.

"The reversal of the Germans from an offensive to a defensive role is gathering momentum," he added. "They have poured much time, labor, material and engineering skill into defense fortifications. In making such a collossal investment in static fortifications the German leaders have obviously adopted the Maginot mentality. They put their faith in strength through concrete."

FINNS AND REDS IN BITTER FIGHT

LANDSTROM

Soviet Forces Within 25 Miles of Viipuri, Mighty Struggle Wages.

JUN 15 1944

LONDON, Thursday, June 15 (AP) Fresh Finnish troops have been thrown into the defense of the Karelian isthmus and are now locked in a mighty struggle about 25 miles south of Viipuri, Finland's second largest city, Moscow indicated early today.

Evidence of the ferocity of the battle on Russia's northern front was contained in the midnight supplement to the Soviet communique which said that one unit of the Red army "wiped out in three days 3,000 of the enemy, destroyed 30 guns and 80 machine-guns and captured 70 other guns."

Particularly fierce engagements took place in the area of Kuterselka and Jarvi" yesterday, the supplement said, and added that many prisoners were taken.

"Our air force destroyed six artillery batteries, blew up three ammunition dumps and smashed a motorized column," the supplement continued.

Tanks Useless

The stout resistance of the Finns and the marshy nature of the terrain which made tanks almost useless in some sections apparently was giv[illegible] Soviet forces difficulty.

The points they announced captured during yesterday's heavy fighting were too small to show on maps available here.

German commentators continued to regard the battle on the Finnish front as merely a prelude to bigger action yet to begin on the eastern front.

A Transocean broadcast from Berlin emphasiz[illegible] "the German high co[illegible] expects the main blow [illegible] ent Soviet offensive [illegible] and added, "the Soviets will strike in the east only when fighting in western Europe is in full swing."

Moscow's only mention of other sectors of the front was an assertion that German reconnaissance units southeast of Stanislawow in old Poland had been rebuffed.

Destroy German Planes

Meanwhile, the Red air force, in another spurt of heavy bombings, attacked enemy airdomes at Brest-Litovsk, Bialystok, Pinsky, Minsky, Bobruisk and Orsha, behind the German lines on the Eastern front, destroying "many German planes" and setting fuel and ammunition dumps afire.

While the main Soviet forces—still supported by strong air power and naval bombardment of coastal fortifications—came to grips with hastily summoned Finnish reserves, other Red army units slashed hard at the enemy's flanks.

Moscow reported that Russian forces in the Viipuri highway sector were knocking out an intricate network of steel and granite gun emplacements and many anti-tank traps. This defense area is served by a recently built railway running south from the old Mannerheim Line.

Finns Report Reds Repelled

Today's Finnish communique said that "fierce enemy attacks" continued in the western and central parts of the Karelian isthmus, and that all had been repulsed.

A correspondent of the Moscow newspaper Pravda reported that the Russians were encountering heavy Finnish artillery fire as they ran into the enemy's reserves and declared the Finns were using 40 different types of weapons in one sector.

Red Star reported the capture of headquarters of the 10th Finnish Infantry Division and said the commander barely escaped. It said special Russian units trained in forest warfare were making sweeping flanking movements and clearing out Finnish ambushes.

Finnish and German broadcasts reported the Russians were attacking in the Lisa sector between the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Petsamo, but Russian communiques so far had confined themselves to the isthmus fighting.

Drive to Within 20 Miles of Mannerheim Line —Foe Reports Attacks All Along Front.

JUN 15 1944

London, June 14 (A. P.).—Red Army troops have advanced to within thirty miles of the important port of Viipuri, crushing Finnish troops resisting from strongly fortified positions, Moscow announced today, and enemy reports said Russia's whole northern front from the Arctic to the White Sea and Gulf of Finland was ablaze with action.

Finnish and German radio broadcasts declared the Russians were attacking in the Lisa sector between the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Petsamo, and Berlin asserted Soviet forces also were striking southwest of Narva in Estonia.

In addition, the broadcasts said, there was reconnaissance activity in the Kandalaksha sector on the shore of the White Sea, 550 miles northwest of Viipuri, and near Loukhi, on the railway from Archangel across Finland to the Gulf of Bothnia.

The Moscow communique was restricted to the Karelian Isthmus fighting, saying Soviet troops captured several Finnish strong points during yesterday's battling and listing five in the area of Kivennapa taken Monday. These were Steklyannaya, Kelrola, Ronnukjula, Vehmajnen and Tijranmjaki.

20 Miles From Main Line.

The Russians are within twenty miles of the Mannerheim Line, main defense barrier across the Karelian Isthmus, Moscow bulletins indicated, after cleaving the second belt of approaches.

Finnish advices relayed through Stockholm said that stout resistance was confronting the Russians in the Kivennappa sector, with the Vammelsuu River front still intact. Behind Kivennappa there is hilly country and many small lakes, and on the eastern side of the isthmus marshland about twenty miles long and three to four miles wide presents a natural obstacle to the Russian troops.

A Moscow broadcast said it was reported in Helsinki that Col.-Gen. Eduard Dietl, commander of German divisions garrisoned in northern Finland, conferred with Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim, Finnish Commander in Chief, then visited the battle area.

One dispatch from Helsinki via Stockholm said some sections of the Finnish press advocated a defend-or-die spirit, but other advices said the Finns, resentful of lack of German aid, were ready to evacuate not only Viipuri but virtually the entire isthmus.

Red Tanks Driving For Viipuri

JUN 15 1944

Moscow, June 14 (AP) — Russian tanks loaded outside with tommy-gunners rolled up the Viipuri highway today within 30 miles of that important port, and front dispatches said the Red army was striking at the main body of Finnish reserves.

Pravda reported a large battle near Mustamiaki on the main Viipuri railroad northwest of Leningrad. The battle terrain of the Karelian Isthmus is strewn liberally with swamps, rocks, cliffs, ravines and forests which made swift movements of Russian tanks and heavy artillery difficult.

Darting Russian groups trained in forest warfare were reported in Red Star to be dealing with Finnish ambushes in sweeping, flanking movements.

Crossroads Points

The capture of Siranmiaki at a critical crossroads gave the Russians a good grasp on communications lines in the wooded area where the advance is most difficult.

Pravda's correspondents telephoned that the Russians were encountering congestions of heavy guns as they moved against the main Finnish reserves and that the enemy was using 40 different types of weapons on one narrow sector.

Towns Captured

The latest Russian communique reported the capture of Steklyannaya, Kelrola, Ronukjula, Vehmajnen and Tijranmajaki and said there were no changes on other parts of the 2,000-mile Eastern front from the Barents Sea to Romania.

Red Star reported the capture of headquarters of the Tenth Finnish Infantry Division and the seizure of numerous cannot intact with ammunition.

It was apparent that the Finns still were surprised and unable to make a stand along the Viipuri highway although Soviet tanks now are pushing through the very heart of their long established fortifications.

Reconnaissance Activity

Enemy broadcasts heard in London said there was reconnaissance activity in the Kandalaksha sector on the shore of the White Sea, 550 miles northwest of Viipuri, and near Loukhi, on the railway from Archangel across Finland to the Gulf of Bothnia.

The Russians are within 20 miles of the Mannerheim Line, main defense barried across the Karelian isthmus, after cleaving the second belt of approaches.

Natural Obstacles

Finnish advices relayed through Stockholm said that stout resistance was confronting the Russians in the Kivennappa sector, with the Vammelsuu river front still intact. Behind Kivennappa there is hilly country and many small lakes, and on the eastern side of the isthmus marshland about 20 miles long and three to four miles wide presents a natural obstacle to the Russian troops.

One dispatch from Helsinki via Stockholm said some sections of the Finnish press advocated a defend-or-die spirit, but other advices said the Finns, resentful of lack of German aid, were ready to evacuate not only Viipuri, but virtually the entire isthmus.

Reds Seek Full Nazi Blockade

London, June 14 (AP)—The Moscow radio quoted the Soviet trade union journal War and the Working Class today as saying that the only way to make the economic blockade of Germany truly effective was to impose a complete embargo on exports to all neutral countries trading with Germany.

Spain and Sweden were specifically mentioned by the publication, said the broadcast, which was recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

Criticizing as a "compromise" the trade agreement reached between the United States, Britain and Spain, the journal declared it still "leaves Spain in her capacity as the chief channel for undermining the economic blockade of Germany."

The magazine described as the inconsistency the bombing of Germany's Schweinfurt ball-bearing plant while Germany was still allowed to get ball-bearings from Sweden.

Russia Observes United Nations Day

Moscow, June 14 (AP)—Red flags fluttered from the Kremlin and all Government buildings in the Soviet Union today as Russia observed "United Nations Day," proclaimed in a special order by the Council of Peoples Commissars in honor of "Great Britain, United States and the other United Nations."

Premier Stalin's statement yesterday lauding the Allied invasion of western Europe was on Page 1 of all Soviet newspapers.

Loparevo In Bosnia Taken, Slavs Report

London, June 14 (AP)—Capture of the fortified place of Loparevo, in eastern Bosnia, after a seven-hour battle was reported today by Marshal Tito, who declared also that Yugoslav troops had seized a large quantity of war materiel and forced the enemy to abandon western Bosnia bases between Glamoc and Drvar.

DAY

Approximately 1,000 Germans were reported killed in fighting on several fronts. Tito's soldiers now hold Sicevo, the broadcast communique said.

Allied air forces inflicted heavy losses on German garrisons in the Vrbas valley in Bosnia, the communique added.

German Ship Held Up By Turkish Officials

London, June 14 (AP)—In response to British protests, Turkey has detained a German ship trying to pass through the Dardanelles, and President Ismet Inonu has promised to have the whole matter reexamined, Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, told Commons today.

He disclosed also that because of what he described as Turkey's unsatisfactory attitude and the fact the Germans had more ships they wished to pass from the Black to the Aegean Sea, the British Ambassador had informed Inonu his Government was profoundly disturbed that Turkey had lent itself to this "palpable maneuver of the German Government."

MOORE AT HEAD OF HOME FLEET

JUN 15 1944

London, June 14 (A. P.),—The Admiralty announced today the appointment of Vice-Admiral Sir Henry R. Moore, many times decorated during his career of forty-years in fighting ships, as commander of the British Home Fleet.

DAY

Sir Henry, given the temporary rank of Admiral, succeeds Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser. No immediate announcement was made of Sir Bruce's new assignment, but there were indications that he had been selected for an important command in Asiatic waters where the British Navy is expected to carry an increasingly heavy load.

Admiral Moore, who is 57 years old and who has been second in command of the home fleet since June, 1943, commanded recent carrier borne operations against the German battleship Tirpitz. Before taking the fleet post under Admiral Fraser, Admiral Moore served for a time as vice-chief of the Naval Staff representing the Admiralty in conferences in Washington on the battle of the Atlantic.

Before taking the fleet post under Fraser, Moore served for a time as vice-chief of the naval staff representing the Admiralty in conferences in Washington on the Battle of the Atlantic. He had been in Washington in 1921-22 as assistant secretary to the British delegation at the armament limitation conference.

Fleet Command Changes

London, June 14 (AP)—Vice-Admiral Sir Henry R. Moore is succeeding Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser as commander in chief of the Home Fleet, the Admiralty announced today.

DAY

Sir Henry, who was given the acting rank of admiral, was in command of units of the Home Fleet which attacked the German battleship Tirpitz in the Alten Fjord in north Norway last April.

Early this month he took part in an attack on a Nazi convoy off Norway. In March, 1943, he attended a conference in Washington to map plans to combat U-boats.

Moore, 57, has been second in command to Fraser, who was named commander in chief of the home fleet in March, 1943. Notable successes scored by forces under Sir Bruce's command included the sinking of the German battleship Scharnhorst.

Moore played a large part in protecting Allied convoys to Russia along the Arctic route.

The home fleet command tenure is normally two or three years. There was no immediate word of the new assignment for the 56-year-old Fraser, but there were indications he had been selected for an important command in the Far East where the British navy is expected to carry an increasingly heavy load.

BRITISH M. P. ASKS ABOUT ROOSEVELT

JUN 15 1944

London, June 14 (A. P.)—Laborite John McGovern jumped into debate in the House of Commons today over whether the United States was informed over reverse lend-lease to ask: "Is it not the case that a considerable number of people in this country think President Roosevelt is also President of Great Britain?" There was no response to his query.

DAY

Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, had just discounted reports that 60,000,000 of 90,000,000 adults in the United States were unaware of reverse lend-lease, saying that a British white paper on mutual aid "had the best and widest publicity ever received in America by an official document of this kind."

Mr. Bracken told a questioner that the report about which he asked was based upon one of the "so-called public opinion polls" which, Mr. Bracken asserted, also said that 70,000,000 Americans did not know what subsidy meant, 27,000,000 did not know that the Japanese had taken the Philippines and 57,000,000 did not know that Canada was one of the United Nations.

Another member wanted to know if the British public was any better informed on these subjects, so Mr. McGovern made his interjection.

IMMENSE GERMAN SUPPLY OF FOOD

SEIZED IN ITALY

JUN 15 1944

Capture of Orbetello Followed by Discovery of Tons of Supplies.

ADVANCE CONTINUES

Nazi Rear Guard Action and Mine Fields Slow up Advance.

ROME, June 14 — (AP) American forces driving up the Tyrrhenean coast of Italy have captured Orbetello, center of German resistance to the Fifth army's offensive, and gained control of the enemy's immense food supply dumps on the nearby Orbetello peninsula (Mt. Argentario), field dispatches disclosed tonight.

NIGHT

Sid Feder, Associated Press correspondent with the Fifth army, said in a story filed from Orbetello that the whole mountainous peninsula with tremendous hidden stores of food had come under Allied control. His dispatch followed an announcement by Allied headquarters that the junction of highways One and 74, a short distance north of Orbetello along the coast of the mainland, had also been captured.

The Americans were pressing forward and engaging a strong force of Nazis in the hills north of the road junction, Feder said.

300 Tons of Flour

The food discovered in bunkers on various parts of the mountainous peninsula, which is joined to the mainland by three causeways, contained nearly 300 tons of flour, hundreds of cases of ham, rations and biscuits, said Maj. John Paul Powhida, of Philadelphia, representing the Allied Military Government.

"It obviously is one of the enemy's main food stores," the major said.

Along with the huge supplies of food, the Allies seized a garrison of 26 enemy soldiers.

In the mountains near the road junction north of Orbetello several battalions of enemy troops were putting up fierce resistance, using machine-gun and mortar fire and self-propelled artillery, Feder said. But late today the doughboys reported taking some high ground and making other tactical gains.

Many prisoners, most from the enemy's 162nd Turkoman division, were taken in the last 24 hours.

Minefields around Orbetello were so dense American forward troops required several hours to inch their way to the Nazi food dumps.

Bagno Regio, six miles south of Orvieto, was captured by the Fifth Army and Narni, an important road junction southwest of Terni, was taken by the Eighth army, headquarters announced tonight.

Considerable German rearguard resistance was developing at Terni, but British forces were making a determined effort to break into the strategic communications center on Highway Three. Allied forces now are well within artillery range of Terni and its fall was believed imminent.

Orvieto, another important road junction northeast of Lake Bolsena, also was believed near capture despite some continuing enemy resistance from the west.

Push Both Sides Of Lake

Inland from Orbetello, Allied forces steadily slugged their way up both the eastern and western shores of Lake Bolsena, advancing four miles beyond Valentano and capturing the town of Latera on the western side and closing in on Bolsena at the lake's northeastern tip. The Nazis had rallied and made a strong stand in Bolsena since Sunday.

[Wednesday's German high command communique said Nazi troops east of the lake had "detached themselves from the enemy, withdrawing several kilometers toward the north." It claimed Allied troops were repulsed at every point west of the lake.]

Eighth Army columns driving northward from Rome up both banks of the Tiber river sent armored spearheads north of Magliano. Headquarters said some Eighth Army units had reached points 60 miles from Rome, but did not specify where.

In some places the Germans were withdrawing without resistance, but at others they threw up a wall of fire from artillery, mortars and automatic weapons. They were shooting up all their artillery shells from individual dumps as they withdrew, rather than try to save them for future fighting.

It was estimated by Brig. Gen. Gordon P. Saville, chief of the 12th Tactical Air Command, that 70 per cent of all German transport seen north of Rome in the past 10 days either had been destroyed or damaged. He said a partial count on main roads showed that more than 3,000 enemy vehicles were destroyed in the first 30 days of the Allied offensive.

Among the remnants thrown into battle in a desperate effort to slow the Allied attack were several German cavalry units and much horse-drawn artillery.

It was officially disclosed that among Fifth Army units which engaged in the victorious drive into Rome were the American First Armored and the 85th and 88th Infantry divisions.

Allies Take Road Junction, Seal Up Orbetello

JUN 15 1944

Rome, June 14 (AP)—Fifth Army elements have swung around the heavily defended strong point of Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome, and captured the important junction of Highways No. 1 and No. 74, some four and a half miles beyond the town, Allied headquarters announced today.

"In the coastal sector our troops, having encountered increased resistance south of Orbetello, developed their strength in the mountains and late June 12 cut the road junction of Highways No. 1 and No. 74. Reconnaissance elements are moving farther north," said a headquarters communique.

Escape May Be Blocked

(This movement presumably blocked the retreat route of the Germans defending Orbetello.)

To the last, the Eighth Army advanced 60 miles north of Rome.

Gains also were made both east and west of Lake Bolsena, and Allied troops were closing in on Narni, seven and a half miles below Terni and 43 miles due north of Rome.

REINZERLIN

The town of Latera, four miles northeast of Valentano, was taken by Fifth Army units and the advance moved on toward Gradioli, two miles farther northeast.

Close In On Bolsena

Other Fifth Army forces were closing in on Bolsena, on the eastern shore of the lake.

Meanwhile, the Eighth Army continued to march up the Tiber Valley on a broad front and armored units penetrated several miles north of Magliano.

These troops were advancing

30.24— 16235

under heavy shellfire directed from observation posts high in the hills. Two thousand shells screamed down on the forward troops two days ago, the Germans apparently having determined to fire every possible shell from their dumps as they fall back.

Teller Mines Planted

While the Germans were withdrawing in some places without resisting, elsewhere advanced Allied patrols encountered concentrated fire.

The Germans were planting Teller mines whenever they had time, and continued demolitions on a wide scale.

Tattered remnants thrown in to slow the Allied advance even included a number of cavalry units and much horse-drawn artillery.

The Mediterranean Air Force, besides providing support for the advance north of Rome, broadened its activities, RAF night bombers attacking the Munich area early today, a few hours after American heavies blasted the same region yesterday.

Cargo Ships Attacked

American Marauder mediums hit two 400-foot cargo ships in the harbor at Livorno (Leghorn). It was believed the Germans were preparing to fill them with concrete and sink them at the entrance of the harbor.

RAF coastal Beaufighters roamed southern France, strafing enemy vehicles in the Istres-Montpelier area.

The Mediterranean naval command announced that British destroyers engaged four German E-boats off the Dalmatian coast the night of June 11 and sank one, picking up a few survivors.

British light naval forces shelled the Adriatic harbor of Lussinpiccolo the night of June 10.

Headquarters permitted correspondents to say that the Fifth Army forces which captured Rome included the First Armored, 85th and 88th Divisions.

Foe's Transport Loss North Of Rome 70 P. C.

Rome, June 14 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Gordon P. Saville, chief of the 12th Tactical Air Command, said today that 70 per cent. of all enemy transport seen north of Rome during the past ten days either was destroyed or damaged.

The over-all destruction of transport since the break-through in the Alban hills below Rome May 31 had reduced the enemy to a virtual rabble, he said. The enemy's only hope, Saville added, was to get reinforcements and delay the Allied advance until he could reorganize sufficiently to make a stand.

Saville said that a partial count of the main roads showed that more than 3,000 German vehicles were destroyed in the first 30 days of battle. This success was attributed to teamwork between medium and fighter bombers creating roadblocks that congested traffic and created juicy targets.

General Hume Reports On AMG Work In Rome

Rome, June 14 (AP)—Deposits exceeded withdrawals by 5,000,000 lire ($50,000) during the first day after the reopening of the banks of liberated Rome, it was announced tonight.

Brig. Gen. Edgar E. Hume said that 3,000 trustworthy Carabinieri weer at posts in Rome and that the normal complement of 6,000 police soon would be met.

The chief of the Allied Military Government said all plans prepared for the administration of the city were being realized. Authorities are continuing to feed about 500,000 from public kitchens. Both skilled and unskilled labor was reported plentiful.

Allied Soldiers Get Vatican Refuge

Vatican City, June 14 (AP)—Nineteen Allied soldiers and prisoners of war obtained refuge in Vatican City from the start of the war to the Allied capture of Rome, Archbishop Gustavo Testa, who has headed Vatican activities for prisoners, said today.

Two were Americans from a bomber shot down over Viterbo three months ago. Descending by parachute, they made their way to Rome and climbed the Vatican's walls at night. They were released when the Fifth Army arrived.

Exchange Arranged

Among others who got into the Vatican was Lieut. Paul Freyberg, son of the commander of New Zealand troops in Italy.

The Holy See arranged the exchange of four prisoners against four Italians. Negotiations for the exchange of others were in progress when the Allies took Rome.

First to be exchanged was Albert Penny, member of a British submarine crew, who escaped from a camp 50 miles from Rome. He traded a watch for a bicycle, pedaled to the Vatican, and joined a group of workmen going through the Vatican gate.

Not Required To Work

Italians stood guard around Vatican City and it was difficult for prisoners to get in. But once they were inside, the Vatican offered them asylum in accordance with international law.

They were well fed and were not required to work, but some volunteered as gardeners.

As the Germans fled Rome, an Austrian got into the city and was given the same shelter as Allied soldiers.

BIG ANZIO EXPRESS GUNS ARE EXAMINED

CIVITAVECCHIA, Italy, June 14 — (AP) Three captured "Anzio Expresses" — huge German railroad guns which made nights on the Anzio beachhead so miserable — have become one of the sights to see for G. I. Joes here.

The giant cannons, which fire 550 pound projectiles, still are standing on their carriages in the railyards where they were taken when the town was captured last week. But now every inch of their 60-foot long barrels is autographed by doughboys.

Usually the soldier puts down his name while making appropriate remarks.

Japs Driven Back In Imphal Sector

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, June 14 (AP)—The Japanese have been driven from a ridge 18 miles northeast of the Allied East India base of Imphal and RAF fighters have attacked enemy dumps and motor transport on the road south of Tiddim, an Allied communique announced today.

A Japanese attack Monday with tanks and artillery in the Imphal sector was beaten back with the loss of five enemy tanks. An ammunition dump was captured in the seizure of the ridge above the town. The communique said the Japanese lost 300 killed in two days of fighting on one sector near Imphal.

Patrols reported increased enemy movements in the area around the second big base of Kohima farther north, but operations proceeded to clear the line to Jessami and the area bordering the Imphal road.

Allies Take Ridge 18 Miles From Imphal

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 14 (AP)—A ridge 18 miles northeast of Imphal in northeastern India has been cleared of the Japanese and big ammunition dumps have been captured, a Southeast Asia Command headquarters communique said today. The Allied advance northward from Kanglatongbi continues, the announcement said.

In this same sector the Japanese attacked Allied positions at Mingthoukhong on Monday, winning a local penetration. They then were driven back with the loss of five tanks.

RAF fighters attacked enemy dumps and motor transport on the road leading south from Imphal to Tiddim while long-range RAF fighters flew over central Burma and with rockets scored hits on a bridge west of Pyingaing in the Kalewa area.

RIVER CROSSED AT CHANGSHA

Japs Break Through Outer Defenses Of City

Chungking, June 14 (AP)—The Chinese command announced tonight that Japanese forces driving on Changsha had crossed one of the river defenses of the Hunan province stronghold, and a spokesman said the enemy had thrown 200,000 men into battle in an effort to take the city at any cost.

One force east of the provincial capital on a second attempt threw a bridgehead across the Liuyang river, which forms part of the defenses north of Changsha, but was pinned there in severe fighting, the Chinese communique said. A crossing at another point was frustrated.

6 Miles Away On Northwest

To the northwest, reinforced enemy troops hammered against Kushan, only six miles from the capital, but the communique said the enemy was held all along the arc of the front extending from northwest to southeast of Changsha. United States planes bombed and strafed Japanese concentrations.

The spokesman, P. H. Chang, said Changsha was not encircled, but was being hemmed in on three sides.

A Chinese success was reported in western Honan where, the communique said, a counterattack had driven the Japanese back after they advanced on Wensiang, only 20 miles east of Tungkwan, gateway to Shensi province and China's northwest.

The air forces were actively supporting the Chinese in western Honan with attacks on enemy armor and transport, and in central Honan more than 100 Japanese cavalrymen were killed in the bombing of Lingpao.

Bombs Kill Jap Cavalry

Heavy rains and fog restricted fighting on the Salween river front, where the Chinese are driving west to try to link up with Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's forces moving down the Ledo road from India.

However, a communique said the Chinese recaptured Hungmusu, only 24 miles east of the main Japanese base of Tengchung, in Yunnan province, and fighting continued 40 miles northeast of the city.

Another force yesterday took Hsiangta, south of Lungling, and the Japanese withdrew southwestward. The day before Nanchaikungfang was taken, opening a good trail over Kaiolung range.

Chinese Repulse All Foe's Blows Upon Changsha

Say Japanese Use 200,000 Men in Assault; Report Gains East of Tungkwan

CHUNGKING, June 14 (AP).—Chinese troops holding Changsha have beaten back all Japanese assaults, the high command said tonight, and a government official said the enemy had thrown some nine divisions, totaling more than 200,000 men, into the push to capture the city.

Changsha is not encircled, but is hemmed in on three sides, P. H. Chang, counselor of the Executive Yuan, said, and the invaders apparently are intent on taking it at any cost.

In Honan Province, a communique said, the Chinese counterattacked and repulsed Japanese advancing on Wensiang, twenty miles east of Tungkwan, the key to China's northwest. Chang said every preparation had been taken to meet the Japanese advance on Tungkwan.

Planes of the United States 14th Air Force continued attacks on the Japanese over the battlefront, bombing and strafing troop concentrations and communications north and east of Changsha.

Allied aid to China is limited only by transport facilities, Chang said, but pending the opening of the Ledo Road, China could use more planes. He said China had not made any fresh appeals to the Allies for aid because they were fully aware of her needs and would help if they could.

Chinese Defeat Jap Column In Yunnan

Chungking, June 14 (AP)—Chinese troops fighting south of captured Lungling, former Japanese base on the Burma Road in Yunnan province, have defeated one of three Japanese columns striking from the southeast, a Chinese communique disclosed today.

The Japanese forces, estimated at about 1,000 men, were reported advancing northwest from Mengtui, Tengwang and Pachuchai. Chinese troops, moving to intercept them, defeated one column south of Hsiangta and drove it back to Pachuchai, 12 miles southeast of Lungling, the communique said.

Kangfung Captured

In battling north of the Burma Road the Chinese drove the enemy from Nanchaikungfang and captured Kangfung, a mile and a half northeast of Chiangtso, about 20 airline miles northwest of the main enemy base of Tengchung. Hungmusu, 24 miles east of Tengchung, was recaptured by Chinese forces, who killed 30 in the Japanese garrison while the remainder fled.

Fighting is continuing 40 miles east of Tengchung, with Chinese troops blocking enemy avenues of approach to Chaikuntang, the communique said.

Japanese Try to Raid Biak

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, June 15 (Thursday), (AP).—Twenty-eight Japanes planes were shot down over Biak Island, off Dutch New Guinea, and over Palau, in the Carolines, Southwest Pacific Headquarters announced today.

The enemy attack upon Biak, where newly captured Mokmer Field has been put into operation for American warplanes, indicated again Japanese interest in preventing use of that base for attack upon the Philippines, 880 miles to the west.

Liberators attacked Palau Sunday and shot down twenty of fifty intercepting airplanes. The B-24's dropped twenty-three tons of bombs, exploding ammunition dumps, starting fires and destroying many planes on the ground, the communique reported.

Intensity of ground fighting on Biak, where American infantry columns pressed westward from Mokmer toward two other Japanese-held airstrips, increased as the Japanese turned six-inch guns on the advancing units. Only slight progress was reported despite the use of tanks and artillery to strengthen the American attack.

U. S. PLANES FLY FROM BIAK FIELD

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 14 (AP)—Allied warplanes operated against the Japanese from Biak Island today, signifying that the Fifth Army Air Force has advanced its bases more than halfway to the Philippines from Port Moresby.

Headquarters announced today that Biak's Mokmer Airdrome, 880 miles from Mindanao, went into operation Tuesday noon, five days after the enemy had been driven out.

Mokmer is closer by 100 miles to the Philippines than it is to Port Moresby, the New Guinea base from which the Fifth American Air Force launched the Southwest Pacific aerial offensive in 1942.

The new airfield off the north coast of Dutch Guinea also is closer to Darwin than is any other Allied airdrome in New Guinea, and soon may provide for shuttle-bombing of Dutch East Indies bases in conjunction with that North Australia air center.

NUNS HAD TO BOW TO JAP RISING SUN

Somewhere in Australia, June 14 (A. P.).—Jap captors of German Catholic sisters made them bow each morning to the rising sun, Sister Matilda said today on her arrival from Dutch New Guinea.

She and others were liberated by American troops who invaded the Hollandia area. Sister Matilda said they were forced to bow to Jap soldiers. When 67-year-old Christopha failed to do so, a Jap soldier struck her with a stick.

Sister Christopha added that one day the Japs called for volunteers among the German Catholic priests to spy on American and Australian troops near Alexishafen, but got no offers.

NAVY SHELLS KURILES AND MARIANAS

Two Fleets Bombard Jap Islands Following Up Air Attacks

Twenty-seven killed, 100 missing reported as toll of explosion among landing craft at Pearl Harbor.....Page 8

Japanese cross river in Changsha's defense line.....Page 8

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 14 (AP)—Big guns of American naval task forces simultaneously shelled the southern Marianas Islands and the central Kuriles Monday in the deepest penetration of Japanese defenses ever made by United States warships, Pacific fleet headquarters announced today.

Both raids were coordinated with air blows.

The northern force continued its shelling of Matsuwa, within 500 miles of the Japanese homeland, into Tuesday.

Goes Into Fourth Day

The carrier task force raid in the southern Marianas was extended into its fourth day and reached out to hit a fifth island.

Battleships, cruisers and destroyers shelled both Saipan and Tinian in the Marianas. If the shore guns replied, their fire was ineffective, for Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said none of the attacking ships was damaged.

The warship bombardment started large fires in Tanapag harbor anchorage on the western side of Saipan's volcanic hills. Large fires also blazed in Garapa, a town of 10,000 population just south of Tanapag harbor, and in Charankao, a sugar mill center on the southwest side of Saipan.

It was the first surface bombardment of these key Japanese bases protecting the sea flanks of Japan and the Philippines. As the naval guns opened up, courier planes which began raiding the Marianas last Saturday bombed Pagan Island, a satellite Marianas base about 175 miles north of Saipan.

Nearest To Japan

The task force shelling of Matsuwa was the first time warships have closed in to bombard a base that close to Japan. In coordinated air blows Paramushiro and Shumushu airfields at the northern tip of the Kuriles were bombed.

The simultaneous strikes at the Kuriles and Marianas, over a range of more than 2,000 miles and both within 1,500 miles of Tokyo, exhibited the navy's capacity to hit widely separated Japanese positions at the same time.

The might of the navy's highly mobile destructive power thrown against the Marianas was unloosed in an area 1,200 miles west of bases in the Marshall Islands won from the enemy last February.

Planes Bomb Pagan Island

Shore installations on Pagan Island were well worked over by carrier planes. They destroyed three Japanese planes and probably another, bringing to 141 the total number of Japanese aircraft wiped out in the extended Marianas strike.

Three American fighter planes and one dive bomber were lost Sunday in Marianas air attacks.

Nimitz announced that more than 60 Japanese, survivors of a ship sunk off Saipan Sunday, were picked up from the sea and taken prisoner.

Army and navy heavy bombers struck at Japanese-held Truk in the Carolines Monday, damaging airfields and setting several fires.

27 DIE IN BLAST AT PEARL HARBOR

Navy Reveals Explosion May 21 Injured 280 with 100 Missing.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 14.—(AP) The Navy announced tonight that 27 men were killed, 100 are missing and 380 were wounded in an explosion that destroyed several small landing craft in Pearl Harbor May 21.

NIGHT

At the same time it reported that a magazine at the ammunition depot at Oahu Island exploded last Sunday, killing three men. Seven others are missing as a result of this accident.

The explosion among landing craft in Pearl Harbor was reported previously by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander in chief, who said that it occurred while ammunition was being unloaded from one of the small craft.

The casualties caused by the explosion and subsequent fire were: Dead—Army 8, Navy 9, Marine corps 10; missing—Army 53, Navy 21, Coast Guard 26. Injured—Army 56, Navy 143, Coast Guard 3, Marine corps 159, and civilians 19.

In the explosion last Sunday, the Pacific fleet headquarters said, several torpedo warheads being transferred from a truck to a platform were detonated. Damage was caused in the general magazine area and minor damage was done to power lines and railroad tracks. Names of the three men killed and the seven missing are being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

PEARL HARBOR DELAYS RAPPED

Colonel and German-Born Contractor Blamed

Washington, June 14 (AP)—The colonel in charge and the German-born contractor on defenses at Pearl Harbor were criticized by the House Military Committee for delays which, the report said, left the installations incomplete and the way open for the Japanese.

While the work fell behind, the committee said, Colonel Theodore Wyman, Jr., of the army engineers, accepted lavish entertainment from the contractor, Hans Wilhelm Rohl, in parties that involved liquor "by the case" and "cheap, commercial party girls."

"In A Drunken Condition"

It said the colonel was at Rohl's home in Hawaii when the Japanese struck Pearl Harbor, and that he rushed to his office "in civilian clothes and in a drunken condition."

"How did it so happen," the committee asked, "that after nearly thirty years without taking the steps necessary to becoming a citizen, although meantime enjoying the fruits of Government contracts, he (Rohl) suddenly began using every possible effort to become naturalized in order that he might be permitted to go to Hawaii just a little less than three months before the attack on Pearl Harbor?"

Naturalized In September

Rohl was naturalized in September and the Japanese hit Pearl Harbor in December.

Referring to the award to Rohl's company of some $125,000,000 in contracts which included work in Hawaii and construction of a Far Eastern air route by way of Christmas Island, Canton, Mandi, New Caledonia and Australia, the committee commented:

"It is exceeding difficult . . . to comprehend how, at so crucial a time and when the necessity for the utmost secrecy and highest efficiency was paramount . . . a man known to be a German alien was selected and actually put in charge of the planning, specifications and performance of the contract. . . .

Warning Stations Inoperative

"It is not simply a matter of conjecture . . . that had the permanent aircraft warning stations (at Pearl Harbor) been operating on December 7, 1941, the approach of the Japanese planes would have been detected."

In Los Angeles, where he still is in business, Rohl issued a statement through his attorney saying that an official report May 17, 1944, by Lieutenant General Richardson, commanding at Pearl Harbor, "completely exonerates me."

The War Department had nothing to say immediately, but last September 2, Secretary Stimson at a press conference called the association of the colonel and the contractor "inappropriate."

"Lack Of Attention"

He added, however, that the award of the contracts "was not the result of favoritism" and that Wyman's actions with reference to Hawaiian contractors were "the result of honest decisions."

The Secretary said "appropriate action already has been taken" on the basis of an investigation by the army's inspector general. He said Wyman was "not found guilty of negligence" but the inquiry had shown "a lack of proper attention to organization and detail," and it was decided to assign Wyman to duties other than large public works.

The committee said the contracts went to Rohl's firm on Wyman's recommendation, and that Rohl, then head of Hawaiian constructors, went to Pearl Harbor on the colonel's invitation soon after his naturalization. It asserted Wyman "forced" other contractors out of the Hawaiian work.

Short Censured Also

The committee's censure was not devoted alone to Colonel Wyman and the contractor, but was applied also to Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, commanding general at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and to other army personnel "down through the lower echelons."

Officers at Pearl Harbor, including General Short, the committee said, did not complain against the contractor's failure to comply with the contract and "were directly at fault for failing to give the necessary orders to proceed with the construction work promptly."

The aircraft warning contract, awarded December 20, 1940, called for completion in six months, but had not been finished when the Japanese flew in at the end of the year, the committee said.

Next Move Up To Army

There were no conclusions, and little comment, in the lengthy report filed with the House by Chairman May (D., Ky.) at the committee's direction following months of investigation here and in Los Angeles.

"The next move," May told reporters, "is up to the War Department."

Colonel Wyman, according to the report, now is stationed overseas, presumably in Europe. The 56-year-old officer entered the army in 1917 and won the French Croix de Guerre in the last war.

The committee said this further about Rohl:

"He was 'in some degree associated with' Werner Plack, who was connected with the German consulate at Los Angeles and who later went to Japan and thence to Germany. He 'bragged of close acquaintance with all visiting German diplomats and persons of high rank.'"

LIMITED PROBE ORDERED NOW

Roosevelt Signs Pearl Harbor Investiagtion Bill

Washington, June 14 (AP)—Legislation directing an immediate investigation of the Pearl Harbor disaster was signed today by President Roosevelt, but he said the inquiry would be limited to what could be done without interfering with the war effort.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was confident Congress did not intend and would not want any proceedings which would hamper prosecution of the war. Therefore, he said in a statement, he was signing the bill although the Secretaries of War and the Navy had suggested he disapprove it.

His Answer To Secretaries

The legislation directs that the Secretaries of War and Navy make investigations and commence proceedings "as the facts may justify." They expressed concern to Mr. Roosevelt that this might require them to recall officers from important war posts and bring out publicly information which should be withheld from the enemy.

"If there were any doubt in my mind that the resolution might require such action by the Secretaries of War and Navy as would interfere with the successful conduct of the war, I would have withheld by approval from the resolution," the President said.

Extension To Next December 7

"I am confident, however, that the Congress did not intend that the investigation of this matter or any proceedings should be conducted in a manner which would interrupt or interfere with the war effort. On the strength of this confidence I have approved the resolution."

The resolution also extends until December 7, 1944, the time during which prosecutions may be brought against anyone as a result of Pearl Harbor.

TUBERCULOSIS IN ARMY

500 Men Are Being Discharged Monthly, Dr. Parran Says

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP)—Five hundred members of the armed forces are being discharged every month because of tuberculosis, Surgeon General Thomas Parran said today.

Asserting that tuberculosis and war had always been close companions, the head of the United States Health Service told a Senate Education subcommittee that the number of deaths from the disease increased in America this year for the first time in decades.

He urged enactment of legislation to provide Federal funds and technical assistance to the States for tuberculosis prevention, declaring that with an effective preventive program tuberculosis "can be eradicated."

Dr. Kendall Emerson of New York, managing director of the National Tuberculosis Association, said mass X-raying "presents the next great advance in tuberculosis control."

The bill would provide $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945.

Halt Exports, U.S. Again Tells Spain

Washington, June 15 (AP)—With a major diplomatic victory in hand—Sweden's agreement to limit substantially her ball-bearing sales to Germany—the United States has concentrated its efforts on Spain and will ask her to ring down a curtain between Spanish production and the Nazis.

American Ambassador Carlton Hayes, it was learned today, has been instructed to ask the Spanish Government to ban all war vital exports to Germany, not only of Spanish tungsten, but of every other commodity important to the Nazis, such as olive oil, hides, skins and wool.

Blow To Enemy

The Swedish agreement is regarded here as an important psychological blow at the enemy. On a man-to-man basis Stanton Griffis, American movie executive and special representative of the Foreign Economic Administration, took a virtual blank check to Sweden and presumably through preclusive buying for the United States trimmed sharply the ball-bearing shipments to Germany.

The new requests of Hayes—the United States has made previous demands upon Spain—are to be based on the change in the military situation since the invasion and upon Portugal's total embargo on tungsten shipments.

In a report released yesterday by President Roosevelt there had been hints of new military as well as diplomatic action in this direction. The report by Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley said that depriving the Nazis of Spain's tungsten exports, Balkan chrome and manganese and Norwegian molybdenum would materially affect the German war machine within six months.

President Roosevelt observed that the only way he knew of keeping the important metals of the Balkans, Norway and Finland from Germany would be throwing the Germans out of those areas.

Roosevelt Confident Of Greater Victories

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt, in a message to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek tonight, expressed confidence that the Allied invasion of Europe "will soon bring us greater victories which will insure the destruction of Axis tyranny not only in Europe but also in Asia."

The message was contained in a second group of congratulatory cablegrams exchanged between this country and other friendly nations following the liberation of Rome and the Allied smash across the English Channel.

Much of today's installment, released by the White House, consisted of acknowledgments from the President to messages he received shortly after the fall of Rome.

ARABIAN PIPE LINE HEARINGS DELAYED

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 15 (A. P.).—The Senate's Special Petroleum Policy Committee said today it had received administration assurances that a trans-Arabian pipeline will not be built without timely notice to the committee.

In his first formal statement since a recent White House conference with President Roosevelt, Senator Maloney (D.-Conn.), the chairman, said that on the basis of the assurances the committee voted unanimously today to defer public hearings pending further conferences between the United States and British Government on petroleum matters.

Asked if the assurances came directly from the President, Senator Maloney declined comment.

Senator Moore (R.-Okla.), a member of the committee, has been critical of a proposal by Secretary of the Interior Ickes to have the Petroleum Reserves Corporation participate in construction of a 1,250-mile line from the Persian Gulf area to the Mediterranean.

Mr. Ickes met with the committee for ninety minutes yesterday

May War Costs Near Eight Billion

Washington, June 14 (A. P.).—United States war expenditures in May amounted to $7,918,000,000, an increase of 5.7 per cent over the April figures, the War Production Board reported today.

From July 1, 1940, through May 31, 1944, the Government spent $192,000,000,000 for war production. These figures include checks cleared by the Treasury as payable from war appropriations, and net outlays of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its subsidiaries.

India To Receive Silver From U. S.

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 14 (AP)—The United States agreed today to lend-lease 100,000,000 ounces of silver to the Government of India.

The purposes, the Treasury and the Foreign Economic Administration announced, are "to maintain an adequate supply of coinage for the United Nations forces and for India's expanded war production, and to help to keep prices stable in this important United Nations supply base and war theater."

India agreed to return the metal after the war.

The announcement said the silver shipments, to be supplied from the Treasury's stock of free silver, would not impair the United States' supply of the metal.

Finland Can Use Funds Here

Washington, June 14 (AP)—The Treasury's Foreign Funds Control Division granted Finland a license today to dip into its funds in this country to meet the June 15 installment of $148,145,806.00 on her World War I debt to the United States.

Grateful Rome Was Spared

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 14 (AP)—The Most Reverend Francis J. Spellman, Archbishop of New York, called on President Roosevelt today to express his gratitude "that military ingenuity superseded military necessity in the saving of Rome."

1,300 American Warships Assist

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 14 (AP)—James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, reported today that the United States naval task force engaged in the invasion of France included more than 1,300 warships of all types.

In the giant armada, he said, were the battleships Navada, Arkansas, and Texas; the cruisers Augusta, Tuscaloosa and Quincy, and "more than 30 destroyers."

Despite the great size of the fleet pounding European shores, he said, the Pacific offensive "has not been and will not be diminished by our naval effort in Europe."

Japan Hard Pressed

On the contrary, Forrestal said, "at the moment of Germany's greatest crisis, Japan is being too hard pressed to lend any diversional support."

JUN 15 1944

He cited the attacks on the Pacific Marianas islands as an indication of the "accelerated offensive in the Pacific."

Forrestal declared that it was significant that from the time invading forces left the British Isles until they reached the French coast, anticipated enemy counterblows failed to materialize. It was expected that the Nazi air force with light surface units and submarines would launch their heaviest attacks in an effort to stop the invasion.

Fleet Poorly Balanced

He said he was at a loss to understand the German failure to launch counterblows, saying that it might have been "inability or lack of alertness."

Both in the last war and in the present war, he continued, the German high command failed to build up a balanced naval force, depending instead upon special weapons such as submarines and light coastal units.

"That special weapons are not enough to control the sea is being proved each minute the war continues," he asserted.

Poland Counts On U. S. Support, Premier Says

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 14 (AP)—Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk after a week of conferences with President Roosevelt and State Department officials, said today that he will depart with "full confidence that Poland can count on the support and real friendship of the United States."

He added that the feeling between Poland and Russia is better now because of the contacts between the Red army and the Polish underground.

Would Resume Relations

The Premier said that Polish Government is aiming for a re-establishment of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union and that four months ago he proposed a "temporary working agreement" whereby Poland would administer parts of disputed border territory predominantly inhabited by Poles and Russia would administer the other parts.

The Soviet Union has not answered the proposal, he said.

He said he had full confidence that the Polish underground armies will do everything they are asked when the time comes for a general uprising against the Germans.

Favors Federation Of Nations

Declaring that there must be some kind of federation among European nations, the Premier said that he favored close collaboration among those nations, and "even a diminishing of sovereignty for the common cause."

Mikolajczyk said that his government recognized the committee of Gen. Charles de Gaulle as the provisional government of France because "it is our feeling that France must have representation and a government to make it easier to rebuild Europe."

REVEAL SOME FACTS ABOUT NEW PLANES

JUN 15 1944

WASHINGTON, June 14.—(AP) The Army pulled open a crack in the curtain of secrecy over some of its newer planes today, but nobody is going to start duplicating them right off from detailed information.

For instance, on the A-26 Invader, the announcement was limited to the fact that the new plane is a light bomber, an improvement of the A-20 Havoc which has been used extensively in combat, and is manufactured by the Douglas Aircraft company.

The announcement also disclosed:

The Bell Aircraft company is producing a new fighter, the P-63, King Cobra, described as a larger and improved version of the P-39 Airacobra.

The new jet-propulsion plane also being manufactured by Bell and powered by General Electric company engines has been designated the P-59A and named the Airacomet.

The recently announced P-61 Black Widow, night fighter of Northrup Aircraft, Inc., is powered by two 2,000 horsepower Pratt and Whitney engines equipped with four-bladed Hamilton Standard propellors; it has twin fuselages, twin tails, weighs over 25,000 pounds, is armed with 20 mm. cannon and 50-calibre machine guns, carries new night fighting devices, has a crew of two or three men, and "has long range and effective speed and climb characteristics."

WAR BONDS NOW BUY BETTER EQUIPMENT

JUN 15 1944

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP) War bond sales of $484,000,000 to individuals were reported during the first two days of the Fifth War Loan drive, the Treasury announced tonight. The goal for individual sales is $6,000,000,000.

Meantime, the Treasury said that bonds bought now will pay for more and better equipment than a year ago.

To translate bond purchases in the $16,000,000,000 drive into terms of war equipment, the department issued a revised list of costs compiled by the War department. These included:

A heavy bomber, which cost $500,000 a year ago, now is listed at $250,000.

A fighter plane costs $50,000 as against $150,000 a year ago.

A Bofors anti-aircraft gun, listed at $25,000 last year, now costs $13,000.

Some items have increased in cost — for example, 60-ton tanks from $145,000 to $325,368 which the War department said was due to improvement in models and methods of armor and construction.

The old standby, the Army mule, coming back into its own in Italy and the southwest Pacific, also has gone up in price. A year ago, the average was $190. Now it's $225.

Daughter Of Nimitz To Sponsor Destroyer

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 14 (AP)—Selection of Mary Nimitz, daughter of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific Fleet commander in chief, as sponsor of the new destroyer Buck was announced today by the navy.

Miss Nimitz lives at Berkeley, Cal. The Buck is being built by the Bethlehem Steel Company, San Francisco.

NAVY CASUALTIES

Washington, June 14 (A. P.).—The Navy Department announced today the names of twenty-seven casualties in the United States Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard which makes a total of 45,977 casualties reported by the Navy since December 7, 1941. Of this total, 19,988 are reported dead; 12,296 wounded, 9,232 missing and 4,461 prisoners of war. The list today includes the following with [illegible] next of kin:

JUN 15 1944

DEAD

NEW YORK.

KRESSEL, WARREN KENNETH, seaman first class, U. S. Naval Reserve (previously reported missing; parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Joseph Kressel, 1268 Olmstead avenue, the Bronx.

WOUNDED

HEINTZ, HARRY ALBERT, motor machinist's mate first class, U. S. Navy; father, John Vincent Heintz, Dover Plains.

NEW JERSEY.

CORSON, ROBERT VICKERS, ship's cook second class, U. S. Naval Reserve; parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence George Corson, 601 Spruce street, Roselle.

Congress Prodded To Set Up Post-War Machinery Now

JUN 15 1944

Washington, June 14 (AP)—Congress was prodded by Bernard M. Baruch, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson today to speed machinery for post-war economic adjustments lest a sudden collapse of Germany lead to unemployment and chaos in this country.

Baruch, White House adviser on war and post-war adjustments, said in a letter to James F. Byrnes, War Mobilization Director, that America must "hurry, hurry, hurry" its post-war planning.

"The collapse of the Axis in Europe, according to present outlook, should permit the demobilization of a substantial part of our armed forces and a good part of war industry," Baruch said.

U. S. Must Be Ready

"If this transition is to be handled without unnecessary unemployment, without further inflation, and chaotic confusion, the Government must be ready for the swiftest action, regardless of when the X-day of Germany's defeat falls."

At the same time, Baruch said his letter should not be taken as "reflecting any speculation as to an early end of the war." Dated May 12, the letter was turned over by Byrnes to a Senate Military subcommittee studying demobilization problems. The committee made it public today.

Baruch's Summary

Baruch summarized in this fashion what has been done and what remains to be accomplished in the broad field which has been his principal interest for many months:

The position of retaining and reemployment administrator has been created by executive order, but Congress could aid by naming a joint committee, or a single committee in each House, to help deal with "the human side of demobilization, which is the most important of all."

Congress should centralize its interest in the field of surplus war property disposal, for which an administrator has been appointed.

"Definitive action" is needed to set up adequate machinery and policies to insure proper advance planning in the cancellation of war contracts.

Machinery also should be set up in preparation for the "X-day" reconversion program needed to prevent "chaos and confusion."

Congress should complete action on legislation covering the prompt settlement of terminated war contracts—more than 20,000 already have been terminated.

Action is still waiting on proposals for financing aid to small business and for loans for reconversion purposes.

Congress should extend the war powers which expire soon—legislation such as the price-control law, now in progress through the Legislature.

The development of post-war housing programs, the designing, engineering and planning in advance of worthwhile public works, to be put on a shelf for use as needed, has still to be accomplished.

"Congress should draft and put on the shelf a post-war tax bill with a major objective the stimulation of enterprise capital to give the widest possible employment after hostilities cease.

Testifying before the Senate committee, Mayor LaGuardia of New York city said "definite, specific legislation on contract termination and provisions for transformation to peacetime industry cannot be enacted too soon.

Indorses Bill

"We have never been confronted with a more difficult problem."

Patterson told the same group in a letter that there was need for "prompt action." He indorsed as "basically sound" a bill drafted by Senators George (D., Ga.) and Murray (D., Mont.) to establish economic adjustment machinery.

Laying down basic policies, the measure would leave their execution, in general, to existing agencies rather than establishing a new over-all agency as some have advocated.

TO HONOR INFANTRY IN NATION'S CAMPS

WASHINGTON, June 14.—(AP) By proclamation of Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding general of the Army ground forces, the foot-soldier, backbone of America's military might, will have his day tomorrow.

On the 169th anniversary of the date George Washington was chosen commander-in-chief of the continental army, the infantry, "Queen of Battles" will parade its power in Army camps, posts and cities throughout the nation.

Most infantry day celebrations, the War department said, will be "modest."

In Washington at 7:30 o'clock in the morning—"so as not to interfere with war work"—General McNair will review troops in a special celebration on the parade grounds of the Army War college and afterward, award infantrymen badges to four overseas veterans.

Sedition Trial Judge to Hear Acquittal Plea

Arguments Based on Ruling of Supreme Court To Be Presented on Monday

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP).—Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of United States District Court agreed today to hear oral arguments Monday on a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal for the twenty-nine defendants in the mass sedition conspiracy case.

Defense attorneys will base their arguments on the Supreme Court's decision last Monday overruling the espionage conviction of Elmer Hartzel of Chicago.

E. Hilton Jackson, attorney for Gerald B. Winrod, of Wichita, Kan., will make the opening defense argument, O'John Rogge will reply for the prosecution. Justice Eicher said he will then decide whether other defense attorneys would be permitted to participate in the argument.

Mr. Rogge, chief prosecutor, said he would outline "some of the highlights" of the government's case and show "specific intent" on the part of the defendants to conspire to impair the morale of the armed forces.

"We did not rely on the Hartzel case in this prosecution," he said. "We assumed we would have to prove specific intent and we think we have the evidence to prove it."

Mr. Jackson commented that the indictment in the sedition case "wouldn't have been returned" if the Hartzel decision had been made at the time.

The Supreme Court overruled Hartzel's conviction under the 1917 espionage act on the ground the prosecution did not offer sufficient proof of his "willful intent" to undermine the morale of the armed forces.

The prosecution today placed its second major witness on the stand—William Luedtke, of Rochelle Park, N. J., national secretary of the German-American Bund from 1939 until December, 1941. Luedtke identified August Klapprott, a defendant, as Eastern "gauleiter" of the bund, and another defendant, Herman Max Schwinn, as Western "gauleiter."

PRICE CONTROL BILL IS PASSED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 14 — (AP) The House passed the price control extension bill today after striking out the controversial Bankhead-Brown cotton amendment and writing in a provision aimed at guaranteeing parity prices for all farm products by penalizing processors who fail to pay them.

The Bankhead-Brown proposal, which is in the version of the bill passed last week by the Senate, would require adjustment of textile ceilings to reflect parity to farmers and also to guarantee manufacturing costs plus a "reasonable profit" to ...millers.

Virtually all the House republicans joined with administration forces against the textile pricing change, which was beaten 87 to 191. The Administration gave its approval to the parity-or-penalty amendment.

WALLACE URGES FREEDOM IN ASIA

JUN 15 1944

In Article He Advocates Progressive U. S. Policy

New York, June 14 (AP)—Vice-President Wallace tonight advocated post-war freedom for Asia's "subject and colonial" peoples and called upon the United States to take "a positive, progressive policy toward this area."

Concerning Japan, he said it should be occupied for a time, but not indefinitely, and that it should become eventually an "Asiatic Sweden," specializing in non-war-like pursuits of high technological skill.

Wallace expressed his views in an article written shortly before he left on his recent trip to China and published in a pamphlet by the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Not A United States Mission

He said it was not the mission of the United States "to write 'declarations of independence' for the colonies of other powers," and added:

"Nor is it our mission to underwrite other people's declarations of continued empire."

[Prime Minister Churchill said on November 10, 1942: "I have not become the King's First Minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire.]

"While the British and Dutch governments and the French Committee of National Liberation have given evidence that they recognize the need of revising their colonial policies in the direction of a larger measure of self-government, there are also in these countries powerful forces which will fight for the old system of empire," Wallace continued.

Progressive Asiatic Policy

He said it was important for America to adopt a progressive policy toward Asia "not only because of our interest in and special relations with the Philippines, and any other Pacific islands where we may have naval and air bases, but because in southeast Asia there are conflicting forces in operation which have in them seeds of future wars."

If the war ended tomorrow, the Vice-President said, "Asia would find itself divided into free and subject divisions. He listed the latter as "India, the Dutch East Indies, Burma, Malaya, Indo-China and a great many small Pacific islands."

He said the ranks of free Asia would include, "first of all, China and Soviet Asia"; the Philippines, "which have been promised independence; Korea, which also has been promised freedom 'in due course'," and Thailand.

Orderly Transition Sought

"It is to our advantage," Wallace said, "not to perpetuate this division but to see an orderly process of transition so that the area of free Asia will grow and the area of subject Asia constantly diminish.

"Japan, at the close of the war, will belong in still another category, for while a defeated Japan will for a time be an occupied country under United Nations control, we cannot keep her indefinitely in a state of colonial-like subjection while advocating freedom for the rest of Asia."

Wallace held that the primary post-war objective toward Japan must be to keep her disarmed.

He said the United States, equally avoiding the role of Simon Legree or Santa Claus, should help the Orient attain a higher living standard.

Nazis Hating Shortage Of Wool

New York, June 14 (AP)—If the German Army is still in the field next winter, its soldiers will face acute personal hardships because of a severe shortage of warm clothing reminiscent of conditions in 1918.

The lack of wool will mean even greater suffering from cold for people in enemy occupied countries, while German civilians will run a close second, wool men said today.

The American Wool Council pointed out the Germans had an extremely rough time of it in Russia last winter and were forced to call on the people back home to send any kind of warm clothing to augment dwindling army supplies.

"Ninety per cent. of the world's wool is grown in South America, the United States and Australia,"

British Princess Works For Her Cooking Badge

New York, June 14 (AP)—Princess Margaret Rose, 14, is working for her Girl Guides' cooking badge.

Consequently, the British royal family often dines these days on "practice meals" she serves from the family's rationed food, Mrs. John Corbett, of Kingston, Ontario, said here today.

Mrs. Corbett, a leader of the Girl Guides, sister organization of the Girl Scouts, said Queen Elizabeth had told her the story.

ROCKET GUNS POISON TO JAP SHIPPING

JUN 15 1944

BOSTON, June 14 (AP) American rocket guns carried by P-39 Aircobras are "poison" to Japanese shipping, according to Lt. Col. Whitney Stone, deputy chief of the Boston ordnance district.

Stone said that rocket-gun equipped planes recently sank 40 enemy barges at Rabaul, blasting them into splinters, setting off huge explosions and starting numerous fires among ground installations.

Although it was not the first use of the rocket weapon in planes, observers reported that it was one of the most spectacular, Stone added.

The rockets have an advantage over the same size gun, Stone declared, because they carry high explosive charges, provide planes with greater firepower, and, since the launchers are light, there is no recoil.

Justice Roberts Fears Dictatorship For U. S.

Philadelphia, June 14 (AP)—A "military dictatorship" for the United States, unless an organization is established to "bring order under law throughout the world"—that is the post-war picture which Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts foresees.

"If the United States is to live in a world of . . . nations who do as they please when powerful enough to impose their will," he told the United Nations Council of Philadelphia last night, "we shall have to substitute a military dictatorship for our individual liberties."

He said he was "certain the people of the United States can have the kind of world order they want."

Seaman, 19, Gets Life For Selling War Secrets

Navy Withholds Identity of Person Who Bought Data

MIAMI, Fla., June 14 (AP).—An official announcement from the Navy said tonight that nineteen-year-old Seaman Second Class Joseph R. [illegible] was convicted by Navy court-martial here for selling military information while stationed at the Miami Sub Chaser Training Center, and sentenced to life imprisonment.

The announcement listed the sailor's home as South Bend, Ind., and stated that Becker had been taken to the United States Naval Prison at Portsmouth, N. H.

The announcement said that he was convicted specifically of uttering seditious words; betraying his trust in time of war; scandalous conduct in communicating and transmitting documents relating to national defense to a person not entitled to them; disclosing information which might be of possible assistance to the enemy, and bribery.

SABOTEUR'S FATHER SENTENCED FOR LIFE

CHICAGO, June 14 — (AP) Hans Max Haupt, German-born paper hanger, today was sentenced to life imprisonment and fined $10,000 by Federal Judge John P. Barnes for treason.

Haupt, father of Herbert Haupt, executed Nazi saboteur, in 1942 was sentenced to die in the electric chair for treason, but a higher court granted him a new trial. He was convicted a second time Friday and Judge Barnes this morning denied him a new trial.

The government charged Haupt harbored his son, Herbert, one of eight Nazi saboteurs who came to the United States in German submarines in June, 1942, with instruction to paralyze American war industries. Herbert Haupt and his conspirators were captured by the FBI and he and five of them were executed in August, 1942.

Hans Haupt's wife, Erna, and two other German-American couples also were convicted of aiding Herbert but all have been granted new and separate trials.

KERR IS FAVORED FOR KEYNOTE JOB

CHICAGO, June 14.—(AP) Gov. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma tonight held the role of favorite for selection as keynoter as members of the Democratic Arrangements committee gathered to choose the men who will have the top posts at the party's national convention.

A strong trend of support for the tall Oklahoman was evidenced in discussions with men and women already on hand for the meeting tomorrow, but there was no indication of general agreement on the question of who would wield the gavel as permanent chairman at the nominating conclave opening here July 19.

Kerr, 47, an advocate of a fourth term for President Roosevelt and an oil producer and an attorney before he moved into the Oklahoma governor's chair, has been mentioned for weeks for the assignment of delivering the keynote speech, and he has told reporters he would not "run from it" if accorded the honor.

BRICKER DISPUTES CLAIMS FOR DEWEY

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Political Writer

Two of Gov. John W. Bricker's campaign lieutenants formally reported their "first ballot analysis" of Republican National convention delegate choices yesterday as 171 for Bricker, 285 for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, 76 pledged to favorite sons, 306 "probably first ballot for others," and 249 doubtful.

The Bricker-for-President field directors making this statement in Washington were Hugh Huntington and Don H. Ebright. They said this was a "conservative report" instead of an estimate and that they confidently expect Bricker will receive between 250 and 300 votes on the first ballot for the G.O.P. presidential nomination.

They also asserted that the Ohioan "has steadily gained in support" and that his delegate strength is "growing stronger each day."

State party leaders, Dewey boosters, and delegate canvasses have combined to credit Dewey with 391 delegates, with 529 needed for nomination. These sources credit Dewey with 97 actually pledged and 294 uninstructed but favoring the New Yorker.

The Bricker field directors, however, give Dewey only 72 pledged and 213 "probable." They put 50 pledged and 124 "definitely claimed" in Bricker's column.

Bricker at a press conference was asked how [illegible] expected to "stop Dewey" in [illegible] of the field staff report crediting the New Yorker with over 100 more votes than the table showed for the Ohioan.

He replied that it was "up to the delegates," who were familiar with his stand on current issues. He said he had complete confidence they would make the right decision.

Other political developments yesterday included a call on President Roosevelt by Democratic Chairman Robert E. Hannegan, who in a New York speech recently predicted the Chief Executive would accept another nomination but emphasized he was expressing only a personal opinion without any direct information on Mr. Roosevelt's intentions.

The conference lasted 45 minutes. Hannegan described it as a "purely social visit." Asked "do you still stick by your New York speech?" he replied promptly "no comment."

AT THE REQUEST OF THE GROUND FORCES MEDIUM MITCHELL BOMBERS HIT GERMAN ARMOR CONCENTRATION NEAR CAEN, AND THE FLIERS WATCHED WARSHIP SHELLS CRASH INTO THE CITY. "IT LOOKED LIKE ABSOLUTE HELL, SCARCELY POSSIBLE FOR LIFE TO EXIST THERE," COMMENTED A NAVIGATOR.

OTHER TARGETS INCLUDED GERMAN TROOP CONCENTRATIONS IN THE CHERBOURG BATTLE AREA, NAZI FUEL DUMPS IN THE ANDAIN FOREST. AND THE DOMFRONT. ST. MARTIN AND MEZIDON RAIL YARDS.

TWO BIG FORMATIONS OF FIGHTER BOMBERS PENETRATED A HUNDRED MILES SOUTH OF THE FRONT TO HIT A BRIDGE OVER THE LOIRE RIVER AT LA POSSONNEIRE, AN ARTERY FROM SOUTHERN FRANCE, WHERE POTENTIAL REINFORCEMENTS FOR THE GERMANS IN THE INVASION AREA ARE STATIONED.

IN ADDITION TO SUPPLIES COMING ACROSS THE CHANNEL BY SEA TRAFFIC, THE NINTH AIR FORCE USED FIVE NEW LANDING STRIPS AND OPEN FIELDS TO LAND FLEETS OF TRANSPORTS CARRYING SUPPLIES AND GLIDERS BEARING TECHNICIANS.

GERMAN AIR OPPOSITION CONTINUED SPORADIC AND SPOTTY, ALTHOUGH ALLIED PILOTS YESTERDAY REPORTED SOME OF THE HEAVIEST FLAK THEY HAVE EVER ENCOUNTERED OVER EUROPE.

SUCCESS OF THE WHOLE NORMANDY INVASION WAS DEPENDENT UPON GREAT ALLIED SUPERIORITY, IT WAS STATED AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, AND THE BOMBARDMENT HAD HAD A "MARVELOUS" DELAYING ACTION ON GERMAN RESERVES, DESPITE FREQUENT BAD WEATHER WHICH HAS BEEN THE GERMANS ONLY OPPORTUNITY TO MOVE FORCES UNHARRASSED.

WHILE THE RAF'S MEDIUM AND LIGHT BOMBERS TOOK UP THE NIGHT ASSAULT ON THE INVASION BATTLE AREA OTHER CONTINGENTS HIT, WITHOUT LOSS, WHAT WAS ANNOUNCED ONLY AS OBJECTIVES IN WESTERN GERMANY.

IN ADDITION TO PREVIOUS FAR-FLUNG ATTACKS, AMERICAN MUSTANGS BOMBED BRIDGES AT VILLEDIEU AND AVRANCHES, BLEW UP A RAILROAD STATION AT ST.SEVER-CALVADOS, AND STRAFED BRIDGES, A CONVOY, A VIADUCT AND RAILROAD YARD AROUND ST.LO.

A THUNDERBOLT GROUP LET BY COL.MARTIN MAGOFFIN, DEARWOOD, MINN., PENETRATING AS FAR SOUTH AS TOURS WITHOUT MEETING A GERMAN PLANE, DESTROYED A LARGE FACTORY, 42 TRUCKS AND OTHER VEHICLES.

"FIRES WERE BURNING ALL OVER THAT PART OF FRANCE AND THE RAILROAD TRACKS WERE RIBBONS OF FLAMES FOR MILES," SAID CAPT.ROBERT GOODNIGHT, TWIN FALLS, IDAHO.

LT.WILLIAM ANDERSON, 7915 VERNON AVE., CHICAGO, SAID THAT "WHEN THE TRAINS BLEW UP IT WAS LIKE PEOPLE THROWING UP WHEELS AND PIECES OF B[illegible] AT US."

RAF BOMBERS BASED IN ITALY STRUCK THE MUNICH AREA DURING THE NIGHT A FEW HOURS AFTER BETWEEN 500 AND 750 AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS FROM ITA[illegible] HAMMERED TWO AIRCRAFT PLANTS IN THE SAME REGION.

NIGHT OPERATIONS BY RAF PLANES BASED IN GREAT BRITAIN INCLUDED BOMBING OF THE MEZIDON RAILWAY YARDS 20 MILES SOUTH OF CAEN BY MOSQUI[illegible] IN AN EFFORT TO HAMPER MOVEMENT OF GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS TO THE NORMANDY BATTLE FRONT, AND ATTACKS ON GERMAN AIRBASES BY RAF INTRUDERS NO BRITISH-BASED HEAVY BOMBERS WERE OUT LAST NIGHT, HOWEVER.

JUN 15 1944

A FIERCE GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACK WAS MADE ON BRITISH FORCES IN NEWLY-CAPTURED TROARN IN AN ATTEMPT TO BLUNT OR CUT OFF A MONTGOMERY PINCERS COMING TO FLANK CAEN ON THE EAST.

IT WAS THE OLD MONTGOMERY TACTIC OF ATTACKING ON THE FLANKS TO CUT OFF A LARGE FORCE OF GERMANS AND TAKE THEM PRISONER OR DESTROY THEM RATHER THAN PUSH THEM BACK.

ON THE WESTERN END OF THE ALLIED BEACHHEAD, NOW ENLARGED TO A 100-MILE FIGHTING FRONT, AMERICANS USED ARMORED FORCES TO BREAK A DEADLOCK AT CARENTAN, SIX MILES FROM THE SEA. THE GERMAN RADIO ACKNOWLEDGED A NAZI WITHDRAWAL WEST AND NORTH OF CARENTAN "TO SPARE GERMAN LIVES."

THIS SEVERAL-MILE WITHDRAWAL WOULD PUT AMERICANS BETWEEN HALF AND TWO THIRDS OF THE WAY ACROSS THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA AT ITS NARROWEST POINT.

EXPANDING ALLIED PRESSURE HAS IN THREE DAYS ENLARGED THE LENGTH OF THE BATTLEFRONT FROM 60 MILES TO NEARLY 100, FORCING THE NAZI DEFENDERS TO SPREAD THEIR FORCES OVER A GREATER AREA.

JUN 15 1944

AMERICAN TROOPS WHO PLUNGED THROUGH THE CERISSY FOREST PUSHED SOUTHWEST SEVERAL MILES TOWARD THE IMPORTANT GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS HUB OF ST.LO. GERMAN BROADCASTS ACKNOWLEDGED TWO ADVANCES IN THAT AREA AS ALLIED FORCES ATTEMPTED TO THROW A PINCERS AROUND THE TOWN.

THE GERMAN RADIO SAID ST.LO WAS A MASS OF FLAMING RUBBLE FROM ALLIED AIR BOMBARDMENT.

GEN.SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY, ALLIED GROUND COMMANDER, THREW BRITISH TANKS INTO THE ATTACK ON THE GERMAN FLANK SOUTH OF TILLY-SUR-SEULLES AND TODAY'S COMMUNIQUE, NO.17, SAID THE BLOW HAD A "GREAT EFFECT," ALTHOUGH THE EXACT EXTENT OF THE DRIVE WAS NOT REVEALED.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS SAID THE GERMANS WERE EXPENDING A LARGE NUMBER OF SOLDIERS IN A FURIOUS ASSAULT ON TROARN, EAST OF CAEN.

TROARN IS THE LEFT ARM OF A MONTGOMERY PINCERS MOVEMENT CLOSING IN ON CAEN. THE RIGHT ARM IS THE DOUBLE BLOW FROM BELOW TILLY-SUR-SEULLES AND THE CAUMONT AND VILLERS-BOCAGE ROADS.

IN A BERLIN BROADCAST, THE GERMAN TRANSOCEAN AGENCY DECLARED THAT NAZI FORCES BROKE THROUGH AMERICAN LINES AND INTO CARENTAN LATE TUESDAY BUT "MONTGOMERY HASTILY ORDERED HEAVY BRITISH WARSHIPS TO THE SUPPORT, WHICH, WITH ALL THEIR GUNS, SHELLED THE CARENTAN AREA, WHEREUPON THE GERMANS WITHDREW AGAIN TO HILL POSITIONS MORE ADVANTAGEOUS FOR DEFENSE."

TRANSOCEAN SAID THE "SITUATION CHANGES HOURLY" IN THE CARENTAN AREA AS ATTACKING AMERICAN FORCES TRY TO "WIDEN THEIR BRIDGEHEAD TOWARD THE SOUTH AND WEST."

JUN 15 1944

ONLY A MATTER OF HOURS AFTER GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER HAD REPORTED TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT THAT EVENTUALLY THE "NAZIS WILL BE FORCED TO FIGHT THROUGHOUT THE PERIMETER OF THEIR STRONGHOLD," THE VICHY RADIO QUOTED A BERLIN MILITARY SPOKESMAN AS SAYING IMPORTANT ALLIED SHIPPING HAD BEEN SIGHTED IN THE BAY OF BISCAY OFF SOUTHWESTERN FRANCE NEAR THE SPANISH COAST.

THERE WAS NO ALLIED REPORT OF ANY SHIPPING IN THAT AREA, SOME 400 MILES FROM THE NORMANDY FIGHTING.

GAINS IN NORMANDY ANNOUNCED IN LAST NIGHT'S SUPREME HEADQUARTERS COMMUNIQUE STRETCHED THE FIGHTING FRONT TO 85 OR 90 MILES AND GAVE THE ALLIES A FOOTHOLD IN FRANCE RANGING BETWEEN 600 AND 700 SQUARE MILES.

AS THE INVASION OF EUROPE WENT INTO ITS EIGHTH DAY, GENERAL EISENHOWER INFORMED HIS COMMANDERS AND TROOPS THAT "THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN THE FIRST SEVEN DAYS OF THE CAMPAIGN HAVE EXCEEDED MY BRIGHTEST HOPES XXX I TRULY CONGRATULATE YOU."

THE EVENING COMMUNIQUE SAID MORE THAN 10,000 PRISONERS WERE TAKEN IN THE FIRST WEEK.

ALTHOUGH FIELD DISPATCHES YESTERDAY REPORTED THE CAPTURE OF MONTEBOURG, 14 MILES SOUTHEAST OF CHERBOURG, AND SOME AXIS BROADCASTS ADMITTED ITS FALL, ONE GERMAN REPORT LAST NIGHT SAID THE NAZIS HAD RECAPTURED THE CITY.

A TRANSOCEAN BROADCAST FROM BERLIN DECLARED "PARTICULARLY VIOLENT FIGHTING" HAD BEEN IN PROGRESS FOR 24 HOURS NEAR BOTH MONTEBOURG AND AMERICAN-CAPTURED CARENTAN TO THE SOUTH. TRANSOCEAN CLAIMED THE "INITIATIVE WAS RATHER WITH THE GERMANS."

THE BEST INFORMATION HERE WAS THAT THIS GERMAN RESISTANCE WAS COMING FROM LOCAL ENEMY RESERVES, HURLED INTO A DESPERATE ELEVENTH HOUR EFFORT TO BLOCK THE UPHILL ALLIED DRIVE TO CHERBOURG.

THE AMERICAN FOURTH DIVISION WAS SAID LAST NIGHT TO HAVE BROADENED ITS ASSAULT FRONT FROM QUINEVILLE ON THE COAST TO CAPTURED LE HAM, TWO AND ONE-HALF MILES SOUTHWEST OF MONTEBOURG AND EIGHT MILES INLAND. YANKEE PATROLS PENETRATED THE OUTSKIRTS OF VALOGNES, 10 MILES FROM CHERBOURG.

BUT THEN THE GERMANS DROVE ADVANCE PATROLS BACK SOME THREE MILES, AND THE SITUATION IN THAT AREA WAS DESCRIBED AS OBSCURE. THE DEEPEST ALLIED PENETRATION INLAND TONIGHT APPEARED TO BE 20 MILES.

THE U.S. FOURTH DIVISION BATTLING AT AND NEAR MONTEBOURG ON THE BACKDOOR APPROACH TO CHERBOURG WAS FORCED BACK ON THE COASTAL ROAD LEADING NORTH, BUT ADVANCED SLIGHTLY SOUTHWEST OF MONTEBOURG IN GRIM FIGHTING.

JUN 15 1944

OTHER AMERICANS SMASHED FORWARD IN A PUSH BEYOND CARENTAN AIMED AT CHOKING OFF THE TOP OF CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

ALTHOUGH THE GERMANS FLUNG IN HEAVY ARMORED ATTACKS BETWEEN TROARN AND CAUMONT, 20 MILES SOUTHWEST OF CAEN, 21ST ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS SAID THE NAZIS STILL HAD NOT MOUNTED A GENERAL COUNTERATTACK.

LONDON, THURSDAY, JUNE 15-(AP)-ALLIED TROOPS ALREADY WERE MOVING ONTO THE ASSAULT BEACHES OF NORMANDY WHEN GEN. CHARLES DE GAULLE WITHDREW ALL BUT A HANDFUL OF THE FIGHTING FRENCH OFFICERS WHO HAD BEEN COUNTED UPON BY THE ALLIED SUPREME COMMAND TO ACT AS LIAISON OFFICERS WITH THE FRENCH PEOPLE TO HELP TAKE OVER CIVIL ADMINISTRATION, IT WAS LEARNED TODAY.

A DE GAULLE PRESS ATTACHE SAID, "WE CANCELLED NO SUCH AGREEMENT FOR WE NEVER SIGNED SUCH AN AGREEMENT," BUT QUALIFIED ALLIED SOURCES HAVE THIS PICTURE:

ANGERED BY NON-RECOGNITION OF HIS NATIONAL COMMITTEE AS THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE AND REFUSAL OF THE SUPREME COMMAND TO LET HIM TAKE OVER THE ISSUING OF RADIO DIRECTIONS TO THE FRENCH PEOPLE ON D-DAY, DE GAULLE CANCELLED ARRANGEMENTS WHICH HAD BEEN MADE AFTER WEEKS OF PLANNING BETWEEN THE SUPREME HEADQUARTERS CIVIL AFFAIRS BRANCH AND HIS REPRESENTATIVE, BRIG.GEN.JOSEPH PIERRE KOENIG, ASSISTANT CHIEF OF THE FIGHTING FRENCH GENERAL STAFF AND LIAISON MAN WITH THE ALLIES.

DE GAULLE PERMITTED ONLY A TOKEN FORCE OF 20 OUT OF THE HUNDREDS OF TRAINED FRENCH OFFICERS WHO WERE READY TO GO WITH THE TROOPS.

CONSEQUENTLY, IF FRANCE WERE FREED TOMORROW, THERE WOULD BE NO MACHINERY OUTSIDE OF THE ALLIED MILITARY TO DEAL WITH THE CIVILIAN POPULATION.

AS THESE QUALIFIED SOURCES VIEWED IT, THE DIFFICULTY STARTED WITH

THE ROOSEVELT POLICY OF NON-RECOGNITION OF THE DE GAULLE GROUP AS THE GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE, COUPLED WITH LACK OF A DIRECTIVE TO GEN. DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER CONCERNING RELATIONS WITH THE FRENCH.

THUS, EISENHOWER AS SUPREME COMMANDER WAS OBLIGED TO GET ALONG AS BEST HE COULD, AND HIS CIVIL AFFAIRS DEPARTMENT WORKED OUT A PLAN WITH GENERAL KOENIG WHEREBY DE GAULLE'S MEN WOULD BE ENTRUSTED WITH CIVIL ADMINISTRATION IN FRANCE, WITH A FREE HAND AS LONG AS THIS DID NOT INTEREFERE WITH MILITARY OPERATIONS. FRENCH OFFICERS WERE GIVEN LIAISON TRAINING ON THIS BASIS.

JUN 15 1944

EXCEPT THAT NO RECOGNITION WAS GIVEN TO THE DE GAULLE NATIONAL COMMITTEE AS A GOVERNMENT, THE ARRANGEMENT WAS SIMILAR TO ONE MADE IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR.

BECAUSE OF THE RESTRICTIONS ON COMMUNICATIONS FROM BRITAIN, GENERAL KOENIG HAD TO GO ABOUT THIS ON HIS OWN AUTHORITY AND WAS NOT IN CONTACT WITH DE GAULLE.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS OFFERED TO TRANSMIT IN MILITARY CODE KOENIG'S MESSAGES TO DE GAULLE IN ALGIERS PRIOR TO D-DAY, BUT DE GAULLE SAID THAT THEY COULD BE SENT ONLY IN THE FRENCH CODE, WHICH IS NOT KNOWN TO SUPREME HEADQUARTERS AND CONSEQUENTLY WAS NOT PERMITTED.

THUS THERE WAS NO DIRECT CONTACT BETWEEN KOENIG AND DE GAULLE UNTIL DE GAULLE ARRIVED IN LONDON.

MAKING LITTLE PROGRESS IN HIS DEMANDS FOR FULL RECOGNITION AS A GOVERNMENT FOR FRANCE, AND ANGERED OVER GENERAL EISENHOWER'S BROAD AUTHORITY IN DEALING WITH FRANCE, DE GAULLE DECLINED TO LET HIS OFFICERS GO THROUGH WITH THE ARRANGED PLANS.

AT PRESENT THIS MAKES LITTLE DIFFERENCE, BECAUSE THE BEACHHEAD AREA IS SO SMALL THAT IT IS ALL IN OPERATIONAL TERRITORY AND UNDER MILITARY LAW FROM COMMANDERS ON THE SPOT.

UNLESS THE DEALOCK IS BROKEN SOON, HOWEVER, THE MILITARY LEADERS WILL BE IN THE POSITION OF HAVING UNEXPECTEDLY TO PROVIDE THOUSANDS OF MEN TO DEAL WITH CIVIL PROBLEMS BEHIND THE LINES.

THIS IS THE SITUATION AS DE GAULLE HIMSELF VISITS THE FRENCH BEACHHEAD.

JUN 15 1944

RUMORS THAT DE GAULLE HAD ORDERED THE FRENCH UNDERGROUND FORCES NOT TO ATTACK WERE DECLARED BY THE HIGHEST OFFICIALS TO BE FALSE.

WITH U.S. TROOPS IN FRANCE, JUNE 14-(AP)-TANK-SUPPORTED AMERICAN INFANTRYMEN BEAT BACK AN ATTACK ATTACK ON CARENTAN TODAY AND THEN PUSHED ON THEMSELVES IN HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING AND GAINED CONTROL OF HIGH GROUND SOUTH OF THE STRATEGIC TOWN.

TANKS WERE BROUGHT UP AND FIRED POINT BLANK UPON ATTACKING GERMAN PARACHUTE TROOPS AT A CRUCIAL STAGE OF THE STRUGGLE.

THE GERMANS LAUNCHED THEIR ATTACK ALONG THE VIRE RIVER. THEIR DRIVE WAS AIMED AT SPLITTING THE AMERICAN BRIDGEHEAD AND ISOLATING THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA FROM BRIDGEHEAD FORCES EAST OF THE VIRE.

AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS FOUGHT A BITTER BATTLE TO CAPTURE CARENTAN AND THERE THEY MET ELITE NAZI PARACHUTE UNITS RUSHED INTO THE LINE IN A DESPERATE EFFORT TO HALT CONSOLIDATION OF THE ALLIED BEACH FRONTS.

INFANTRYMEN WERE HAVING A HARD TIME DIGGING THE ENEMY FROM DUGOUTS AND SLIT TRENCHES WHEN THE TANKS ROLLED UP ALONG THE HEDGEROWS AND BEGAN BLASTING THEM OUT.

ON OTHER SECTORS OF THE BEACHHEAD FRONT AMERICAN TROOPS EITHER CONSOLIDATED THEIR POSITIONS OR MADE FURTHER GAINS. IN NO PLACE WERE THEY PUSHED BACK.

ON THE PENINSULA NORTH OF CARENTAN, ACCORDING TO REPORTS RECEIVED HERE, DOUGHBOYS WERE STILL FIGHTING FOR MONTEBOURG, 14 MILES FROM CHERBOURG. ADVANCED AMERICAN ELEMENTS ONCE ENTERED THE TOWN AND APPARENTLY HAD CLEARED. THEY WITHDREW TO REORGANIZE AND WHEN THEY RETURNED THEY FOUND THE GERMANS HAD SWARMED IN AND BITTER FIGHTING CONTINUED.

WITH A FLYING JEEP SQUADRON IN FRANCE, JUNE 14-(AP)-"LIL OLE RED" ISN'T MUCH TO LOOK AT BUT SHE'S GRACEFUL, TRIM AND EFFICIENT AND THE GERMANS HATE THE SIGHT OF HER FLOATING LAZILY AND IMPUDENTLY ABOVE THEM ON THE BEACHHEAD.

JUN 15 1944

"LIL OLE RED" IS A TWO-BIT SIZED CUB OBSERVATION PLANE. ON HER SIDE IS PAINTED A PICTURE OF A CURVACEOUS BEAUTY, A SORT OF GOOD LUCK GIRL OF THIS FLYING JEEP SQUADRON WHICH HAS BEEN HELPING TO KNOCK OUT THE ENEMY'S ARTILLERY.

THE FRAGILE CRAFT BELONGS TO LT.JOE FROST, PASCAGOULA, MISS., WHO NAMED HER AFTER HIS GIRL FRIEND BACK HOME. SO FAR THE NAME HAS BEEN LUCKY.

"WHEN THE KRAUTS STARTED BOUNCING ME AROUND WITH FLAK THE OTHER DAY," FROST SAID, "I THOUGHT I'D HAVE TO GET A 'LIL OLE RED' THE SECOND, BUT WE CAME THROUGH OKAY."

"LIL OLE RED" WAS ON RECONNAISANCE OVER THE BEACHHEAD ON D-DAY, A FEW HOURS AFTER ASSAULT TROOPS LANDED. THERE ARE OTHERS IN OPERATION NOW, BUT "RED" WAS THE FIRST TO TAKE TO THE AIR WHEN THE WHOLE BEACHHEAD WAS A FRONT LINE.

THOSE WITH BRYANT ARE FROST, LT.ROBERT HARPER, ALEXANDRIA, LA., LT.OSCAR B.RICH, FOLEY, ALA., AND LT.RUDY WENTLAND, 2717 NORTH SAWYER, CHICAGO.

THEY ARE MORE OR LESS A GYPSY OUTFIT, MOVING ABOUT AS THE ARTILLERY MOVES, KEEPING ON THE GO SO THE ENEMY DOESN'T LOCATE THEIR LANDING FIELDS, WHICH ARE NOTHING MORE THAN A STRIP OF PASTURE OR A PATH FLATTENED THROUGH A WHEATFIELD.

THEY FLY ALMOST FROM DAWN TO DUSK AND SEEM TO HOVER OVER THE ENEMY LINES WHILE OBSERVERS CHECK ON FLASHES OF THE ENEMY GUNS AND SPOT TARGETS FOR ARTILLERY. THEY TRULY BECOME THE "EYES OF THE ARTILLERY" IN THIS FLAT COUNTRY WHERE OBSERVATION IS EXTREMELY DIFFICULT.

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 12-(DELAYED)-(AP)-NOTES FROM A BATTLE DIARY:

GERMAN PRISONERS ON THE WESTERN FRONT HAVE TO BE WATCHED ALMOST AS CAREFULLY AS DAPANESE IN THE PACIFIC.

THREE BRITISH SOLDIERS AND A PHOTOGRAPHER WERE STANDING IN A DOORWAY WATCHING A COLUMN OF NAZI CAPTIVES PASSING THRO GH A VILLAGE LATE YESTERDAY. SUDDENLY THERE WAS A VIOLENT EXPLOSION. ALL FOUR WERE KILLED. ONE OF THE GERMAN PRISONERS HAD TOSSED A HAND GRENADE WHICH HE HAD SOMEHOW MANAGED TO HIDE.

--DASH--

HUBERT LUDWIG WAS 20, WITH BLOND HAIR AND SOUR BLUE EYES. ON THE LEFT SLEEVE OF HIS ARMY BLOUSE WAS A SILVER-BRAID "ADOLF HITLER" INSIGNIA, AND CHAIN LIGHTNING TABS ADORNED HIS COLLAR.

COLDLY AND VENOMOUSLY, LUDWIG HATED HIS CAPTORS. UNLIKE OTHER PRISONERS OF WAR, WHO SNAPPED ERECT WITH THEIR ARMS STIFF AT THEIR SIDES WHEN CALLED TO ATTENTION, LUDWIG SPRAWLED IN THE GRASS AND SCOWLED AT THE ALLIED INTERROGATING OFFICER.

HE HAD SERVED THREE MONTHS, HE TOLD US, ON HITLER'S GUARD OF HONOR OUTSIDE THE BERLIN REICHSCHANCELLERY. NOW HE WORE THE BLUE-GREY UNIFORM OF THE 12TH PANZER DIVISION, KNOWN AS THE HITLER JUGEND, WHICH WAS FORMED LAST SUMMER OF GROWNUP HITLER YOUTH.

WILLINGLY HE TALKED ABOUT HIMSELF, SPOUTING A TORRENT OF WORDS ON THE LEGEND OF THE GERMAN MASTER RACE.

JUN 15 1944

"DID YOU KNOW THE ALLIES WERE COMING?" I ASKED.

"JA," HE REPLIED.

"WHAT DID YOU DO ABOUT IT," I INQUIRED.

"THE WAR," HE SNAPPED ANGRILY, "IS NOT OVER YET."

FROM A SMALL BOY TO HULKING MANHOOD--HE IS 6 FEET, TWO INCHES TALL WITH HAMLIKE FISTS AND BULGING SHOULDER MUSCLES--LUDWIG HAD LIVED THE HITLER DREAM. ALL THESE YEARS HE HAD BEEN SCHOOLED IN THE MYTH OF GERMAN "SUPERMEN."

ON D-DAY LUDWIG SAW ACTION FOR FIVE MINUTES. THEN HE CAME OUT WITH A WHITE FLAG.

WITH THE SECOND DIVISION IN FRANCE, JUNE 12-(DELAYED)-(AP)-AS SOON AS THE SECOND INFANTRY DIVISION HIT THE BEACHHEAD THE BOYS WERE SAYING "THAT'S A RED HOT DIVISION--THEY LOOK GOOD."

THEY DID LOOK GOOD GOING INTO THE LINE. THEY MOVED UP BRISKLY, SOME OF THEM AT A HALF TROT AS THOUGH THEY COULDN'T GET INTO ACTION

FAST ENOUGH. THEY WERE CARRYING WITH THEM THE FINE TRADITION THE DIVISION HAD IN THE LAST WORLD WAR WHEN WITH THE FIRST INFANTRY DIVISION IT SHARED HONORS OF FIGHTING EACH MAJOR ENGAGEMENT.

THE MEN OF THE SECOND CAME IN BEHIND THE FIRST ON THE INITIAL ASSAULT IN THE CENTRAL BEACHHEAD SECTOR AND IMMEDIATELY WENT INTO ACTION AS SNIPERS TOOK SHOTS AT THEM.

JUN 15 1944

AS IT MOVED INTO LINE THE SECOND DIVISION HAD ITS SHAKE-DOWN BATTLE IN THE CAPTURE OF TREVIERES, ONE OF THE TOUGHEST ENEMY STRONGPOINTS ON THE BEACHHEAD.

THE GERMANS HAD FORTIFIED POSITIONS AT THE EDGE OF TOWN AND HAD SNIPERS IN THE BUILDINGS.

THE SECOND HIT TREVIERES THE THIRD DAY AFTER IT GOT INTO THE LINE. IT WAS A STUMBLING BLOCK FOR SEVERAL HOURS FOR THE GREEN TROOPS, BUT THEN UNITS BY-PASSED THE TOWN AND LEFT ONE UNIT BEHIND TO CLEAN UP THE OPPOSITION AFTER ARTILLERY HAD RAKED THE GRAY STONE BUILDINGS.

THE COMMANDING GENERAL OF THE SECOND HAD SAID HIS TROOPS WOULD BE THROUGH THE CERISY FOREST BY SATURDAY NIGHT. THE GENERAL OF THE DIVISION ON HIS LEFT FLANK--THEY WERE OLD RIVALS IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR--SHOOK HIS HEAD AND SAID "THEY MAY BE ABLE TO DO IT BUT I DOUBT IT."

BUT NEXT MORNING THE SECOND HAD PLOWED FORWARD TO ITS OBJECTIVE IN ONE OF THE SWIFTEST ADVANCES FROM THE BEACHHEAD.

THIS DIVISION OF THE REGULAR ARMY WAS STATIONED FOR A LONG TIME AT SAN ANTONIO, TEX., DURING PEACE TIME AND CAME TO REGARD SAN ANTONIO AS ITS HOME TOWN. IT BECAME AN EXPERIMENTAL DIVISION BECAUSE IT IS ONE OF THE FEW U.S. DIVISIONS WITH ALL UNITS ASSEMBLED AT ONE PLACE.

"WE HAD INFANTRY TRAINING THE HARD WAY," THE GENERAL SAID. "AND THEN WE HAD TRAINING AS AIR-BORNE TROOPS. WE LEFT TEXAS WITH THE TEMPERATURE AT 75 DEGREES ABOVE FREEZING AND WENT TO CAMP MC COY, WIS., FOR SKI TRAINING WHERE THE TEMPERATURE WAS 45 DEGREES BELOW."

SHIPPED TO ENGLAND, THE SECOND WENT THROUGH INTENSIVE TRAINING AND THEN LOADED FOR INVASION. AND IT HAS BEEN UPHOLDING THE REPUTATION THE DIVISION WON IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR.

BOX 401 NE. AVE., UNIONTOWN, PA.

JUN 15 1944

BACH IS LIAISON OFFICER AND DOES A LOT OF DRIVING ABOUT THE COUNTRYSIDE BETWEEN UNITS.

"I HAVE SEEN SOME OF THE BEST LOOKING HORSES I EVER SAW," BACH SAID. "IT REMINDS ME OF KENTUCKY TO DRIVE ALONG THE LANES AND SEE THOROUGHBREDS IN THE FIELDS."

BACH WORKED WITH WARREN WRIGHT FOR A TIME AFTER LEAVING SCHOOL AND LEARNED TO KNOW GOOD HORSEFLESH WHEN HE SEES IT.

THE GERMANS DID NOT TAKE THE HORSES WITH THEM AND, IN FACT, THEY LEFT BEHIND A GOOD MANY FINE ARTILLERY HORSES. SOME OF THE ARMY'S TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS ARE BEING SOLVED BY OFFICERS USING THESE ANIMALS AS SADDLE HORSES.

ABOARD A U.S.NINTH AIR FORCE TROOP CARRIER, JUNE 14-(AP)-WE ARE ON THE WAY HOME FROM FRANCE WITH 18 WOUNDED, INCLUDING A GERMAN SNIPER STARING SILENTLY FROM HIS THIRD TIER LITTER, AND ANOTHER GERMAN WITH A WOUNDED FOOT.

THE OTHER 16 ARE AMERICANS.

A YOUNG INFANTRY LIEUTENANT FROM VALIFORNIA LOOKS UP FROM HIS STRETCHER. "LOZS OF STORIES BACK THERE," HE SAYS FROM HIS BLOOD-BLACKENED LIPS. SHRAPNEL GOT HIM.

"DID WE TAKE ST.LO YET?" ASKED A SERGEANT WHO USED TO BE A PHOTO-ENGRAVER IN NEW YORK.

JUN 15 1944

A SERGEANT FROM MINNESOTA LEANED OUT TO TALK WITH A PRIVATE FROM FLORIDA.

"I'M FROM THE FIRST DIVISION. SHRAPNEL GOT ME IN THE ARM AND HERE," HE SAID, POINTING TO HIS BACK. "AND THEN ONE OF THEM DAMNED SNIPERS GOT ME IN THE ARM."

HE GLARED AT THE GERMAN. "HOW COME THEY TAKE HIM PRISONER? WE TOOK SOME -- BUT IF I HAD TO DO IT AGAIN..."

THE SULLEN GERMAN UNDERSTOOD. MAJ.HERMAN FINKELSTEIN, WILLIAMSPORT, PA., WAS TALKING WITH HIM, IN ENGLISH, BEFORE THE OTHERS WERE PUT ABOARD.

TECHNICIAN WILFRED BRAND, 3249 CARROL AVE., CHICAGO, ILL., COPIED INFORMATION FROM THE TAG ON AN INFANTRY SERGEANT FROM MISSISSIPPI. "SHRAPNEL IN ARM AND BACK," HE WRITES.

OTHER MEN SLEPT SOUNDLY AS CAPT.C.W.STEVENSON, 535 STRATFORD AVE., AKRON, OHIO, KEPT THE BIG TWIN-ENGINE DAKOTA FLOWING SMOOT[illegible]. TH AIR WASN'T BUMPY.

NAVIGATOR LT.KENNETH OKESON, WAKEFIELD, NEB., STOOD EATING HIS BREAKFAST OF A CHOCOLATE BAR.

ON THE BEACHHEAD. MOST OF THE CASES WERE EXTREMITY WOUNDS OF THE LEGS AND ARMS, MANY OF THEM SUSTAINED IN THE FIGHTING BACK TOWARD ST.LO. AND SOME PATIENTS WERE CIVILIANS, INCLUDING A 12-YEAR-OLD FRENCH GIRL WITH A SHRAPNEL WOUND IN THE HIP. AN EIGHT-MONTHS-OLD BABY WAS TREATED THERE FOR A SHRAPNEL WOUND IN THE FOOT. JUN 15 1944

CAPT.A.M.LEIGH, 20814 BRANTLEY ROAD, CLEVELAND, O., POURED HIS CANTEEN CUP FULL OF COFFEE AND HANDED IT TO ME FOR BREAKFAST.

MAJ.LAWRENCE LAVALLE, 45 LENOX ROAD, BROOKLYN, N.Y., SHOWED ME THE SURGERY TENT. THREE PAIRS OF WOODEN HORSES WERE THE OPERATING TABLES, SUPPORTING THE STRETCHERS ON WHICH THE PATIENTS LIE. LAVALLE AND MAJ. CHARLES RICHARDSON, 506 PONTIAC ST., ROCHESTER, IND., MOVED IN LAST NIGHT TO GIVE THE TWO CAPTAINS HELP AND RELIEF.

NOT FAR AWAY LT.J.G.WILLIAMSON, 1352 SOUTH 34TH ST., BIRMINGHAM, ALA. DIRECTED 500 TO 600 GERMAN PRISONERS DIGGING GRAVES IN A CEMETERY.

THE PRISONERS FILED BY CORP.J.C.BEST, 315 LEWIS ST., MOSCOW, IDAHO, AND PVT.FRANK PFEIFFER, 148 MAIN ST., BATH, PA., AND SILENTLY RECEIVED "K" RATIONS FOR BREAKFAST.

SOME OF THE PRISONERS LOOKED LIKE EIGHTH GRADERS, BUT BEST SAID "DON'T LET THEM FOOL YOU. THEY CAN SHOOT. THEY'D JUST AS SOON KILL YOU AS LOOK AT YOU." JUN 15 1944

FROM A DUGOUT OVERLOOKING THE BEACH CAME SOME SWING MUSIC. SGT. EDWARD SUMMERS, WARSAW, IND., WAS GETTING JIVE FROM HIS WALKIE-TALKIE. HE WAS IN CHARGE OF A 50-MILLIMETER ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN, AND HIS CREW HAD NO SIMPLE FOXHOLE. Big Bombers Believed to Have Flown at Altitude of 30,000 Feet.

JAPS ADMIT ATTACK

Claim Planes Were Intercepted and Repulsed with Six Shot Down.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, June 15.—America's new Super Fortresses bombed Japan's homeland today and the Tokyo radio, acknowledging attacks, said industrial areas of Moji and Shimonoseki were hit.

In Congress, Rep. Starnes (D-Ala) told his colleagues he had information there was "great destruction" in Tokyo. There was no confirmation of Starnes' report from the War department which did not disclose targets.

500 Miles from Tokyo

Moji is a city on Kyushu, southernmost of the main Japanese islands. Shimonoseki is on Honshu island just across a strait from Kyushu. They are about 500 miles, airline, from Tokyo.

An Imperial Japanese communique estimated the number of raiding planes at 20 and made the usual claims that they were intercepted and "repulsed." It said several were shot down and Domei, Japanese news agency, said six were shot down.

The Japanese said both B-29 Super Fortresses and B-24 Liberators were among the American planes.

Here, the only official information available late tonight was that attacks were carried out by B-29's flying from bases in the China-India-Burma theater.

The War department disclosed at 1:39 p. m., Eastern War Time, that the long-secret flying giants had gone into action. The announcement said:

"B-29 Super Fortresses of the United States Army Air Forces 20th bomber command bombed Japan today."

To this was added some time later that the planes flew to the attack from the China-India-Burma theater.

Tokyo Believed Target

Then Rep. Starnes (D-Ala) arose in the House to tell his colleagues that the target of the raid was Tokyo proper. A good source informed him, he said, that a large number of American planes were causing "great destruction" in Tokyo.

It was the second American bombing of Japan, but the first announcement of action by the B-29s.

House and Senate sessions were halted for announcement of the news. Senator Pepper (D-Fla) told his colleagues he was "sure the heart-felt thanks of Congress and the country go out" to those who made the attack possible. Rep. Mahon (D-Tex) said the news vindicated the wisdom of Congress in furnishing funds for the giant new bombers.

Rep. Manasco (D-Ala) said the War department advised him the B-29's "bombed several large cities" on the mainland of Japan but there was no information yet on the results.

Manasco said the assumption could be that the reference was made to Tokyo and Yokohama.

Identified As B-29s

"It is now officially confirmed that American Super Fortresses flying from remote bases have successfully bombed Tokyo in a very heavy raid," Starnes told the House.

"It can be safely assumed that these were the new B-29s.

"It may be safely assumed that these planes approached Tokyo at an altitude of more than 30,000 feet and a speed of more than 300 miles per hour with the heaviest bomb loads and the greatest armaments of any airplanes in the world.

"This is a new day in warfare; and it will hasten the end of the war.

Starnes told newspapermen later that it could be assumed that if the bombers went over their targets at 30,000 feet "the losses were negligible, if any, since at that distance they were higher than a Zero can fly and were about out of range of anti-aircraft fire."

Secretary of War Stimson said the bombings represented the beginning of another phase of the war in the Pacific, and declared that no corner of the Japanese homeland is now safe from attack.

"The new long-range bombers have overcome the tremendous barriers of distance to bring the heart of Japan under the guns and the bombs of the army air forces," he said in a statement.

Powerful New Weapon

"These gaint battleships of the air are far superior to any plane our enemies have been able to develop. American engineering genius and American industrial skill have combined to create this powerful new weapon, capable of carrying the war to the most remote homeland of our enemies.

"They may well ponder when and where and how we shall use this mighty task force next.

"I congratulate the men who planned this action and manned the airplanes which carried it out. These pioneers have shortened our road to Tokyo."

Thus opened a new phase in the war—a phase in which fleets of the world's most formidable planes will strike at the enemy anywhere on earth at the command of one man—General Henry H. Arnold.

By hitting the Japanese war industries again and again and again, the great planes may change the whole complexion of the Pacific conflict and hasten the day of Japan's utter defeat.

Few details of this first mission by the new air giants—twice as heavy and one third larger than the Flying Fortress—were disclosed in a War department announcement. A communique said only: "B-29 Super Fortresses of the United States Army air forces 20th bomber command bombed Japan today."

JUN 16 1944

Can Be Repeated

A short time later, however, the War Department disclosed that planes participating in the attack came from the India-China-Burma theater. Unquestionably, if the high command so decides, the attack can be repeated with regularity.

By contrast, the Doolittle raid of April 18, 1942, was a one-shot affair. The Doolittle raiders, flying twin-engined medium bombers, took off from a carrier and most were forced to crash land in China. Some fell into the hands of the Japanese who announced they had executed eight of them.

Summing up in understatement the meaning of this new attack, General H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army air forces, said: "This employment of the B-29 makes possible the softening up attack on Japan very much earlier than would be possible with aircraft hitherto known to combat."

With today's announcement the War department disclosed some hitherto secret information about the B-29's and revealed the organization of the 20th air force as a roving, globe circling command headed by General Arnold.

It compared the 20th air force to a naval task force, likening it to "an aerial battle fleet, able to participate in combined operations, or to be assigned to strike wherever the need is greatest."

The plane has a wing span of 141.2 feet, is 98 feet long and 27 high. Performance details were withheld except that it "carries the greatest load faster, farther and higher than any other airplane in existence," and is speed compares favorably with that of the fastest fighter planes.

On the point of range, General Arnold said some months ago that the Super-Fortress would be capable of flying across the Atlantic and back non-stop.

Arnold's Statement

In comment on today's news, Arnold said:

"This Super-Fortress is not going to win the war by itself, nor has anyone thought it will do so. It will, however, like its predecessors, the B-17 and B-24, strike at the sources of enemy strength, and prepare the way for ultimate decision by our well-established team of land, sea and air forces."

Arnold's command of the 20th air force is separate from his post as chief of the air forces. As chief of staff of the 20th air force he has Brig Gen. Haywood Hansell, Jr., of Fort Monroe, Va.

Brig. Gen. Kenneth D. Wolfe of Riverdale, Calif., is commander of the 20th bomber command which is the unit of the 20th air force making the attack on Japan. Col. C. A. Horn of Liberty, N. Y., is chief of staff and Brig. Gen. John E. Upton of Tawas City, Mich., is operations officer of the 20th bomber command.

Create New Problem

General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, explained in a statement that the Super-Fortresses were placed under an air force of special organization because they create "a new problem in the application of military force."

"The attack on Japan by the Superfortress B-29 from distant bases introduces a new type of offensive against our enemy," said General Marshall.

"It also creates a new problem in the application of military force. Because of the enormous range and heavy bomb load of these Superfortresses, far exceeding that of previous strategic bombers, they can strike from many and remote bases at a single objective.

"The power of these new bombers is so great that the joint chiefs of staff felt that it would be uneconomical to confine the Superfortress organization to a single theater.

Under Centralized Control

"These bombers therefore will remain under the centralized control of the joint chiefs of staff with a single commander, General Arnold, acting as their agent in directing their bombing operations throughout the world.

"The planes will be treated as major task forces in the same manner as naval task forces are directed against specific objectives.

"This type of flexible, centralized control recognizes that very long-range bombardment is not a weapon for the air forces alone. Under the joint chiefs of staff, theater commanders will have a voice in its employment, insuring that maximum effectiveness will be obtained through missions which will contribute directly to the over-all strategy for the defeat of the enemies."

"It is now officially confirmed that American Superfortresses flying from remote bases have successfully bombed Tokyo in a very heavy raid," Starnes told the House.

"It can be safely assumed that these were the new B-29s.

"It may be safely assumed that these planes approached Tokyo at an altitude of more than 30,000 feet and a speed of more than 300 miles per hour with the heaviest bomb loads and the greatest armaments of any airplanes in the world.

"This is a new day in warfare; and it will hasten the end of the war."

Superfortresses Raid Japan From China-Burma Area

Washington, June 15 (AP)—The army threw a new fighting giant into the war in the Pacific today, turning loose the new B-29 Superfortress in an air attack on the Japanese homeland.

A terse War Department communique said:

"B-29 Superfortresses of the United States Army Air Forces 20th Bomber Command bombed Japan today."

It was the first fighting assignment for the sky mammoth, and the announcement also served to disclose for the first time the existence of the 20th Air Force (of which the 20th Bomber Command is a part), a world-roaming unit under the personal direction of Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces.

The War Department withheld details on the new bombing of Japan proper—first such attack on the mainland since the Doolittle raid of April 18, 1942.

No Word Given On Target Area

There was no immediate hint of what part of Nippon had been hit, nor from where the B-29s went into action.

However, the War Department subsequently disclosed that planes taking part in today's raid came from the India-China-Burma theater.

But Arnold said in connection with the announcement:

"This employment of the B-29 makes possible the softening-up attack of Japan very much earlier than would be possible with aircraft hitherto known to combat."

Arnold asserted:

"The Superfortress is not going to win the war by itself, nor has anyone thought it will do so. It will, however, like its predecessors, the B-17 and B-24, strike at the sources of enemy strength, and prepare the way for ultimate decision by our well-established team of land, sea and air forces.

B-17 And B-24 Now Medium Range Bombers

"In our new strategic thinking, the B-17 and the B-24 will now become medium instead of long-range bombers, and our B-25 and B-26 aircraft will become short-range bombers. These smaller planes will travel no less distances than they do now, but the B-29 will attack much greater distance and with more power.

"The employment of the B-29 is just beginning. It goes directly into battle from the production line, and we have a lot to learn before its full power may be developed. Consequently the frequency of its use will be carefully determined for some time. From this circumstance, let our enemies take what comfort they can while they can."

The 20th Air Force, said an army announcement, "will be in the nature of an aerial battle fleet, able to participate in combined operations, or to be assigned to strike where ever the need is greatest."

Commanders Of 20th Air Force Listed

Brig. Gen. Haywood Hansell, Jr., of Fort Monroe, Va., is chief of staff of the 20th Air Force. Brig. Gen. Kenneth D. Wolfe, of Riverside, Cal., heads the 20th Bomber Command which struck Japan today.

This command received the first B-29's that came from the factories and under Arnold's personal direction pioneered the principles of extreme long-range bombardment with training operations at Air Force bases in Kansas.

Wolfe's chief of staff is Col. C. A. Horn, of Liberty, N. Y., and his operations officer is Brig. Gen. John E. Upston, of Tawas City, Mich.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, in a statement on the attack made public by the War Department, said that the Superfortress introduced a new type of offensive against the enemy and "also creates a new problem in the application of military force."

Because of the enormous range and heavy bomb load of this newest bombardment plane, said Marshall, they can strike "from many and remote bases at a single objective."

Not Confined To Single Theater

Their power is so great, the Chief of Staff conitnued, that the (American) joint chiefs of staff decided it would be uneconomical to confine the Superfortress organization to a single theater, and "these bombers therefore will remain under the centralized control of the joint chiefs of staff with a single comamnder, General Arnold, acting as their agent in directing their bombing operations throughout the world."

"The planes will be treated as major task forces in the same manner as naval task forces are directed against specific objectives," Marshall said.

"This type of flexible, centralized control recognizes that very long-range bombardment is not a weapon for the air forces alone. Under the joint chiefs of staff, theater commanders will have a voice in its employment, insuring that maximum effectiveness will be obtained through missions which will contribute directly to the overall strategy for the defeat of the enemies."

Second U. S. Raid On Japan Homeland

It was the second American raid on the Japanese homeland. On April 18, 1942, when American military fortunes were at their lowest, the nation was electrified by word that Tokyo and other Japanese cities had been attacked from the air.

The first announcement then came from the Japanese and it was not until weeks later that it was learned that a force of Mitchell bombers under James H. Doolittle, then only a lieutenant colonel but now a lieutenant general commanding the Eighth Air Force in Britain, had carried out that adventurous mission.

The Mitchells flew from the aircraft carrier Hornet and, after crossing Japan, flew on to the continent. One landed in eastern Siberia, the others in China. Some of them came down in Japanese-held territory and a few of the flyers were taken captive. Months later the Japanese themselves made it known that some of these prisoners had been executed.

Disclosed along with details of the plane was the formation of the 20th Air Force, an organization headed by Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding general of the army air forces, and operating around the world with authority stemming directly from the joint chiefs of staff.

The 20th was set up to employ the B-29's particular capacities. It has no other aircraft, and no other air force has any of the B-29's. Thus the superfortress will be directed from Washington by the joint chiefs of staff.

Also disclosed was the extent of the production program for the B-29, an industrial plan involving billions of dollars and reaching into virtually every manufacturing center in America. Five great airframe factories are turning out the giant bomber on assembly lines; another huge factory building sub-assemblies ranks as a prime contractor, and another plant constructed to build the engines is the largest single factory unit in the world. Production of other types of aircraft has been stopped in some plants so that facilities and manpower can be used in making B-29 sub-assemblies. The number of sub-contractors runs into the hundreds.

The B-29 is described briefly as a bomber that flies farther, faster and higher with a greater load than any other plane. Actual performance figures are secret, as with all warplanes, but this much descriptive data has been released.

B-29 Superfortress Called World's Fastest Bomber

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP) The Boeing B-29 superfortress is a global warplane backed by global authority and the greatest production program in history.

The War department today released much of the hitherto restricted information about the four-engined war machine which has had more advance notice than any other military airplane.

New Air Force Formed

141.2 feet and a fuselage 98 feet long. Its single dorsal fin, resembling the tail of the B-17 flying fortress, stands 27 feet high. The fuselage is cylindrical, the round nose reaching well forward of the narrow wing. It is a mid-wing design compared with the B-17's low wing and the high or shoulder wing of the B-24 Liberator.

The power, previously announced, comprises four Wright cyclone engines of 2,200 horsepower each.

these being the same as the engines which pulled the Lockheed Constellation across the country in record transport plane time. The B-29 also has a tricycle landing gear with double wheels.

The superfortress wing is an entirely new one, described by Boeing engineers as the "most efficient wing ever devised." It carries the greatest load per square foot of any airfoil. The flaps—controllable extensions of the wings to provide extra lift for landings and takeoffs—are the largest ever put on a production airplane. They equal one-fifth of the wing area.

Large Propellers

The four-bladed propellers, spanning 16 1-2 feet, are the largest in use. Through gear connections to the engines they turn only one-third as fast as the engines, revolving slower than the propellers of any other plane.

With the exception of hydraulic boosters on the brakes, the plane is entirely electric, using 150 motors of 49 types. Auxiliary engines supply the electric power.

Despite its size and speed, the plane's rudder and ailerons are operated without the benefit of boosters. Boeing engineers say this was accomplished by a delicate balance and serves not only to simplify construction and maintenance but also gives the pilot the "feel" of direct control.

Armament comprises .50 calibre machine guns in multiple turrets and a 20 mm. cannon — the first American heavy bomber for which a cannon has been announced.

The B-29 is the most streamlined bomber in the world—so much so that the wind resistance is doubled when the landing wheels are down. Its silhouette is a combination of the Boeing Stratoliner and the Flying Fortress.

Many Tests

It was first flown in an hour and 20 minute flight at Seattle, Wash., on Sept. 21, 1942. More than 8,000 hours of wind tunnel tests have gone into the B-29 and thousands of engineers were employed. Its pre-flight tests so impressed War department officials that a billion dollar production program was launched before the plane flew. The testing program was the most extensive ever carried out for an aircraft.

In anticipation of its combat use, the air forces and the Boeing company arranged an inspection and flight in the B-29 for a group of aviation writers at Wichita, Kas., last month.

Immediately apparent were the "clean" design of the big bomber, the comfort of crew members, the smooth handling and its remarkable landing and takeoff characteristics. Although the super-fortress is half again as large as the B-17, its takeoff and landing speeds are about the same.

Marshall Issues Statement

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP).—The following statement was issued today by General George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff:

"The attack on Japan by the Superfortress B-29 from distant bases introduces a new type of offensive against our enemy. It also creates a new problem in the application of military force. Because of the enormous range and heavy bomb load of these Superfortresses, far exceeding that of previous strategic bombers, they can strike from many and remote bases at a single objective. The planes will be treated as major task forces in the same manner as naval task forces are directed against specific objectives.

"This type of flexible, centralized control recognizes that very long-range bombardment is not a weapon for the air forces alone. Under the joint chiefs of staff, theater commanders will have a voice in its employment, insuring that maximum effectiveness will be obtained through missions which will contribute directly to the overall strategy for the defeat of the enemies."

In connection with the announced creation of the 20th United States Army Air Force, General H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, issued the following statement:

"The use of the B-29 Superfortress in combat brings actuality to an Air Forces' plan made years in advance for truly global aerial warfare. It proves that our planners and engineers, coupled with the capacity of American industry, are an unbeatable combination. The result is here, a highly complicated and most deadly airplane, capable of delivering the heaviest blows yet known through air power.

"I assume the heavy responsibility for its employment under the joint chiefs of staff with full confidence in its potential use.

"This employment of the B-29 makes possible the softening-up attack on Japan very much earlier than would be possible with aircraft hitherto known to combat. This mighty weapon advances the bomber line a long way.

"The Superfortress is not going to win the war by itself, nor has any one thought it will do so. It will, however, like its predecessors, the B-17 and B-24, strike at the sources of enemy strength and prepare the way for ultimate decision by our well-established team of land, sea and air forces. Billions Involved

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP).—The War Department disclosed today the extent of the production program for the B-29, an industrial plan involving billions of dollars and reaching into virtually every manufacturing center in America. Five great airframe factories are turning out the Giant bombers on assembly lines; another huge factory, building subassemblies, ranks as a prime contractor, and another plant constructed to build the engines is the largest single factory unit in the world. Production of other types of aircraft has been stopped in some plants so that facilities and man power can be used in making B-29 subassemblies. The number of subcontractors runs into the hundreds.

The B-29 is the most streamlined bomber in the world, so much so that the wind resistance is doubled when the landing wheels are down. Its silhouette is a combination of the Boeing Stratoliner and the B-17 Flying Fortress. In appearance, the B-29 has the round-nose features of the Boeing Stratoliner and the swept back wing, slneder body and high tail of the Flying Fortress.

Actual performance figures are secret, as with all warplanes, but much descriptive data has been released:

The plane, with a wing spread of 142.2 feet and a fuselage 98 feet long, has a single dorsal fin resembling the tail of the Flying Fortress and 27 feet high. The fuselage is cylindrical, the round nose reaching well forward of the narrow wing. It is a mid-wing design, as compared with the B-17's low wing and the high, or shoulder, wing of the B-24 Liberator.

The B-29's little brother, the Flying Fortress, has a wing span of 104 feet, is 75 feet long and 19 feet high, weighs around 60,000 pounds, has four engines each rated at 1,200 horsepower, carries thirteen .50 caliber guns, armor is installed separately, speed is around 300 miles an hour, normal bomb load is three tons, tactical radius of action is 700 miles and ceiling exceeds 30,000 feet.

The Superfortress wing is an entirely new one, described by Boeing engineers as the "most efficient wing ever devised." It carries the greatest load per square foot of an airfoil. The flaps—controllable extensions of the wings to provide extra lift for landings and take-offs, are the largest ever put on a production airplane. They equal one-fifth of the wing area.

The four-bladed propellers, spanning 16½ feet, are the largest in use. Through gear connections to the engines they turn only one-third as fast as the engines, revolving more slowly than the propellers of any other plane. Each engine is served by two turbo-superchargers to make possible high altitude operation.

So complex is the plane's operation that a flight engineer controls most of the power plant, the pilot using only the throttle and his usual flight instruments. The rudder and ailerons are so balanced that despite their size they are operated without the aid of boosters, thus giving the pilot the "feel" experienced in smaller aircraft.

With the exception of hydraulic boosters on the brakes, the plane is entirely electric, using 150 motors of forty-nine types. Auxiliary engines supply the electric power.

Armament includes a 20 mm. cannon, the first American heavy bomber for which a cannon has been announced. There is much protective armor.

B-29 PROVES ABLE TO DEFEND ITSELF

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (A. P.).—One major question about the B-29 Superfortress—could it protect itself?—was answered satisfactorily by an unanticipated encounter with a dozen Japanese planes over Burma many weeks before its first big raid on Japan, announced today.

The giant bomber is believed to have shot down two of the attacking fighters before the enemy turned away. The B-29 received a few bullet holes and one gunner was wounded slightly.

Brig.-Gen. H. S. Hansell, chief of the staff of the Twentieth Air Force, which uses the Superfortress, told the story to a group of writers during a vivsit to the Boeing aircraft plant at Wichita, Kan.

Gen. Hansell said that the bomber was cruising over Burma at a lower altitude than it usually will fly when the Japanese fighters came along. He added that the craft acquitted itself very well. The bomber's ability to defend itself is important because its range is well beyond that of escorting fighters.

JUN 16 1944

B-29 IN BRIEF

Washington, June 15 (A. P.).—Here is the Boeing B-29 Super-Fortress in brief:

Wingspan, 141.2 feet; length, ninety-eight feet; height, twenty-seven feet; weight, "very heavy;" armament, .50 caliber guns in power turrents and a 20-mm. cannon; armor, heavily armored; engines, four engines of 2,200 horsepower, each with two superchargers; speed, "compares favorably with latest fighters;" bombload, range and ceiling—exceed that of any other airplane; design, cylindrical, midwing, single tail, tricycle landing gear.

By comparison, the B-29's little brother, the Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, has a wingspan of 104 feet, is 75 feet long and 19 feet high, weighs around 60,000 pounds, has four engines, each rated at 1,200 horse power, carries thirteen .50 caliber guns, armor is installed separately, speed is around 300 miles an hour, normal bombload is three tons, tactical radius of action is 700 miles and ceiling exceeds 30,000 feet.

U. S. Gets News Of Raid On Japan Before Japs

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, said today that the War Department's announcement of the bombing of Japan by B-29's was the first time America had beaten Japan on announcements of happenings close to the Japanese home.

Davis had no explanation for the long silence of Tokyo radio regarding the attack except to hope the enemy "is trying to cook up a story."

Davis said he gave the army "three cheers," both for the attack and its very rapid announcement.

GENERAL BELIEVES JAP INDUSTRY CAN BE RUINED

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15 — (AP) Brig. Gen. H. S. Hansell, chief of staff of the 20th Air Force, which is using the B-29 Super-Fortress, said recently that "Japanese interior economy is highly concentrated—it can be destroyed."

Speaking at a press preview of the huge bomber, Hansell said that studies of Japanese industry had begun about the time the B-29 was being designed, although the plane was not intended primarily for use in the Orient. Similar studies have been made of war industries in Germany and her satellite countries.

The general said it was expected the Japanese defenses would be "very determined" and that losses might be high in forthcoming raids. He added, however, that the B-29 had the speed, ceiling and firepower to take care of itself.

...ffort Fuel Flown Over Hump Into China

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Gasoline and oil for the giant engines of the B-29 Superfortress are being flown over the "aerial Burma road" to bomber bases, a spokesman for the Curtiss-Wright Corporation disclosed today, with War Department approval.

About three fourths of the transport planes being used are Curtiss C-46 Commandos, the others being principally Douglas C-54 Skymasters.

Newsboy Does Little But Recall Doolittle

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP).—A Washington newsboy had no trouble today selling newspapers announcing the Super-Fortress bombing of Japan.

His "read-all-about-it" line was: "First it was Doolittle, now it's too much."

B-29'S USED BASES BUILT BY CHINESE

JUN 16 1944

NEW YORK, June 15 — (AP) James Stewart, former CBS correspondent in Chungking, discussing in a broadcast today the newest U. S. bombing of Japan, said the big B-29's "took off and landed on Chinese bases" constructed secretly in western China with native labor.

The bases, he said, were built entirely by hand and in the peak employment period 430,000 Chinese farmers were used.

"Specific plans for the destruction of Japan by air from bases in the interior of China were made in Washington in the Fall of 1943," he said, when Gen. Henry H. Arnold decided in conferences with the highest Chinese authorities that such bases were feasible.

Lt. Col. Waldo Kennerson of Boston, Mass., was in charge of the work, Stewart reported.

"I visited Colonel Kennerson at work early this spring," he said. "We stood on one of the largest fields under construction. There, by actual count, 67,000 Chinese farmers were toiling with their hands laying the stone foundations, layer by layer. No cement was available. At first there were no machines such as rock crushers and steam rollers. In fact, for certain layers of all the fields, each stone was placed by hand."

Just before the War department announced today the latest Japanese bombing, a Tokyo broadcast, recorded by U. S. government monitors, said the Japanese had dealt a "severe blow" Sunday at an American air base at Suichwan, in Kiangsi province of eastern China.

This base, Tokyo said, was a master base for two "advanced air fields" which were to be used for an air attack on Japan. The advanced U. S. fields, the broadcast said, were at Kienow, in Fukien province, and Yushan, in Kiangsi.

AMERICAN TROOPS SLASH WESTWARD FROM CARENTAN

LONG

Reach Firm Ground Within Six Miles of La Haye Du Puits.

JUN 16 1944

NAZI TANKS REPULSED

Heavy Armored Counterattacks Beaten Back with Heavy Losses.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, June 16. — (AP) American troops slashing westward from Carentan on a 10-mile front have reached firm ground within six miles of La Haye Du Puits, junction of the last German-held rail-highway lifeline to the port of Cherbourg, and within 4 1-2 miles of the secondary junction point of St. Saveur-Le-Comte in what was officially described today as "steady progress."

A Reuters News agency dispatch from France said the Americans had captured Reigneville, three miles east of St. Saveur-Le-Comte. Supreme Headquarters had no confirmation of this report but said there might be patrol activity in that direction.

Steady Advances Reported

In the developing drive to cut off and capture the Cherbourg peninsula, similar steady advances were reported in a midnight communique from Supreme Headquarters for a less clearly-defined thrust through the lowlands between the Vire and Elle rivers southwest of Carentan.

This advance appeared to be aimed toward St. Jean De Daye, on the highway linking St. Lo and Carentan. Extent of the gain was not disclosed officially, but it appeared probable that the road already had been cut about five miles west of Lison.

On the extreme right flank of the Allies' beachhead in Normandy, American capture of the coastal village of Quineville and surrounding territory was declared to have provided "a valuable new outlet from the beaches."

On the eastern, or left, wing of the beachhead, held by British and Canadian forces, violent German armored counterattacks were repulsed with what the Allied communique called "considerable loss to the enemy."

These were the principal gains in the tenth day of the Allied invasion of France, which saw the offensive all along the 100-mile lines gather force and either gain ground or repell the fiery and repeated enemy counterattacks.

Irregular Front

Right around the irregular front, starting on the northwest, this was the battle situation as the invasion went into its eleventh day:

Quineville: American right flank on the sea, scene of a seesaw action in which the Americans took the town and scored local gains across the Quineville-Montebourg road.

Montebourg: Still in German hands but increasingly outflanked on both sides by the American Fourth division which took Quineville and put the Montebourg-Valognes highway under heavy artillery fire.

Port L'Abee: Airborne Americans, 4 1-2 miles northeast of St. Saveur-Le-Comte, under rising enemy pressure but holding firm.

Carentan: American thrust westward now well across defensively-flooded ground into firm land west of village of Baupte; Germans acknowledge Americans reached Pretot, three miles beyond Baupte and barely six miles from La Haye Du Puits; German 17th motorized infantry division with some tanks crushed back in vain counter-attack.

Lison: Allied 21st army group headquarters disclosed Americans advanced westward in Vire and Elle river areas nearly halfway across base of the Cherbourg peninsula. Particulars withheld. Lison, 11 miles inland, was taken last week.

Caumont: in Allied hands, with operations still in patrol stage but prospects of early expansion. Violent German counter-attacks repulsed between Caumont and Tilly-Sur-Seulles.

Villers-Bocage: scene of increasing pressure from both sides, with town in German hands and Allies facing it on high ground quarter-mile distant across Seulles river.

Heavy Tank Fighting

Tilly-Caen-Troarn zone: heavy tank fighting, with Germans stopped in their tracks around Tilly and losing slightly between Caen and Troarn but still holding onto Troarn.

Both the Vichy radio and Allied correspondents in the field predicted a heavy new Brtish-Canadian attack in the Caen sector.

Ross Munro, Canadian press correspondent, said, "this campaign is sweeping to its first great climax, and big battles which would bring large armored formations into combat over the Norman farmlands might be approaching rapidly."

British and American warships throughout Thursday engaged German mobile batteries on the Allied flanks, the British battleship Nelson slamming 16-inch shells into the guns at the port of Le Havre.

It was announced also that German naval forces in Le Havre "suffered very severely" from Wednesday night's R.A.F. attack with six-ton "factory-buster" bombs. The Germans repeatedly have broadcast that Le Havre was an imminent invasion objective of the Allies.

Negro Troops Attack

The Germans said American negro troops were attacking "three miles south of Lison," supported by parachutists across the Elle river, and there were other German reports of a new Allied onslaught directly southward towards St. Lo, but Allied headquarters said these were false.

Actual location of the drive from Lison was not disclosed, except for the names of the Vire and Elle rivers. The Vire flows northward through St. Lo to the Seine bay in swamplands between Carentan and Isigny. The Elle flows northwest, joining the Vire three miles south of Lison.

Nine big German Tiger tanks and eight panthers were reported definitely knocked out in a slugging match just east of Villers-Bocage, and it was likely that these represented only a fraction of the day's total losses from the 600 enemy tanks estimated to be in action on the British-Canadian front.

The Allied command emphasized anew that the initiative remained in Allied hands and that every one of the increasingly-strong German blows was being met or bested.

"The Germans are dancing to our tune," it was stated, "counter-attacking whenever they can to try to stop up breaks in their lines. We hope they are wearing themselves out.

"The weather is very good and our beaches are developing very well. The landing is reaching towards a constant crescendo."

Best estimates here were that at least 20 enemy divisions already were being engaged—a total of 200,000 to 300,000 men. At least four of these were known to be armored divisions.

Germans Make Claims

The German commander, Field Marshal Gen. Karl von Rundstedt, was reported to have made extravagant claims of having mauled 25 Allied divisions, but the Nazi radio acknowledged some of the American gains and said "the battle is approaching its climax" as constantly-augmented Allied forces struck out in all directions to enlarge their holdings.

Allied tactical air forces supported the ground troops all along the beachhead perimeter, with the U.S. Ninth Air force Marauders delivering a particularly heavy attack on Villers Bocage. The airmen said the Germans were rushing up reserves by every means under cover of the short nights.

The weather continued better than during the first week of the invasion, both for seaborne and aerial operations.

American heavy bombers, out in force for the third time in four days, dealt hard blows to the railway bridges across the Loire river, which the Germans need for moving up reinforcements from the south.

Yanks Push Within 6 Miles Of Cherbourg Road Hub

JUN 16 1944

By J. W. Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 (AP)—American troops have surged powerfully ahead in their stab into the Cherbourg neck, Allied headquarters announced today, and Berlin reported that less than six miles separated the spearhead from the last west coast communications linking Cherbourg with France.

The gains were hammered out in spite of furious counterattacks all along the 100-mile invasion front in which the Germans had used about 20 divisions and 600 tanks.

Allied headquarters, confirming that American infantry and parachute troops, supported by tanks, had scored further gains west of Carentan, said Allied soldiers were holding firm everywhere else despite the massive nature of the German counter-stroke and were inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

British Lose 2 Towns, Then Hold

This was after it was acknowledged that the British at the eastern end of the line had been forced to give up Troarn, their anchor nine miles east of Caen, and Villers-Bocage, one of their two advance points 15 miles southwest of Caen.

Further heavy counterattacks in the Villers-Bocage area were repulsed last evening, headquarters said, and the British were still secure in their hold on Caumont, their other most advanced point, 20 miles southwest of Caen.

Seventeen German tanks including eight 60-ton Tigers, were knocked out in the fierce armored battling yesterday, headquarters said. The other eight tanks were Panthers, armed with 77-mm. guns.

Yanks Advance On 9-Mile Front

At the western end of the line, the Americans first moved forward on a nine-mile front to the Les Sablons-Baupte area, south of Ste. Mere Eglise and only about seven miles from high ground overlooking La Haye du Puits on the west coast road and rail line leading to Cherbourg.

The Berlin radio commentator, Ludwig Sertorius, then reported that they had gained another three and one-half miles to the west, reaching Pretot which is less than six miles from La Haye du Puits itself.

(The German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau reported from Zurich, Switzerland, to Stockholm today that the Germans have blown up harbor facilities at Cherbourg.)

The Americans also fought their way back into Montebourg, 14 miles from Cherbourg, and headquarters said street fighting was in progress. But the fighting here was fluid, and the Germans in mid-afternoon claimed they were again in possession of the town.

American troops also were engaged in heavy fighting in the Pont l'Abbe area, four miles north of Pretot, and along the road from Montebourg to Quineville on the coast.

"Nearing Climax," Berlin Says

The Americans hammered out gains both in the Pont l'Abbe area and around Quineville, which represents the Allied right flank, headquarters said.

The heavy nature of the fighting was plainly indicated by the German high command, which said the battle is "approaching a climax" and growing more violent every day with the Allies hitting hard in all directions to enlarge their bridgehead.

The German communique added: "Among salvos of heaviest naval guns, incessant air attacks and with freshly brought up infantry and tank forces being thrown into action on both sides, the battle is approaching a climax."

Violent German reaction to the threat to the Cherbourg lifeline was expected, and it was likely that further American advances would come only after the costliest fighting.

Nearly Halfway Across Peninsula

The advance placed the Americans nearly halfway across the peninsula at its narrowest point.

(William H. Stoneman, a Chicago Daily News correspondent at the front, reported today that two powerful pushes in this sector yesterday gave American forces Quineville to the north and carried them westward beyond the Merderet river to within striking distance of St. Sauveurle-Vicomte.)

U. S. Artillery In Action

A DNB broadcast from Berlin said the Americans launched two other thrusts, one with a fresh division on both sides of the road leading southwest from Bayeux toward St. Lo, and the other through the partly flooded lowlands between Carentan and Isigny.

The former thrust was from the south of the Biards Forest, the Germans said, and achieved an initial penetration which was declared to have been stopped.

The second jab was through the area crisscrossed by canals linking the Vire and Taute rivers, DNB said.

American artillery was shelling the road from Montebourg to Valognes to the northwest, and the doughboys controlled the road from Quineville, on the coast, to Montebourfi but the town itself changed hands from hour to hour.

(Stoneman, the Chicago Daily News correspondent, said he spent Wednesday afternoon in Carentan. "It is a tame place," he wrote, "after a week of bombardment and street fighting.")

Allied troops driving south along the central sector of the front were engaged in heavy fighting around Caumont and Villers-Bocage, with the Allies holding Caumont but the Germans back in Villers-Bocage after a counter attack.

Hard Fighting At Villers-Bocage

The main fighting was taking place in front of Villiers-Bocage. Allied troops held high ground facing the town a quarter of a mile away. The river Seulles divided the German and Allied forces.

East of Villiers-Bocage to Troarn, beyond battered and besieged Caen, great tank battles raged into their fourth day. The Germans were using parts of four armored divisions.

Tilly-sur-Seulles, 12 miles west of Caen, changed hands several times. The Germans were reported in it last and a Nazi counterattack definitely had retaken Troarn, battered into heaps of rubble by air, sea and land bombardment.

From this area northwest to Montebourg the Ninth and Second Tactical Air Forces made what was officially described as "a great number of sorties" in support of the ground forces, many of them from a mounting number of Allied air bases set up with full facilities in captured territory.

Le Havre Smash Predicted

While a great weight of Allied bombs was being thrown against this movement, an announcement came that several hundred RAF four-engined Lancasters and a fighter escort, in a quick switch to American bombing tactics, had blasted German E-boat pens at Le Havre before dusk last evening with six-ton "factory-busters." It was the RAF's heaviest daylight attack of the war. A second assault was made on the same targets during the night.

Enemy broadcasts reacted to the new Allied attention to Le Havre, lying just east of the beachhead, with surmises that it portended a land move in that direction.

With the German counterattacks mounting in fury, there were indications that Nazi Field Marshal von Rundstedt had decided to draw off some of his reserves in other parts of France to meet the Allied thrusts.

Biggest Nazi Troop Moves Yet

Allied fliers reported more movement on the roads behind the German lines last night than at any time since D-day.

Appearance of the Second Panzer Division—the best armored unit in the German army—indicated that the Germans were making a supreme effort to seal off the Allied beachhead.

The next two or three days are expected to show whether the German high command has been forced to throw reserves into the battle piecemeal—as in the past nine days—or has been able to keep them intact for a final, all-out counterattack.

The Tilly Situation

A front-line dispatch last night from Associated Press War Correspondent Roger D. Greene indicated that two or more fresh German armored divisions had been thrown into the battle between Caen and Tilly.

"The Germans nowhere in this sector have the initiative," a British staff officer told Greene, however. "They are simply reacting to our moves and are continually being jabbed off balance.

Montgomery Satisfied

"The enemy is extremely sensitive to our actions on the left bank of the Caen canal and apparently feels that our bridgehead there threatens a line to which he may want to withdraw."

Allied authorities expressed satisfaction with the over-all situation.

"The enemy is doing all he can to plug leaks, while we are daily developing our beachhead and attacking him at every opportunity, both to kill Germans and to make more room for ourselves," it was announced last night at the headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Allied ground commander.

German women snipers caught harassing Allied troops in Normandy will be treated as prisoners of war, it was learned today. Front-line dispatches have indicated that a number of women, trained in the use of small arms, have been firing at the Allied troops. The Germans, however, have claimed they were used merely as couriers.

ALLIED ADVANCES NEAR CHERBOURG

YARBROUGH

LONDON, June 15 — (AP) German broadcasters acknowledged Allied gains on the Cherbourg peninsula today just after Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels had warned the nation to have "no illusions" about the seriousness of the battle.

"Fighting in the west is certainly not without risks and it is not an easy affair," said Goebbels' weekly article in Das Reich as transmitted by DNB. "In the east as well as in the west, our life is at stake."

These statements were tempered, however, by the declaration that "English and American losses at present are so high that soon a question will arise as to how long they can stand up to it without endangering their world political position."

The German-controlled Scandinavian telegraph bureau said in a Zurich dispatch that the German Cherbourg garrison — threatened with isolation—had blown up harbor facilities.

The International Information bureau, German propaganda agency, said fresh American divisions drove southwestward toward St. Lo from the Balleroy sector yesterday and gained some breaks in the German defense front with a tank attack today, but it added that the breaks were sealed off.

A British tank assault was declared to have been repulsed this morning between Tilly-Sur-Seulles and Caumont.

The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio said 348 members of a group "trying to spread anarchy through France" had been shot and that all Frenchmen had been warned "to refrain from anti-patriotic activity."

The high command communique said the battle of Normandy "is approaching a climax," with fresh troops and armor being thrown into action by both sides.

Fourteen Allied transports and two destroyers were declared sunk or damaged by German aerial bombs and torpedoes last night. This enemy claim was without Allied confirmation.

Blows Powerful

London, June 15 (AP)—Today's German communique said that the fighting in Normandy was increasing in violence and that the Allies were making powerful efforts to enlarge their bridgehead in all directions.

"Among salvos of heaviest naval guns, incessant air attacks and with freshly brought up infantry and tank forces being thrown into action on both sides, the battle is approaching a climax," the German high command declared.

14 Transports Sunk, Claim

Allied parachute troops which landed behind German lines northeast of St. Lo were wiped out, the broadcast said, and several "stiffly defended" villages east of Caumont were taken by German forces.

West and north of Ste. Mere Eglise, however, it was admitted, the Allies gained ground.

The communique asserted that 14 Allied transports totaling 101,000 tons and two destroyers were sunk or damaged by German air bombs and torpedoes last night.

"New Landing Foiled"

A new Allied landing attempt off the mouth of the Orne was foiled, the communique said, by coastal batteries which dispersed the landing formation and damaged a cruiser and destroyer.

"The hardness of the fighting and the exemplary bearing of our troops of all services are shown in figures indicating success so far achieved," the high command said. "More than 400 enemy tanks and more than 1,000 aircraft have been destroyed by our troops within the first 10 days of the enemy invasion."

German Tank Divisions Now Averaging 172 Units

Force Includes Two Regiments of Infantry Plus Artillery

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 (AP).—Ordinary German tank divisions now in operation have about 172 tanks, with two regiments of infantry, although the divisions vary widely in equipment.

Divisions such as the 12th Elite Guard Panzers, which get a priority on equipment, may have as many as 250 tanks, or 172 tanks and a regiment of self-propelled artillery along with two or more regiments of infantry. The total strength might range up to 23,000 men.

Panzer grenadier regiments sometimes have no tanks but have a battalion of self-propelled guns and about 8,000 men. Often in battle the Germans add or take away units.

RAF Follows Up Day Raids With Attack on Boulogne

BEALNEAR

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, June 16 — (AP) Continuing the around-the-clock aerial punishment of Nazi targets in France, a tremendous force of R.A.F. bombers thundered across the channel during the night in a spectacular sequel to widespread daylight operations in which 5,000 planes, including 1,300 U. S. heavy bombers, took part.

The R.A.F. armada making the latest assault on the Germans' invasion defenses was so large it took an hour and a half to pass across England's southern coast. The roar of engines was as great as Wednesday night when 1,100 R.A.F. planes delivered the heaviest aerial bombardment in history against Le Havre and other points on the French coast.

Air Attacks Continue

After the first big R.A.F. night raiders had passed out of view last night flashes and explosions in the direction of Boulogne indicated that another vital Nazi port on the French coast was getting a blasting.

Squadrons of R.A.F. fighters were believed to have escorted the bombers, for they began circling over the southeast coast shortly before the British heavyweights appeared in the sky.

While many of the bombers returned quickly from their mission to the Boulogne area, others were believed to have headed much deeper into Nazi territory.

The raid was made in the face of threatening weather — with wind blowing stronger, considerable cloud and the prospect of rain.

The American heavies were escorted by nearly 750 fighters in a series of attacks on plane assembly plants, airfields, and rail targets over a 300 mile-long stretch as far away as Bordeaux, while other fighters and medium bombers made repeated sharp attacks almost within sight of the Allied lines.

Out of this mighty daylight operation, three U. S. heavy bombers, one medium and four fighters were missing, headquarters announced. At least 24 enemy planes were shot down.

The Fortresses and Liberators dropped an estimated 3,250 tons of bombs on dozens of targets in a thunderous follow-up to the mightiest series of air blows of the war which the R.A.F. cut loose last night.

German fighter opposition was spotty, most airmen reporting the sky clear of the enemy. One trio of R.A.F. Spitfire squadrons, however, engaged Nazis in one of the fiercest combats since D-day and shot down eight of them while losing one plane.

The Nazis sent night raiders against England around midnight, the second night attack this week.

Indicating the massive Allied heavy bomber assaults were continuing through another night, the Berlin radio warned that enemy formations were approaching northwest Germany.

The RAF, starting out before darkness last night, dropped 5,000 tons of explosives on the continent, the greatest bombweight ever unloaded in a single night, from 1,100 bombers which made seven attacks spread over five hours.

Le Havre Hit

The first of these was an escorted daylight blow, on the American pattern, directed against the big port of Le Havre and nests of E-boats there which have been attacking Allied invasion vessels. In this assault, the RAF's heaviest daylight blow of the war and its first since 1942, many six-ton "factory-buster" bombs exploded on the targets, causing artificial tidal waves in the harbor. A second big attack was made on Le Havre early this morning.

Today the American heavy bombers, making up the third largest air fleet ever sent up at one time, found favorable weather over most of the targets and unloaded their explosives visually.

It was the third time in four days that the American Eighth air force had sent a bomber force of from 1,300 to 1,500 four-engined planes against multiple targets—installations which had been helping the Germans in their battle to hold back the Allies.

The objectives today included an air base at Bordeaux, railyards at Angouleme, 70 miles northeast of Bordeaux, and other targets at Nantes, 120 miles south of the fighting area, La Poissonniere, 50 miles east of Nantes, La Frilliere, eight miles east of Tours, and at Beauvais, 40 miles north of Paris.

At least one formation penetrated into Germany for the second straight day, but first announcements did not disclose the exact type of targets there or their location.

A Liberator combat wing attacking rail targets in the vicinity of Tours encountered about 50 single-engined German fighters which made two sharp passes at the bomber formations, but other heavies reported seeing no enemy aircraft.

Two of the escorting fighter groups tangled with Nazi airmen and blasted five of them out of the skies while bomber gunners downed seven more enemy planes. Three of our bombers and three fighters were missing from these widespread operations.

Most of the bomber groups reported anti-aircraft fire was only slight to moderate, although a few of them had to plow through intense barrages to reach their targets.

London, June 15 (AP)—Enemy planes raided southern England tonight, sending searchlights and anti-aircraft guns into action.

U. S. Planes Hit 12 French Areas

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 (AP)—Between 1,000 and 2,000 American Fortresses and Liberators and escorting fighters swept over France this morning, bombing airplane plants, airfields and railroad facilities in a dozen places.

Berlin radio reported an attack on the great industrial city of Hanover in Germany, while lighter Allied planes from bases in Normandy and Britain continued their widespread support campaign in a smashing follow-up to an 1,100-bomber operation overnight.

As a part of the latter operation, several hundred Lancasters blasted E-boat pens at Le Havre with six-ton "factory busters" in daylight.

Two Attacks On Port

Twenty-eight hundred tons of explosives were dropped on the port in two separate attacks. The first, just before dusk, was the RAF's heaviest daylight bombardment of the war and its first high-altitude daylight precision effort.

German broadcasts telling of the progress of the daylight raiders today also reported planes over Brandenburg province, in which Berlin is situated.

Targets of the American heavies today ranged from Nantes, La Poisonniere and Angouleme to Beauvais, La Frilliere and Bordeaux.

Deep Penetration

The multiple attack, the deepest penetration of France since the invasion, took the bombers over a 300-mile expanse from Beauvais, 40 miles north of Paris and 100 miles east of the battle line, to Bordeaux, 300 miles south of the battle zone.

A force of Mosquito bombers attacked the synthetic oil center of Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr last night to keep the unceasing assault on Hitler's war machine going around the clock.

The Lancasters, accompanied by fighter escort, were believed to have accomplished a successful mission yesterday in their switch to American bombing tactics, for the Navy reported no E-boats at work in the channel last night.

[At dawn today two Free French air squadrons landed in Normandy and set up permanent headquarters in France, the BBC reported in a broadcast recorded by NBC. On landing they stood rigidly at attention as the colors were raised, and later expressed themselves at being very happy at returning home for the first time since 1940.]

An official recapitulation showed that since the beginning of the invasion Allied planes have shot at least 415 German plane out of the air—nineteen of them since midnight Monday. Allied losses were listed as 607 planes, including 156 heavy bombers.

Largest R. A. F. Day Blow.

The R. A. F.'s heavies have operated in daylight a few times in the past, notably in the D day preliminary assault, but never in such a heavy attack. The tonnage dropped by the R. A. F. on the thick concrete installations at Le Havre was estimated as high as 3,360 tons—more than most of the R. A. F.'s "saturation" attacks on German cities.

GERMANS ADMIT

In all, the R. A. F. had more than 1,100 bombers out last night. Their targets included another string of enemy railroad centers—Douai, Cambria and St. Po!—and German front troop concentrations at Evrecy and Aunay-sur-Odon, only nine and eighteen miles respectively, from Caen in the Normandy battle area. Night bomber losses were placed at five—none in the Gelsenkirchen attack.

JUN 16 1944

Ninth in Heaviest Assault.

The American Ninth Air Force, in its heaviest assault since the first forty-eight hours of the invasion, sent out more than 2,400 bombers and fighters from dawn yesterday to late last night to pound key points behind the Nazi lines with 1,485 tons of bombs at a cost of fourteen fighters and one medium bomber against eleven German planes shot down and ten destroyed on the ground.

Hundreds of Medium, light and fighter bombers and fighters of both the American Ninth and R. A. F. tactical force concentrated on small targets in the area at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, bounded by St. Lo, Coutances, Granville and Tessy, and up the peninsula.

Hundreds of sorties were flown from the mounting number of Allied air bases set up with full facilities in captured territory.

Reports indicated the bombing of the Germans' fuel stores was hampering the advance of Panzer formations into battle. In one attack by the R. A. F. yesterday sixteen of forty oil tanks were destroyed completely.

The American heavy bombers' escort tangled today twice with German fighters. A group commanded by Col. John B. Henry of San Antonio, Tex., destroyed four Nazi fighters, one without firing a shot.

"I jumped this Jerry and started to fire on him, but found my guns weren't on," reported Lieut. Harvey Waymire of Denver, Col. "I leaned forward to flip on my gun switch and when I looked up again the German bailed out."

A Lightning group headed by Col. Harold Rau of Hempstead, N. Y., strafing around Tours, destroyed or damaged a radio station, two locomotives, four box cars, five flak cars, five trucks and one barracks.

Norwegian Spitfires surprised fifteen German planes over the Evreux air base and shot down three.

R. A. F. Mustangs strafed a German ferry at Quilleboeuf in the Seine estuary.

Slight enemy activity was reported during the night over southern England.

Air Marshal Visits France

JUN 16 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 (AP)—Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham, commander of the RAF Tactical Air Force, flew to France today to "review the progress being made toward extending air operations from the area under Allied control," it was announced. He is visiting Tactical Air Force units in France.

First Of Type To Land In Liberated France

JUN 16 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, June 15 (AP). With two engines out and the other two damaged, a flak-riddled American Liberator made a forced landing in France Tuesday, the first four-engine plane to land on ground wrested from the Nazis in western Europe.

Lieut. Charles W. Grace, Kalamazoo, Mich., pilot and Lieut. Arthur L. Pritchard, Onaway, Mich., copilot, took the crippled bomber down to a field where Allied bulldozers were making a new landing strip.

Eight other crewmen who had bailed out were carried by their parachutes a short distance into the Channel and were picked up immediately. All but one have been returned to their British base.

RULE IS SET UP BY DE GAULLE

JUN 16 1944

French Civil Affairs Arranged On Normandy Visit

SINGLETON

London, June 15 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle announced today that he had left instructions for administration of French civilian affairs during his visit to the Normandy beachhead, and this suggested an effort to eliminate the chief difficulty in British-American-French relations.

A communique issued through the French press service, emphasizing the "atmosphere of immense fervor" with which it reported de Gaulle was received in Allied-liberated towns Wednesday, said he gave directions "regarding resumption of civil administration, organization of supplies and public relief."

Would Smooth Rough Spots

The instructions apparently were a step toward eliminating rough spots in the bid of de Gaulle's French Committee of National Liberation for full recognition as the voice of France.

De Gaulle returned to England today.

The communique referred to him as "president of the provisional government of the French republic," a term which still lacks acknowledgment by the United States and Britain.

There was no clue as to the nature of de Gaulle's instructions, but it is unlikely such a trip would have been arranged in view of the military situation unless some degree of accord had been reached on de Gaulle's position in civil affairs.

To Report To Algiers

De Gaulle and various French civil and military authorities crossed the Channel on the French destroyer La Combattante and he presented the vessel the Croix de Guerre when she anchored off the French coast.

The committee leader was said to be planning to return briefly to Algiers and report to the French Consultative Assembly on the result of his discussions with the British and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower before going to the United States to see President Roosevelt.

London newspapers expressed approval of de Gaulle's visit to Normandy and expressed hope that it would help to solve diplomatic tangles in Allied relations.

"Like the people of Normandy, the citizens of the rest of France wait to hear the voice of a French leader," said the Evening News.

mittee said de Gaulle had been given a "most moving demonstration of courage and devotion by the population of Isigny and that elsewhere he was greeted in the same atmosphere of immense fervor."

Trip Strengthens Bid

Meanwhile, de Gaulle laid before British and American political and military councils a claim of enthusiastic support from newly liberated Frenchmen to back his demand for recognition of the French Committee of National Liberation as the voice of France.

(In Washington, Secretary of State Hull declined to be drawn into a discussion of the delicate French political situation.)

De Gaulle was said to be planning tentatively to return briefly to Algiers, to report to the French Consultative Assembly on the result of his discussions with the British and with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, before calling on President Roosevelt.

Press Sees Solution

The London press hailed de Gaulle's trip to Normandy with the expressed hope it would help solve the ticklish situation.

A London Standard editorial characterized de Gaulle's visit to France as "widely welcomed" on both sides of the Channel and said that "whatever may be the political differences still to be resolved, the paramount need of the hour is that the military campaign should be assisted in every way possible."

The newspaper saw in the visit "recognition" by General Eisenhower of the importance of the Partisans' role in the battle for France, and commented it would have been "tragic if political differences in any way blighted the hopes of advantages to be secured for our cause now by full mobilization of the resistance movement."

The Evening News called the trip "timely," adding that "like the people of Normandy, citizens of the rest of France wait to hear the voice of a French leader. It is to be hoped that the diplomatic tangles and mysteries surrounding the relationship between Britain and America and de Gaulle be cleared up speedily."

The enthusiasm with which the French greeted de Gaulle was marred by a reported disagreement involving employment of French liaison officers during the invasion. On this subject, however, British-American diplomatic quarters remained silent.

De Gaulle Instructs French On Civil Rule

SINGLETON

JUN 16 1944

London, June 15 (AP)—The French Committee of National Liberation reported today that Gen. Charles de Gaulle during his trip to the Normandy beachhead had "left everywhere instructions regarding resumption of civil administration, organization of supplies and public relief."

Hull Refuses Comment On French Situation

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull declined today to be drawn into a discussion of the delicate French political situation.

His comment in response to news conference inquiries was that the question is one affecting cooperation with liberating military forces.

Asked if he still considers true a statement in his last speech that Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Liberation Committee would play a leading role in French civil administration behind military lines, Hull replied that he would let his statements speak for themselves.

Beachhead Reporter Toll: One Killed, Six Wounded

All Injured Are Americans; British Newsman Lone Fatality

JUN 16 1944

LONDON, June 15 (AP).—One member of the United Nations invasion press corps has been killed and six have been injured while covering the western front to date.

Arthur Thorpe, naval correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph, a British news agency, was killed in an action at sea June 11.

Among the injured are two Associated Press men, Don Whitehead, of Harlan, Ky., who suffered a knee injury in an unexplained way but still is on the job on the invasion beachhead, and Henry B. Jameson, of Abilene, Kan., who suffered a wrenched shoulder and flak wounds on D-Day. He has been reassigned to less strenuous duties in Great Britain.

OthOers injured were

Phil Bucknell, of Ridgefield Park and West Point Pleasant, N. J., on the staff of the Army newspaper, "Stars and Stripes." He broke a leg when he jumped with paratroopers.

Gordon Gaskill, of Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn., covering the invasion for "The American Magazine." He suffered a shrapnel splinter wound in the left shoulder and a slight bullet wound in the stomach.

JoJhn MacVane, of Portland, Me., a National Broadcasting Company reporter. He sprained an ankle.

Joseph Anthony Dearing, of Palo Alto, Calif., a "Collier's Magazine" photographer. A machine-gun bullet from a strafing German plane splintered a wrist bone.

Yank Passes Time Reading 'Mein Kampf'

JUN 16 1944

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 (AP)—A copy of "Mein Kampf" picked up as a souvenir in France by Lieut. Ralph Hofer, Salem, Mo., Mustang pilot, is helping him pass the time in England while awaiting a new plane.

The United States Strategic Air Forces announced Hofer made a forced landing on an Allied strip in the beachhead area Saturday, when his plane was hit by ground fire, and then toured the battle zone.

The book was drawn January 3 from a circulating library by a German named Rudy Salemmo.

Hofer will have 29 swastikas painted on his new plane, for 16½ kills aloft and 12½ on the ground.

WOMEN SNIPERS FACE WAR PRISON

JUN 16 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 (AP).—German women shipers caught harassing Allied troops in Normandy will be treated as prisoners of war, it was learned today.

Front line dispatches have indicated a number of women, trained in the use of small arms, have been firing at the Allied troops. The Germans, however, have claimed they were used merely as couriers.

VICHY POLICE DISARMED

NEW YORK, June 15—(AP) Radio France at Algiers tonight quoted Emmanuel D'Astier De La Vigerie, commissioner of the interior in the French committee of National Liberation, as saying that German troops in France were disarming Vichy police and mobile guards because they were going over to the resistance movement.

JUN 16 1944

The Algiers broadcast, recorded by U. S. government monitors, said D'Astier told a press conference that the French forces of the interior had achieved "sensational results" and had captured 1,000 prisoners and control of several French localities.

The French forces of the interior are the patriot resistance units within France.

Air Defense Command Guards Landing Strips

JUN 16 1944

London, June 15 (AP)—Formation long ago of an air defense command to protect United States Ninth Air Force landing strips in Britain and on the Continent was revealed tonight by Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, who said it was the first American unit of this type.

The Ninth Air Force commander also disclosed that the air defense unit had been under the command of Brig. Gen. William L. Richardson since it was organized months before D-day.

WEATHER CLEAR IN DOVER STRAIT

JUN 16 1944

London, June 15 (A. P.).—The weather in the Dover Strait area was bright and clear this morning and the sea remained smooth under a light northwesterly breeze.

The temperature was just above 60 degrees at 8 A. M. and visibility was good. The barometer indicated the outlook for continued fair weather was good.

FIRM HOLD NOW, STIMSON SAYS

JUN 16 1944

War Secretary Believes Allies Are In France To Stay

Washington, June 15 (AP)—The Allies have now landed troops and supplies in France in numbers that leave slight chance that the Germans can throw the invasion forces back into the sea, it was indicated today by Secretary of War Stimson.

Saying a firm foothold has been gained, he told a news conference, "I believe we are there to stay until all of France is liberated and Germany is defeated."

Stimson pointed to new air and navy blows in the Marianas, the Kuriles and the Southwest Pacific as assurance that pressure on Japan will mount even during the heavy fighting yet ahead in Europe.

[His conference was prior to the army's announcement that Superfortresses had bombed Japan, but that American troops had landed on Saipan in the Marianas.)

All Goes Well In Italy

He said the campaign in Italy is going so well that the Nazis may have to send in reinforcements if they are to attempt a stand north of their present positions. Any such reinforcing, he noted, would be a drain on forces available for other fronts.

Inferentially, the War Secretary credited the air forces with giving the Allied land forces the time they needed to secure their footholds in Normandy.

He said the destruction or heavy damage to nine bridges over the Seine river was a big factor in delaying a major German counterattack. This delay, he added, was "longer than we could reasonably have counted upon."

West Wall Called No Pushover

At the same time, he warned that "we must expect counterattacks greater than any yet met."

Stimson said it was not true, as first reports of the invasion had led some to believe, that the Normandy coast was not strongly fortified.

"The West Wall was no myth or pushover," he said. "At various places the landings were relatively easy, thanks to an element of tactical surprise, a careful choice of the general region for the assault and the destruction of German communications by our preceding air attack.

"But everywhere German offshore mines, beach obstacles, guns and pillboxes were a dangerous hazard."

Blockade Cuts Allied Casualties, Says Briton

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Dingle Foot, parliamentary secretary of the British Ministry of Economic Warfare, declared today that the blockade of the European Continent was resulting in reduced casualties in the invasion of France.

He told a news conferenec that the blockade forces Germany to keep one out of every four workers in agricultural jobs. Without the blockade, he said, Germany could raise larger armies or use more workers to produce weapons.

BISHOPS SEND MESSAGE

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP)—Catholic bishops of the United States, learning of a reported plea by French bishops against bombing of civilians, have sent them a message of sympathy and a reminder that the American bishops repeatedly have spoken out against bombing of innocents in Britain, Europe or anywhere else.

The message was made public today by the National Catholic welfare conference.

It said the American bishops have received "assurances from their civil and military leaders that every precaution is being taken to confine the war within legitimate military objectives."

RUSSIANS GAIN IN FINN DRIVE

17 More Strong Points Taken Along Road To Viipuri

London, Friday, June 16 (AP)—The Russian drive for possession of Finland advanced farther up the Karelian isthmus yesterday with Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's troops capturing 17 more fortified Finnish strong points along the road to Viipuri, Moscow announced.

The Finns, taking advantage of every natural obstacle and fighting from strongly intreached permanent defense positions, were said to have resisted fiercely but vainly.

Moscow said Govorov's army in six days of battle had advanced 25 miles through the first and second Finnish defense zones and widened the breach to 47 miles.

37 Miles From Viipuri

During savage fighting Tuesday Soviet troops were reported to have opened a gaping hole in the Finns' second belt of permanent defenses between Mustomaki and Kutose and captured two important towns—Mustomaki, a railway station 37 miles from Viipuri on the line to Leningrad, and Ino, a coastal community south of Mustomaki.

The Finns were suffering enormous losses in manpower as well as great quantities of war material, the Soviet communique stated.

The war bulletin said Govorov's forces, in breaking through Finland's first and second defense zones, "destroyed or captured more than 500 German defense fortifications and overcame three powerful zones of anti-tank and anti-personnel obstacles, pits and tank obstacles and deeply echeloned mine fields.

235 Guns Captured

"In three resistance centers alone in the second enemy defense zone, namely at Mustomaki, Kuterselkae and Sakatyula, more than 50 reinforced concrete and steel emplacements for artillery and machine guns were captured."

Putting together preliminary data on the results of the first five days of the northern offensive which opened Saturday, the communique said 235 guns of various calibers, 180 mortars and 400 machine guns had been captured.

There was no change yesterday on the long Russian-German front, Moscow said, but the Red air force again bombed strategic German centers in Poland, hitting airdromes in the area of Bialystok, Baranowicze and Luniniec during the night.

Air Force Is Active

The midnight supplement to the communique said: "Our air force supporting the advance continued to strike massed blows at enemy defense fortifications, artillery positions and communications lines."

Although Moscow did not mention it, the Finns announced that Soviet planes had raided Viipuri Wednesday night.

The newspaper Pravda disclosed that the Russian battleship October Revolution and the heavy cruiser Kirov had bombarded enemy fortifications on the rim of the Karelian isthmus.

The communique supplement said southwest of Stanislawow in old Poland Soviet troops had rolled back Nazi attempts at armed reconnaissance.

REDS GAIN IN NORTH

London, June 15 (A. P.).—The Russian Army smashed another wedge today through Finland's heavily fortified second defense lines on the Karelian Isthmus between Mustomaki and Kutose; the Soviet communique announced tonight.

Inflict Heavy Casualties.

London, June 15 (A. P.).—Russian troops, bearing down with tanks, artillery and air support, are inflicting heavy casualties on the Finns on the Karelian front and have advanced within twenty-five miles of the seaport of Viipuri, Moscow declared today.

With their capital city of Helsinki, 150 miles northwest of Viipuri, endangered by the Soviet offensive, the Finns have thrown strong reinforcements into a fierce struggle with the Red Army in the area of Kuterselka and Jarvi, a broadcast communique from Moscow said.

Russian troops have penetrated the Finnish lines at Kuterselka, the Finns acknowledged today in a communique broadcast from Berlin. The bulletin also said Viipuri was attacked last night by 150 Soviet planes.

The new reserves occupied defensive positions between the lakes and marshy ground. This made tank operations extremely difficult, but Soviet troops managed to capture several Finnish support points despite stout opposition, the communique said.

Evidence of the ferocity of the fighting was contained in the Russian announcement, which said one unit of the Red Army had in three days wiped out 3,000 of the enemy, destroyed thirty guns, twenty-five mortars and eighty machine guns, and captured seventy other guns. The Soviet Air Force destroyed six artillery batteries, blew up three ammunition dumps and smashed a motorized column, the communique claimed.

Reds Push Finns Across River

Moscow, June 15 (AP)—The Red army hurled the Finns across an important but unnamed river today as it pressed on toward the port of Viipuri against an enemy who is throwing up what Red Star described as "a multitude of obstacles."

(Russian troops have penetrated the Finnish lines at Kuterselka, the Finns acknowledged today in a communique broadcast from Berlin and heard in London. The bulletin also said Viipuri was attacked last night by 150 Soviet planes.)

All dispatches stressed the difficult fighting conditions faced by Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's troops. In numerous places the Russians were employing special squads to cut through dense forests and build highways.

Stiffer Resistance

There were many indications that Finnish resistance was stiffening and that the Soviets had come up against the main Finnish defenses, but no indications that the Finns had been able to stop the Red Army in any sector.

Falling back towards Viipuri, the Finns chopped down hundreds of tall firs across the highway and railroad line.

The Finns were using the forests for ambushes, causing extreme caution on the part of Soviet troops anxious to save every tank in the near wilderness of the Karelian Isthmus.

Threat To Helsinki

The Russians introduced heavy bombers in efforts to blast through the forests. An Izvestia correspondent reported that sailors from the Baltic fleet had entered the campaign, but he did not specify where.

With their capital city of Helsinki, 150 miles northwest of Viipuri, endangered by the Soviet offensive, the Finns have thrown strong reinforcements into a fierce struggle with the Red army in the area of Kuterselka and Jarvi, a Russian communique heard in London said.

Evidence of the ferocity of the fighting was contained in the announcement, which said one unit of the Red army had in three days wiped out 3,000 of the enemy, destroyed 30 guns, 25 mortars and 80 machine guns and captured 70 other guns. The Soviet Air Force destroyed six artillery batteries, blew up three ammunition dumps and smashed a motorized column.

German commentators persisted in regarding the battle on the Finnish front as a prelude to action on a grand scale elsewhere on the long Eastern land front.

U.S. ARMY EXECUTES SEVEN IN ENGLAND

London, June 15 (A. P.).—Herbert Morrison, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, told the House of Commons today that fourteen members of the United States Armed Forces in the United Kingdom had been sentenced to death by United States courts-martial and that seven of the sentences had been carried out.

In each case where the death sentence was followed the offense charged was murder and one was a case of murder and rape, he said in reply to a question by Laborite Rhys Davis.

Mr. Morrison said three sentences have been commuted and four are still subject to review.

Tito Holds Off Nazi Thrusts

Reports German Concentration 110 Miles from Belgrade

LONDON June 15 (AP).—Reporting a German concentration of forces about 110 miles southwest of Belgrade in the Plevlje and Prijepoljeu sectors, Marshal Tito announced today his Yugoslav partisans had repelled thus far all Nazi "attempts to penetrate into liberated territory."

His broadcast communique said the partisans had destroyed six trains, killing many officers and men, and added that 320 Germans and Chetniks had been annihilated in battle. Capture of 50 men and 60 horses also was announced.

Nazi General Shot In Bern

Bern, Switzerland, June 15 (AP)—Gestapo Major General Werner was reported today to have been captured by French partisans, tried and executed after his refusal to sign an order releasing imprisoned patriots.

The Gazette de Lausanne said Werner was captured several weeks ago and that a group of his followers were killed in the skirmish.

More Italian Towns Fall in Allied Advance

Rome, June 15 (AP)—Bursting through another line of defenses hastily thrown up by the retreating Germans beyond Rome, Allied forces have captured the large Italian towns of Orvieto, Aquila and Narni in a general advance and were fighting tonight in the outskirts of the important industrial and communications center of Terni, 45 miles north of the capital.

American troops shoving up the Tyrrhenian coast captured Magliano and threatened Bengodi, only 14 miles from Grosseto, after having seized vast quantities of Nazi food supplies at Orbetello. They had entirely cleared lateral Highway 74, running inland from the coast past the northern shore of Lake Bolsena.

Eighth Army columns now carrying the brunt of the inland advance, fought their way into Orvieto, 57 miles northwest of Rome; Narni, 41 miles due north of the capital, and Aquila, 54 miles to the northeast above Avezzano. Lieut. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese's forces were checked temporarily on the outskirts of Terni by blown bridges and a stiff German counterattack.

Allies Gain Along Italian Front

Rome, June 15 (AP)—Allied troops, breaking the stiffening German resistance of the last three days, have made a general advance all along their line in Italy, taking Orvieto, Aquila and Narni and pushing onward, Allied headquarters announced today.

Orvieto is 57 miles northwest of Rome; Narni, 41 miles north, and Aquila, 54 miles northeast. Along the west coast the Fifth Army has advanced 79 miles beyond Rome.

As one Eighth Army column entered Orvieto, an important road junction northeast of Lake Bolsena, another reached the outskirts of Terni, but was delayed by a blown bridge and a German counterattack.

Magliano Entered

Fifth Army troops along the west coast met determined enemy resistance at Magliano, 11 miles northeast of Orbetello, but swept it aside and entered the town.

The fall of Orbetello itself, a west coast town 71 miles beyond Rome and a center of German resistance, was reported last night.

In the Lake Bolsena area French troops continued to advance and the Americans reached Pitigliano, 11 miles west of the northern end of the lake, and sent reconnaissance elements farther.

(Reuter quoted the German DNB news agency as saying that the Nazis have evacuated Aquapendente, eight miles north of Lake Bolsena.)

Allied troops in the Adriatic sector are across the Saline river.

Fresh Troops Saved

Despite the arrival of fresh German divisions in Italy Allied armies still are encountering only formations made up of remnants of the 14th German Army. Apparently these are being used for the present delaying action and the new divisions are being saved for a stand farther north.

Allied heavy bombers attacked oil refineries in the Budapest area and northern Yugoslavia while meduim bombers attacked rail targets on the Italian east coast and south of Florence.

Eighteen German planes were destroyed in all operations and 18 Allied aircraft were missing.

Transport Planes Bagged

A large number of huge six-engined Merseburg-323 transport planes used by the Germans to supply the Russian front were knocked out and 30 fuel cars were left flaming yesterday by American Lightnings in the raid on Kecskemet airfield, 55 miles southwest of Budapest.

An announcement said large fires also were set in six oil refineries in Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Two-ton blockbuster bombs were rained on railyards at Nis, Yugoslavia, last night by RAF Halifaxes, Liberators and Wellingtons.

Shipping Attacked

(A Reuter dispatch from London said that medium and fighter bombers struck at German shipping in Leghorn harbor.

(An Italian frontier report in the Swiss newspaper La Suisse said, according to Reuter, that Field Marshal Albert von Kesselring is preparing to evacuate Leghorn and that ships are already filled with cement to block the harbor.)

Nazi Air Transports Strafed.

Allied Air Forces Headquarters, Italy, June 15 (A. P.).—A large number of huge six-engined Merseburg-323 transport planes used by the Germans to supply the Russian front were knocked out and thirty fuel cars were left flaming yesterday by American Lightnings in a raid on Kecskemet airfield, fifty-five miles southwest of Budapest.

DAY

Two-ton blockbusters bombs were rained on railyards at Nis Yugoslavia, last night by RAF Halifaxes, Liberators and Wellingtons. Rail lines to Istanbul Belgrade, Sofia and Salonica radiate from that point.

NORGAARD

A total of eighteen German planes were destroyed yesterday, mostly in combats over Hungary. The same number of Allied planes were lost.

Lone Tank Holds Foe For 26 Hours

FINAL

JUN 16 1944

With the Fifth Army in Latera, June 14 (AP—Delayed)—This mountain stronghold has fallen to the Allies and the Nazis' lateral route, highway No. 74, has been punctured after a three-day battle largely because a single United States tank held the 1,800-foot Monte Calvalgio all alone against enemy attacks for 26 hours.

They call the tank "Ate Ball."

She and her crew of six just stood there and took it and fought back from Monday afternoon until Tuesday evening.

NIGHT

Hold Despite Thrusts

More than a company of Germans, backed by artillery, mortars, machine guns and rifle grenades made repeated thrusts in an attempt to overwhelm the tank crew and regain the peak northeast of Lake Messina, which commands a view of the entire area to Latera.

And when relief forces came they found the tank, Lieut. Robert C. Thompson, of Dallas, Texas, and the rest of the outfit still holding the key spot, surrounded by enemy dead. Some 25 scattered Germans were captured on the sides of the hill.

Crew members included Sergt. Robert V. Cobbs, Roanoke, Va.; Corporal Roy T. McAllister, Atlanta, Ga.; Sergt. Norman Murphy, Salem, S. D., and Privates Henry B. Mackinney, Butler, Pa., and Hubert Aldrich, Savannah, Ga.

Mystery Cloaks Rome 'Arrest' Of Princess' Daughter, 22

JUN 16 1944

By GEORGE TUCKER

Rome, June 15 (AP)—Allied Military Government authorities promised today to press an investigation of the disappearance of Bona de Seta, 22-year-old daughter of a Princess and stepdaughter of Prince Valerio Pignatelli, who was "arrested" yesterday by two men wearing United States Army uniforms and armed with pistols.

AMG officers and all others in authority denied knowledge of reasons for such an arrest or where the black-haired girl might be held.

The arrest was made at the home of Baroness Josephine Pomeroy Marincola, of Hopewell, N. J., and Washington, D. C., with whom the girl had lived for several months.

NIGHT

Mother, Stepfather Arrested

The girl's mother and stepfather were arrested in Naples by Allied military authorities some time ago.

Sergt. Robert L. Pomeroy, of Hopewell, brother of the Baroness, who is serving as an interpreter with an American infantry division, said the first attempt to arrest the girl was made Tuesday night, when two Italians in civilian clothes went to the apartment and demanded that the girl accompany them.

Pomeroy said that when the Italians were unable to produce warrants he forced them to leave.

Before leaving they said they did not need warrants, that they were working for the Americans and would return.

Italians Return

Later the Italians returned with a third officer, who said he was of the carabinieri and that his name was Captain Foggio. He said he was working for the AMG. Pomeroy again demanded the authority for that kind of arrest, and when they were unable to produce the warrant, he compelled them to leave without the girl.

Yesterday morning two men in American army uniforms with "U. S." on the collars and wearing automatic pistols appeared and said they were making "a forced arrest." One of the Americans identified himself as J. P. Spina, and said, "I take the responsibility for this action." The other was a man named Fitzgerald.

Produces "Arrest Slip"

They then produced a black slip bearing the words "arrest slip." They admitted they did not know the name of the girl and filled out the slip in the presence of the girl and Baroness Pomeroy, the sergeant said.

"I'll sign this later," Spina was quoted.

Spina said a man dressed as a British major had come in and protested the fact that an American sergeant (Pomeroy) had thwarted the arrest originally.

It remains unexplained why the man in the British major's uniform did not assign the British police to the task.

Girl Helped Refugees

The Baroness said the girl had been untiring in her efforts to serve the Allied cause and had given unlimited assistance to British and American prisoners who escaped the Nazis and hid in Rome.

When the matter was called to the attention of Brig. Gen. Edgar Hume yesterday, he said he knew nothing about it, but would investigate. Today he terminated his duties as chief AMG officer in Rome and was succeeded by Col. Norman E. Fiske. Fiske's aide said tonight an investigation would be pushed.

Baroness Marincola and her children retain their American citizenship. The Baroness said she hoped to return to America after the war, adding that, "there's no place on earth like it."

Fascist Streets Renamed

JUN 16 1944

Rome Substitutes "Bruno Buozzi" for Blackshirt "Martyrs"

ROME, June 15 (AP).—The elimination of Fascist street names in Rome has begun.

One of the first changes turned the Street of the Fascist Martyrs into Bruno Buozzi Street.

DAY

The "Fascist Martyrs" were members of the strong-arm squads of the early days who met death at the hands of anti-Fascists reluctant to submit to the castor-oil treatment.

Bruno Buozzi was head of the anti-Fascist Italian Labor Federation. He was executed by the Germans before they left Rome.

Move Begun To Set Up Free Hungary Group

Vatican City, June 15 (AP)—Gabriel Apor, Hungarian Minister to the Vatican, today invited other Hungarian envoys in neutral countries to join him in forming a committee which virtually would amount to a free Hungarian Government committee.

In telegrams to Hungarian Ministers at Lisbon, Stockholm, Madrid, Helsinki and the consul general at Istanbul, Apor said Hungary had been overrun by a "foreign army" which had rendered the Government inoperative.

He proposed formation of a committee "representing the constitutional liberties of Hungary."

The committee, he said, should work to regain the freedom of Hungary and to obtain for the country a "peace based on justice and good understanding with our close neighbors."

Patriots Carry Off 300 Germans From Tarbes

NIGHT

JUN 16 1944

Irun, Spain, June 15 (AP)—Reports reaching this town on the French border tonight said the French underground Maquis, after capturing the Gascony town of Tarbes Sunday, abandoned it Wednesday night, taking with them 300 German prisoners and leaving in ruins the arsenal, railway yards, the Hispano-Suiza airplane motor factory and a truck factory.

The frontier accounts, coming from men who had a hand in the attack, gave these details:

Five hundred men of the Maquis took the town Sunday with the aid of civil officials who ostensibly were Vichy men, but who actually had worked with the underground for more than a year.

NIGHT

Guerrillas Delay Tanks

While a guerrilla ambush delayed the tanks and artillery that the Germans ordered to rush to Tarbes, the Maquis burned everything of military value, took off all able-bodied German soldiers, and aided the town officials to escape into Spain. When the German reinforcements arrive, they will find the Tarbes garrison consists only of a dozen wounded Germans.

Most German troops all through that area were described as boys and non-Germans.

Large-scale desertion of these troops was reported, but the informants did not know what became of them. A few have tried to cross into Spain, but the others were said simply to have vanished.

Bank Of France Moves Liquid Assets To Italy

JUN 16 1944

Port Bou, Spain, June 15 (AP)—All liquid assets of the Bank of France, including billions of francs in bank notes and what little foreign exchange remained in the vaults, have been transferred to Paris from Riom and Chamalieres in central France, to protect them from French Partisans, a Vichy official who crossed the frontier said today.

The transfer was made on the night of June 13 in German armored cars, the official said.

Turkey's Foreign Minister Resigns

JUN 16 1944

Ankara, June 15 (AP)—Numan Menemencioglu, Turkey's Foreign Minister for the last two years, resigned today in a dispute involving passage of German ships through the Dardanelles, and Premier Sukru Saracoglu, taking over the job, declared that in the future no armed vessels would be permitted to pass through the straits.

NIGHT

Menemencioglu's resignation followed a British protest over passage of German armed vessels between the Black and Aegean seas and a meeting this morning of the Cabinet which, according to an official announcement, "disapproved of the policy of the Foreign Minister during the last few days."

Summoning foreign press representatives, Saracoglu told them the "might and right" of Turkey would not "be used against her ally, Great Britain, and her friends, Russia and the United States."

Saracoglu said one 800-ton German vessel armed with 3.7-inch guns had been detained in the straits and would not be permitted to pass through, that passage or craft of the Mannheim and Ems types, 50-ton ships carrying three-pounders, would be forbidden in the future, and that all German merchant ships would in the future be examined carefully to make sure they were of merchant type.

Minister Resigns, Turks Say

JUN 16 1944

New York, June 15 (AP)—The Turkish radio said today that Foreign Minister Numan Menemencioglu resigned after a Cabinet meeting during which he failed to gain support for his policies.

The broadcast in Arabic, reported by U. S. Government monitors, added that Premier Sukru Saracoglu would take over the Foreign Ministry.

Berlin radio dispatched news of the resignation as a "flash" under a Sofia dateline.

Conferred With Eden

Menemencioglu has been Foreign Minister 22 months. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden conferred with him in Cairo after the British official and Secretary of State Hull had been together in Moscow in the spring of 1943. He accompanied President Ismet Inonu of Turkey to Cairo in December of 1943, where the two spent three days talking with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Last April 20 Menemencioglu announced that Turkey no longer would permit the exportation of chrome into Germany—a diplomatic victory for the Allies.

BRITISH TROOPS ATTACK MOGAUNG

JUN 16 1944

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 15.—(AP) British troops heavily supported by U. S. warplanes struck today at Mogaung to wipe out this supporting base of the embattled Japanese garrison in Myitkyina, 31 miles east-northeast of Mogaung on the severed Burma railway.

Air-borne Chindits of Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's command and a jungle force under Brigadier "Mad Mike" Calvert secretly concentrated east of the town made the attack. Gunfire and explosives poured from American bombers and fighters called the British closed in.

NIGHT

The initial thrust caught the Japanese by surprise, a field observer said, but the enemy eventually recovered and the battle is developing fiercely with heavy casualties on both sides.

The British troops, which included the Lancashire Fusiliers and the South Staffordshires, seized two neighboring villages, Pina-Nmi and Mohaung. A Japanese ammunition dump estimated at 200 railway carloads was among the booty.

Mogaung had been almost isolated for four weeks, its avenues of supply cut or brought under fire in one phase of the campaign which has led to seizure of part of Myitkyina by Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese and American jungle forces and has entirely isolated Kamaing, an even larger enemy base 44 miles northwest of Myitkyina.

CHINDITS LAUNCH MOGAUNG ATTACK

JUN 16 1944

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 15 (A. P.).—The battle for the North Burma town of Mogaung was joined today, with Chindits (British airborne troops) and a jungle force under Brig.-Gen. (Mad Mike) Calvert, striking by surprise from the east, aided by maximum American bomber and fighter support.

DAY

Capturing the neighboring villages of Pina-Nmi and Mohaung the force—which included Lancashire Fusiliers and South Staffordshires—took an ammunition dump, estimated to hold 200 railway carloads.

Observers reported that the Japs were caught completely unaware by the initial thrust. The battle is developing in fierce proportions with heavy casualties on both sides, they said.

JAP UNITS BESIEGE CHANGSHA BASTION

MOBY 1944

CHUNGKING, June 15. — (AP) Japanese troops have crossed the Liuyang river, last line of defense before Changsha, by-passed the city on the east and then slashed westward toward the Siang river to cut off the southward line of retreat for the besieged defenders, the Chinese High command indicated tonight.

NIGHT

Changsha lies on the east bank of the Siang.

The only chance of escape now remaining to the garrison forces, the High command intimated, is to cross the Siang. But the invaders on the west bank have but a few miles to go to seal off the city completely.

At the same time Japanese mechanized units are subjecting the key Canton-Hankow railway city to a direct assault from the southeast, field reports indicated.

The Chinese position in Honan province, 400 miles to the north, also has deteriorated with the Japanese evidently trying to regain the gap created by the defenders in the Peiping-Hankow railway.

The enemy has recaptured Siping railway town 90 miles south of their base at Chenghsien.

In Chekiang, the High command announced belatedly, a fresh Japanese drive westward along the trackless Chekiang-Kiangsi railway, based at Kinhwa, has stabbed 30 miles to the vicinity of Lingyu.

AMERICAN FORCES INVADING SAIPAN GAIN BEACHHEADS

JUN 16 1944

Forces Drive Inland Despite Artillery Fire, Tank Attacks.

WARSHIPS RIP ISLAND

Good Progress Being Made against Jap Defenses, Says Nimitz.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP) American invaders of Saipan, strategic Pacific island only 1,500 miles southeast of Tokyo, have secured beachheads and are making "good progress" in the face of artillery and tank fire, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced tonight.

"In general fighting is heavy but good progress is being made against well organized defenses," Nimitz said.

Text of Communique

The text of his communique, No. 50 of Pacific Fleet headquarters:

"Assault troops have secured beachheads on Saipan island and are advancing inland against artillery, mortar and machine gun fire.

"Virtually all heavy coastal and anti-aircraft batteries on the island were knocked out by naval gun fire and bombing. Our troops have captured Agingan point.

"In the town of Charan, Kanoa, brisk fighting is continuing.

"The enemy has attempted several counter-attacks with tanks. These attacks have been broken up by our troops with the support of ships and aircraft.

"In general, fighting is heavy but good progress is being made against well organized defenses."

Nimitz reported the first landings on Saipan were made Wednesday morning under cover of a bombardment by United States warships and the bombing and strafing of carrier planes.

Troops Storm Ashore

Additional assault forces were storming ashore despite enemy resistance they were supported by carrier aircraft and the big guns of surface units, including battle wagons, cruisers and destroyers.

This bold move to advance American bases 1,100 miles west of the Marshall islands climaxed four days of pre-invasion assault by powerful Pacific fleet task forces, starting last Saturday. The first day of the attack wiped out virtually all of the enemy's air force based in the southern Marianas.

Remnants of that air power and enemy shipping in and around the islands were disposed of Sunday and Monday. Then the invading forces turned their attention to obliterating enemy defenses in preparation for the landings.

Saipan, Tinian, Pagan, Rota and Guam islands, the latter the former American naval base, were well worked over in the preparatory stages of the attack.

Experienced Troops

The American forces were described by their commander, Vice Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, as the most experienced amphibious war fleet in the world. He told war correspondents prior to the landing that this thrust into Japan's inner defense lines was designed to destroy Saipan as an enemy base and convert it to Allied use. William Worden, Associated Press war correspondent with the expeditionary forces, reported the press conference.

In invading Saipan, Turner's forces vaulted far beyond Truk, major enemy base in the central Caroline islands. When a firm hold is established on Saipan, it will place American forces 675 miles to the rear (west) of Truk. Guam, southernmost of the Marianas, also would be outflanked.

Storming enemy beaches is nothing new for Turner's forces. They have seen such action before many times. They will, however, be up against mobile enemy artillery for the first time, and against rough formidable terrain. A larger land area also will be involved, compared with the small atolls of previous invasions.

Planes dropping rockets with their bombs paced the assault forces to the beaches. Showers of rockets were directed against enemy guns and defenses by fast firing LCIs (Infantry landing craft) and by other gunboats.

Spectacular Operation

The operation was believed to be the most spectacular of the Pacific war, due to the major use of rocket firing planes and ships. These new weapons have been used previously in the Pacific only on a minor scale.

Many hours before Nimitz made his announcement the Tokyo radio said a landing attempt on Saipan had been beaten off by "accurate Japanese fire" which threw the invaders "into wild confusion." Then it admitted that later Americans reached shore on both Tinian and Saipan. Nimitz has not mentioned a landing on Tinian.

Saipan is the second largest island in the 500-mile long Marianas chain. Westward lies a clear ocean sweep to the Philippines, Formosa and the China coast.

Saipan is 13 miles long by five miles wide. Unlike the narrow ribbon-like atoll islands of the Marshalls and Gilberts, Saipan's area of 71 square miles contains flat plateau land on which air-fields large enough for sizable air operations can be built.

Japs Develop Island

The Japanese have been developing the island as a major air base and secondary naval point since a League of Nations mandate in 1920 gave Japan control of all the Marianas except Guam.

Before the war, Saipan's population included about 20,000 Japanese, most of them imported to work in the sugar cane fields. There were also 20,000 Chamorro natives and about 800 blacks from the Carolines.

Garapan, largest town on the island, has a peacetime population of about 10,000. Before and since the war started, the Japanese probably made considerable improvement in Tanapag harbor, a small reef-screened anchorage on the western side of the island. It is likely they also developed Magicienne bay on the east coast.

Brisk Battle Reported In Town—Coastal And Anti-Aircraft Guns Knocked Out By Bombing And Shelling By Warships

JUN 16 1944

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Friday, June 16 (AP)—American troops which landed 1,500 miles southeast of Tokyo Wednesday on Saipan, in the Marianas, have secured beachheads, captured a headland, fought their way into a sugar-mill town and crushed Japanese tank-paced counterattacks, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced tonight.

In a communique covering action through today, he reported that Agingan Point, a headland on the southwest corner of the 13-mile-long island, has been seized.

The Yank invaders, supported by a huge carrier-plane force and guns of battleships which knocked out enemy coastal guns and anti-aircraft batteries, have fought their way two miles north into the sugar-mill town of Charan Kanoa.

Text Of Communique

The text of Admiral Nimitz' communique:

"Assault troops have secured beachheads on Saipan Island and are advancing inland against artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire.

"Virtually all heavy coastal and anti-aircraft batteries on the island were knocked out by naval gunfire and bombing. Our troops have captured Agingan Point.

Brisk Fighting In Town

"In the town of Charan Kanoa brisk fighting is continuing.

"The enemy has attempted several counterattacks with tanks. These attacks have been broken up by our troops with the support of ships and aircraft.

"In general, fighting is heavy, but good progress is being made against well-organized defenses."

Charan Kanoa is one of the few sizable communities on the island.

Japs Claim Repulse

The Tokyo radio claimed last night that the invasion of Saipan has cost the Allies 1,800 casualties and the loss of 40 landing barges.

[The broadcast, monitored by NBC, asserted, "Obviously this invasion of Saipan was timed to coincide with the invasion of Europe, but we have thrown the Americans back to the sea."

[A Japanese imperial headquarters announcement, transmitted to Japanese areas, acknowledged "enemy forces" had landed on Saipan and stated that they "are now being engaged in battle," the Federal Communications Commission reported late.]

Follows Intense Bombardment

The assault on Saipan, Japanese air and naval base, was launched Wednesday morning after intensive preparatory bombing and bombardment of it and neighboring Japanese defense points.

An earlier Pacific Fleet communique said:

"Operations for the seizure of Saipan Island, in the Marianas group, have been initiated by strong Pacific Ocean areas forces.

"Assault troops have effected landings on Saipan Island, following intensive preparatory bombardment of Saipan, Tinian, Pagan, Guam and Rota islands by carrier-based aircraft and by a portion of the battleships, cruisers and destroyers of the Pacific fleet.

Calls Casualties Moderate

"Landings are being continued against strong opposition under cover of supporting bombardment by our air and surface forces.

"Initial reports indicate that our casualties are moderate."

This bold move to advance American bases 1,100 miles west of the Marshall islands is the climax of four days of pre-invasion assault by powerful Pacific fleet task forces, starting last Saturday. The first day of the attack wiped out virtually all of the enemy's air force based in the southern Marianas.

Remnants of that air power and enemy shipping in and around the islands were disposed of Sunday and Monday. Then the invading forces turned their attention to obliterating enemy defenses in preparation for the landings.

Five Islands Worked Over

Saipan, Tinian, Pagan, Rota and Guam islands, the latter the former American naval base, were well worked over in the preparatory stages of the attack.

The American forces were described by their commander, Vice-Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, as the most experienced amphibious war fleet in the world.

He told war correspondents prior to the landing that this thrust into Japan's inner defense lines was designed to destroy Saipan as an enemy base and convert it to Allied use.

NIMITZ TERMS FIGHTING HEAVY, BUT SAYS TROOPS SEIZED POINT OF ISLAND

JUN 16 1944

TROOPS FACING MANY OBSTACLES IN SAIPAN ATTACK

JUN 16 1944

WITH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE TO SAIPAN, June 10—(Delayed)—(AP) Now bound on the most audacious move yet made against Japanese territory, this huge force of men and ships has been described by its commander as the most experienced amphibious war fleet in the world today.

Vice Adm. Richmond Kelly Turner described the impending operations against Saipan in the southern Marianas islands as designed to destroy Saipan as a Japanese base and convert it into a base for American use.

Turner pointed out the forces in this action have fought on the beaches before. Most of them have seen action many times.

For the ships, training for this move began at Attu and has been going on since.

The whole machine is geared to move against Saipan where mountains, forests and larger land masses are added to shore-going difficulties met in the Gilbert and Marshall atolls. Turner pointed out one great difference between this and previous Pacific operations was that mobile artillery could be expected as an integral part of Saipan's defense. In the Marshalls and atolls, advancing troops met either fixed guns or no guns at all above the caliber of mortars.

Here the operations cannot stop on the beaches as they did in effect previously.

Turner warned that lightning victories of the Marshalls may not be duplicated at Saipan because of the terrain, the known defenses, and the extreme distances from big American bases.

It is believed the operation will be successful, but heavier fighting is anticipated than in previous atoll actions. As outlined by Turner, the operational plan follows the Marshalls pattern which was made more spectacular and terrible by the use of rockets from both planes and ships.

Infantry landings are covered by showers of rockets from fast-firing LCIS (landing craft, infantry) and other gunboats.

Warships Hit Japs Hard

JUN 16 1944

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 15 (AP)—The most sustained task-force assault of the Pacific war by bombarding battleships, cruisers and destroyers and by waves of carrier planes focused attention today on the Japanese-held Marianas Islands, including Guam.

The Marianas were the core of action ranging along more than 3,000 miles from the Kuriles, where another task force shelled the enemy within 500 miles of Japan, south to Palau, gateway to the Philippines.

Most Recent Actions

The latest reports:

1. Extended through the fourth straight day the shelling and bombing attacks on the Marianas, 1,500 miles southeast of Tokyo.

2. Disclosed a two-day task force raid on Kuriles bases, 1,060 miles northeast of Tokyo.

3. Made clear that Central and Southwest Pacific bombers are ganging up on Truk and Southwest Pacific planes are hammering steadily at Palau in order to prevent those two Caroli[nes]

Battlewagons In Action

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said that warships, including big battlewagons, opened up their guns on Tinian and Saipan on Monday and that carrier planes on Tuesday prolonged the attacks they began Saturday. He gave no inkling that the operation has ended.

The warships, which had to sail more than 500 miles west of Truk and more than 1,000 miles beyond their nearest big base at Kwajalein lagoon in the Marshalls, started fires with their shells at Tanapag harbor, the town of Garapa and the sugar mill center of Charankao on Saipan.

JUN 16 1944

No American Ships Damaged

"Our ships suffered no damage," the communique said.

Also on Monday, planes from the flat-tops spread their attack 175 miles north of Saipan to Pagan Island, where three enemy planes were downed, bringing the four-day toll to at least 144.

More than 60 enemy survivors of one ship have been taken prisoner. No losses of American warships have been reported, but loss of 19 attacking planes and 19 airmen was acknowledged.

More than 2,600 miles north of Guam, another task force Monday and Tuesday shelled Matsuwa in the Kuriles, while carrier planes pounded Paramushiro and Shumushu farther north.

—already credited with inflicting losses on Japanese shipping and air power—might still be operating in that area.

First reports of American offensive operations in the past have come from the Japanese on more than one occasion.

DAY

Beaten Off, Japs Say

An attempt to land in the Marianas would be the most ambitious venture yet undertaken by American forces in the Pacific.

The Japanese, as usual, maintained they had beaten off the first landing attempt at Saipan, but said that "heavy fighting" still was going on.

Tokyo acknowledged only yesterday that the Marianas were under attack by a naval task force, and made extravagant claims concerning the damage the Japanese had inflicted on the attacking naval units and aircraft. The task force operations were first announced by Nimitz 24 hours earlier.

Tokyo Gives Details

Today's broadcast said that attempted landings were made from a force of 20 transports which appeared off Saipan about 6.30 A. M.

About 70 landing barges and 20 or more special craft were employed in the actual landing operations, Tokyo said.

The Marianas group is situated on a direct line between the big Japanese naval base at Truk—which has been a repeated target of American raids—and the home islands of Japan.

Truk Naval Base 2 Days

EVENING STAR JUN 16 1944

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Friday, June 16 (AP)—A two-day 186-ton bombing raid on Truk—heaviest assault by land-based planes on that naval base—and the war's first Liberator attack on Yap were reported today by headquarters.

Large formations of Admiralty-based Liberators blasted Truk in daylight Monday and Tuesday, a concerted attack exceeded in the mid-Pacific only by carrier planes.

During the first assault, the raiders dropped 90 tons of bombs on Dublon Island, destroyed buildings and caused fires. In repelling 15 to 20 interceptors, they shot down six.

NIGHT

3 Jap Planes Downed

The second flight of Liberators unloaded 96 tons of bombs on Dublon and Eten islets, shooting down three Japanese planes. Other planes bombed Nomoi atoll, 150 miles southeast of Truk.

No report of American losses was made. In the two-way intensified bombing by planes from the Southwest and Central Pacific, Truk has been attacked 20 times in little more than two weeks.

Land-based bombers opened the assault on Yap in a day and night attack Tuesday, an apparent flank prelude to the landings in the Marianas. Yap, a former major cable station, is about 250 miles northeast of Palau and less than 600 miles southwest of Guam. It is a heavily fortified seaplane and land plane base, approximately 930 nautical miles northwest of the Admiralties.

Aimed At Airdrome

Large fires were started during the attack, aimed at the airdrome.

Yap was assaulted March 30 by carrier-based planes.

No further progress was reported in stalemated land fighting on Biak Island, in the Schouten group off northern Dutch New Guinea. American forces hold Mokmer airstrip, already in service, but have been halted in their advance toward two other airfields. Biak is within bomber range of the southern Philippines.

chief in the South Pacific today to Vice-Admiral John Henry Newton, 62, his deputy commander.

Halsey is being assigned to a new and as yet undisclosed role in the Pacific. The formal change of command of the South Pacific and of the South Pacific force of the United States Pacific Fleet was accomplished in a simple ceremony here.

HAMPSON

In Command Since 1942

Halsey became commander of the South Pacific area as a vice-admiral on October 18, 1942. Forces under his command defeated the Japanese in the battle of Santa Cruz on October 26, 1942, and in the battle of Guadalcanal the following November 13 to 15. He was promoted to full admiral November 18, 1942.

Halsey sent a ringing "well-done" message to his South Pacific forces in a statement which said, in part:

"I send this parting well-done to my victorious all-services South Pacific fighting team. You have met, measured and mowed down the best the enemy had on land and sea and air.

DAY

Hundreds Of Ships Liquidated

"You have sent hundreds of Tojo's ships, thousands of his planes and tens of thousands of his slippery minions whence they came, never again to attack our flag nor the flags of our allies.

"You blasted the Japs in grim victory at Guadalcanal; you drove him back and hunted him out; you broke his offensive spirit in those smashing Bougainville-Rabaul blows at his ships and planes and troops in November, and you smeared him and rolled over him easily to occupy Emirau. Now carry on the smashing South Pacific traditions under your new commander and may we join up again farther along the road to Tokyo."

Newton Former Nimitz Aide

Vice-Admiral Newton came to the South Pacific command early this year after serving as deputy commander in chief of Pacific areas under Admiral Chester Nimitz at Pearl Harbor.

lantic and Pacific, work for which he received the Legion of Merit.

He is a native of Pennsylvania, graduated from Annapolis in 1905 and served in China, aboard the old U. S. S. Montana in European waters, and commanded the destroyer Patterson in the first world war. He is married to the former Elsie Barr Curry of Key West, Fla., and has one son.

The Oak Leaf Cluster was added to the Air Medal with which the following had previously been decorated: Tech. Sergt. Andrew W. Hutnik of 6417 Bergenline avenue, West New York; Tech. Sergt. Michael A. Chipiloski of Phillipsburg, and Staff Sergt. Richard M. Mather of Hamilton Square.

ADM. NEWTON GETS PACIFIC COMMAND

JUN 16 1944

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, June 15—(AP) Clearing the way for a new assignment, Adm. William F. Halsey, Jr., today turned the command of South Pacific Allied forces over to Vice Adm. John Newton, 62, former deputy commander.

"You have met, measured and mowed down the best the enemy had on land and sea and air," Halsey said in a farewell message to his forces.

NIGHT

"Now carry on the smashing South Pacific traditions under your new commander, and may we join again farther along the road to Tokyo."

Halsey led Allied sea, land and air forces from Guadalcanal to a juncture with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Southwest Pacific forces. Newton is a former deputy chief of naval operations, a veteran of China and the First World war. He helped plan and execute grand naval strategy in both the Pacific and Atlantic in this war.

Reich Knockout In 1944 Held U.S. Aim

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Conveying the "hope" of military leaders that Germany will be knocked out of the war by next January 1, Representative Snyder (D., Pa.) urged the House today to approve unanimously a $49,109,002,795 "Hitler doom bill."

The bill, to finance the War Department for the year starting July 1, was described by the chairman of the Appropriations Military subcommittee as one that also "will soften Tojo for his doom that shortly will follow" the downfall of Germany.

It boosts to approximately $390,000,000,000 war and defense obligations incurred since July 1, 1940.

Approval Foreseen

"This bill . . . provides General Eisenhower with his knockout punch," the Pennsylvanian told a House waiting to give its approval to the measure. "The first round started June 6. The day of the last round we just cannot predict, but we can fervently hope that it will come before the snow flies again."

"It is the hope of our military leadership that Germany will be out of the war before another year begins," he added.

The bill carries $15,436,031,795 in new funds and $33,672,971,000 in reappropriations of funds previously allotted.

Delay Held Possible

Referring to testimony given the Appropriations Committee by Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, that the scale of battles to be fought would be "beyond anything heretofore experienced," Snyder said the pending bill provided the funds for the manpower and material needed for large-scale offensives.

"Wars just do not always run on pre-established schedules," he added, referring to allowances for more prolonged action which "might occasion delays not presently anticipated."

Review Promised

Snyder declared it would be "unwise" to reduce the army's budget in the midst of a life-and-death war, but promised that his committee would review the entire program in December to determine if any savings could be effected.

"There is sound basis today for providing for contingent factors," he said, "because the Lord only knows what tomorrow may bring forth. . . . If the Allied nations are able to force the Germans out of the war before the end of the year, this bill very probably would contain too much money. I do not know who under heaven today can give assurances of such an eventuality."

Roosevelt Asks World Peace Body Setup

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—President Roosevelt called today for creation of a world organization of all "peace-loving" nations to maintain peace and security—backed by force if necessary.

"We are not thinking of a superstate with its own police force and other paraphernalia of coercive power," the President said, but added that member nations of the world organization would maintain adequate forces "for joint action when necessary."

For the mechanics of a peace-promoting organization, Mr. Roosevelt proposed in a statement:

1. An international organization comprising all peace-loving nations.

2. A council, elected annually by these nations, to include the four major nations and "a suitable number of other nations." (The Big Four are the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China.)

3. An International Court of Justice to deal primarily with disputes capable of settlement.

Joint Armed Action

U. S. Is Landing Troops On Saipan, Japs Say

JUN 16 1944

London, June 15 (AP)—A powerful American task force, which has been harassing Japanese strongholds in the Marianas Islands since last Saturday, is now attempting to land troops on Saipan Island, the Tokyo radio declared today—a daring operation, which, if successful, would give the United States an ocean base within 1,500 miles of Tokyo.

(The OWI said a Japanese Imperial headquarters communique announced that a landing attempt also was being made at Tinian Island, in the Marianas, and that "heavy fighting is in progress between Japanese units and enemy forces.")

Is Not Confirmed

While there was no immediate confirmation of the reported landing operation Admiral Chester W. Nimitz disclosed yesterday in his latest communique that the American task force was still operating off the Marianas Tuesday.

It was conceivable that the force

Text Of Broadcast

(The CWI said that United States Government monitors had picked up this account of the attack in an English-language propaganda broadcast from Tokyo:

("With full knowledge of the enemy's attempt, our garrison forces allowed the invaders to approach as near as possible to the coast and then opened up a fierce concentrated fire on the enemy and foiled the attempt. Thrown into wild confusion by the accurate Japanese fire, the enemy barges, or what was left of them, swiftly returned to their mother vessel at about 8.20 A. M.

("Later, at about 10 o'clock, the enemy attempted another landing on Marianas harbor west of Saipan, but Japanese forces are now inflicting heavy punishment on the invaders.")

Nine Jersey Flyers Decorated in Pacific

JUN 16 1944

Somewhere in New Guinea, June 15 (A. P.).—Nine more New Jersey officers and men of the United States Fifth Air Force have been decorated here.

The Distinguished Flying Cross was conferred on Staff Sergt. Joseph Babyack of 118 Van Winkle avenue, Fairfield, and First Lieut. John L. Broomall of Brooklyn.

The Air Medal was presented to First Lieut. Robert N. Fulei-han of 78 Carleton street, East Orange; Second Lieut. Stephen Holowack of 50 Harrison Place, Clifton; Second Lieut. Robert R. Jensen of 92 Continental avenue, Belleville, and Staff Sergt. William R. Jackson of Mount Holly.

tor the need for physical enforcement of war prevention, the Government is seeking agreement with other nations to have their armed forces available for joint action.

The plan set forth in the President's statement will be the basis of conversations at a meeting to which Secretary Hull has invited Britain, Russia and China to send representatives.

Mr. Roosevelt issued his statement after a conference with Secretary of State Hull, Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Dr. Isaiah Bowman and Leo Pasvotsky, officials of the State Department who have been working on post-war planning. Dr. Bowman is president of the Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore.

Representative Body

"It is our thought," the President said in his statement, "that the organization (for international cooperation) would be a fully representative body with broad responsibilities for promoting and facilitating international cooperation."

His statement said consideration of a post-war organization has been in the formative stage for 18 months and he praised what he termed "the entirely nonpartisan nature of these consultations."

The text of President Roosevelt's statement:

The conference today with officials of the Department of State on the post-war security organization program is a continuation of conferences which have been held from time to time during the past 18 months. These conferences have enabled me to give personal attention to the development and progress of the post-war work the Department of State is doing.

Nonpartisan Ideas

All plans and suggestions from groups, organizations, and individuals have been carefully discussed and considered. I wish to emphasize the entirely nonpartisan nature of these consultations. All aspects of the post-war program have been debated in a cooperative spirit. This is a tribute to the political leaders who realize that the national interest demands a national program now. Such teamwork has met the overwhelming approval of the American people.

The maintenance of peace and security must be the joint task of all peace-loving nations. We have, therefore, sought to develop plans for an international organization comprising all such nations. The purpose of the organization would be to maintain peace and security and to assist the creation, through international cooperation, of conditions of stability and well-being necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations.

Accordingly, it is our thought that the organization would be a fully representative body with broad responsibilities for promoting and facilitating international cooperation, through such agencies as may be found necessary to consider and deal with the problems of world relations. It is our further thought that the organization would provide for a council, elected annually by the fully representative body of all nations, which would include the four major nations and a suitable number of other nations. The council would concern itself with peaceful settlement of international disputes and with the prevention of threats to the peace or breaches of the peace.

Court Of Justice

There would also be an international court of justice to deal primarily with justiciable disputes.

We are not thinking of a superstate with its own police forces and other paraphernalia of coercive power. We are seeking effective agreement and arrangements through which the nations would maintain, according to their capacities, adequate forces to meet the needs of preventing war and of making impossible deliberate preparation for war, and to have such forces available for joint action when necessary.

All this, of course, will become possible once our present enemies are defeated and effective arrangements are made to prevent them from making war again.

President's Peace Setup Plan Draws Approval In Principle

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—President Roosevelt's proposals for an international organization to maintain peace drew expressions of agreement in principle from many members of Congress today but there were reservations as to details, and Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) asked what would be the position of the little nations.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, chairman of the Republican Post-War Advisory Committee, said, "taken as a whole, it is a constructive basis for discussion."

"In my view," Vandenberg added, "the nature of the peace itself is an indispensable part of an ultimate judgment. Even a good league cannot cure a bad peace."

Connally's Viewpoint

Senator Connally (D., Texas), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the President's statement "is in line with consultations which the committee has been having with State Department representatives for a year and intensively for the last two months."

"Detailed provisions must be worked out through conferences with the representatives of our allies of the United Nations," he added.

Senator La Follette (Prog., Wis.) said: "The President's statement fails to mention the most important question, namely, whether this organization should be established and the United States committed to it prior to the time or after the time when the broad, general terms of the peace are known to the Congress and the country."

Cites Difficulty

Senator Ball (R., Minn.), who has advocated an international police force, said "it sounds like another League of Nations without even as strong a commitment as was contained in the League Covenant.

"The difficulty is to get a mechanism that will work when the test comes. Unless there are binding commitments by the nations within this proposed new organization to use force to suppress aggression, then we are right back where we were in the 1930's."

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic leader, said he thought most Americans "can subscribe to the principles laid down by the President. Of course, many details will have to be filled in later."

Other Comment

Senator Bridges—The President hasn't said whether this proposed council of nations will be all powerful, whether it will divide the world into spheres of influence. I would want to know the position of the little nations, whether they are to have full say about their fate or whether they will just be subordinate to the Big Four.

Senator George (D., Ga.)—It is logical for the four major powers who are doing the major part of the fighting to form the nucleus of a peace organization with smiller nations interested in peace being invited to join.

Senator Austin (R., Vt.)—I think I see in his announcement the outline of a basis for international law, set up on morals, for the nations to live by.

Senator White (R., Maine), Acting Minority Leader—I view with general approval the blueprint as the President has announced it. There may be room for disagreements in the details of the plan.

ASSERTS ENGLAND PLANS FAR AHEAD

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (A. P.).—Representative O'Brien (R.-N.Y.) told members of the House Merchant Marine Committee today that the British program for post-war commercial service both by sea and air is far ahead of similar United States plans. He said that Britain is making elaborate preparations to resume her private shipping business after the war and to add a new, airborne service, while American plans for post-war shipping are scarcely underway.

An American program to "hog the seas" would be unwise, Mr. O'Brien said, but he added, "We do not intend to be relegated to an inferior position in merchant trade."

Almon E. Roth, president of the National Federation of American Shipping, decelared that this country's post-war shipping will be hamstrung if private companies are not allowed to add a post-war air arm to their service. Noting that merchant ships must serve as troop carriers to bring home millions of American soldiers after the war, Mr. Roth said that ship companies should be granted flight-service permits to prevent air interests from monopolizing passenger travel before the ships can be released.

U. S. Casualties In Italy Now Placed At 62,000

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Total casualties of American troops since the start of the Italian campaign last fall have mounted to 62,000, increasing by about 6,800 during nine days of heavy fighting just south of Rome.

Secretary of War Stimson reported today that casualties through June 5 included 11,103 killed. This was an increase of 1,139 in six days of fighting during the period May 30-June 5 when the Fifth Army was pushing through the Alban hills and the last barriers standing before Rome. In the three preceding days, there was an increase of 278 in the American death list.

The wounded totaled 42,489 through June 5, an increase of 3,935 in the six-day period. From May 27 through 30 there was an increase of 1,644 in this category.

The missing list as of June 5 stood at 8,409, a decrease of 602 for the six-day period.

Clothing For Italians Totals 3,120,000 Lbs.

JUN 16 1944

New York, June 15 (AP)—Americans have contributed 3,120,000 pounds of clothing in the last two weeks for the people of Italy, the Most Reverend Edward Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit, announced today in a statement issued here.

The clothing campaign for Italy is being conducted by the War Relief Services—National Catholic Welfare conference in cooperation with American Relief for Italy, Inc.

FINNS PAY $148,445 TO U. S. ON WAR DEBT

Two Officers Awarded Gold Stars By Navy

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP) — The navy announced today award of gold stars in lieu of fourth Navy Crosses to two officers—the first awards of that type in naval history.

Commander Dudley W. Morton won his gold star for heroism as commanding officer of a United States submarine operating in Japanese waters. A native of Owensboro, Ky., he now is listed as missing in action since December 2, 1943, when his submarine, Wahoo, was reported overdue and presumed lost.

Heroism in action against the Japanese on New Britain Island won a gold star for Col. Lewis B. Puller, of the marines. Puller was decorated for disregarding personal safety in moving from company to company along his front lines and maintaining a critical position on a fire-swept ridge. His wife lives in Saluda, Middlesex county, Va.

Medals Sustain Morale—Marshall

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, is "disturbed" about what he considers a lack of understanding of the value of combat decorations in sustaining the morale of fighting men.

"Napoleon is alleged to have said: 'Give me enough ribbon to place on the tunics of my soldiers and I can conquer the world.'" Marshall said in a letter made public today by Representative Martin (R., Iowa), of the House Military Affairs Committee.

"I cannot vouch for the accuracy of that quotation, but I certainly share the view which such statement indicates."

The chief of staff wrote Martin after the Iowan remarked there was a tendency to increase the number of medals and decorations awarded.

Since the start of the war about 12,000 combat decorations other than the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal have been awarded, Marshall said, about 3,000 decorations for distinguished or exceptionally meritorious service and about 135,000 air decorations.

COMMITTEE ASKS DELAY IN ARMY-NAVY MERGER

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15 — (AP) The House committee on post-war military policy reported today that this is not the proper time for detailed legislation looking toward consolidation of the armed forces.

Reporting on its investigation into proposals for a post-war army-navy merger, the committee headed by Rep. Woodrum (D.-Va.) said lessons already learned in this war and to be learned "before the shooting stops" should be studied before any final action is taken.

Before acting, the committee said, Congress should have the benefit of "the wise judgment and experience of many of the commanders in the field."

The committee urged the armed forces to "follow diligently" a recent directive of the joint chiefs of staff for a detailed study of the problems involved in consolidation and to report to Congress "at the proper time."

Roosevelt Declares 'Victory Will Be Ours'

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that "although costly sacrifices must yet be made, we know the victory will be ours."

His remarks were made during presentation of credentials of the new Costa Rican Ambassador, Francisco de Paula Gucierrez.

"Today," Mr. Roosevelt said, "the aggressor nations are reeling beneath our counterstrokes."

INFANTRY HONORED

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (A. P.).—This is Infantry Day, and even the cavalry and the field artillery are celebrating it. Plans for the nationwide tribute to the infantry, "The Queen of Battles," included an invitation from the Cavalry School at Fort Riley, Kan., for an infantry team from nearby Camp Phillips for a celebration and a special demonstration at the Field Artillery Replacement Center, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Armored divisions planned special infantry programs, and the Anti-Aircraft Training Center, Camp Davis, N. C., will broadcast an infantry program tonight. In Washington, Lieut.-Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding the Army Ground Forces, began the day with a review of troops at the War College.

The most spectacular program probably was that scheduled for New Orleans, where six blocks of Canal street were roped off for part of the Sixty-third Division to stage a sham battle, complete with flame throwers, mock-up pillboxes and other equipment.

STUDY OF POSTWAR TAXATION ORDERED

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15. — (AP) An immediate study of post-war taxation was ordered today by the joint Senate-House Committee on internal revenue.

While holding out no promise of any lowering of taxes until victory, Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the House Ways and Means committee said "we want to be ready" for speedy adjustments.

The joint committee action recalled recommendations of the Baruch-Hancock report, which said:

"Prepare now for future action reducing taxes from war to peacetime levels, thereby providing necessary incentive for initiative and enterprise and stimulating employment."

The committee, comprised of Democratic and Republican senators and House members, issued its statement shortly after Rep. Reed (R-NY), chairman of a special Republican congressional committee on taxation, announced his group would hold public hearings on a post-war tax program "aimed at reducing the present tax burden by approximately one half."

30. 24 — 16267

Doughton declared today:

"It is utterly impractical to attempt the writing now of actual tax legislation to fit the post-war period. We must know the revenue needs, the level of the national income and the yield from this income by the times now in effect.

"But we want to be as near ready as we can."

The joint committee voted to increase its membership by two Republicans, so as to "give the majority and the minority (parties) equal representation on the committee and thereby remove any question of partisanship in the conduct of this post-war tax study."

and defense obligations voted since July 1, 1940.

Rep. Snyder, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that drafted the bill, expressed what he termed the "hope" of military leaders that 1944 will see Germany knocked out and Japan softened for the "doom that shortly will follow."

Terming the June 6 invasion of Europe the first round in the fight to exterminate the Axis, Rep. Snyder said:

Predict End of War

"The day of the last round we just cannot predict, but we can fervently hope that it will come before the snow flies again. It is the hope of our military leadership that Germany will be out of the war before another year begins."

House Passes 49 Billion Army Appropriations Bill

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15—(AP) Spurred by news of the super-fortress bombing of Japan, the House unanimously passed a $49,109,002,795 "Hitler doom" bill for the Army today and sent it to the Senate.

At the same time the Senate completed legislative approval of history's biggest Navy appropriation—$27,569,000,000 in cash and $5,000,000,000 in contract authorizations—and sped it to the Whits House. Senator Overton (D-La) estimated this would keep America's big sea force steaming full speed even though the war lasts longer than is expected.

Air Force Gets Allotment

The largest allotment in the Army supply measure, $12,610,200,000, was earmarked for the air forces, whose big B-29 bombers may have been over the Japanese homeland even as the House acted. A roll call vote followed demands that never again should "impractical, idealistic, suicidal pacifism" be allowed to gain a foothold in this country.

Rep. Snyder, (D-Pa) told the House that the big bill, largest this year but billions below record War department appropriations of previous years, would provide the 'knockout punch" against Hitler and Tojo.

It was, he added, the "Hitler doom" bill.

It carries $15,436,031,795 in new funds for the fiscal year starting July 1 and $33,672,971,000 left over from the $74,211,249,961 appropriated for the current year. It raises to an estimated $390,000,000,000 war

However, he added, "wars just do not always run on preestablished schedules" and there may be delays "not presently anticipated."

Speaking against complacency after the war, Rep Starnes (D-Ala), a member of Snyder's committee, declared: "There must be no more Pearl Harbors. We cannot gamble our birthright upon treaties and oceans."

The future security of the nation, he said, demands that our armed forces be maintained in sufficient strength to guard the country and to "discourage potential enemies from ever again attempting to destroy our principles of government and our way of life."

Starnes suggested that the post-war defense program provide for compulsory military training for at least one year for all males between 18 and 21; for a standing army of at least 500,000 men, backed up by a trained reserve; for a national guard with a minimum strength of 500,000; for "the largest air force in the world" and a Navy "incomparably greater than that of any other nation," and for an enlarged Reserve Officers Training corps (ROTC).

It was Starnes who cautioned against "impractical, idealistic, suicidal pacifism" after the war.

ATTEMPT TO DISMISS WARD SUIT IS DENIED

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15 — (AP) The federal government today lost for the second time its attempt to secure U. S. District court dismissal of an injunction suit brought against it by Montgomery Ward and company.

The government asked that the suit be dismissed in the light of a recent U. S. Court of Appeals ruling that orders of the War Labor board are not subject to court review.

Ward, the Chicago firm, had sought an injunction to prevent enforcement of any penalty because of the firm's possible failure to obey a WLB directive. The latter relates to union maintenance check off and arbitration of grievances with its organized employes, members of the CIO, at four stores in Detroit, one in Denver and one in Jamaica, N. Y.

After re-hearing the issues, Judge T. Alan Goldsborough said he still stood by the position he took March 14, when he first refused the government's motion to dismiss the Ward suit.

BIDDLE REFUSES DEMAND

JUN 16 1944

WASHINGTON, June 15 — (AP) Attorney General Biddle today turned down a demand by Rep. Smith (D-Va) for a grand jury investigation of the CIO Political Action committee, Smith said today. Biddle repeated that he could find no evidence of a violation of Federal law. He informed Smith that he had examined files submitted by the congressman two months ago, but that they "did not give us any additional information."

Dewey Reported Ready To Fly To Convention

JUN 16 1944

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was reported today in Albany quarters as ready for a quick air trip to the Chicago convention in 1944 if he is chosen the Republican Presidential candidate.

The same sources said the 42-year-old Governor is preparing a speech of acceptance at his farm near Pawling, N. Y., where he is spending a ten-day vacation. President Roosevelt set a precedent by flying to the Democratic convention for his acceptance speech in 1932.

The Republican convention starts June 26. Party officials have predicted a Presidential nominee would be chosen June 28, or the third day of a four or five day convention.

48 Seats Contested

It was disclosed that delegate contests at the Republican convention will involve 48 seats from eight States—Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. Few issues are involved of interest outside the States themselves. The entire delegations are contested in Georgia, Mississippi, North Dakota and South Carolina.

Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said in Chicago that "anyone we nominate will be elected."

He added that Herbert Hoover, Alf M. Landon and Wendell L. Willkie—the last three GOP Presidential candidates—had been invited to attend the convention and make suggestions for the platform if they desired. Hoover will address the convention at 10 P. M., June 27.

Sedition Trial Bogged By Mass of Documents

Judge Introduces Assembly-Line Questioning by Attorneys

WASHINGTON, June 15 (UP).—The mass sedition trial today bogged down in documents—nearly 200 of them—despite a new "assmebly-line system" introduced by Judge Edward C. Eicher.

The exhibits, mostly issues of the German-American Bund's newspaper, are being offered by the prosecution in connection with testimony of William Luedtke, of Rochelle Park, N. J., former Bund secretary.

In an attempt to save the most time possible, Judge Eicher is allowing each of the two dozen defense attorneys in turn to inspect the documents and question Luedtke.

Nazi Sub Shells Fishing Boat In Atlantic

Boston, June 15 (AP)—A German submarine invaded the North Atlantic fishing grounds recently, shelled and machine-gunned a Boston trawler and forced all but two of the crew to abandon ship.

The submerisble finally left, her skipper apparently thinking the trawler would sink. Then the crew put the vessel in shape and brought her into port early today, her hull and superstructure looking almost like a sieve.

Taken For Patrol Boat

Details of the attack were given at a press conference by Capt. James L. Abbott, 35, skipper of the fishing vessel, The Lark, owned by F. J. O'Hara Brothers, Boston operators. The vessel is 145 gross tons.

The sub first was sighted about 2.30 A. M., Captain Abbott said, but was mistaken at first for a friendly patrol boat. Then John Aspell, at the wheel, got a good look in the moonlit night and Abbott immediately roused the crewmen who were sleeping.

No Casualties

The enemy fired one shot across the bow and then opened up with machine guns as the fishermen scrambled into their dories. Captain Abbott, his 74-year-old cook Dan Maloney and the ship's dog, Rex, remained aboard.

The sub fired from about 300 feet, the captain said, but there were no casualties. Then the underseas craft vanished and the men pulled about a mile from their ship. One dory started back, however, and the U-boat returned.

This time she circled, slamming shells into The Lark.

"There were 500 holes in the sails," Abbott related. Seven large holes were ripped in the hull. Abbott said a third type of weapon which he could not describe also was used.

When the sub opened up the second time, Abbott was in the pilot house. A shell screamed through it. He dropped to the deck and then sought safety near the bow. But more shells and machine-gun bullets sprayed all around him.

Said A Few Prayers

"I said a few prayers," the captain asserted. "I knew a lot of boys were losing their lives over there and I thought I would take my medicine."

Eventually, he reached the stern and remained there unharmed.

Tracer bullets hit The Lark many times, he said, but failed to start any fires.

After 20 minutes the sub pulled away, leaving the ship apparently helpless with a damaged engine. Then the U-boat went among the dories but did not fire.

So close did the U-boat come to a dory that one fisherman, Herman Bichard, reached out and struck it with an oar, which broke. Five others were in the same dory.

Started To Prepare Food

During the shelling, Dan Maloney remembered he was the cook and set out to prepare food to take off if he had to abandon ship. The men in the dories had had no time to take either food or extra clothes.

The dories eventually returned to the Lark and the men got the Diesel motor started and then manned the pumps. The Lark shipped water en route home, but the pumps averted further danger.

KERR PICKED AS KEYNOTER

JUN 16 1944

Oklahoma Governor To Make Democrats' Theme Speech

Chicago, June 15 (AP)—Gov. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma was chosen today to deliver the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention.

The chief executive of a border State was the unanimous choice of the party's committee making arrangements for the conclave opening here July 19, and his name was the only one offered at the session.

Kerr was selected at a parley presided over by Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the National Committee, who held a 45-minute conference yesterday with President Roosevelt.

Backs Fourth Term

Governor Kerr, an advocate of a fourth term for the President, has been mentioned as a possibility for the Democratic Vice-Presidential nomination. His chances for second place on the ticket could be enhanced by a rousing speech before the delegates.

The Oklahoman was nominated for the job of temporary chairman and keynoter by Oscar R. Ewing, of New York, vice-chairman of the National Committee.

Kerr, 47, was elected Governor in 1942. A veteran of World War I and a former State commander of the American Legion, he was an attorney and an independent oil man before he took over his Gubernatorial duties.

No Action On Permanent Slate

The arrangements group decided that the National Committee should recommend a permanent chairman for the convention at a meeting here July 17. Conferees said prospects for that post were not canvassed during the session today.

The participants adopted a resolution expressing appreciation of the services rendered to the party for two decades by Ambrose O'Connell, executive vice-chairman of the National Committee, who will leave soon to become associate judge of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. His place as the man in charge of on-the-scene preparations for the convention will be taken by Edwin W. Pauley, of California, treasurer of the National Committee.

POSSIBLY FOR THIS REASON, THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED IN AN ALLIED FRONT DISPATCH TO HAVE BROUGHT SOME REINFORCEMENTS DOWN FROM THE CHERBOURG PORT GARRISON TO TRY TO STEM THE AMERICAN ADVANCE ON THE PENINSULA, PARTICULARLY AROUND MONTEBOURG.

THEIR OBVIOUS INTENTION WAS TO STAVE OFF THE LOSS OF CHERBOURG AS LONG AS POSSIBLE.

THE ALLIES ON THEIR PART WERE INCREASING THEIR FORCES AND WEAPONS IN FRANCE WITHOUT PAUSE.

"CONVOYS OF ALLIED MERCHANT SHIPS ARE ARRIVING SATISFACTORILY AND THE ARMIES CONTINUE TO BE BUILT UP WITH MEN, STORES AND EQUIPMENT," SAID THE MIDNIGHT COMMUNIQUE. IT NOTED IN PASSING THAT THE GERMANS HAD VAINLY ATTACKED THE SEAFRONT AREA BY AIR.

ALLIED FIGHTERS CONTINUED TO HARASS THE ENEMY IN AND IMMEDIATELY BEHIND THE BATTLE ZONE, SPLATTERING HIS TROOPS, MATERIAL AND SUPPLIES WITH ROCKETS, BULLETS AND BOMBS.

THE RAF ALSO HAD A FIELD DAY WITH TACTICAL AND COASTAL COMMAND UNITS RIPPING INTO THE ENEMY ON LAND AND SEA.

COASTAL COMMAND BEAUKIGHTERS ESCORTED BY POLISH MUSTANGS ATTACKED AN ENEMY SHIPPING CONCENTRATION INCLUDING A LARGE MERCHANT VESSEL, A NAVAL AUXILIARY, TEN MINESWEEPERS AND SEVEN R-BOATS, OFF THE FRISIAN ISLANDS WITHOUT LOSS.

THE MERCHANT VESSEL WAS SUNK AND THE NAVAL AUXILIARY BEACHED, EACH HIT BY TWO TORPEDOES AND ROCKET PROJECTILES. ONE MINESWEEPER BLEW UP AND SANK AND ANOTHER WAS HIT BY A TORPEDO. FIVE OTHERS WERE LEFT ON FIRE AND TWO MINESWEEPERS AND TWO R-BOATS WERE RAKED BY CANNON FIRE.

IT WAS SAID HERE THAT THESE OFFICERS HAD BEEN COUNTED UPON BY THE ALLIED SUPREME COMMAND TO ACT IN A LIAISON CAPACITY WITH THE FRENCH PEOPLE TO HELP TAKE OVER CIVIL ADMINISTRATION. JUN 16 1944

HIS ACTION WAS ATTRIBUTED TO ANGER OVER THE ALLIES' NON-RECOGNITION OF HIS NATIONAL LIBERATION COMMITTEE AS THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE AND THE REFUSAL OF THE SUPREME COMMAND TO LET HIM TAKE OVER THE ISSUING OF RADIO DIRECTIONS TO THE FRENCH PEOPLE ON D-DAY.

REFERRING TO THE WASHINGTON REPORT THAT DE GAULLE HAD CANCELLED ORDERS FOR SEVERAL HUNDRED FRENCH OFFICERS TO LAND WITH THE FIRST WAVES IN THE INVASION, DE GAULLE'S PRESS ATTACHE SAID:

"THIS IS A MOST INCREDIBLE REPORT. WE CANCELLED NO SUCH AGREEMENT FOR WE NEVER SIGNED SUCH AN AGREEMENT. WE NEGOTIATED SEVERAL MONTHS WITH THE ALLIES PRIOR TO THE INVASION, BUT AS THE WHOLE WORLD KNOWS WE REACHED NO AGREEMENT WITH THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT NOR WITH THE ALLIED COMMANDERS, EITHER ON THE GOVERNMENT OF THE LIBERATED TERRITORY OR ON SENDING LIAISON OFFICERS WITH THE INVASION FORCES.

LONDON, JUNE 15-(AP)-INFORMATION MINISTER BRENDAN BRACKEN TODAY SHARPLY CRITICIZED A MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS FOR SUGGESTING THAT GEN. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, AN AMERICAN, WOULD HAVE BEEN BLAMED IF ANYTHING HAD HAPPENED TO PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL ON HIS VISIT TO THE FRENCH BEACHHEAD.

JUN 16 1944

THE MEMBER, CAPT. ALEC STRATFORD CUNNINGHAM-REID, SAID, "WHAT WOULD THE PUBLIC HAVE SAID IF DISASTER HAD RESULTED, OR IF DISASTER RESULTED IN THE FUTURE FROM A SIMILAR VENTURE? SO FAR AS OUR EUROPEAN BATTLEFRONT IS CONCERNED, THE SUPREME COMMANDER HAD ABSOLUTE JURISDICTION.

"IN THE CIRCUMSTANCES IT WOULD BE HE WHO WOULD BE BLAMED FOR ALLOWING THE PRIME MINISTER TO HAVE GONE OUT TO FRANCE. THE SUPREME COMMANDER IS AN AMERICAN. IF SUCH A THING HAD OCCURRED, OR IF UNFORTUNATELY SUCH A THING SHOULD OCCUR, WOULD IT BE TO THE ADVANTAGE OF FRIENDLY RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO NATIONS?"

BRACKEN REPLIED THAT CUNNINGHAM-REID HAD "COME FORWARD IN A GREASY WAY TO SHOW US THE BEST METHOD OF ESTABLISHING BETTER RELATIONSHIPS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

"HE HAS NO QUALIFICATIONS FOR SMOOTHING RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES -- MUCH OTHERWISE."

CUNNINGHAM-REID APPEALED FOR A PROMISE THAT THE PRIME MINISTER WOULD NOT RETURN TO THE DANGER ZONES, SAYING THAT "THE TROUBLE IS THAT WHEN THIS OLD WARHORSE SMELLS POWDER, HE CANNOT KEEP OUT OF THE FRAY, AND WE KNOW THAT THE FIGHTING BLOOD OF THE MARLBOROUGHS IS UP."

ROME, JUNE 15-(AP)-FRANCES WILKINSON ROSSO, AMERICAN-BORN WIFE OF AUGUSTO ROSSO, FORMER ITALIAN AMBASSADOR TO THE UNITED STATES, AND HER 21-YEAR-OLD SON BY A FORMER MARRIAGE, GEORGE BUNKER, AN AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE AMBULANCE DRIVER, WERE REUNITED TUESDAY AFTER MRS. ROSSO HAD A CHANCE ENCOUNTER WITH HER SON'S ROOM-MATE NEAR VATICAN CITY.

THE MOTHER, WHO, WITH THE FORMER AMBASSADOR, HAD BEEN RELEASED FROM EIGHT MONTHS OF VIRTUAL IMPRISONMENT IN THEIR APARTMENT BY THE ALLIED OCCUPATION OF ROME, HAD BEEN QUESTIONING EVERY AMERICAN SOLDIER SHE MET ABOUT HER SON'S WHEREABOUTS.

LAST FRIDAY, AS SHE PASSED VATICAN CITY AN AMERICAN AMBULANCE PULLED UP TO THE CURB AND WALTER HACKETT OF EAST HAMPTON, L.I., LEAPED OUT AND HURRIEDLY WIPED OFF THE WINDSHIELD.

"I DON'T SUPPOSE THIS WILL DO ANY GOOD, BUT MY SON IS AN AMBULANCE DRIVER--HAVE YOU BY ANY CHANCE EVER HEARD OF HIM?" MRS. ROSSO ASKED. "HIS NAME IS GEORGE BUNKER."

"I KNOW HIM," HACKETT SAID. "I HAVE LIVED AND WORKED WITH HIM."

HACKETT SAID HE WOULD DRIVE TO NAPLES IMMEDIATELY AND PULL BUNKER OFF A SHIP AND BRING HIM BACK TO ROME.

"IT IS THE HAND OF GOD," SAID THE AMBASSADOR'S WIFE. "WITH THOUSANDS OF TROOPS STREAMING THROUGH ROME MY SON'S ROOM-MATE JUST HAPPENED TO STOP AND WIPE THE MUD OFF A WINDSHIELD. AND SOME PEOPLE SAY THEY DON'T BELIEVE IN MIRACLES."

BUNKER IS THE SON OF ARTHUR H. BUNKER, FORMER OPA EXECUTIVE FOR THE ALUMINUM INDUSTRY.

MRS. ROSSO, WHOSE PARENTS ARE MR. AND MRS. GEORGE WILKINSON, 1027 GREENWOOD BLVD., EVANSTON, ILLS., HAS TWO BROTHERS IN THE U.S. ARMY.

"THE HUSBAND OF MY DAUGHTER, MRS. JAMES HYMES, 2628 TUNLOW ST., WASHINGTON, D.C., IS A NAVAL OFFICER ON DUTY IN THE PACIFIC AND WITH MY OWN SON IN THE FIELD SERVICE, YOU CAN IMAGINE WHAT THE MIGHT OF THE AMERICAN TROOPS POURING INTO ROME MEANT TO ME," SHE SAID.

HACKETT SAID HE HAD CANCELLED PLANS TO RETURN TO THE UNITED AND HAD SIGNED WITH THE FIELD SERVICE FOR ANOTHER YEAR. HE WILL SPE LEAVE AS THE ROSSO'S GUEST IN AN APARTMENT WHERE THE AMBASSADOR AND WIFE HID FROM THE NAZIS FOR EIGHT MONTHS.

"I NEVER ONCE SET FOOT OUTSID OF THE APARTMENT XXXXX BUT I WOULD GO OUT OCCASIONALLY TO GET WATER'OR FOR A XX STROLL," ROSSO SAID.

"I USED TO GO TO ST.PETER'S NOW AND THEN UNTIL IT BECAME TOO CROWDED WITH GERMANS. LIVING THE LIFE OF A RECLUSE WAS A NEW ROLE FOR ME. I HAD TO LEARN TO COOK AND KEEP HOUSE AS IT WAS TOO DANGEROUS TO KEEP SERVANTS," HIS WIFE RELATED.

ROSSO SAID HIS WIFE TURNED INTO AN EXPERT XXXXXXX LAUNDRESS AND A CHARMING COOK.

"LOOK AT ME," HE EXCLAIMED. "DON'T I LOOK LIKE A VITAMIN-CRAMMED HUSBAND WHO HAS ENJOYED THE BEST."

ROSSO SAID HE HAD BEEN ASKED TO ASSUME THE POST OF SECRETARY-GENERALOF THE FOREIGN OFFICE WHICH HE FILLED UNDER THE BADOGLIO GOVERNMEN BEFORE THE APPEARANCE OF THE NAZIS IN ROME DROVE HIM INTO HIDING.

BY LEIF ERICKSON

U.S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, JUNE 16-(AP)-AMERICAN TROOPS WHICH LANDED 1,500 MILES SOUTHEAST OF TOKYO WEDNESDAY ON SAIPAN IN THE MARIANAS HAVE SECURED BEACHHEADS, CAPTURED A HEADLAND, FOUGHT THEIR WAY INTO A SUGAR MILL TOWN AND CRUSHED JAPANESE TANK-PACED COUNTERATTACKS, ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ ANNOUNCED TONIGHT.

IN A COMMUNIQUE COVERING ACTION THROUGH TODAY, HE REPORTED THAT AGINGAN POINT, A HEADLAND ON THE SOUTHWEST CORNER OF THE 13-MILE-LONG ISLAND, HAS BEEN SEIZED.

JUN 16 19

THE YANK INVADERS, SUPPORTED BY A HUGE CARRIER-PLANE FORCE AND GUNS OF BATTLESHIPS WHICH KNOCKED OUT ENEMY COASTAL GUNS AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERIES, HAVE FOUGHT THEIR WAY TWO MILES NORTH INTO THE SUGAR MILL TOWN OF CHARAN KANOA.

"IN GENERAL, FIGHTING IS HEAVY BUT GOOD PROGRESS IS BEING MADE AGAINST WELL ORGANIZED DEFENSES," ADMIRAL NIMITZ SAID IN THE SECOND COMMUNIQUE ISSUED TODAY ON THE OPERATION.

THE JAPANESE ATTEMPTED SEVERAL COUNTERATTACKS WITH TANKS AGAINST THE ASSAULT TROOPS ADVANCING FROM THE BEACHHEADS BUT "THESE ATTACKS HAVE BEEN BROKEN UP BY OUR TROOPS "WITH THE SUPPORT OF SHELLING WARSHIPS AND BOMBING PLANES.

THE ANNOUNCED CAPTURE OF AGINGAN POINT AND THE FIGHTING AT CHARAN KANOA INDICATES THE SPEARHEAD OF THE AMPHIBIOUS STRIKE IS AIMED FROM THE SOUTHWEST OVER FAIRLY FLAT CANEFIELD TERRAIN.

THE REPORTS ALSO INDICATE THAT THE TROOPS, TRANSPORTS AND SUPPORTING WARSHIPS HAVE SPRUNG THEIR OPERATION IN BEHIND THE 500-MILE-LONG CHAIN OF MARIANAS.

GARAPAN, SAIPAN'S MAJOR TOWN OF ABOUT 10,000 LIES ABOUT FIVE MILES NORTH OF THE UNITED STATES TROOPS FIGHTING IN SMALLER CHARAN KANOA.

ADM. CHESTER W.NIMITZ ANNOUNCED THIS MOST AUDACIOUS MOVE YET AGAINST JAPANESE TERRITORY SHORTLY AFTER THE WAR DEPARTMENT REPORTED THAT SUPER FORTRESSES OF A STRATEGIC WORLD-GIRDLING AIR FORCE HAD BOMBED JAPAN'S HOMELAND.

THE HUGE BOMBERS, MAKING THEIR FIRST ATTACK OF THE WAR, FLEW FROM BASES IN THE INDIA-BURMA-CHINA THEATER, THE WAR DEPARTMENT SAID. NO OTHER DETAILS WERE GIVEN.

REP.STARNES (D-LA) TOLD THE LOWER HOUSE OF CONGRESS LATE TODAY, HOWEVER, THAT TOKYO ITSELF WAS THE TARGET OF THE B-29S. HE SAID HIS INFORMATION CAME FROM A GOOD SOURCE AND THAT "GREAT DESTRUCTION" HAD BEEN CAUSED BY A LARGE NUMBER OF PLANES.

NIMITZ REPORTED THE FIRST LANDINGS ON SAIPAN WERE MADE WEDNESDAY MORNING UNDER COVER OF A BOMBARDMENT BY UNITED STATES WARSHIPS AND THE BOMBING AND STRAFING OF CARRIER PLANES.

ADDITIONAL ASSAULT FORCES WERE STORMING ASHORE DESPITE ENEMY RESISTANCE THEY WERE SUPPORTED BY CARRIER AIRCRAFT AND THE BIG GUNS OF SURFACE UNITS, INCLUDING BATTLE WAGONS, CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS.

THIS BOLD MOVE TO ADVANCE AMERICAN BASES 1,100 MILES WEST OF THE MARSHALL ISLANDS CLIMAXED FOUR DAYS OF PRE-INVASION ASSAULT BY POWERFUL PACIFIC FLEET TASK FORCES, STARTING LAST SATURDAY. THE FIRST DAY OF THE ATTACK WIPED OUT VIRTUALLY ALL OF THE ENEMY'S AIR FORCE BASED IN THE SOUTHERN MARIANAS.

REMNANTS OF THAT AIR POWER AND ENEMY SHIPPING IN AND AROUND THE ISLANDS WERE DISPOSED OF SUNDAY AND MONDAY. THEN THE INVADING FORCES TURNED THEIR ATTENTION TO OBLITERATING ENEMY DEFENSES IN PREPARATION FOR THE LANDINGS.

SAIPAN, TINIAN, PAGAN, ROTA AND GUAM ISLANDS, THE LATTER THE FORMER AMERICAN NAVAL BASE, WERE WELL WORKED OVER IN THE PREPARATORY STAGES OF THE ATTACK.

JUN 16 1944

THE AMERICAN FORCES WERE DESCRIBED BY THEIR COMMANDER, VICE ADM.RICHMOND KELLY TURNER, AS THE MOST EXPERIENCED AMPHIBIOUS WAR FLEET IN THE WORLD. HE TOLD WAR CORRESPONDENTS PRIOR TO THE LANDING THAT THIS THRUST INTO JAPAN'S INNER DEFENSE LINES WAS DESIGNED TO DESTROY SAIPAN AS AN ENEMY BASE AND CONVRT IT TO ALLIED USE. WILLIAM WORDEN, ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT WITH THE EXPEDITIONRY FORCES, REPORTED THE PRESS CONFERENCE.

IN INVADING SAIPAN, TURNER'S FORCES VAULTED FAR BEYOND TRUK, MAJOR ENEMY BASE IN THE CENTRAL CAROLINE ISLANDS. WHEN A FIRM HOLD IS ESTABLISHED ON SAIPAN, IT WILL PLACE AMERICAN FORCES 675 MILES TO THE REAR (WEST) OF TRUK. GUAM, SOUTHERNMOST OF THE MARIANAS, ALSO WOULD BE OUTFLANKED.

STORMING ENEMY BEACHES IS NOTHING NEW FOR TURNER'S FORCES. THEY HAVE SEEN SUCH ACTION BEFORE MANY TIMES. THEY WILL, HOWEVER, BE UP AGAINST MOBILE ENEMY ARTILLERY FOR THE FIRST TIME, AND AGAINST ROUGH, FORMIDABLE TERRAIN. A LARGER LAND AREA ALSO WILL BE INVOLVED, COMPARED WITH THE SMALL ATOLLS OF PREVIOUS INVASIONS.

PLANES DROPPING ROCKETS WITH THEIR BOMBS PACED THE ASSAULT FORCES TO THE BEACHES. SHOWERS OF ROCKETS WERE DIRECTED AGAINST ENEMY GUNS AND DEFENSES BY FAST FIRING LCIS (INFANTRY LANDING CRAFT) AND BY OTHER GUNBOATS.

THE OPERATION WAS BELIEVED TO BE THE MOST SPECTACULAR OF THE PACIFIC WAR, DUE TO THE MAJOR USE OF ROCKET FIRING PLANES AND SHIPS. THESE NEW WEAPONS HAVE BEEN USED PREVIOUSLY IN THE PACIFIC ONLY ON A MINOR SCALE.

MANY HOURS BEFORE NIMITZ MADE HIS ANNOUNCEMENT THE TOKYO RADIO SAID A LANDING ATTEMPT ON SAIPAN HAD BEEN BEATEN OFF BY "ACCURATE JAPANESE FIRE" WHICH THREW THE INVADERS "INTO WILD CONFUSION." THEN IT ADMITTED THAT LATER AMERICANS REACHED SHORE ON BOTH TINIAN AND SAIPAN. NIMITZ HAS NOT MENTIONED A LANDING ON TINIAN.

SAIPAN IS THE SECOND LARGEST ISLAND IN THE 500-MILE LONG MARIANAS CHAIN. WESTWOOD LIES A CLEAR OCEAN SWEEP TO THE PHILIPPINES, FORMOSA AND THE CHINA COAST.

SAIPAN IS 13 MILES LONG BY FIVE MILES WIDE. UNLIKE THE NARROW RIBBON-LIK ATOLL ISLANDS OF THE MARSHALLS AND GILBERTS, SAIPAN'S AREA OF 71 SQUARE MILES CONTAINS FLAT PLATEAU LAND ON WHICH AIR-FIELDS LARGE ENOUGH FOR SIZEABLE AIR OPERATIONS CAN BE BUILT.

THE JAPANESE HAVE BEEN DEVELOPING THE ISLAND AS A MAJOR AIR BASE AND SECONDARY NAVAL POINT SINCE A LEAGUE OF NATIONS MANDATE IN 1920

&-;3 '-0-, :9,549) 91 -)) 5£3 .-48-,-' 3/:305 &

BEFORE THE WAR, SAIPAN'S POPULATION INCLUDED ABOUT 20,000 JAPANESE, MOST OF THEM IMPORTED TO WORK IN THE SUGAR CANE FIELDS. THERE WERE ALSO 20,000 CHAMORRO NATIVES AND ABOUT 800 BLACKS FROM THE CAROLINES.
GARAPAN, LARGEST TOWN ON THE ISLAND, HAS A PEACETIME POPULATION OF ABOUT 10,000. BEFORE AND SINCE THE WAR STARTED, THE JAPANESE PROBABLY MADE CONSIDERABLE IMPROVEMENT IN TANAPAG HARBOR, A SMALL REEF-SCREENED ANCHORAGE ON THE WESTERN SIDE OF THE ISLAND. IT IS LIKELY THEY ALSO DEVELOPED MAGICIENNE BAY ON THE EAST COAST.

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR,JUNE 15-(AP)-ASSAULT TROOPS LANDED WEDNESDAY MORNING ON SAIPAN, JAPANESE AIR AND NAVAL BASE IN THE MARIANAS, AND TROOP LANDINGS "ARE BEING CONTINUED AGAINST STRONG OPPOSITION," ADM. CHESTER W.NIMITZ ANNOUNCED IN A COMMUNIQUE TODAY.

JUN 16 1944

INITIAL LANDINGS ASSAULTS STARTED AFTER INTENSIVE PREPARATORY BOMBING AND BOMBARDMENT OF SAIPAN, TINIAN, GUAM, PAGAN AND ROTA ISLANDS BY PACIFIC FLEET AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, BATTLESHIPS, CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS.
THE PREPARATORY ATTACK STARTED WITH CARRIER BOMBINGS SATURDAY AND CONTINUED THROUGH FOUR DAYS BEFORE THE LANDINGS BEGAN.
THE FLEET CARRIERS AND WARSHIPS ARE SUPPORTING THE LANDING FORCES WITH HEAVY AIR ATTACKS AND NAVAL GUN SHELLING.
"THE INITIAL REPORTS," NIMITZ SAID, "INDICATE OUR CASUALTIES ARE MODERATE."

JUN 16 1944

THE ASSAULT TO SEIZE SAIPAN MAKES A LONG LEAPFROGGING VAULT FROM THE MARSHALLS OVER TRUK, THE ONCE POTENT ENEMY STRONGHOLD IN THE CAROLINES. SAIPAN IS 675 STATUTE MILES WEST OF TRUK AND 1,150 MILES WEST OF ENIWETOK, WESTERNMOST MARSHALL BASE TAKEN FROM THE JAPANESE LAST FEBRUARY. IT IS ABOUT 1,500 MILES FROM TOKYO.
IF THE AMERICAN FORCE OVERRUNS SAIPAN, TRUK WILL BE CUT OFF FROM THE REAR. GUAM, FORMER AMERICAN NAVAL OUTPOST LOST TO THE JAPS THREE DAYS AFTER THE WAR'S OUTBREAK, ALSO WOULD BE CLOSELY FLANKED. GUAM LIES 116 MILES SOUTH OF SAIPAN.
TOKYO RADIO REPORTED HOURS EARLIER THAT AMERICAN AMPHIBIOUS TROOPS WERE LANDING ON SAIPAN IN THE FACE OF "ACCURATE JAPANESE FIRE." TOKYO SAID THE FIRST ATTEMPT TO LAND ON SAIPAN WAS "THROWN INTO WILD CONFUSION." LATER, IT ADDED, AMERICANS REACHED SHORE ON BOTH ISLANDS.
IN A REPORT SUPPLEMENTING HIS COMMUNIQUE, ADMIRAL NIMITZ SAID FLEET WARSHIPS PROVIDED "CLOSE NAVAL FIRE SUPPORT." CARRIER PLANES WERE FLYING PROTECTIVE COVER FOR THE LANDING ASSAULT TROOPS. HARASSING FIRE WAS MAINTAINED THROUGHOUT WEDNESDAY NIGHT.
"ENEMY SHORE BATTERIES AND INTERIOR GUN EMPLACEMENTS WERE PRINCIPAL TARGETS OF THE COORDINATED SHELLING AND BOMBING," NIMITZ REPORTED. "LARGE FIRES AND EXPLOSIONS WERE CAUSED ALONG THE ENTIRE COAST LINE OF SAIPAN."
THIS MENTION OF ENEMY SHORE BATTERIES AND INTERIOR GUN EMPLACEMENTS INDICATED THE ASSAULT TROOPS WERE UNDER ARTILLERY FIRE WHILE STRIKING FOR SHORE IN THEIR LANDING CRAFT AND FIGHTING TO SECURE THE FIRST BEACHHEAD.
NIMITZ ALSO REPORTED THAT CARRIER PLANES SIGHTED AND ATTACKED A JAP CONVOY SOUTHWEST OF GUAM MONDAY IN THE THIRD DAY OF THE PREPARATORY AIR ATTACK. THIS WAS THE THIRD SHIP CONVOY ATTACKED PRIOR TO THE SAIPAN LANDING.
A DIRECT HIT WAS SCORED ON A LARGE DESTROYER WHICH WAS LEFT ON FIRE. NEAR MISSES LEFT A MEDIUM CARGO VESSEL BURNING AND ANOTHER DESTROYER WAS SEEN TRAILING OIL. ALL SHIPS IN THE CONVOY WERE HEAVILY STRAFED.
ANOTHER CARRIER FORCE, SIGHTING A GROUP OF TRAWLERS AND OTHERS IN THE AREA THE SAME DAY, SANK ONE 60-FOOT TRAWLER AND DAMAGED EIGHT OTHERS.

NEW YORK, JUNE 15-(AP)-THE TOKYO RADIO CLAIMED TONIGHT THAT THE INVASION OF SAIPAN IN THE MARIANNAS HAS COST THE ALLIES 1,800 CASUALTIES AND THE LOSS OF 40 LANDING BARGES.
THE BROADCAST, MONITORED BY NBC, ASSERTED, "OBVIOUSLY THIS INVASION OF SAIPAN WAS TIMED TO COINCIDE WITH THE INVASION OF EUROPE, BUT WE HAVE THROWN THE AMERICANS BACK TO THE SEA."
A JAPANESE IMPERIAL HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCEMENT, DATED AT 5 A.M. JUNE 16 (TOKYO TIME) AND TRANSMITTED TO JAPANESE AREAS, ACKNOWLEDGED "ENEMY FORCES" HAD LANDED ON SAIPAN AND STATED THAT THEY "ARE NOW BEING ENGAGED IN BATTLE," THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION REPORTED LATER TONIGHT.
THE BULLETIN SAID:
"THE ENEMY, WHO RAIDED THE MARIANAS ON THE MORNING OF THE FIFTEENTH, PLANNED A LANDING AT SAIPAN. HOWEVER, ON TWO OCCASIONS THESE FORCES WERE REPULSED INTO THE SEA.
"THE ENEMY, AT ABOUT NOON OF THE SAME DAY, ATTACKED FOR THE THIRD TIME AND ARE NOW BEING ENGAGED IN BATTLE."
A PREVIOUS COMMUNIQUE DATED 5 P.M. JUNE 15 (TOKYO TIME) HAD SAID:
"HEAVY FIGHTING IS IN PROGRESS BETWEEN JAPANESE UNITS AND ENEMY FORCES WHICH ATTEMPTED TO LAND ON SAIPAN AND TINIAN ISLANDS ON THE MORNING OF JUNE 15."
TINIAN WHO NOT MENTIONED IN THE LATER JAPANESE ANNOUNCEMENT.
ANOTHER VERSION OF THE LATEST IMPERIAL HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCEMENT, AS BEAMED TO NORTH AMERICA, SAID "EVEN NOW, FIERCE BATTLES ARE TAKING PLACE" ON SAIPAN.

WITH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE ATTACKING SAIPAN,JUNE 16-(DELAYED)FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY, A JAPANESE CIVILIAN POPULATION AND A SIZEABLE JAPANESE CITY STAND IN THE DIRECT PATH OF THE AMERICAN ADVANCE WESTWARD ACROSS THE PACIFIC.
SAIPAN ISLAND, SET IN ONE OF THE DEEPEST PORTIONS OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST OCEAN -- 1260 NAUTICAL MILES SOUTHEASTWARD OF TOKYO -- HAS A POPULATION OF AT LEAST 20,000 JAPANESE, KOREAN AND LICHIU CIVILIANS, IN ADDITION TO 200 CHAMORRO AND KANAKA NATIVES.
THEY LIVE MOSTLY IN EIGHT TOWNS AND VILLAGES, THE LARGEST OF WHICH IS GARAPAN, ON SAIPAN'S WESTERN SHORE. GARAPAN, WITH A 1935 POPULATION OF 10,386 -- OF WHICH THREE FOURTHS ARE JAPANESE -- IS A MODERN CITY, WITH ELECTRIC LIGHTS, TELEPHONES, STORES AND SCHOOLS.
THE SECOND CITY ON SAIPAN IS CHARAN-KANOA, FOUR MILES SOUTHWARD OF GARAPAN.
(A NAVAL ANNOUNCEMENT THURSDAY SAID AMERICAN FORCES HAD FOUGHT THEIR WAY INTO CHARAN-KANOA).
MOST OF THE 3,000 RESIDENTS OF CHARAN-KANOA WORK AT THE BIG SUGAR REFINERY THERE, IN THE RAILROAD YARDS OR THE SYNTHETIC SCOTCH WHISKY PLANT.
SEVENTY PERCENT OF THE ISLAND'S 72 SQUARE MILES ARE CULTIVATED, MOSTLY IN SUGAR CANE. THERE IS SOME TRUCK FARMING BETWEEN GARAPAN AND CHARAN-KANOA.
IN ADDITION TO FARMING, THERE IS A SIZEABLE FISHING INDUSTRY AT SAIPAN, WITH TUNA AND BONITA BOATS OPERATING OUT OF TANAPAG HARBOR,

JUST NORTHWARD OF GARAPAN.
THE SOUTH SEAS DEVELOPMENT CO. BROUGHT IN MOST OF THE NON-NATIVE POPULATION FOR THE SUGAR INDUSTRY SINCE 1920. IN ADDITION TO JAPANESE AND KOREANS, THESE IMMIGRANTS INCLUDED RESIDENTS OF THE LIUCHIU OR OKINAWA ISLANDS, SOUTHWARD OF JAPAN PROPER.
LIKE ALL JAPANESE COLONIAL CITIES, GARAPAN HAS A MILITARY AND BUREAUCRATIC ARISTOCRACY WHICH IS RATHER LARGE BECAUSE OF THE CITY'S IMPORTANCE AS A MILITARY CENTER AND AS THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT FOR THE ENTIRE MARIANAS GROUP.

MEXICO CITY, JUNE 15-(AP)-FINANCE MINISTER SUAREZ PROMISED THE MEXICAN PEOPLE TODAY THAT PRICES WOULD BEGIN TO COME DOWN AFTER THE FIRST OF JULY, ADDING THAT THE COUNTRY "HAS PASSED THE CRITICAL PERIOD OF ITS INFLATION."

JUN 16 1944

TWO MAIN FACTORS FOR A GENERAL DECREASE IN PRICES, SUAREZ SAID AT A PRESS CONFERENCE ARE A REDUCTION IN MONEY IN CIRCULATION AND AN INCREASE IN IMPORTS FROM THE UNITED STATES.

ANOTHER $6,000,000 OF GOVERNMENT MONEY WILL BE SPENT IN THE U.S.THIS YEAR FOR CONSTRUCTION MATERIAL, CORN, WHEAT AND LARD, FURTHER REDUCING THE MONEY IN CIRCULATION HERE, HE SAID.

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, JUNE 16-(AP)-
A SHORT-WAVE BROADCAST TO THE UNITED STATES BY THE TOKYO RADIO SHORTLY BEFORE MIDNIGHT ACKNOWLEDGED THAT AMERICAN BOMBERS HAD DAMAGED THE "RAILWAY LINE BETWEEN ORIO AND HAKATA" IN THEIR RAID ON TARGETS IN JAPAN.

JUN 16 1944

30. 24 — 16281

THE BROADCAST, REPORTED BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, DECLARED THE DAMAGE ALREADY HAD BEEN "REPAIRED."
THIS AND PREVIOUS BROADCASTS SAID THAT ABOUT 20 BOMBERS HAD ATTACKED NORTHERN KYUSHU. ALL BROADCASTS ATTEMPTED TO MINIMIZE THE RAID.

ONE JAPANESE WIRELESS DISPATCH FOR AMERICAN CONSUMPTION LAST NIGHT JECLARED THE AMERICAN RAIDERS FLEW OVER ANTUNG, ON THE MANCHURIA-KOREA BORDER, EN ROUTE TO THE TARGETS FROM A BASE SOMEWHERE IN CHINA.
THE JAPANESE DOMEI AGENCY ASSERTED THAT "QUARTERS CLOSE TO THE IMPERIAL ARMED FORCES" SAID SEVEN PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN AND THAT "OTHERS" WERE "SERIOUSLY DAMAGED."

JUN 16 1944

JAPANESE IMPERIAL HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED THE RAID LAST NIGHT IN A BROADCAST COMMUNIQUE.
THE COMMUNIQUE, CONTAINED IN A DOMEI AGENCY BROADCAST FROM TOKYO, SAID:
"TODAY, JUNE 16, AT ABOUT 2 A.M. FROM THE CHINA AREA, ABOUT 20 B-29 (SUPER FORTRESSES) AND B-24 (LIBERATORS) PLANES RAIDED THE NORTHERN KYUSHU SECTOR. OUR WESTERN AIR DEFENSE FORCES IMMEDIATELY INTERCEPTED AND REPULSED THEM, SHOOTING DOWN SEVERAL. OUR LOSSES WERE NEGLIGIBLE."

AN EARLIER TOKYO BROADCAST, MADE JUST AHEAD OF THE COMMUNIQUE, CLAIMED THAT SIX OF THE AMERICAN PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN, AND NAMED THE CITY OF YAWATA, SITUATED ON A NARROW STRAIT ACROSS FROM THE GREAT JAPANESE NAVAL BASE OF SHIMONOSEKI, AS ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL TARGETS.

THE COMMUNIQUE WAS BROADCAST IN ROMANIZED JAPANESE TO OCCUPIED AREAS, THE FCC SAID, WHILE THE TOKYO RADIO'S FIRST STATEMENT CAME IN AN ENGLISH LANGUAGE BROADCAST BEAMED TO THE UNITED STATES. THIS BROADCAST SAID THE RAIDERS CONCENTRATED THEIR ATTACKS ON INDUSTRIAL AREAS.

OTHER JAPANESE BROADCASTS ALSO NAMED YAWATA AND KOKURA AS TARGETS. DURING THE NIGHT THE JAPANESE STATIONS ISSUED A NUMBER OF REPORTS ON THE ATTACK, MINIMIZING ITS IMPORTANCE.
ONE BROADCAST SAID THE RAIDERS AIMED MAINLY FOR THE MOJI AND YAWATA VICINITY. THE FORMER IS AN IMPORTANT COMMUNICATIONS CENTER AND THE LATTER IS ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT STEEL PRODUCING DISTRICTS IN JAPAN.
A BROADCAST BEAMED TO NORTH AMERICA AND RECORDED BY THE FCC SAID "ONE OR TWO FACTORIES BLAZED UP DUE TO THE BOMBINGS."

THE BROADCAST DECLARED THAT "THE DAMAGES INCURRED ON OUR SIDE WERE NEGLIGIBLE AND OF NO MILITARY IMPORTANCE." IT SAID THAT TWO OR THREE FIRES WERE STARTED IN COMPARATIVELY UNIMPORTANT CENTERS BUT THAT THEY WERE QUICKLY EXTINGUISHED.
KYUSHU IS THE SOUTHERNMOST UNIT IN THE ISLAND GROUP FORMING THE JAPANESE HOMELAND.
"QUICK AND EFFECTIVE INTERCEPTION BY THE JAPANESE DEFENSE" RESULTED IN THE SHOOTING DOWN OF SIX OF THE ATTACKING BOMBERS, TOKYO SAID, ADDING, "JAPANESE PILOTS WHO ENGAGED THE RAIDERS ALSO DISCLOSED THAT AMONG THE ENEMY PLANES SHOT DOWN ERE THE NEW B-29 SUPER BOMBERS."

JUN 16 1944

THE ANNOUNCEMENT WAS BROADCAST UNDER THE TITLE: "LATEST DEVELOPMENTS OF NEWS OF THE WORLD," THE FCC REPORTED.
THE JAPANESE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID THE RAID "DID NOT WORK ACCORDING TO THE ORIGINAL PLANS OF THE ENEMY."
THE TOKYO BROADCAST CAME ALMOST SIX HOURS AFTER THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE RAID BY THE WAR DEPARTMENT IN WASHINGTON.

JAPAN MAINTAINED A REMARKABLE RADIO SILENCE, UNPRECEDENTED FOR HER IN THIS WAR, ON THE SUPER FORTRESS RAID ON HER HOMELAND TODAY (THURSDAY).

IT IS REASONABLE TO ASSUME THE RAID WAS MADE IN DAYLIGHT OF JUNE 15, TOKYO TIME, AND ALSO LIKELY THAT IT WAS MADE EARLY ENOUGHT IN THE DAY TO ALLOW THE B-29S TO RETURN TO THEIR CONTINENTAL BASES BEFORE DARK, PERHAPS AROUND NOON.

NOON TOKYO TIME THURSDAY WAS 11 P.M. WEDNESDAY, EASTERN WAR TIME, OR MORE THAN 14 HOURS BEFORE WASHINGTON ANNOUNCED THE RAID. LATE THIS (THURSDAY) AFTERNOON TOKYO STATIONS HAD NOT MENTIONED THE ATTACK.

EVEN THE BERLIN RADIO, USUALLY QUICK TO RELAY NEWS FROM TOKYO, BROADCAST ONLY A SHORT BULLETIN REPEATING THE WASHINGTON ANNOUNCEMENT.

WHEN DOOLITTLE'S MITCHELLS RAIDED TOKYO AND OTHER CITIES APRIL 18, 1942, THE TOKYO RADIO WAS ON THE AIR WITH SOMEWHAT HYSTERICAL ACCOUNTS A FEW MINUTES AFTER THE AMERICAN PLANES APPEARED OVER THE CITY. FOR WEEKS TOKYO WAS THE ONLY SOURCE OF INFORMATION.

TOKYO'S SILENCE RAISES INTERESTING QUESTIONS: HAS THE MILITARY PUT INTO EFFECT A NEW SET OF SECURITY REGULATIONS GOVERNING RADIO? WAS THE RADIO SYSTEM PUT OUT OF COMMISSION?

THE LATTER IS UNLIKELY, HOWEVER, SINCE ABOUT 5 P.M. TODAY, JAPAN TIME (4 A.M., E.W.T.), TOKYO WAS BROADCASTING ACCOUNTS OF THE AMERICAN TASK FORCE ATTACK ON THE MARIANAS ISLANDS.

NAZIS FACE CRISIS

Three Mile Gain Made by Another U. S. Column in Drive Across Peninsula.

By JAMES M. LONG

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Saturday, June 17. — (AP) American troops cut the last German rail escape route out of Cherbourg yesterday with the capture of strategic St. Sauveur Le Vicomte, and also retook ruined Montebourg, only 14 miles southeast of the prize port, after a furious four-day battle.

The Germans clearly faced a crisis in trying to keep their badly-mauled troops from being split on the peninsula.

Seize St. Sauveur

American seizure of St. Sauveur, 18 miles south of Cherbourg, was confirmed officially at midnight by army officials in France. It all but cut in two the Axis forces on the peninsula because U. S. artillery now is within range of the west coast highway six miles beyond St. Sauveur. That highway is the last Axis link between the French interior and thousands of imperilled German troops in the Cherbourg area.

Seven miles south of St. Sauveur the Americans were reported only four miles from La Haye Du Puits, highway hub of even more importance than St. Sauveur, since the west coast road runs through it. The Americans gained two-miles from Pretot in the drive on La Haye, dispatches said.

A three mile gain southwest of Carentan was made by another American column fighting its way across the peninsula.

Cross Douve River

Capture of St. Sauveur represented a three-mile gain from Reigneville and carried the Yanks across the Douve river on the east side of St. Sauveur. Associated Press Front Correspondent Don Whitehead said the Americans entered St. Sauveur at noon Friday, fighting from house to house. It is a junction of two big highways.

Headquarters communique No. 22 issued just before midnight told of advances westward across the Cherbourg peninsula but gave no details. It also said that Allied troops had scored local successes in the Tilly sector near the eastern end of the front where British and Canadians are engaged. Tilly, however, remains in enemy hands, the bulletin said.

The Germans fought desperately yesterday in an unsuccessful effort to stem the Americans, Whitehead said. The Americans were moving over roads littered with Axis dead and wrecked equipment.

Tough young Nazi soldiers formed the core of resistance in the area, but they had hurled Polish, Russian and Czech conscripts into the forefront.

The Americans entered St. Sauveur at noon, but there was no official word yet of its capture. Whitehead told of house-to-house battles inside the town. He himself entered it after patrols had gone across the Douve and penetrated into the town.

Expect Counterattacks

A headquarters spokesman said it was expected that in a town of such obvious strategic importance the Germans almost certainly would try to win it back with counterattacks as they did last Tuesday at Montebourg on the approaches to Cherbourg. Montebourg is 10 miles northeast of St. Sauveur.

U. S. troops trying to split the Cherbourg peninsula now hold a 30-mile long semi-circle running southwest from the Quineville area on the east coast through Montebourg to St. Sauveur and then southeastward to the Carentan area.

JUN 17 1944

The communique said three U. S. battleships, the Texas, Nevada and Arkansas, carried out heavy bombardments in support of the U. S. troops near Carentan and Isigny, seven miles to the east. These point are in the center of the American front, on both flanks of which the Americans are well inland.

On Thursday the British Battleship Ramillies, assisting British-Canadian forces at the eastern end of the Normandy line, silenced an enemy battery at Benerville after an hour's duel, the communique said. Benerville is near Deauville and about 20 miles northeast of embattled Caen.

The British Battleship Nelson also engaged an enemy long-range battery north of Le Havre, farther up the coast, while Allied cruisers throughout the day dueled with other German shore batteries and fired on troop concentrations.

King Visits Front

King George VI visited the Normandy front during the day and lunched with the Allied ground commander, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery. He crossed the channel on the cruiser Arethusa and landed on shore from an amphibious duck.

Adverse weather once more crippled Allied air activity.

Whitehead said that the Germans threw cooks, truck drivers, and supply troops into the line before St. Sauveur.

The Americans "kept pressure on the fanatical Nazis until finally they cracked," Whitehead wrote. "Then the advance burst forward like the waters from a broken dam.

Now, Whitehead said, the junction town, "except for doughboy patrols moving through it, is a shattered and beaten city of death."

The Germans had made it a strongpoint and had defended it house by house, and the Allies replied with the furious action necessary to take it.

Headquarters announced Friday morning that "the threat to the Cherbourg peninsula is substantially increasing." Shortly later it was emphasized that although the Americans were cutting steadily across the narrow waist of the peninsula, completion of the job should not necessarily be expected quickly. It was pointed out that the Germans have had little trouble bringing up reinforcements to this area over good communications lines back into France.

JUN 17 1944

Germans Admit Reverses

(The Germans radio acknowledged continuing reverses on the American right flank on the peninsula and also said that to the southeast Americans driving down the Bayeux-St. Lo, "succeeded in making a number of breaches in the German line."

(The Germans announced that the Nazi-hardened "Hitler youth" 12th SS. armored division on the Caen front had lost its commander, Maj. Gen. Fritz Witt, killed in action.)

At Gen. Eisenhower's advanced headquarters it was estimated that the Germans had 300,000 men facing the Allies in Normandy—200,000 of them combat troops.

It was indicated that three front-line German divisions already had been badly mauled: the 709th, 711th and 352nd. These three were said to have been smashed by three regiments from the American first and 29th divisions on the beaches on D-day June 6.

The weather deteriorated once more. There have been more bad days than good since the invasion started, and today was the worst of the lot. A 35-mile-an-hour northwesterly wind whipped up the channel, hampering landings.

Gunners Withdraw Fire

The American hold on Quineville, on the middle of the east coast of the Cherbourg peninsula, at the extreme right of the beachhead coast, was tightened, with the Germans admitting withdrawal of their line behind the Sinope river, a half-mile north of the town.

(The Germans also reported "violent street fighting" in Montebourg, where the American fourth division's resurgent attack apparently carried back into the deeply outflanked city.)

From Pretot, west of Carentan, other American forces fought with-

30. 24— 16285

in six miles—gun range—of La Haye Du Puits, funnel of the last rail and road lifelines linking Cherbourg with the main German forces.

Southwest of Carentan, which field dispatches disclosed changed hands four times in fierce American attacks against dogged resistance, Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's doughboys drove a hard three miles along a narrow dyke-like strip of firm ground between flooded marshes.

Caumont, at the center of the beachhead line, was held more securely, although Allied patrols that pushed two miles into wooded hills south of the town ran into strong enemy concentrations.

Other forces, stabbing east for a weak spot around Villers Bocage, seven miles east of Caumont, were heavily engaged, with neither side reporting gains.

Meanwhile, headquarters reported the worst weather over the battlefields since D-day with a 20-mile-an-hour northwest wind blowing onto the beaches—the only place the Allies now hold for the reinforcement and supply of their invasion armies.

Warships' Guns Still Aiding

Despite the weather, however, the United States battleships Texas and Nevada and the cruiser Augusta were reported to be arching their shells deep inland to support the troops driving across the peninsula.

A few miles south of the American spearhead pointed at St. Sauveur was another column pushing toward La Haye du Puits, a road junction controlling all the remain-ville, on the extreme right wing of the 100-mile beachhead front, American forces advanced a mile or more to reach the Senope river.

Trench Warfare At Caen

Furious armored fighting raged in the Tilly-sur-Seulles sector, while farther east the battle of Caen settled into trench warfare, with the British and Canadians holding on tenaciously. The nearest approach to a "line" was held around Troarn, at the extreme left flank of the bridgehead.

(A heavy blow was dealt British troops in the Orne estuary when the sluices and dams of Caen were blown up by the Nazis, Reuter heard the German DNB news agency broadcast tonight.

"With the Caen sluices destroyed, the small fishing port of Ouistreham where the enemy landed on the first day has now lost its significance. It no longer has any water and can be used only at high tide," DNB claimed.)

Field dispatches said mobile fighting in the spearheads of the American sector found generals in the front line with their troops, tossing hand grenades and firing rifles side by side with privates.

American columns pushing forward sometimes were cut off and had to fight their way back into contact with the main forces.

Another part of the drive to cut off Cherbourg was a thrust between the Elle and Vire rivers southeast of Carentan which might be pointed toward St. Jean de Daye on the St. Lo-Carentan highway.

Quineville, the small coastal town on the far right flank of the beachhead, which fell to the Americans, was described by headquarters as "a valuable new outlet from the beaches."

Activity was boiling up in the area around Caumont and Villers-Bocage at the point of the Allies' deepest penetration inland, and there was a prospect that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery might be ready to renew his drive here.

Confidence that the bridgehead was now secure was voiced officially at Allied headquarters. "We now are entering the build-up phase," it was explained.

This meant the forces which went ashore with assault equipment to carry through the first few days of fighting and allow only limited penetration inland now were being bolstered with light equipment to last them until they are up to full offensive supply.

Despite unconfirmed reports that the Germans had started demolition of Cherbourg port facilities, there was no tangible evidence that the Nazis had started

The bread-and-butter virtually stalemated fighting in this sector came with dramatic suddenness this morning when stubborn enemy resistance crumpled before the steady pressure of Doughboys who are sweeping Normandy's green hedgerows with scythe-like streams of machine gun fire.

The forward surge carried our troops across the Douve river and into this shell smashed town which sits astride the main highway running south from Cherbourg—and placed them only six miles from the peninsula's west coast highway which is the only north-south communications line left for enemy forces still fighting north of St. Sauveur.

There is no indication yet how many enemy troops or how much equipment will be trapped if the break through should carry on across the peninsula.

Along with the entry into St. Sauveur the doughboys to the north recaptured Montebourg, which is 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg, after four days of the bitterest see-saw fighting.

Americans further tightened the peninsula beachhead control by consolidating positions around Quineville, three miles northeast of Montebourg.

The thrust to St. Sauveur overshadowed other beachhead developments, which saw the Doughboys improve their positions all along the line, particularly in the Carentan sector where the Germans tried and failed to drive a wedge between the American beachheads.

As yet the Germans have not been able to put in a full-scale attack because the American thrusts have kept them off balance and air control has prevented them bringing up reinforcements with any speed over roads constantly being bombed and strafed.

Meanwhile this new push by the the peninsula and close the last six-mile gap. Normally violent reaction from the enemy could be expected in the next few hours.

Swift Advance

The advance into St. Sauveur was made swiftly across the green countryside ripped by shrapnel and machine-gun bullets and strewn with the bodies of Germans mowed down as they lay in the woods and hedgerows trying to halt the doughboys and units of the crack shock troops.

The Americans had kept pressure on the Nazis until they cracked. Then the advance burst forward like waters from a broken dam.

This town now—except for United States patrols moving through it—is a shattered, beaten city of ruin. It died under the terrible weight of artillery and lies gray, ugly and torn.

Its destruction was inevitable because the Germans turned it into a strong point and were fighting bitterly from house to house to try and save it.

Entered At Noon

The town was entered at 12 noon when first units of shock troops led by Lieut. Eugene Doerfler, of Hays, Kan., crossed the river. The unit which entered the town was under the command of Capt. Clyde Russell, of Iowa, who followed Doerfler across the bomb-shattered bridge at the edge of this mass of ruins.

The Germans were throwing cooks, truck drivers and supply troops into the line in a desperate effort to stem the advance. In many of their front-line units they had a large percentage of Russians, Poles, Czechs and other nationalities.

But behind this strange assortment of troops were tough Nazis manning heavy machine guns and mortars. They were the backbone of the defenders.

Thinks Of De Gaulle

I walked into town shortly after noon and what I saw made me think of what General de Gaulle had told people of ruined Isigny when he looked at the wreckage of their homes and business road were clipped by machine-gun fire and twigs and branches were scattered on the paved surface. Bedding, clothing, stationery, shoes, helmets and gear were scattered as though flung away by men in flight.

Climbs Tower

On a hill above St. Sauveur I climbed into the gray tower of an ancient chateau and looked out a little window at the valley below. Across the winding Douve river lay the beaten town, hazy in the smoke and dust of battle.

German shells were falling on the hillside below—shells from 88's and mortars. Six frightened horses in a near-by pasture ran frantically about seeking escape from the noise.

In a clump of bushes behind the chateau our mortars were sending shells whining overhead.

I climbed down from the tower and joined the troops moving into town. We hugged embankments for cover from snipers, but about 200 yards from the river bridge we came out on an exposed road. Machine guns rattled off to our right, and bullets snapped past.

Drops To Road

I fell beside the road with Lieut. George Scalf, of Nashville, Tenn. He poked his carbine over the bank and searched the bushes for snipers. There were no other shots our way, so our group continued across the half-demolished bridge into the mass of wreckage that once had been a town.

Walls of many buildings were shot away completely, leaving gaunt skeletons exposed. Furniture, bedding, household goods and debris were piled up in a hopeless scramble.

There was not a building standing whole, and the streets were clogged with debris.

Colonel On Crutch

Hobbling about in the wreckage was a lieutenant colonel. He had jumped into France on D-day and had a bone broken in his foot. It was encased in a plaster cast and he was on a crutch but still with his troops. Praising his men for the job they had done, he sent units forward to keep the Germans on the run.

Then the Nazis began to rain mortars and 88's on the town and we hugged the walls and buildings while bursts threw a gray film of dust over us.

Americans In France Go 3 More Miles Past Carentan

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 16 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's American troops, ramming home another blow to cut off Cherbourg, have advanced westward within 2½ miles of St. Sauveur, a junction controlling two of the three roads leading to the nearly beleaguered port, Allied headquarters announced today. The Americans made a gain of 2½ to 3 miles west of Carentan after having previously reached Reigneville, three miles northeast of St. Sauveur.

Plugging away on a 10-mile front and rapping out repeated gains despite stubborn resistance, the Americans were now within 11 miles of the Cherbourg peninsula's western shore. Their spearhead was some 17 miles below the big port.

Tank Battles Below Caumont

While Bradley's Yanks still fought a dingdong battle with Germans in the streets of Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg on the Allied right flank, the British were engaged in stiff tank battles with German troops in force two miles south of Caumont. This is about 20 miles inland, the deepest Allied penetration.

Tank battles still raged also around Caen and Tilly-sur-Seulles ing roads into Cherbourg. The Americans were last reported about six miles from Le Haye.

A late dispatch from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's advanced command post said it was estimated that 300,000 German troops had been thrown against the Normandy beachhead. This dispatch said four German divisions had been badly mauled in battle, including the 709th, 711th and 352nd.

Nazis Rush Up Reserves

Alive to the vital necessity of holding St. Sauveur and Le Haye du Puits, the Germans rushed reserves into the battle and vigorous, fluid fighting was in progress.

The German communique said the Nazis drove the Allies back southeast and southwest of Carentan, but admitted Allied gains west and north of Ste. Mere Eglise. It claimed that a wedge had been driven into the Allied bridgehead east of the Orne river.

West of newly captured Quine-

Fourteen miles below the port of Cherbourg, Montebourg still was in German hands, but it had been outflanked by the Fourth American Division's capture of Quineville. This division had the important Montebourg-Valognes road under artillery fire.

In the area of Carentan, key point in the line, the Americans had fought their way across districts flooded by the Germans and were on firm land in the area of the village of Baupte. The Germans themselves admitted the Americans were at Pretot, three miles beyond Baupte and barely six miles from La Haye du Puits. Here the enemy launched stiff armored counter-attacks. The German-controlled Paris radio declared German counter-attacks had brought them back to the walls of Carentan, but there was no Allied confirmation of this.

a withdrawal from the mena tip of the peninsula.

Best estimates were that t Germans had committed twer divisions, between 200,000 a 300,000 men, including fo armored divisions, to the beac head battle.

"The Germans are dancing t our tune," said the Allied con mand, "counter-attacking wher ever they can to try to stop u breaks in their line. We hop they are wearing themselves out

"The weather is very good and our beaches are developing well. The landing is reaching a constant crescendo."

AMERICANS BREAK NAZI RESISTANCE NEAR CHERBOURG

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS AT ST. SAUVEUR LE VICOMTE, June 17 (AP) Bitter fighting for Cherbourg peninsula reached a sudden crisis today when American troops burst through fanatical German resistance to within about six miles of the Germans' last escape corridor.

Americans has created a grave problem for the German command. It must throw in new reserves to check the rush by a quick shifting of forces or leave its troops in the northern part of the peninsula to shift for themselves as best they can.

The Germans have made a general move to bring up reinforcements. Whether they will be able to counter this new development and contain our advance remains to be seen.

Indications are that the next 48 hours may be decisive as to whether the Americans will be able to continue to roll forward across houses — "these are sufferings which every part of France will have to bear before final liberation."

I drove to the front behind swiftly moving assault troops along roads strewn with wreckage of German light tanks, guns and trucks. There even was one mess truck smashed before it could escape.

Hedgerows and trees along the

U.S. Tanks Take Big Toll Below

1944

Carentan Day

By Don Whitehead

With American Troops Southwest of Carentan, June 16 (AP)—The toughest and bitterest fighting on the entire American front continues in this sector.

The roads are littered with German dead, mowed down by withering fire from tanks. At least 500 dead Nazis are piled up in the ditches and hedgerows where SS troops and parachute troops fought fanatically to break through between two beachheads two days ago.

But as the Germans advanced along the hedgerows and under cover of bushesAmerican tanks ran up and "gave 'em the garden hose"—sprayed the area with more than 60,000 rounds of .30-caliber machine-gun bullets.

"Krauts Fell Like Flies"

"The Krauts fell from trees and out of the hedges like flies," said Capt. Harry Vold, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

Time after time the tanks charged, crushing Nazis under their steel treads.

The battle was raging for a crossroads about two miles southwest of Carentan, and that was where Tank Commander Sergeant Wilbur K. Rockwell, Antrim, N. H., and his gunner, Corporal George W. Smith, Silver Creek, Miss., set an American beachhead record by knocking out three tank-mounted 105-mm. German guns at 1,000 yards with three shots.

"Like Pigeons On A Fence"

"Smith, the gunner, knocked them off like pigeons on a fence," grinned Corporal Patrick J. Brogan, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Yanks were hard pressed and when the tanks rolled up they stood up in their foxholes and cheered wildly.

"You'd have thought you were at the Giants-Dodgers game," said Private John Boretsky, of Brooklyn.

Old French Couple Bury American D Day Dead

Sixteen Graves Are Marked by Crosses and Flowers

A FIGHTER BASE IN ENGLAND, June 16 (AP).—An elderly, devout French couple buried sixteen American air-borne soldiers, set up white crosses and adorned the graves with flowers tied with pink silk ribbons, returning pilots reported today.

The soldiers were killed in D-Day landings when their gliders crashed into giant glider poles erected by the Nazis in fields near the French couple's farmhouse. Laboriously the aging pair dug neat rows of graves, sadly they laid the soldier dead to rest, and tenderly they covered them with soil.

On each white cross they wrote the date—June 6, 1944, the name and the rank of the dead. Then they hung the soldiers' identification tags on the crosses.

The incident was related by Thunderbolt pilots returning from landing strips in Normandy.

"The graves certainly looked very nice," said Lieutenant Alonzo Morgan, of Glens Falls, N. Y. "I met the man and his wife but couldn't converse with them, as I don't understand French."

Eisenhower Sees Montgomery

SUPREME, HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 16 (AP). — General Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander, and Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, deputy supreme commander, have visited General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of ground forces in the Normandy invasion, on the "eastern sectors of the beachhead," Supreme Headquarters announced today.

The official statement said:

"Accompanied by his deputy, Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, Gen. Eisenhower yesterday visited the eastern sectors of the beachhead. They conferred with Gen. Montgomery and with Air Marshal (Sir Arthur) Coningham and other British ground and air commanders."

D-Day Casualties Fewer Than Expected

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 16 (AP)—D-day casualties were below what had been expected and planned for, and less than one per cent. of the American wounded who reached medical stations died, it was disclosed officially today.

The invasion medical service surpassed that available in the North African landings or in World War I.

New Anesthetic Helps

Extensive use was made of a new anesthetic, sodium pentathal, which is administered intravenously through an operation which is quicker acting and more pleasant than ether. This anesthetic, however, is unfeasible where abdominal relaxation is required.

The most frequent type of wound was from high explosive shell fragments in the arms and legs. In the World War I there was a big proportion of chest wounds because of more static fighting.

Evacuation hospitals with nurses were set up within five miles of fighting lines four days after D-day and were doing major surgery within two hours.

Drugs Used Extensively

There was extensive use of penicillin and sulfa drugs and many transfusions of plasma and whole blood which were delivered by both ship and air.

Gangrene from a gas-producing bacillus, which developed in about three per cent. of the wounds in the last war and which was greatly feared, has been almost negligible in the Normandy operation because of quick treatment. It occurred mainly among German wounded.

Combat Wing Cited For French Bridge Raid

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 16 (AP)—An entire B-24 combat wing of the Eighth Air Force has been cited for obeying literally orders to destroy a vital railway bridge in France "at any cost."

The wing, commanded by Brig. Gen. Walter R. Peck of Lima, Ohio, found its target area covered by clouds. Despite extreme danger from German fighters and anti-aircraft fire, the bombers went down to the unprecedented level of 6,500 feet and cut the bridge in two.

A citation from Brig. Gen. James P. Hodges, commander of the division to which the wing belongs, said: "The courage, audacity and determination displayed by the officers and men and their complete disregard for the hazard of this dangerous undertaking reflect the greatest credit on themselves, their organization and the United States Army Air Forces."

Hitler Youth Unit Head Is Killed In Normandy

London, June 16 (AP)—The German news agency, DNB, said today that Maj. Gen. Fritz Witt, commander of the 7th (Hitler Youth) Panzer Division, was killed on the invasion front.

Witt, 36, formerly regimental commander of the Hitler Leibstandarte (body guard), was described by DNB as the "holder of one of the highest German decorations for gallantry, the Oak Leaves to the Knights Cross of the Iron Cross."

He was the second German general killed in Normandy. A few days ago Berlin announced that Artillery General Eric Mareks was killed in action.

Rudolph Ribbentrop, son of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, was reported to be the second in command of the Hitler Youth Division.

Bayeux District Backs De Gaulle Government

London, June 16 (AP)—Radio France at Algiers tonight said Bayeux, first district in Metropolitan France to be liberated, gave backing to Gen. Charles de Gaulle's "provisional government."

The radio broadcast a resolution adopted by the Bayeux local committee asserting the "provisional government of the French Republic under de Gaulle should associate with its work the district of Bayeux."

The resolution also expressed "ardent greetings to liberating soldiers of the United Nations and homage to British and American dead."

MERCENARIES IN FRANCE REBEL

King George Visits France, Lunches with Gen. Montgomery

ABOARD THE BRITISH CRUISER ARETHUSA, June 16. — (AP) King George VI visited the Normandy beachhead today and lunched with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery at advanced headquarters.

The King crossed on this cruiser and landed from an amphibious "duck."

Before returning safely to a south coast naval port, he conferred the C.B.E. on Maj. Gen. R. F. L. Keller, commander of the Canadian Third division, in an open-air investiture less than six miles from the front line.

The King, climbing nimbly out of the duck that took him ashore, was greeted by "Monty" in battle dress and beret.

"Good morning, your majesty. Welcome to France," said Montgomery as he and the King shook hands.

It had been four centuries since a reigning sovereign of England last set foot on Norman soil to visit his armies fighting there.

Although there was no ceremonial today, and landing craft continued unloading men, tanks and munitions onto the crowded beaches, everyone in the group around the King was conscious of the high significance of the occasion.

The King landed on a beach just west of Courselles, where the Canadians had stormed ashore. Shells from the Cruiser Hawkins screamed over his head and landed on a shore target ten miles inland. They were the first shots the King had seen actually fired at enemy positions in this war.

Two destroyers escorted the Arethusa, and Spitfires circled overhead from the moment the King sailed until he returned to England.

With a yellow "Mae West" life preserved over his tunic, the King stayed on the cruiser's bridge all the way over, watching through his binoculars the endless streams of vessels of every kind shuttling to and from France.

Spain Reports Troops Are Deserting Nazis.

Lisbon, June 16 (AP).—Outright rebellion by German mercenaries in southern France and audacious guerrillas masquerading in German battledress are complicating the Nazi task of controlling the turbulent area behind the Normandy battlefront, Spanish dispatches indicated today.

Large numbers of Turkomans, Cossacks, Tartars, Croats, Armenians and Georgians forced to turn soldiers and sent into southern France under German officers, have been deserting en masse, these reports said.

Spanish border reports said the first to desert was an entire battalion of Cossacks stationed in the Tarn department. When they heard the invasion news, they killed their German officers, escaped into the mountains and established contact with French guerrillas, the dispatches said.

From the Franco-Spanish border also came word that Frenchmen reaching the frontier through underground routes declared "thousands" of guerrillas were now wearing Nazi battledress, apparently obtained in the seizure of German war material. Train service has been halted to Irun by guerrilla activity.

Tarbes Abandoned.

Earlier the French underground was said to have captured the Gascony town of Tarbes on Sunday, then abandoned it Wednesday night, taking with them 300 German prisoners and leaving in ruins the arsenal, railway yards, the Hispano-Suiza airplane motor factory and a truck factory.

The raid was accomplished by 500 poorly armed men with cooperation of civil officials who were posing as Vichy men but had worked with the underground for more than a year.

Radio France in Algiers said German troops were disarming Vichy police and mobile guards because they were going over to Patriot resistance units within France.

The Swiss paper Basler Nachrichten reports that the campaign for a general rising by the Partisans in northern Italy has been highly successful, the London radio said this morning adding that more men of the Fascist militia are going over to the resistance movement."

CBS recorded the London broadcast.

When the Germans called up their Quisling home guard in Holland on invasion day only 15 per cent of the men appeared, the others were all too frightened to answer the summons, reported the Dutch newspaper in London Vrij Nederland.

The paper also learned that the number of desertions from the German coastal army in Holland has increased greatly since the invasion, added the broadcast, recorded by CBS.

French Patriots Seize City 150 Miles From Caen

Port Bou, Spain, at the French Border, June 16 (AP)—A new maquis army has opened guerrilla action only 150 miles south of the Caen battleline, reports reaching the French-Spanish frontier said today.

Several hundred well-armed guerrillas rolled into Bressuire in 30 trucks Wednesday, isolated the town's Nazi garrison and spent four hours wrecking five rail lines which cross through the town, as well as dynamiting roads and bridges, it was reported.

This raid was taken to indicate the maquis were moving toward the Loire Valley, in the Saumur and Tours area, where vital German supply lines are located.

Another report said the town of Eymoutiers, 29 miles east of Limoges, in central France, had changed hands three times with the maquis forces recapturing the community yesterday after once being driven out.

GERMANS CLAIM CONVOY SMASHED BY SMALL PLANES

People Killed, Buildings Wrecked by Fantastic 'Secret Weapon'.

RENEW ATTACKS

Small Planes Being Launched from Emplacements in France.

LONDON, Saturday, June 17. — (AP) German explosive robot planes, striking blindly and indiscriminately in intermittent attacks, still were zooming over parts of southern England at daybreak today after the second successive period of dusk-to-daylight attacks.

In an apparent attempt to confuse the British defenses, the Germans sent fast fighter-bombers across the channel along with their new flying "secret weapons." The fighters ducked in and out of the clouds, dropping flares.

Rockets from the British ack-ack batteries plunged upward against the weird weapons, and a number of the pilotless craft were reported to have crashed.

Scores of the small, unmanned craft have now been sent over, killing people and smashing buildings.

The strange 'secret weapons" of which the Germans often have boastfully hinted, were launched from emplacements in France which Allied bombers have tried for months to obliterate.

NAZI ROBOT PLANES SMASH AT BRITAIN

JUN 17 1944

Many Pilotless Aircraft Called Instruments of Vengeance, Drop Flame-scattering Explosives.

DAY

London, June 16 (A. P.).—German planes without pilots, ghostly and death-spitting, streaked across the southern English sky today, smashing targets at random and keeping ground guns crackling. The Germans proclaimed this fantastic "secret" weapon as an instrument of vengeance for what German cities suffered under the crushing weight of Allied aerial might.

These bizarre, flame-scattering robot bombers began their eerie attacks last night, descending on southern Britain by the dozens, and for the first time since the 1940 blitz the ground defenses could be heard extensively in daylight, as the Germans continued their attacks in what seemed to be an enemy attempt to divert the world's—and their home front's—attention from the multiplying crises facing German arms on the battle fields of Europe.

An official announcement tonight said that the robot planes continued the attack intermittently throughout the day, although on a smaller scale than last night, adding that "incident have occurred at several places in southern England and damage and casualties have been reported." There was no evidence, however, that any important military damage had been wrought.

[Military installations bombed by the Allied Air Forces for nearly a year were the launching platforms for the new weapon—the pilotless plane—used by the Germans against London last night and today, the British Information Service in New York said. For months before D day, Allied aerial onslaughts were carried out incessantly against what were described as mystery installations in the Pas de Calais area of France.]

The German communique said only that southern England and the greater London area were attacked with novel weapons and "super heavy" explosives were dropped.

Germans Report Heavy Damage.

A special note broadcast after the communique of the High Command said: "There is hardly one German who will not receive this news with greatest satisfaction. The feelings of hatred and a burning wish for retaliation which dominate the German people have been kindled by our enemies in their terror crimes."

Another German commentator said: "The mills of the Gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small. Perhaps our enemy did not believe that reprisals would ever come to them. They laughed off the Fuehrer's words."

Transocean, German propaganda agency, claimed that "damage of the greatest extent was caused by the new German high explosives in London," and that "warehouses on the Thames are in flames and rail comunications partly disrupted."

Descriptions of the weapon varied considerably, but all agreed that these self-destroying aircraft flew at terrific speed in a straight line, were marked by bright lights and shot flames from their exhausts—suggesting they might be jet or rocket propelled.

The lights presumably were to aid in radio control, probably from piloted planes at a great distance.

The German radio said only that "combat planes attacked several important targets in the River Thames area with good effect."

The British Ministry of Home Security ordered civilians to stay away from the pilotless aircraft, which explode five to fifteen seconds after landing.

Smaller Than Spitfire.

One correspondent telephoned this word picture of the pilotless craft:

"The planes have a distinctive, rhythmic note, giving the effect of a pulsating, low throb. They are much smaller than a Spitfire but their appearence is much the same.

"They really are midget planes. At night they show a distinct yellow glow at the rear and in the light of searchlights streams of thick smoke can be seen being ejected from them.

"Many of them have been observed in daylight and on several occasions R. A. F. fighters, with total disregard of danger, have dived into the ack-ack fire around them in attempts to make a kill.

As the day wore on alerts and all clears alternated over southern England and guns cracked intermittently, but the nation's business went on without interruption.

"The pilotless planes appeared to be painted dark brown or black," an eyewitness report said, "and smoke issues from them in small thick puffs, attuned to the throb which can be heard. They streak across the sky at great speed."

From one place in southern England came a report that during the night and again today various districts were automatically fired on by machine guns.

Home Secretary Herbert S. Morrison told Commons today that these radio-controlled planes were first used Tuesday night, and came over again last night and today.

While he was speaking, southern England shook to light and heavy anti-aircraft guns and rockets barking out at these raiders coming over sporadically.

More enemy raiders were seen crossing the southern English coast at intervals this morning, with anti-aircraft guns opening up on them and R. A. F. fighters going up to meet them.

Planes Cross Channel.

Reports did not indicate whether these were more of the pilotless planes, but presumably they were.

The Nazis thus were striking against the flow of Allied strength into the successful bridgehead in France, hoping to divert it.

Mr. Morrison referred to the pilotless planes as "missiles," indicating they were designed to crash against their objectives rather than to drop bombs as orthodox planes do.

He indicated these planes were not expected to return home. He said he had not had full reports on the number of pilotless aircraft destroyed before they could explode last night.

The German pilotless planes roared across the night skies and well into daylight with an odd rumbling sound under a heavy layer of cloud.

Wear Tin Hats Again.

Today blitz-hardened British took their tin hats to work for the first time since 1941 as Hitler's move placed them once more in the front line with troops fighting across the channel.

British Prefer Bombs.

Bomb-hardened Britons watched the pilotless planes with more curiosity than concern.

"Seems 'orrible queer to me," said one 80-year-old woman. "I believe I'd rather have bombs."

"Weirdest night I ever had," commented a policeman, keeping a wary eye and ear on a swishing noise in the sky.

"I don't like the idea of nobody in those planes," said a delivery boy. "I don't know why but it's sorta ghosty. But we'll get used to 'em like we did the rest."

Thunderous barrages echoed on both sides of the channel as the battle of the bridgehead merged into one with the new battle of Britain.

Mr. Morrison explained to Parliament that to refrain from giving the Germans an accurate check on the effectiveness of this new weapon, in the future no information would be released on raids against southern England—an area south of a line from the Wash to the Bristol Channel—except for the bare facts of attacks made in this general region.

JUN 17 1944

He said the Germans sent a small number of the un-manned planes against Britain early Tuesday, and increased the number last night and this morning. The first attack was inconsiderable, though a few casualties were caused.

Mr. Morrison did not indicate whether fighter planes were being used against the pilotless planes. Neither did he say whether the planes were controlled from continental stations, from aircraft standing outside the area of attack or by guide planes accompanying the explosive craft into the target zone.

The statement of Mr. Morrison confirmed the first half of a warning Prime Minister Churchill made February 22 last, saying: broadcast late Friday night that they had virtually annihilated a convoy of ships in the channel with the Robot bombers.)

---

The pilotless planes came over twice during the night and a number crashed in southern England.

The extent of the damage was not announced, but it was known that at least three persons were killed when one crashed on some houses during the first of the two attacks.

JUN 17 1944

During the raids yesterday daring Spitfire pilots dived through terrific anti-aircraft fire from British guns in an attempt to destroy the flying bombs.

The Robots apparently were accompanied by regular fighter and bomber planes in the newest attack. In one district flares were dropped by an enemy plane which had been tracked through the skies by heavy anti-aircraft fire. This seemed definitely to be a regular German fighter-bomber.

Spouts Yellow Flame

Another plane, spouting yellow flame, apparently one of the pilotless craft, crashed of its own accord and exploded.

(The British Broadcasting company announced during the night that henceforth its transmissions were liable to be interrupted and that a record of the Big Ben chimes would be substituted for an actual pick-up of the famous clock's actual chimes. The broadcast, recorded by the Blue network, said the notes of Big Ben striking the hour would no longer be used, lest they might guide the enemy.

(Damage caused by the robot planes has been relatively small, BBC said, but acknowledged that some casualties had resulted from the raids.)

The bizarre flame-spitting robots smashed against several points in a haphazard bombardment which started in darkness and continued intermittently through the day while Britain's anti-aircraft guns crackled at them sporadically.

Late Friday a force of American Flying Fortresses and Liberators swept across the channel and struck angrily at the "mystery installations" from which the little planes are thrown into the air.

Spectacular and eerie as the Wellsian assault was, however, there was no evidence that the new weapon had done important military damage or that it had shaken blitz-tempered Britain out of its determination to "carry on with its normal business," as Home Secretary Herbert Morrison asked it to do in a statement to Commons about the strange missile.

Claim Great Damage

A broadcast by the German Transocean News agency tonight declared that "damage of the greatest extent has been caused by new German high explosives in London. Warehouses on the Thames are in flames and rail communications are partly disrupted."

Morrison said it had been known for some time that the Nazis were preparing to use the pilotless craft against Britain, and disclosed that a small number were used in a raid last Tuesday morning.

"Last night's attack was more serious and I have not as yet full particulars of the casualties and damage, nor of the number of pilotless aircraft destroyed before they could explode," he told Commons. "Meanwhile, it is important not to give the enemy any information which would help him in directing his shooting by telling him where his missiles landed."

Morrison's disclosure that the robots were first used on June 13 and again last night apparently caught the German Propaganda ministry off-balance, for it was some hours before the Berlin radio began gloating about the "beginning of reprisals."

"Everybody can be satisfied not to be in London, but in Berlin," said one enemy broadcast. It described the robot plane as a "new invasion weapon which works most effectively" and declared it "has the importance of a strong air fleet."

None of the planes was known to have been taken intact for examination, but reports of many witnesses agreed pretty well on these points:

Driven by Motor

It has a wingspread of perhaps 20 feet and a length of about 25 and usually is painted dark brown or black. It is driven with some sort of motor with a distinctive, pulsating rhythm, carries a bright yellow light in its tail, shoots flames from its exhausts and sometimes trails smoke.

The plane's speed was variously reported as "terrific" and between 220 and 250 miles-an-hour. It flies rather low and on a straight course, making it a good target for guns and fighters. Usually they come over in groups of two or three, exploding on contact with buildings or within 5 to 15 seconds after landing. The explosive load was estimated anywhere between 1,000 and 8,000 pounds.

The "headless" craft were launched from special emplacements along the Pas-De-Calais coast of France—long targets for Allied bombers. A guess was that they were catapulted down steep rails and flipped into the air by a dip at the bottom like a roller-coaster.

Plane's Control Is Mystery

Control of the craft remained a mystery. The simplest idea was that they merely were aimed and set on the take-off to travel a certain distance in a certain direction. A more popular theory was that they were controlled by radio, either from the ground or from piloted planes.

One thing is certain: The plane can be used only once, and it would require an immense amount of material and labor to sustain an attack with them.

"I'll take our B-29 Superfortress for a real new weapon," declared one American airman.

Morrison assured the British people that "counter-measures have been and will be applied with full vigor," and most Britons seemed confident that an answer would be found for this newest Nazi gadget. Morrison warned, however, that it was not safe to stand outside and watch the show.

The German radio, chorusing the praise of the new weapon, said "there is no German who has not received the announcement with deep satisfaction and a full heart. It will be an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." Previously, it said, the German air force had been careful to hit only military objectives in Britain, but from now on it will be different.

"There is no doubt the Germans are preparing on the French shore new means of attack on this country either by pilotless aircraft or possibly rockets, or both."

A section along the Pas de Calais coast has been pounded almost incessantly by British and American air forces since late last year in attacks generally believed to have been aimed at installations for launching or controlling rockets or pilotless planes.

The Germans already have used in this war a radio-controlled glider-bomb, mainly against ships, guiding it visually by aircraft which released it at great height, usually several miles from the target.

Radio-controlled airplanes have been used by several nations before the war, mainly as targets for gunners. Their control always has been on a visual basis. The Germans may have evolved some automatic device to set the course before the take-off or to control the plane remotely.

In January some Stockholm sources reported pilotless aircraft being built as an invasion counter-measure. They were described then as small, single-engined planes launched with the aid of a catapult and steered by radio.

Called Dangerous Weapon.

Washington, June 16 (A. P.).—The pilotless planes which the Nazis have launched against England are viewed by military men here as a definitely dangerous weapon.

Opening of the barrage on England gave part of the answer to a mystery that had caused concern among Allied leaders—the nature of the secret weapon of which the Germans had boasted.

For the moment, the immediate job is to locate exactly the positions from which the planes are launched and then attack those positions from the air. Meanwhile, scientists presumably are studying the devices with the view of developing methods for upsetting controls used to direct the pilotless craft and thereby deflect them from intended targets.

One thing puzzling observers here is why Hitler refrained from using the new weapon against the invasion forces. It is possible that Nazi strategists decided the first invasion landing would be in the Calais area and therefore mounted the weapons there, later deciding to use them against England when Allied troops hit Normandy instead.

Dispatches received so far do not indicate whether the launching mechanism for the pilotless plane is a fixed or mobile mount. In the latter event it would be possible for the Nazis to transfer the launchers to the invasion theater or to any area where new landings threaten or develop.

On the basis of first reports from England, the weapon has a range of at least ninety miles (the distance from Calais to London). If the mounts are flexible, it could, even without moving out of the Calais area, be directed well up and down the coast—as far south as Le Havre and north into the coastal areas of the lowlands.

BRITONS MOVE TO NEUTRALIZE FLYING BOMBS

Scientists Get Device; Vigorous Countermeasures Are Begun

JUN 17 1944

London, Saturday, June 17 (AP)—The Nazis launched more of their robot explosive planes against southern England this morning, continuing attacks in which scores of the small, unmanned craft killed people and smashed buildings Thursday night and throughout Friday.

The Germans claimed in a broadcast late last night that they had virtually annihilated a convoy of ships in the Channel with the robot bombers.

The pilotless planes came over twice during the night and a number crashed in Southern England.

LONDON, June 16 (AP).—A broadcast by the German Transocean news agency tonight declared: "Damage of the greatest extent has been caused by new German high explosives in London. Warehouses on the Thames are in flames and rail communications are partly disrupted."

One enemy broadcast described the robot plane as a "new invasion weapon which works most effectively," and declared it "has the importance of a strong air fleet."

The German radio said also: "There is no German who has not received the announcement with deep satisfaction and a full heart. It will be an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." Previously, it said, the German air force had been careful to hit only military objectives in Britain, but from now on it will be different, and "they (the Allies) will now learn that crimes committed against the German civilian population and cultural monuments do not remain unpunished."

Allies Shoot at Own Planes

Of 4 Craft Downed on One Occasion Only One Was German

JUN 17 1944

LONDON, June 16 (AP).—Fire from invasion ships against friendly planes, which has been a problem in every amphibious operation, was an especially serious one during the Normandy landings because of the strength of the Allied air cover and the weakness of the German air force reaction.

On one night three Allied planes and one German Junkers 88 were shot down by Allied ships' anti-aircraft fire. In another instance one or more Allied planes went down when there were no enemy planes in the neighborhood.

Like Headless Horseman

Somewhere in Southern England, June 16 (AP)—Bomb-hardened Britons watched Hitler's pilotless planes with more curiosity than concern today.

"Seems terrible queer to me," said one 80-year-old woman. "I believe I'd rather have bombs."

"Wierdest night I ever had," commented a policeman, keeping a wary eye and ear on a swishing noise in the sky.

"I don't like the idea of nobody in those planes," said a delivery boy. "I don't know why, but it's sorta ghostly. But we'll get used to 'em like we did the rest."

Experts Say Pilotless Planes Are Controlled by Gyroscopes

JUN 17 1944

WASHINGTON, June 16—(AP) Some Allied military experts expressed the view today that the pilotless, self destroying bombers sent against England from the Calais area are rocket propelled glider bombs controlled by gyroscopes.

The British Information service said they are launched from installations in the Pas De Calais area of France. Existence of such implacements, usually referred to as rocket gun fixtures, has been known for some time, but apparently there has been considerable mystery as to the type of weapon.

Declining to take the serious view expressed by some military men, one Allied expert said:

No Threat to Invasion

"The new devices do not represent a threat to the actual invasion effort. A beach is too small a target. They appear to need a much larger one, such as greater London.

"If, as reports say, they fly in a straight line at around 250 miles an hour, they should be a cinch for the night fighters. It seems, too, that these mystery bombs are the targets we have been plastering in the Calais area for some time."

Available information about the weapon thus far indicates that it is a pre-set device, the distance it is to fly being determined at the launching site. Thus it is a good deal like an airborne glider bomb, such as the Germans, use except that, probably because of its size and the volume of the attack, it is launched from the ground. Long range wind calculations required for such a device would likely affect the accuracy considerably.

The launching devices are built largely underground for a considerable distance along what the Germans regarded as the likeliest invasion coast. Part of the structure is above the ground, one expert said.

Fly at 2,000 Feet

The altitude at which most of the pilotless weapons have been seen is around 2,000 feet, which brings them well within the limits of the barrage balloons.

The belief was expressed that the range involved in the recent attacks represents about the extreme for this type of weapon because if a longer flight were practicable the launching devices would be moved farther back from the coast. In view of this, it is felt that the danger to England will be reduced if not eliminated as the fighting front is moved back from the coast.

Some authorities expressed doubt that the new robot bombers are controlled by radio. This, it was said, involves too much danger that the Allies would assume control by counter measures and turn the weapon into a boomerang.

Whatever the Germans may have, it seems doubtful that it is anything not previously experimented with by the United Nations. In that case, the United Nations must be aware of the possibilities and weaknesses of the various types of automatic devices and know where to start searching for counter measures.

Glider Weapon Progress Secret Probe Sought

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The Glider Institute of the Americas, which has headquarters here, asked today for a secret investigation by the Senate of the progress of American developments in "glidercraft," glider bombs, planes and flying bombs."

An appeal has been made to the committee headed by Senator Truman (D., Mo.), the Institute said in a statement, which added that "no disputes such as jurisdictional competition within the armed forces should block the fullest and most expeditious development of such American glidercraft and flying bombs."

The statement was prompted by the Germans' use of pilotless aircraft against England.

Work is underway on a number of unusual types of airborne weapons. The armed forces will not permit any disclosure of the progress made.

R. A. F. Bombs Berlin as Allies Shift Strategy

Night Attack Draws Heavy Barrage; U. S. Heavies Hit 'Secret Weapon' Area

JUN 17 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (Saturday) (AP).—Berlin was raided early today by the Royal Air Force in a sudden shift in Allied areial strategy, the German radio reported.

The Nazi broadcast said "nuisance raiders" were over the German capital at 2 a. m., but added that anti-aircraft batteries opened a "very violent barrage." This seemed to indicate that the raid perhaps was on a fairly large scale.

The night operation by the R. A. F. followed an assault late Friday by American heavy bombers directly at military installations in the Pas-de-Calais of northern France from which the Germans were believed to have launched their "secret weapon" pilotless planes which exploded in England Thursday night and Friday.

A fleet of nearly 1,000 Flying Fortresses, Liberators and escorting fighters made the assault, striking also at three Nazi air bases in the vicinity of Paris and Laon, eighty miles to the northeast.

Prime Minister Churchill disclosed weeks ago that the Nazis were preparing in the Pas de Calais area just such a robot attack as they directed against Britain last night and today. The American heavies streaked to their targets just as soon as they could after clearing of weather over the Continent which had kept Britain-based planes largely grounded during the day.

Railways In Normandy Strafed

The Fortress and Liberator crewmen striking the French objectives in the lingering daylight found clouds still covering their targets, and most of them were forced to use the overcast bombing technique. In addition, American fighters went out late in the day to renew strafing attacks against railroads and truck convoys south of the Normandy beachhead.

A few fighters kept up patrolling of the battle zone throughout the day despite soupy weather, and one of these, a Canadian Spitfire, shot down a Messerschmitt within four miles of a new operational base.

This RCAF base was moved across the Channel within the last two days by sea and air, and at dusk last night was fully operational, with Spitfires in constant readiness, field dispatches disclosed. It was the first such Allied unit to begin operating exclusively from newly captured French territory.

30. 24 — 16289

Only Four Nazi Planes Sighted

United States Ninth Air Force Thunderbolts in small numbers flew a total of 22 missions before 6 P. M., covering ground troops in the assault area and protecting shipping in the Channel.

These fighters sighted only four German planes all day. All the American fighters returned, and there were no reports of enemy planes being shot down.

Bomber crewmen also commented upon the almost complete absence of enemy planes, and said their only trouble came from the weather.

Soupy Clouds Obscured View

"Our liberators plowed through weather so thick we seldom had a glimpse of the Pas de Calais area," said Lieut. Richard Lyon, of Milford, Ill., a copilot. "Layers of white, soupy clouds obscured our view throughout the trip. We didn't see a sign of military activity except our own bombers—and those ever-present Mustangs."

Lieut. Earl Price, of Jeanerette, La., a navigator, said "there was no flak over the target and only a little in the area of Caen."

Technical Sergeant Monroe Wagnon, of Duncan, Okla., a Fortress gunner, said: "Going in we had very little flak, but coming back we passed over some towns near Paris and they threw up a lot at us. We had lousy weather, but found a break over the target and after circling we made a good, long bomb run."

Luftwaffe Strikes Back

Despite German reluctance to hurl their available fighter strength against the overwhelming Allied air power over France, there were recurring signs that the enemy intended to use every trick at his command in countering the Allied air blows.

German planes struck at areas in southeast England throughout Friday, and apparently they included some of the new pilotless "mystery" planes employed Thursday night. The daylight operations were on a smaller scale than during the night, but it was disclosed officially that damage and casualties occurred at several places.

At the same time it was disclosed that Reich Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering was "begging" his flyers to give their all in meeting the Allied air forces, who, he said, "know no hesitation."

"Once more I beg you, Do not forget that all and everything now depends on your sacrifices and your courage," he said.

Photographic reconnaissance showed that the Allies already have bone far in their campaign designed to cut all bridges over the Seine and Loire Rivers and seal off the corner of France that contains both the Cherbourg and Brest peninsulas.

All seine bridges from Paris to the sea have been knocked out, and the Germans ahe having to use ferries, which also are feeling the weight of Allied bombs.

One span at La Poissoniere was blasted into the stream below, and bridges at Cinq Mars, La Frilliere and La Riche, all near Tours, were hit several times. A railway bridge at Le Port Boulet showed damage along half its length.

The reconnaissance pictures also indicated what the United States Strategic Air Force called "very satisfactory results" against airfields at Bordeaux, Merignac, St. Cyr and Etampes and rail yards at Angouleme. Lesser damage was done to airfields at Guyancourt, Le Mans, Buc, Evreux-Fauville, Toussos, Le Noble and Orleans-Bricy, all in France.

During Thursday night, for the second straight night, the R. A. F. began its work before dark. One of the principal targets was the enemy's biggest ammunition dump in western France, that in the Rennes Forest.

night, hit railway centers at Valenciennes and Lens and a fuel dump at Chatellerault. Fourteen bombers were missing from all these operations.

Allied night Intruder planes destroyed four enemy aircraft and damaged others over France, and Mosquitos hit unspecified objectives in western Germany. These blows were a thunderous follow-up to yesterday's daylight operations which included attacks by an armada of 1,300 United States heavy bombers.

In addittion to the American heavy bomber blows, Supreme Headquarters announced that 3,000 sorties (individual flights) were made by Allied planes yesterday in support of the ground operations in Normandy, Many of these were flown by planes based in France.

Ammunition Dumps Hit

Yesterday afternoon medium bombers hit fuel and supply dumps, bridges and other communications targets from Valognes in the Cherbourg peninsula to Laval, about 75 miles behind the enemy lines.

RAF heavy bombers also sought out the ammunition dump in the Rennes Forest, officially described as the enemy's most important in western France.

RAF planes pounded nine northern France railroad centers from Chartres in the Paris area to Granville on the west coast in operations late yesterday and last night.

Then, moving in even closer to the Normandy fighting area, these sweeper blown up and sunk and another hit by a torpedo.

The Nazis sent planes against England last night for the second time this week.

Nazis Shoot 3 More Airmen

LONDON, June 16 (AP).—The Air Ministry said today it had learned that three more Allied air force officers had been shot by the Germans. These were in addition to the forty-seven Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden reported previously.

Ninth AAF Engineers Use Captured Horses

London, June 16 (AP)—Thunderbolt pilots landing on one of the first landing strips built in Normandy by Ninth Airforce engineers saw a herd of horses and thought for a moment they had come down on a dude ranch.

The mounts had been captured by the engineers from a retreating cavalry group. Now, reported Major Henry L. Quimby, Kansas City, who led the Thunderbolts in, the engineers use the horses for everything from herding cattle off the runway to guard duty.

"The horses were beautiful and well trained," he said. "When we got there the boys were galloping all over the place on errands. In Missouri one of those horses would be worth $500."

Boulogne Boat Pens Are Blasted By RAF

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 16 (AP)—The Allied aerial offensive against continental targets swept on today after RAF heavy bombers made their second big, high-altitude predusk precision attack yesterday, plastering 12,000-pound bombs on Nazi E-boat, R-boat and minesweeper pens at Boulogne.

The German radio reported Allied planes approaching the Austrian provinces of Carinthia and Styria.

British four-engine Lancasters, with their fighter escort, hit the French Channel port of Boulogne just before dusk yesterday. The attack was similar to one the RAF made Wednesday night on installations at Le Havre—a strike which reconnaissance indicated was very successful.

Railway Centers Hit

Other British heavy bombers, continuing the attack into the planes shot up troops and tanks hidden in an orchard, observation posts and a radio station mainly around the Caen area, an artillery concentration near St. Lo in the American sector, a Panzer headquarters near the front and numerous Seine bridges, shipping and ferries.

Dog Fights Over Caen

In dog fights over the Caen battleground last night RCAF Spitfires shot down nine Messerschmitts from a formation of 20 for a loss of two Spitfires.

American Ninth Air Force fighter-bombers hit targets at La Haye du Puits, St. Lo, Vire, Domfront, Flers and Rennes.

RAF coastal command Beaufighters, escorted by Polish Mustangs, attacked an enemy shipping concentration off the Frisian Islands without loss. In the attack a merchant vessel was sunk, a naval auxiliary beached, a mine-

Yawata Mills Hit by Scores Of Sky Giants

Superfortress Fleet May Have Cut Foe's Steel Output by One-Fifth

Flew 2,000 Miles Without an Escort

Accidents Cost 2 B-29s, Flak a Third, Fourth Is Missing; One Crew Safe

By The Associated Press

CHUNGKING, June 16.—Scores of the mammoth American B-29 Superfortresses participated in last night's historic blow at the Japanese mainland, pouring a great weight of explosives on "Japan's Pittsburgh" at Yawata and leaving towering pillars of flame visible for sixty miles as the air battleships swept back across the Yellow Sea to their Chinese base.

[Four of the $1,500,000 planes failed to return, a Washington communique announced. Two went down through accidents, and the crew of one of these is safe. A third is missing, and a fourth fell "to anti-aircraft action over the target"—indicating that the wreckage of the highly secret craft may be in enemy hands.]

First detailed stories of the longest bomber flight ever made—more than a 2,000-mile round trip—indicated that the Americans might have knocked out a fifth of the enemy's steel production at Yawata, on the north shore of Kyushu Island 500 miles southwest of Tokyo. A communique issued here said "heavy damage" was inflicted at Yawata.

"Only the Beginning"

"This is but the beginning of our organized destruction of the Japanese industrial empire," declared Brigadier General Kenneth B. Wolfe, chiefly responsible for the production of the sky giant and in charge of the mission.

Associated Press correspondent Thoburn Wiant, who went along on the raid, wrote while over the target:

"Japan's vital steel works is being reduced by a huge rubbish heap by America's biggest, fastest and deadliest bombers roaring overhead one after another. It will take the Japanese months to recover from this blow."

Preliminary reports indicated that the Japanese defenders were surprised as the first big ship thundered over Yawata, which produces one-fifth of the enemy's steel. But intense anti-aircraft fire was encountered by succeeding bombers, which unloaded their destructive cargoes on the enemy's coke ovens and open-hearth furnaces.

Send Up Night Fighters

The Japanese also put some night fighters into the air, but there was no indication that these were effective in combating the heavily armed Superfortresses, which flew all the way unescorted.

"There they go back into their damned steel works," Wiant quoted one bombardier as shouting when he got his bombs away.

General Wolfe was ordered to stay at the main base after planning to make the mission. Sweating it out in his ward with Maj. Gen. George B. Stratemeyer, second in command of Allied air forces in the southeast Asia theater, he awaited the flashed code word from the leading plane.

The word, "Betty," meaning "bombs away" came at 10:58 p.m. local time (11:58 a.m. Thursday, Eastern War Time, or 12:58 a.m. Friday, Japanese time).

This psychological and military punch hit at a moment when American amphibious forces were fighting their way inland on the Island of Saipan in the Marianas, 1,500 miles from Tokyo, where U. S. air bases would provide facilities for striking at Japan from both the east and west.

Bonin Islands Bombed

(A U. S. carrier task force in the Pacific fleet's closest approach to Japan's homeland since the war began also bombed Chici Jima and Haha Jima in the Bonin islands Wednesday, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced at Pearl Harbor. In this smash 588 miles from Yokohama, carrier planes destroyed 47 Japanese planes, sank two ships and 12 more vessels).

The American superfortresses airmen took off from several bases created in western China with the sweat of nearly 500,000 Chinese laborers. Six-tenths of the territory over which they flew is hostile. To conserve fuel for their four 2,200 horsepower engines they kept as low as possible until reaching the Japanese mainland, where they went upward in a long slanting approach to Yawata.

Yawata was attacked from both high and medium altitudes. The city was picked as the likeliest spot of the first strategic bombing of Japan by the B-29s since within a 50-mile radius it contains a heavy concentration of shipping facilities, both rail and sea, as well as the Japanese Imperial steel plant.

No incendiaries were carried because the great number of inflammable products in the manufacturing city would feed the flames set off by heavy explosives in the blast furnaces.

This was not the first action of the B-29s, however.

A shakedown combat operation was carried out June 5, with an attack on the Makasan railway shops at Bangkok, capital of Japanese-occupied Thailand. A communique at that time describing the results without naming the planes said: "black smoke rose to great heights through the clouds, as the bombers, despite bad weather, pressed home wide-spread attacks on railway shops and marshalling yards. The city's defense apparently were caught by surprise as the formations converging on the target at a great height from all angles dropped a record tonnage of demolition and incendiary bombs on this important Japanese port."

General Saunders on Flight

With General Wolfe grounded by the War Department, the ranking officer on the smash at Japan was Brigadier General Laverne Saunders, onetime West Point football star. A forty-one-year-old native of Aberdeen, S. D., he is described by his men as "the fightingest general in the Air Forces." A veteran of the fighting at Midway, Espiritu Santo Guadalcanal and the "milk run" from Australia to New Guinea and New Britain, Saunders is a wing commander of the new 20th Air Force, established for operation of the B-29s on a global basis.

Eight lead planes carried especially selected crews, whose task was to inflict maximum damage before the enemy was fully alert They dropped no flares. The glow of fires from their bomb hits was counted on for illumination of the targets for succeeding planes.

The eight lead planes took off from various fields at ten-minute intervals ahead of the main forces. Other take-offs followed every few minutes. As twilight settled over the Chinese fields the great planes still were lifting into the air with their enormous bomb and fuel loads.

Watch the Take-offs

Generals Wolfe and Stratemeyer and Brigadier General John E. Upston, of Tawas City, Mich., Wolfe's assistant chief of staff for the operations, watched the take-offs from the clapboarded control tower at the main base.

American fighter planes of the 14th Air Force, bolstered by late-type arrivals, kept watch at interceptor fields jutting out toward Japanese-controlled territory. They did not escort the big ships, each of which is a small arsenal in itself, with numerous 50-caliber machine guns and a 20-mm. cannon. The fighters were ready to repel any Japanese swoop on the bomber bases.

Over Kyushu Island, the southernmost of the Japanese homeland group, the enemy began probing frantically with his searchlights and later began tossing up a curtain of flak. Most of the anti-aircraft fire was ineffective at some of the altitudes flown by the B-29's, which can go above 30,000 feet.

Bursting metal dug into the sides of some ships flying in at medium heights, however.

JUN 17 1944

Correspondent Wiant's story said his plane was "in the forefront of scores of Superfortresses," and said the mighty ship "is longer than a Pullman, carries nearly as much gasoline as a railroad tank car, and each of its four engines is more powerful than a locomotive."

No Mere Psychological Raid

The attack was no mere pyschological raid—"otherwise we would hit Tokyo again," as did Doolittle's flyers April 18, 1942.

Wiant said of the mission: "This marks the beginning of a military plan to hit the Japanese again and again, where it hurts the most."

Over the Kyushu Island, the southernmost of the Japanese homeland group, the enemy began probing frantically with his searchlights and later began tossing up a curtain of flak. Most of the anti-aircraft fire was ineffective at some of the altitudes flown by the B-29's, which can go above 30,000 feet.

Gas Chief Limiting Factor

Bursting metal dug into the sides of some ships flying in at medium heights, however.

[Yawata is separated from Honshu, the island on which Tokyo is situated, by the narow Shimonoseki-Moji Strait, under which a railroad tunnel has been dug in recent years. A lucky bomb hit choking up that tunnel would seriously impede the movement of materials to the important industrial center. Within fifteen miles of Yawata are such important centers as Sasebo, one of Japan's two largest naval bases; Nagasaki, huge port, and other important steel, shipbuilding and troop-embarkation centers. Japanese broadcasts, which minimized the results of the raid, said Moji and Kokura also were hit in addition to Yawata. One broadcast acknowledged that the Yawata plant had been hit "with a few bomb fragments," but declared there was "no damage whatever to plant facilities."]

By B-29s

DAY

Washington, June 16 (AP) — Four of America's mighty sky battleships were lost in yesterday's attack on Yawata, the "Pittsburgh of Japan."

By Clyde A. Farnsworth

United States Superfortress Base in Western China, June 16 (AP) — American B-29s, the new Superfortresses, struck a terrific body blow at Japan's war industry and may have knocked out a fifth of the empire's steel production in yesterday's raid on Yawata, the Pittsburgh of Japan.

JUN 17 1944

The world's most powerful warplanes made the longest bombing flight in history and left trains of demolition bombs bursting in the imperial iron and steel works at Yawata in northern Kyushu.

"This is but the beginning of our organized destruction of the Japanese industrial empire," commented Brig. Gen. Kenneth B. Wolfe, who was chiefly responsible for the production of the B-29.

Two B-29 Lost

The Imperial Works, largest in the Japanese Empire, is credited with 20 per cent. of Japanese steel production.

Yesterday's mission was a combined psychological and strategical stroke at the maximum power of the long-secret 20th Bomber Command.

Two B-29s failed to return.

(The War Department in Washington announced that these two were lost because of accidents and not because of enemy action, and that the crew of one was known to be safe.)

Strongly Defended Target

The raid came on the heels of Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo's declaration that the Japanese themselves were preparing a surprise. Japanese stations were broadcasting English versions of the Premier's declaration and playing pirated American swing music when Wolfe's raider pack came in on their silvery 141-foot wings.

The first target attacked in Japan by the new weapon was one of the most strongly defended in the Japanese home islands.

Wolfe, aground by War Department order, was sweating out the mission in his ward room with Maj. Gen. George B. Stratemeyer, second in command of Allied air forces in the Southeast Asia theater, when the first Superfortress flashed the code word, "Betty," meaning that the bombs were away.

"Start Of Finish"

Said Stratemeyer, "Wolfe, congratulations! This is the start of the finish."

The Superfortresses, which can carry more explosives faster, higher and farther than any other plane, flew from a network of bases laboriously carved from Western China plains by 450,000 conscript and contract Chinese laborers—men, women and children.

Except for the Doolittle token raid this was the first time Japan has felt the brunt of real air power.

Defenses Surprised

Actually, however, this was the second Superfortress raid. These planes bombed the Makasan Railway shops at Bangkok on June 5 in a combat shakedown operation.

A Southeast Asia communique of June 8 called this the "heaviest blow of the war" on Bangkok.

"Black smoke rose to great heights through the clouds as the bombers, despite bad weather, pressed home widespread attacks on railway shops and marshaling yards," the communique said that day.

"The city's defenses apparently were caught by surprise as the formations converging on the target at a great height from all angles dropped a record tonnage of demolition and incendiary bombs on this important Japanese port.

"Anti-aircraft fire was heavy but generally ineffective and only a few planes rose to intercept. These, however, failed to attack the mass formations."

500 Miles From Tokyo

(The Imperial Steel and Iron Works of Yawata are sometimes called the "Krupp of Japan." The target is some 500 miles southwest of Tokyo and is the most important of several heavy industrial cities. It is separated from Honshu, the island on which Tokyo is situated, by the narrow Shimonoseki-Moji strait under which a railroad tunnel has been built in recent years.

(A lucky bomb hit choking up this tunnel would put a serious crimp in the movement of materials and products to and from this industrial center.

(Within 15 miles of Yawata are such important centers as Sasebo, one of Japan's two largest naval bases; Nagasaki, huge port, and other important steel, shipbuilding and marshaling and troop embarkation centers.)

Blow Well Timed

The blow fell at a psychological moment when American amphibious forces were striking deeper into the island of Saipan in the Marianas, 1,500 miles from Tokyo, where United States Air Chiefs would permit the heaping of bombs on Japan's industrial structure.

It also coincided with Japanese broadcasts saying powerful American task forces, roving the Pacific at will to the consternation of the Japanese, had made a stab even closer to Japan—at Iwo Jima and Chichi Jima, two islands in the Bonin group, 600 to 700 miles southeast of Japan proper.

(Japanese broadcasts also said bombers had raided Korea on the Asiatic mainland 180 miles across the Sea of Japan from Japan proper.)

Plan Of Attack

With Wolfe grounded by the War Department after reserving a place on a B-29, the ranking officer on the mission was Brig. Gen. La Verne G. Saunders, 41, Aberdeen, S. D., one of the 20th Command's wing commanders who has a distinguished record in Flying Fortress combat in the Southwest Pacific.

The plan of attack, somewhat modified in execution, was for the planes of the bomber groups to follow singly upon the course of two separate lead planes for each group. The lead planes carried picked crews.

One of the pair was to bomb from a low altitude and the other from the higher air, with the idea of doing maximum damage before the enemy was fully alert.

No Flares Dropped

The planes dropped no flares. They counted, with great success, upon the glowing fires from the first bomb hits for the illumination of the target for the later planes.

Eight lead planes took off from various fields ten minutes ahead of the main forces. Takeoffs followed every few minutes. As twilight settled down the great planes were still lifting reluctantly from the fields with their heavy bomb loads.

Stratemeyer, Wolfe and Brig. Gen. John E. Upston, of Tawas City, Mich., Wolfe's assistant chief of staff for operations, watched the takeoffs from a clapboard control tower at the main bomber base.

supremely confident that Wilkinson and Delafield will get us to the target and back again. They are veterans of the southwest Pacific where Wilkinson amassed nearly 600 combat hours and Delafield 300.

The Japs bragged over the radio weeks ago that they knew Superfortresses were coming from western China and they were prepared for us.

But now we are only five minutes from the Imperial iron and steel works and searchlights are frantically sweeping the sky. Ack-ack guns are winking like little mirrors on a night club dancer's costume, but the bursts are far from our position at this altitude. There are no signs of enemy aircraft.

At least one of the Superfortresses beat us to the target because we see several bomb bursts.

Wilkinson shouts into the interphone "it's all yours," and Capt. William C. Goldstein, 27, Indianapolis, and 2nd Lt. Glenn Berkihiser, 28, of Albuquerque, N. M., prepare to drop their bombs.

The target is now only seconds away, but those seconds are like hours because the sky is filled with searchlights and ack-ack like no Fourth of July we ever saw.

Hit Steel Works

"There they go smack into their damned steel works," yells Goldstein.

Our giant plane, relieved of its explosive load, noses upward.

Wilkinson, aided by Second Lt. Delmar Stevans, 23, Swanton, Ohio, co-pilot, sharply turns and dives in the direction of home. We look back on a firebug's dream. Flames are shooting at least 2,000 feet high from two huge fires. Several smaller fires are blazing up rapidly.

Sgt. Morris Kramer, 21, Pittsburgh, Pa., a gunner, confessed over the interphone "If I said I was not scared I would be a liar, but I wouldn't miss this for anything."

Kramer, Staff Sgt. Warren Culver, 23, Mason, Ill., and Tech. Sgt. Charles Kwiatkowski, 25, Philadelphia, Pa., worked under the direction of Master Sgt. Thomas Holes, 40, Upper Darby, Pa., crew chief, without sleep for 36 hours changing a cylinder so we could take off.

Sixty miles from Yawata our fires and those started by the Superfortresses following us are plainly visible.

Japan's vital steel works is being reduced to a huge rubbish heap by America's biggest, fastest and deadliest bombers roaring overhead one after another. It will take the Japanese months to recover from this blow.

Our night's work is only half done because we must get ourselves and our $1,500,000 airplane safely home so we can return to bomb Japan on another day.

Bombs Started Huge Fires in Japan, Says Newsman Back from Big Raid

By THOBURN WIANT

ABOARD A SUPERFORTRESS OVER YAWATA, Japan, June 15—(Delayed)—(AP)—We are only ten minutes from Yawata, the "Pittsburgh of Japan."

JUN 17 1944

We have been calm, intent on reaching Japan, but our hearts are pounding, partly from natural fright, mostly from anticipation of the big moment we have been awaiting since Doolittle hit Tokyo.

No Propaganda Raid

This is no propaganda raid, otherwise we would hit Tokyo again. This marks the beginning of a military plan to hit the Japanese again and again, where it hurts the most.

We are in the forefront of scores of Superfortresses, concentrating tonight on Japan's biggest steel and coke works. One fifth of Japan's entire steel output is produced there.

As Col. Leonard (Jake) Harman of Boise, Idaho, commander of the "General Billy Mitchell group," told us before the takeoff:

"If ever there was a juicy target, this is it."

Our Superfortress is piloted by Lt. Col. Warren Wilkinson, 26, of Lincolnton, N. C., commander of the "two-bit squadron," and is running smoother than a watch.

This Superfortress is longer than a Pullman, carries nearly as much gasoline as a railroad tank car, and each of its four engines is more powerful than a locomotive.

Already Capt. Dean Delafield, 26, of Omaha, Neb., has navigated us in pitch darkness through storms farther than from Los Angeles to Kansas City.

Set World's Record

By the time we return, we will have established a world's record for long-distance bombing. We are

Gasoline Chief Factor

Gasoline is the chief limiting factor of future Superfortresses operations. Now every drop must be flown over the Himalayan "hump" by the Superfortresses themselves.

Frequent Superfortresses raids cannot be expected against Japan unless a pipeline is extended from India to China, or unless an eastern China port is seized from the Japanese.

Capt. Edward Fuller, 25, of Magnum, Okla., flight engineer, never takes his eyes off the dials showing gasoline consumption and the engines' performance. Pfc. Dean Tanner, 30, of Athens, Tex., keeps his ears glued to the radio. Staff Sgt. Carl Brown, 27, of Winfield, Iowa, senior gunner, chatters constantly with the other gunners, keeping them alert for would-be interceptors.

But the gunners never get a chance to fire a shot.

As I am winding up this story over the Yellow Sea and Eastern China, Kramer declares:

"The Japs have not felt anything yet. Wait until we start throwing the haymakers."

Wilkinson comments:

"I have only one regret. I was at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, and I promised my crew I would take them over Japan some day. But most of them are gone now, and I don't know where the others are."

Japs' Steel Output May Be Cut 5th

B-29's Had To Lug Own Fuel Supplies

JUN 17 1944

fore they could pound Japan from western China bases.

The supply problem probably was the most difficult to be found anywhere in the world. Required was an airplane that could fly to great altitudes and long distances carrying an enormous payload as well as enough fuel for a round trip. The huge numbers of ordinary transports necessary for the job simply were not available. Transports then in the theater were busy 24 hours a day flying fuel supplies to the 14th Air Force.

The solution was the Superfortress itself. Several bombers were converted into tankers each carrying six times its own load of gasoline carried in an ordinary transport. Other bombers hauled dry cargo—spare parts, oxygen, men and equipment. When sufficient fuel was accumulated in forward bases, the tankers were reconverted into bombers—ready to haul a different kind of freight to Japan.

Never in aviation history has bombardment organization been required to do its own transport work on such a scale or in such percentage.

Supply has been and will continue to be the biggest limiting factor for Superfortress raids from western China bases unless a pipeline is buit from India to China or eastern coast ports opened.

ing Japan.

Putnam, over fifty years old, said: "This is the most interesting job an older man could get in the Air Corps. I feel lucky to be associated with a crowd like this."

Putnam, a native of Rye, N. Y., said that with only one exception every man in his command is "young enough to be my son."

"That keeps an old fellow like me on his toes."

Chinese In On Secret Of The Superfortress

United States Air Base, Western China (AP—Delayed) — The strategic purpose behind the construction of American B-29 bases in western China was one of the most widely shared secrets of the war in the Orient.

At least 35,000 Chinese men, women and children who worked on the fields were informed by their village magistrates beforehand not only of the use to which the fields were to be put, but when they were expected to be completed.

On the other hand, an unbroken winter haze which lay over the whole area during most of the construction period provided fine cover against any Japanese reconnaissance.

They are Helen Meany, 1928 Olympic fancy-diving champion; Captain George Varoff, who set world pole-vault records in 1936-'37, and Captain Hank Greenberg, who left the Detroit Tigers three years ago to join the Army.

GREAT MILLS LEFT IN FIERY WRECKAGE

One Superfortress Lost Over Target, One Is Missing and Two Were Victims of Accidents.

Washington, June 16 (A. P.).—Four of America's mighty Superfortresses were lost in yesterday's surprise attack on Yawata, which left that city—the Pittsburgh of Japan—glowing masses of ruin, and the wreckage of one of the Superfortresses may now be in enemy hands.

The Twentieth Bomber Command, revealing in mid-afternoon today new details of the raid, said that one of the gigantic planes was lost over the target, as a result of anti-aircraft fire; that another is missing, and that two more failed to return because of accidents, but that the crew of one of these latter is known to be safe.

The text of the Twentieth Air Force Communique No. 2 follows:

"The Imperial Iron & Steel Works, Japan's largest steel mills, located at Yawata on Kyushu Island in the Japanese homeland, was the target of yesterday's B-29 mission of the Twentieth Bomber Command.

"The bombing was accurate and effective. Enemy fighter craft offered some resistance to a few units. Anti-aircraft fire was moderate to intense over the target area. No enemy planes were reported shot down.

"There were no casualties aboard returning aircraft. Four planes failed to return from the mission. Of these, one was lost due to anti-aircraft action over the target. Two failed to return due to accidents, and of these the crew of one is known to be safe. A fourth airplane is missing.

An earlier communique had reported that two B-29s were lost as the result of accidents. The later announcement indicated that the wreckage of one of the big bombers, built in secrecy, now may be in the hands of the enemy.

The number of participating aircraft was not made known as first details emerged on the attack which marked the beginning of a new chapter in the history of aerial warfare with the greatest bombers ever built.

"A sizable task force of B-29s from the Twentieth Bomber Command bombed industrial targets at Yawata on the Kyushu Island in the Japanese homeland on Thursday, June 15," the communique said. "Preliminary reports reveal that although enemy aircraft were encountered and anti-aircraft was moderate to intense, none of the planes was lost as a result of enemy action.

"Flyers who participated in the mission report the bombing was accurate and that large fires and explosions were observed.

"The planes operated from bases in China which were completed recently. Two B-29s were lost as the result of accidents, one crew of which is safe. This communique is based on the preliminary incomplete reports from the combat zone."

The raid, leaving behind "glowing masses of wreckage," gave the Nipponese Empire, in the words of an eyewitness "her answer to December 7, 1941—Pearl Harbor."

plant of the Japan Iron Manufacturing Company, but declared the hits were by "a few bomb fragments" only which caused "no damage whatever to plant facilities."

The Japanese themselves said that in addition to Yawata, the cities of Moji and Kokura also were attacked. Moji is an important communications center.

Railway Damaged

Damage to the Orio-Hakata railway was acknowledged, but the Tokyo radio declared it already had been repaired.

A steady stream of broadcasts from Tokyo attempted to minimize the effects of the attack.

The Japanese at first claimed six of the attacking planes were downed with three damaged, then successively revised the report upward, first to seven and then to eight shot down.

20-Plane Attack

About 20 planes made the raid, Tokyo said.

"Although fires broke out at several places as the result of the enemy bombing," said one broadcast, "our military and civilian fire fighters were quick in action and the fires were put under control by morning."

All Japanese broadcasts asserted the raids centered in northern Kyushu, the southernmost portion of the Japanese mainland.

Raid On Tokyo Denied

Crediting its source direct from Japan, the German DNB agency this morning declared: "It is reported officially" that no enemy aircraft flew over Tokyo itself.

"Domei (Japanese news agency) calls the official American reports that American bombers attacked Tokyo and dropped a considerable number of bombs on the town a ridiculous propaganda trick;" said DNB. "It was only a sort of a surprise reconnaissance flying toward the northern part of Kyushu."

(There had been no official American mention of any specific objectives up to the time the DNB attack on greater Japan.

"Came As No Surprise"

In one broadcast, Tokyo asserted the raiders approached Kyushu by flying over Antung, on the Manchuria-Korea border—a report which, if true, would have carried them over Korea.

Tokyo asserted that Japanese anti-aircraft batteries had been "forewarned" of the approaching planes and that the attack came as no surprise.

A broadcast Domei version of the raids as recorded by the British Ministry of Information said American planes were detected in Japan at 11 A. M., June 15. Japanese defenses, including the air force, were alerted and when the planes appeared over northern Kyushu at 1 P. M., a "combined air and land assault was launched against them."

"Aimed At Morale"

The Domei broadcast continued: "The planes came from Sian in the Chinese province of Shensi. Since they dropped only a small number of bombs it is most likely their aim was only to bring anxiety to the Japanese home front. Some casualties occurred."

"An enemy bomber while trying to make its getaway blindly bombed" a school in the suburbs of Kokura City, the report added.

"Our forces were long aware that enemy B-29s had made their appearance in China."

The raid was declared to have been aimed at "hitting our morale," but was "ineffective" and "there are distinct signs that our morale heightened."

Domei said the largest number of persons killed at any one place was "ten inmates of the Kokura Army Hospital."

"Pulled Foe Toward Us"—Tokyo

Cabinet Meets

The Japanese Cabinet met this morning with Premier General Hideki Tojo.

Kichisaburo Ando, Home Affairs Minister; Mobusuke Kishi, Munitions Minister, and Keita Goto, Transportation and Communications Minister, were said to have reported to the Cabinet that damage was "very slight." Ando also was said to have reported directly to Emperor Hirohito.

Glowing Wreckage Is Described

BY ROY PORTER

New York, June 16 (AP)—America's Superfortresses left glowing masses of wreckage in the coke ovens and open-hearth furnaces of the great Yawata steel mills in the curtain-raiser attack of these B-29s on Japan yesterday, Radio Correspondent Roy Porter reported today in a broadcast from China.

The superbombers, flying from bases in western China, ran into heavy anti-aircraft fire and encountered Japanese night fighters, but "nearly all the ships came back," said Porter, one of 11 war correspondents who witnessed the attack. Porter, a former Associated Press correspondent, now on assignment for the National Broadcasting Company, represented the combined American radio networks on the raid.

Thailand Attack

Porter hinted that the B-29s had been in action before in a preliminary attack on Bangkok, Thailand, last week. A communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia headquarters last Thursday said "strong forces of heavy bombers dealt Bangkok its heaviest blow of the war on June 5 (Monday) and that Japanese defenses were caught by surprise as the bombers attacked from all angles.

The target at Yawata was the Imperial Steel and Iron Works at the northern tip of Kyushu, Japan's southernmost home island, Porter disclosed. The mill is a mainstay in Japan's war industry.

The attack "was carried out with almost complete amazement to the

Some hours after the first enemy acknowledgement of the attack, other broadcasts told of planes raiding points in Korea (Chosen), on the Asiatic mainland immediately opposite the Kyushu section of Japan.

Transocean, German propaganda agency, said the Allied attack caused widespread fires, but, quoting a Japanese spokesmen, "the attack in general was not heavy.

Japs," Porter broadcast.

Porter said, as his words were transcribed by CBS:

"These attacks were swift and surprising. They came with almost complete amazement to the Japs. We'd run into rigorous action with that mysterious weapon of American planning and skill, the Superfortress, known as the B-29.

"Tons upon tons of bombs were dropped on the coke ovens and open hearth furnaces. Japanese anti-aircraft fire poured into the sky, and shell fragments dug deeply into the superbombers, but the engines kept turning and nearly all the ships came home.

"Eleven war correspondents went on the trip to see, at the invitation of the 20th Bomber Command, the show of shows. And when the planes had turned homeward, leaving behind the glowing masses of wreckage, Japan had had her answer to December 7, 1941, at Pearl Harbor."

Pilotless Planes Used To Raid England

New York, June 16 (AP)—Military installations bombed by the Allied Air Forces for nearly a year were the launching platforms for the new weapon—the pilotless plane—used by the Germans against London last night and today, the British Information Service said.

For months before D-day, Allied aerial onslaughts were carried out incessantly against what were described as "mystery installations" in the Pas de Calais area of France.

SUPER FORTRESS SEEN AS ANSWER TO POSTWAR PEACE

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(AP) The Army's disclosure that the new B-29 bombers form an independent super-air force which will be able to strike out anywhere on earth has caused a considerable stir in diplomatic quarters here. It offers the best idea yet of the kind of power to be used in keeping the peace in tomorrow's high speed world.

In this respect discussion of the new 20th Air Force is being linked with President Roosevelt's announcement yesterday of American plans for post-war organization. The President declared there would be no international "coercive power," but said each peace-loving nation would maintain whatever strength it could afford "for joint action when necessary."

Action Would Be Taken

Joint action would be taken, the President suggested, whenever some nation began to threaten the peace by "making deliberate preparations for war."

And just as Mr. Roosevelt's statement set the basis for discussion at the forthcoming meeting with China, Russia, and Britain here this summer, so the revelation of the destructive power of the B-29 may prove to be one of the greatest hidden influences at the conference.

For highly placed officials here, both diplomatic and military, are coming to feel that unless the world can be properly organized for peace, each nation must bear an increasing burden of defense and armament from now on because of the mounting striking power of the airplane. But with an effective organization, it is expected that this power may be used to permit a progressive decrease in national armaments since a small but potent air force would be one of the cheapest kinds of forces to maintain.

No Combined Action

The proposed joint use of military power by the United Nations is not interpreted by authorities here to mean that when an expedition had to be sent out each member nation would participate. Instead, the expectation is that a few nations, possibly only one, would act in the name of the league, and with its approval.

The big question has been, what kind of action would be taken if the United Nations were functioning properly and Germany tried to rearm in another century?

The 20th Air Force's B-29 is regarded as furnishing the best answer to date. With this weapon it would be possible for the United Nations to make a demonstration of force over threatening territory in a matter of hours—something never possible before in world history.

Speed in such undertakings is regarded as important because American planners hope that the mere show of force would be enough to discourage a potential war maker. Their hope is based on the familiar idea that the corner cop helps keep down crime merely by his presence in the neighborhood.

Superfortress Raid Makes China Jubilant

Chungking, June 16 (AP)—China was jubilant today at news of the American Superfortress raid on Japan, regarding it not as a stunt but as the opening phase of the battle for Tokyo and the forerunner of greater and more devastating attacks.

All Chinese papers displayed the news prominently, and Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, army spokesman, said it was "very encouraging to the Chinese nation." He said it would give "a good deal of spiritual stimulus" to the Chinese forces struggling against the Japanese, and predicted that continued raids would have a demoralizing effect on Japanese troops in China.

The Chinese also treated the American landings on Saipan as highly significant.

Patterson Greets Men Who Constructed B-29's

Hails Teamwork at Boeing Factory in Wichita

WICHITA, Kan., June 16 (AP).—Congratulations poured in today to the Wichita plant of the Boeing Airplane Company, which produced the big B-29 Superfortresses which bombed Japan yesterday.

P. G. Johnson, of Seattle, president of Boeing, wired: "The people in the Wichita division should feel quite happy as undoubtedly all the airplanes which took part were manufactured in the Wichita plant."

Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, in a wire from Washington, stated: "B-29 Superfortresses which bombed Japan today are a product of American labor and industrial genius. They are a tangible example of the partnership existing between those laboring on the home front and the armed forces."

Brigadier General Ray G. Marris, supervisor of Mid-Western Procurment District, commented: "If I had written headlines about the bombing Thursday, I probably would have said, 'Wichita bombs Japan.'"

GEN. WOLFE'S FOLKS THRILLED BY RAID

Riverside, Cal., June 16 (A. P.).—Before he left home Brig.-Gen. Kenneth D. Wolfe, commander of the 20th Bombing Command whose Super-fortresses raided Japan, told his mother: "I didn't start this war, but I want to finish it—and quickly."

"I guess that's what he's doing," Mrs. Selma Wolfe, the General's mother, told reporters after learning of the epic mission.

Mrs. Edwina Wolfe, the General's wife, proud and excited over his achievement in organizing the force that carried out the raid, said:

"I was terribly proud of Ken and amazed all at once. From the very start of the project, Ken's assignment was unusual. He was made responsible not only for the operation of the heavy bombardment wing but also for the production of B-29s."

Gen. Wolfe, 47 years old, has been a flyer since the last war. He watched the development of the B-29s during four years as production division chief at Wright Field, Ohio, materiel center.

The Wolfes have one daughter, Beverly, a junior at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. Gen. Wolfe's brother, Col. Frank C. Wolfe, is chief of the armament branch, materiel command, Dayton, Ohio.

WEIRTON, W. Va., June 16 (AP).—The "Betty" whose name flashed the code signal that meant the first "bombs away" in yesterday's Superfortress raid on Japan's steel industry was "thrilled beyond words" today.

"Did he really use my name for that?" the wife of Lieutenant Colonel James Garcia, chief of the Bomber Command intelligence section, asked. "I'm so thrilled I can't talk."

Garcia was in a Superfortress piloted by Lieutenant Colonel Winton Close, of Los Angeles, husband of Betty's sister, Jane.

Mrs. Garcia said she hadn't seen her husband since he left Salina, Kan., for China on April 4. His home is at Del Norte, Col.

"He knew pretty well what to expect when he got to China, and hoped that he'd be on a raid over Japan," she said. "That was his ambition when he first was assigned to the Superfortresses. He told me those planes would be the thing that would knock Japan out of the war."

Mrs. Garcia is a daughter of Thomas E. Millsop, president of Weirton Steel Company.

REDS SLASHING TOWARD VIIPURI

100 More Towns Captured by Russians in Drive into Finland.

LONDON, June 16.—(AP) Soviet forces smashing along the northern front captured more than 100 additional populated places today as the Red army of Gen. Leonid A. Govorov forged deeper into Finland despite savage resistance by the Finns, Moscow announced tonight.

The Soviet striking force, estimated in Sweden as at least six divisions totaling probably 70,000 men, seemed headed irresistibly for the key port and naval base of Viipuri.

Communities Captured

Among the newly captured communities named by the broadcast Russian communique tonight were Uusikirkko, slightly more than 32 miles southwest of the big port, and Jukkola, Virola, Masseljarvi, Pistola and Putrola-Leitlila in the same area.

But Moscow radio reports indicated that other points taken by the slugging Soviet army were as close as 25 miles to Viipuri.

While the two main columns of Russian troops were slashing toward Viipuri, one on the direct route through Kivennapa and the other along the indirect coastal route, other Soviet forces were hammering away at both flanks to make the offensive a four-pronged drive.

Everywhere, according to dispatches not only from Moscow but also from Helsinki and Stockholm, the Russians were using the most modern equipment available. Gen. Govorov was said to have brought to the front from Leningrad great siege guns for use in the massed artillery barrage being turned on the Finns. Where the terrain was suitable big tanks also were being thrown into the fray by the Russians. Air bombing and naval shelling were being coordinated into the land drive.

Neutral observers said it would be impossible for Finland to continue resistance for any great length of time and psychological warfare was becoming almost as important as the fierce land battles.

Reds Hurled Back

The Finns claimed their counter-attacks had thrown back the Reds near Siiranmaeki and that more than 5,000 Russians had been killed in the last three days.

Yet a report from Stockholm said Field Marshal Baron Von Mannerheim, commander-in-chief, had told the Finnish government that his troops could hold out only two and a half months at terrific cost.

The Finnish radio broadcast an order of the day by Mannerheim calling the Russian drive on the Karelian isthmus a "great offensive" and asking his soldiers to stand up to "hard blows."

Another Stockholm dispatch said the Russians had started an avalanche of radio propaganda intended to persuade the Finns to quit the war quickly. The Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet said the Finnish government had asked the public to ignore the Russian communiques, which were termed "exaggerated." Only the Finnish communiques were published in the home press.

New Defenses Built

A dispatch from Moscow by Associated Press Correspondent Eddy Gilmore said the Finns had constructed a series of deep defenses as part of their Mannerheim line. This dispatch, quoting a field reporter for the army newspaper Red Star, said that a breach of about 50 miles had been cut through the Finnish lines and that the Russians had taken a grip on two-thirds of the Karelian isthmus in the first week's fighting.

Red Star claimed Finnish prisoners had revealed that construction on the second defense line, now broken, had started on the day that the last Finnish-Russian peace negotiations opened and called the report "convincing about Finnish treachery."

RUSSIAN DRIVE CRACKS FINNS' DEFENSE LINE

Concrete and Steel Forts Breached in Several Places by Troops.

WAS LAST BARRIER TO VIIPURI

Rail Center of Mustomaki Captured as Red Forces Exploit Break.

Moscow, June 16 (A. P.).—The Red Army has smashed its way through Finland's new Mannerheim Line, one of the last barriers on the way to the important seaport of Viipuri, it was reported today.

A Red Star dispatch said the new Mannerheim Line was a tremendous fortification, with four lines of walls made of cone-shaped stone and anti-tank blocks almost two yards high, before which lay an anti-tank mine field twenty yards wide and strewn with German mines.

A great gap has been cut in this line, and in some places Soviet tanks and artillery, as well as infantry, are considerably beyond it, the dispatch said.

Major Konstantin Shvankov, the Red Star correspondent and the first newsman to go through the new line, said that behind the tank blocks the Finns had built an elaborate system of trenches and dugouts, with steel and concrete platforms for anti-tank rifles, machine guns and mortars.

The trenches are connected with bullet and bombproof shelters about fifty yards away. These had steel and concrete covering on the sides, with room inside for fifteen soldiers.

"The Finns considered the new Mannerheim Line impassable for the Red Army," Shvankov wrote.

A quarter mile away from the trenches the Finns had three additional ranks of tank blocks built around steel shelters.

Red Star said the Soviets smashed the line at the Gulf of Finland coast and also captured an important highway crossing.

The new line was broken by artillery and concentrated pounding by bombers.

Dispatches said the Finns derended the second line much more fiercely than the original line.

With the new line broken in many places, Red Star Correspondent Konstantin Simonov said, the Red army is rolling down both highways toward Viipuri—one running straight through the forest and lake country and the other a roundabout road that skirts the Finnish Gulf.

Grip On Karelia

Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's breakthrough which took the Red army 25 miles in five days on a 50-mile front, has given the Russians a grip on two thirds of the Karelian isthmus.

A gaping hole has also been opened in the permanent defenses between Mustomaki and Kutose, and Soviet troops have captured Mustomaki, a railway station thirty-seven miles from Viipuri on the line to Leningrad, and Ino, a coastal community south of Mustomaki, the communique added.

Only action reported by Russians on the eastern front was reconnaissance by Soviet patrols northwest of Vitebsk, in White Russia, and the repulsing of similar tactics by the Germans southeast of Stanislawow in old Poland.

Red Star said the Soviets smashed the line at the Gulf of Finland coast and also captured an important highway crossing.

The new line was broken by artillery and concentrated pounding by bombers and by Stormoviks, the Russian attack bomber.

Red Star Correspondent Konstantin Simonov said the Red Army is rolling down both highways toward Viipuri—one running straight through the forest and lake country and the other a roundabout road that skirts the Finnish gulf.

Expect Tough Fight.

The Finns will be battling shortly to hold the Russians back from Viipuri itself. The Red Army is not underestimating the battle which it faces. The struggle for the second Mannerheim Line is far harder than the fight for the first line, in which the surprise element aided the Soviets.

Simonov reported it was interesting to note that according to the testimony of captives who told the Russians about the new Mannerheim line that construction began on the day when Finnish representatives in Sweden raised the question of peace negotiations with us. On the very day that (Dr. Juhok) Paaskivi took off for Moscow (Field Marshal) Mannerheim went to Kivennapa to inspect the line.

Reds Offer Ports For Aid to U. S. War Prisoners

Reject Japan's Proposal to Pick Up Supplies at Vladivostok, Hull Told

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP).—Russia has rejected a Japanese proposal to pick up relief supplies at Vladivostok for American prisoners, Congress was told today, but has offered the use of "other, equally accessible ports."

The Japanese government has not replied to that alternative.

The information was contained in a report of a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee headed by Representative Luther Johnson, Democrat of Texas, which reviewed steps being taken to speed repatriation and help those still held in the Far East.

The conclusions were that the State Department and other agencies are doing everything possible and that:

1—"A great deal more has been done for the Americans held in Japan than is generally recognized."

2—Treatment of American civilians has apparently been more considerate than that accorded prisoners of war because of "the low opinion which the Japanese hold of soldiers who surrender."

3—Japan still refuses the Red Cross and Swiss government representatives access to the Philippines and some parts of China, contending "this is not Japanese territory." As a result a "serious situation" exists there.

The report also disclosed that the Japanese have been offered a simplified proposal for continuous exchanges of nationals by a shortened route "through Soviet waters." A reply is being awaited.

In addition, a new system for speeding up mail to and from Japanese-held territory has been involved. The mail is being flown free to Teheran, and taken there by surface routes through Soviet territory. The Japanese have assured the United States that they will forward mail over this route and the committee said that "should do much to relieve the anxiety of relatives and friends" of the 19,919 prisoners of war and 5,593 civilians interned in the Orient.

In its search of confidential files the group said it found evidence that "a number of American soldiers and sailors are at liberty in certain parts of the Japanese-controlled areas in hiding or in guerrilla activities."

Interpreter Learns Nazi Owes Him Rent

London, June 16 (AP)—Corporal Howard Fischer of New York, has run into a "tenant" from Breslau, Germany, who owes him a lot of back rent.

In his job as an interpreter, Fischer was interviewing a wounded prisoner being brought back to an American army hospital in Britain for treatment and was amazed to learn that the Nazi had moved into the home Fischer vacated in Breslau in 1933 to escape a Hitler purge.

Tito Cites Additions To Partisan Forces

London, June 16 (AP)—Marshal Tito today declared in his broadcast communique that a Major Djuric, one of General Mihailovic's Chetnik commanders, had come over to Tito's Partisans, together with a large number of officers and more than 1,000 men.

Tito reported also the formation of four new Partisan divisions in the Morava Valley of Serbia.

In eastern Bosnia, the Partisans said they held the initiative on all sectors. A German offensive between Gornji Vakuf and Prozor in western Bosnia was said to have been checked.

De Gaulle To Return To Algiers Soon

London, June 16 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle expects to return to Algiers within a few days to report to the French Consultative Assembly on military arrangements between the Allies and his French National Committee.

De Gaulle installed Francois Coulet as commissioner for Normandy when de Gaulle visited the Normandy front earlier this week.

FINNISH MINISTERS ORDERED TO LEAVE

Procope And 3 Aides Called Inimical To U. S. Interests

Stockholm, Saturday, June 17 (AP)—The Finnish press was forbidden by censorship today to print the news that Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, and his staff had been handed passports.

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The United States Government declared Finland's four top diplomats guilty of activities "inimical to the interests of the United States" today and directed them to leave the country as quickly as possible.

Pending their departure, the diplomats and their families were ordered confined to their homes except for exercise and other specified purposes and were placed under police surveillance. Their telephone lines were ordered disconnected, although 45 minutes after the action was taken it was possible to reach them at the Finnish legation. There was no comment forthcoming, however.

"Sorry," Procope Says

The Finnish Minister, Hjalmar J. Procope, was handed his passport at the State Department at 5 P. M. today. The passports of his three counselors were delivered to them by American diplomatic officials.

Later Procope and the others (illegible) appeared on the legation steps to (illegible) for photographers.

"I am sorry this has happened," he told them.

Approximately a dozen plain-clothes officers were stationed in the immediate vicinity of the house after the State Department had disclosed its decision.

"This action," a State Department announcement said, "does not constitute a rupture of diplomatic relations between the United States and Finland."

The announcement also declared in reference to the Minister and his associates:

"The Minister of Finland, Mr. Hjalmar J. Procope, and three counselors of the Finnish legation, Mr. T. O. Vahervuori, Mr. Urho Toivola and Mr. Risto Solanko, were handed their passports at 5 P. M. today and requested to leave the country at the earliest moment because of activities on their part inimical to the interests of the United States."

While no official announcement of a chief of legation was made, Alexander Thesleff, secretary, apparently becomes charge d'affaires.

The American legation in Helsinki is maintained with only a skeleton staff with Edmund Gullion as charge d'affaires.

American policy toward Finland has been growing more and more tough-handed as the Finns persisted in their refusal to make peace with Russia. Two weeks ago 84 Finnish firms were blacklisted.

NAZIS SPEED UP RETREAT IN ITALY

Allies Advance 25 Miles; Germans Surrendering in Droves.

ROME, June 16—(AP) Pursuing disorganized German troops who in many instances were throwing away their equipment and surrendering in droves, Allied forces leaped forward as much as 25 miles in the past 24 hours in their drive up the Italian peninsula and reached points within 85 miles of the enemy's so-called Pisa-Florence-Rimini defense line.

American troops pounding up the west coast captured Grosseto, nearly 100 airline miles from Rome, after a swift advance from Orbetello. Grosseto was the site of one of the Nazis' major military airdromes, and its long landing strips will be of almost immediate value to the Allied tactical air force in harassing the enemy's retreat.

No Enemy Resistance

Eighth army formations swept through the industrial city of Terni and beyond into the highway towns of Todi and Massa Martana, 60 airline miles north of Rome, without encountering any organized resistance. Fifth army forces pounded beyond Lake Bolsena through Acquapendente, 65 miles northwest of the captial, and South African armored units raced 10 miles beyond Orvieto to Ficulle.

Since the break in their temporary defense line two days ago the Nazis have fled so fast the Allies have had difficulty keeping in touch with them. Abandoned enemy equipment carpets the roadsides and German prisoners have streamed to the rear in increasing numbers. One Eighth army armored regiment took so many prisoners it had to call for assistance to handle them.

All across the peninsula, from the Tyrrhenian sea to the Adriatic, enemy forces were beating their way north under relentless punishment, trying to reach a defense line they could hold even temporarily.

American troops driving up the west coast beyond captured Orbetello approached the next major center of Grosseto, nearly 100 miles from Rome, despite increased enemy artillery fire and systematic demolitions. The enemy's 162nd Turcoman division showed signs of making a stand before Grosseto and there was hard fighting at some points. The Nazis were using anti-tank guns as artillery in some instances in their desperate effort to slow the American advance.

Enemy Airfields Hit

Lightning and Mustang fighters shot up five enemy airfields near Avignon in southern France yesterday, destroying parked planes, hangars and locomotives and tank cars on nearby railsidings. Allied heavy bombers were idle, but mediums hammered communications in northern Italy. Eighteen Allied planes were lost and seven enemy craft shot down.

The captured Grosseto airfield has not been used in recent days for bombing forays against the Fifth army.

Grosseto, set in the midst of interesting Italian ruins, has a population of about 9,000. Its capture marks a new giant stride in the Allied pursuit of the battered German armies toward the Pisa-Florence-Rimini line.

The Germans have begun to throw Tiger tanks before the Fifth army in an effort to hold up the swift advance. These are being used in pairs and triplets.

Panther tanks, 45-ton monsters first employed in Russia, were used for this purpose along highway six and the road is lined with their hulks.

The pace of the Allied advance in the coming days will determine whether the Germans will have opportunity to halt at the place which they are believed to have chosen for accepting battle along the Pisa-Florence-Rimini line. This is made up largely of natural obstacles.

Captured Town Has Major Military Airfield; Allies Advance 25 Miles In 24 Hours

Rome, June 16 (AP)—American troops pounding up the west coast today captured Grosseto, nearly 100 airline miles from Rome, after a swift advance from Orbetello.

Grosseto was the site of one of the Nazis' major military airdromes. Its long landing strips will be of almost immediate value to the Allied Tactical Air Force in harassing the enemy's retreat.

Rome, without encountering any organized resistance. Fifth Army forces pounded beyond Lake Bolsena through Acuapendente, 65 miles northwest of the capital, and South African armored units raced ten miles beyond Orvieto to Ficulle.

Nazis Hard To Catch

Since the break in their temporary defense line two days ago, the Nazis have fled so fast the Allies have had difficulty keeping in touch with them. Abandoned enemy equipment carpets the roadsides and German prisoners have streamed to the rear in increasing numbers. One Eighth Army armored regiment took so many prisoners it had to call for assistance to handle them.

All across the peninsula, from the Tyrrhenian Sea to the Adriatic, enemy forces were beating their way north under relentless punishment, trying to reach a defense line they could hold even temporarily.

on Highway 2.

The Eighth Army captured the important industrial and communications center of Terni, 45 miles northwest of Rome, and the highway junction town of Narni, about seven miles southwest of Terni.

Nazis Fall Back Fast

Other Eighth Army troops advanced ten miles north of Orvieto, and in the Adriatic sector the Nazis have withdrawn so rapidly that the Allied troops have been able to maintain only a slender contact with the enemy.

Americans advancing up the Tyrrhenian coast against increasing artillery fire and demolitions pushed eight miles beyond Orbetello, neared Scansano and approached Grosseto on Highway No. 1 almost 100 miles northwest of Rome.

Inland the drive past Lake Bolsena was carrying forward toward Proceno, three miles beyond Acquapendente.

16 Miles Beyond Turni

East of the lake besides taking Narni, whose capture first was announced yesterday, Terni and Todi, the Eighth Army sped on and reached Massa Martana, 16 miles north of Terni.

Just to the west of this area the Eighth Army pushed up Highway 71 to Ficulle, 10 miles beyond Orvieto.

With the break in their lines the Germans have been suffering considerable casualties the last few days. Some have been

Rome, June 16 (AP)—The Allies smashed forward from the Adriatic to the Tyrrhenian Sea today, some troops advancing as much as 25 miles in 24 hours, and capturing such important highway towns as Acquapendente, Narni and Terni along the way.

Farthest advance came by the Eighth Army in the capture of Todi, approximately 60 airline miles northeast of Rome, and only 85 miles south of the Pisa-Rimini line, where the fleeing Germans may make a stand.

Push Beyond Lake

There has been no sign of any organized enemy defense in front of a line running from Pisa on the west coast through Florence to Rimini on the Adriatic.

The Fifth Army pushed above Lake Bolsena and captured Acquapendente, about seven miles north away, throwing down their equipment, and one Eighth Army armored regiment took so many prisoners that help had to be sent to bring them in.

U. S. Bombers Hit 5 Oil Refineries

Rome, June 16 (AP)—Fighting through heavy anti-aircraft fire and large numbers of German interceptors, American heavy bombers of the 15th Air Force attacked five oil refineries in the Vienna area and one at Bratislava, Slovakia, today.

Several of the enemy planes were reported shot down and others driven off by the escorting Mustangs, Lightnings and Thunderbolts.

Anti-aircraft fire was very heavy in the Vienna vicinity, but only moderate around Bratislava, returning flyers said.

The targets were the Florisdorfer refinery in the northern section of Vienna; the Kagran refinery, northeast of the city; the Lobau plant to the southeast; Nova Schwecat, seven miles southeast; Winterhafen, six miles to the southeast, and the Accolo refinery at Bratislava, 100 miles east of Vienna.

Except for the Nova Schwecat refinery, which was bombed in March, all were hit for the first time today.

Returning airmen said good results were obtained at every point

U. S. PLANES BOMB BRATISLAVA AREA

Rome, June 16 (A. P.).—Heavy bombers of the United States Fifteenth Air Force attacked five oil refineries in the Vienna area today and for the first time smashed at an objective in Czecho-Slovakia.

The bombers struck at the Acollo refinery at Bratislava, 100 miles east of Vienna. Bratislava is the capital of the puppet Slovak government.

[The German radio said anti-aircraft defenses brought down twenty-two bombers in the raid, and claimed the major portion of the bombing fleet was damaged by fierce anti-aircraft fire.]

ARREST OF GIRL ADMITTED IN ROME

Rome, June 16 (A. P.)—Nora De Seta, daughter of a Princess, whose whereabouts have been a mystery since her arrest at the home of an American-born Baroness, is in an apartment in Rome and being treated well, a high Allied sourse said today.

She is being held for interrogation in connection with questioning of members of her family in southern Italy. She is the daughter of Princess Pignatelli, and a stepdaughter of Prince Valerio Pignatelli, both of whom are being detained in Naples.

"With the mother and stepfather under detention," the source said, "it was only natural that the daughter be taken into custody for questioning, but since she was in Rome it was impossible to make the arrest until Rome was occupied by Allied troops. The arrest was merely routine."

The girl was arrested at the home of Baroness Josephine Pomeroy Marincola of Hopewell, N. J., and Washington, D. C., with whom she had lived for several months.

The Baroness's brother, Sergt. Robert L. Pomeroy of Hopewell, who is serving as an interpreter with an American infantry division, gave this account of the girl's disappearance:

Two Italians in civilian clothes came to the Baroness's home Tuesday night and demanded that the girl accompany them.

Sergt. Pomeroy forced them to leave when they were unable to produce warrants.

of food ready for distribution.

Black market prices yesterday were almost as high as in the last days of the German occupation. Flour brought $1.50 a pound, sugar sold at the same price and $5 a pound asked for cocoa. American cigarettes issued to soldiers have already found their way into the black market and are selling for 50 cents a pack.

Romans also have been disappointed over failure of AMG authorities to reestablish the city's normal water and electric supply. Because of damaged power houses, aqueducts, and other installations the center of the city intermittently is without water and electricity. Houses in outlying sections have had no water or electricity since the Allied occupation.

Vatican Gets Food Supplies

30 Truckloads Brought in From Spanish Ships at Anzio

VATICAN CITY, June 16 (AP).—Thirty truckloads of food arrived at the Vatican today.

They were brought by Vatican vehicles from Anzio, where two Spanish ships docked with supplies for the Papal State. Part of the shipment will go to feed residents of Vatican City, and part will be distributed to the poor of Rome.

Turkey To Ban Armed Ship Passage

Black Market Prices Soaring In Rome, Flour $1.50 a Pound

ROME, June 16—(AP) Black market prices in Rome which fell sharply when the Fifth army entered the city have shot upward again following an announcement by AMG officials that, with the exigencies of war and limited classifications, they could make only a limited amount of relief food available for civilians at present.

AMG officials said that more would come later.

The bread ration remains for the present the same as it was under the Germans, 100 grams or about a quarter of a pound daily, compared with the Naples ration of 250 grams.

The announcement has caused great disappointment among the Romans who had hoped that the Allies would arrive with big trucks

Ankara, June 16 (AP)—Turkey has given assurance that it will no longer permit armed vessels to pass through the Dardanelles.

Premier Sukru Saracoglu, who became Foreign Minister yesterday succeeding Numan Menemencioglu, told foreign press representatives that the "might and right" of Turkey would not be used "against her ally, Great Britain, and her friends, Russia and the United States."

Menemencioglu, Foreign Minister for two years, resigned after the British protested against passage of German armed vessels between the Black and Aegean seas, and the Turkish Cabinet held a meeting at which Menemencioglu's policies were disapproved.

Chinese Defend Changsha Against Jap Onslaughts

CHUNGKING, June 16 — (AP) Fighting of the greatest intensity is in progress in the southeastern suburbs of the strategic Hunan province city of Changsha, the Chinese command announced tonight, but the Chinese garrison is hanging on against the furious Japanese onslaughts in obedience to Generallesimo Chiang Kai-Shek's orders to defend Chaingsha at all costs.

In Honan province the Chinese reported they had blunted a Japanese advance which has been progressing southward with the aim of recapturing the gap in the Peiping-Hankow railway, but acknowledged that the invaders still were moving southward parallel to the railway and had occupied the important town of Junan, hub of seven highways 125 miles southsoutheast of Chengchow.

On the east-west Lunghai railway in Honan province, some 400 miles north of the Changsha battle, the Chinese announced they had recaptured Lingpao and Taying, 57 and 43 miles east of Tungkawan, in counter-attack.

The city of Changsha, against which three previous Japanese offensives have failed, was virtually surrounded, but the Chinese still have an escape loop-hole to the southwest that they have elected not to use.

Disclosing this, Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, an army spokesman, reiterated a belief that the Japanese were aiming at conquering the whole of the Canton-Hankow railway, as the main body of the Japanese force had bypassed Changsha and was heading south.

In support of the Chinese ground operations, 14th U. S. air force B-25 Mitchell bombers and P-51 and P-40 fighter escorts have killed more than 1,200 Japanese in three days of operations around Changsha, Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced.

Chungking, June 16 (A. P.).—More than 1,200 Japanese troops were killed in the area of besieged Changsha in Hunan province by three days of operations of the Fourteenth United States Air Force Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

B-25 Mitchell bombers with P-51 fighter escort, attacking Liuyang, east of Changsha, launched this widespread air attack on the advancing Japanese on Tuesday, a communique said, by killing 200 Japanese and damaging installations there.

On the subsequent two days, the planes—fighters and B-25s—strafed river craft and troop ships in the Siang River area, and in one attack P-40s struck savagely at a column of 2,000 Japanese on the road from Penglipu to Linquang, killing an estimated 500 troops.

Strike North of Changsha.

The P-40s yesterday, striking north of Changsha, hit the village of Ikiawan and attacked Chuchow, killing an estimated 140 enemy troops.

At the same time planes of Major-Gen. Claire L. Chennault's Chinese-American composite wing struck at installations along the Yellow River in Honan province, and a large flight of Liberator bombers blasted stores, depots and warehouses in the Canton area, with satisfactory results.

Two planes were reported missing from all the operations.

The Chinese High Command said last night that the Changsha garrison had been placed in great danger by Japanese crossing of the Liuyang River, last line of defense before the besieged city.

The enemy had only a few miles to go in an encircling move to seal off the city completely, but the Chinese High Command indicated some hope remained for escape of the defenders by crossing to the west bank of the Siang. Changsha lies on the east bank.

Comeback Announced.

A Chinese comeback against the Japanese for control of the Lunghai Railroad in Honan, some 400 miles to the north, was announced meanwhile by the Chinese High Command, which reported the recapture of Lingpao, thirty-seven miles east of Tungkawan.

In Yunnan the Japanese apparently are making strong efforts to regain the Burma Road town of Lungling. The Chinese command admitted that the enemy had fought back into Hslangta, a key point eleven miles southeast of Lungling, and also was making strong attacks to the north.

ponese made three attempts to break through American defense perimeters around the airdrome, which Allied planes are using.

A headquarters spokesman said the Japanese have concentrated most of their forces in the hills north of the airstrip. Americans are endeavoring to eliminate them.

The airfield, captured June 7, is within bomber range of the southern Philippines.

The Japanese assaults followed an American enveloping movement of their ridge positions and was intended to break the Yankee move.

The first attack started at sunrise, the Japanese coming down from the hills. They ran into a low piece of ground about 200 yards from the edge of the hills and were stopped there. Bazookas destroyed one tank and set fire to another.

JUN 17 1944

It was on Biak that American forces won the first tank battle of the southwest Pacific May 29, repulsing one of the defenders' early counter thrusts.

Allied destroyers off the Biak coast meanwhile silenced Japanese artillery and mortars which have been harassing supply lines to Mokmer. Aerial reconnaissance reported the Borokoe airdrome, two miles beyond Mokmer and the second American objective, is unserviceable and apparently never had been finished sufficiently for Japanese use.

Jima in the Bonin Islands Wednesday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Striking 588 miles from Yokohama, the carrier planes destroyed 47 Japanese planes, sank two ships and damaged 12 more vessels.

Iwo Jima, 11 the Kazan or Volcano, Island group, 150 miles to the south, also was hit.

NIGHT

Saipan Beach Resistance Broken

The naval attacks clearly were intended to knock out air bases from which the Japanese might attack the American amphibious forces which landed Wednesday morning on Saipan Island in the Marianas, 728 miles southeast of the Bonins. Admiral Nimitz tonight reported that these forces had smashed enemy resistance at the heavily defended Charan-Kanoa beach on Saipan after having once been hurled back a short distance.

JUN 17 1944

Closing in to strike the Bonin bases for the first time, the American carrier force undoubtedly steamed closer to Tokyo and Yokohama than did the American flattop Hornet which carried the Doolittle raiders for the 1942 raid on Tokyo.

Japs Caught By Surprise

A fleet spokesman said the carrier strike at the Bonins apparently caught the Nipponese completely by surprise at all three island objectives.

A medium transport, discovered under way near the Bonins, was heavily damaged by carrier bombers. A task force destroyer later sent the vessel to the bottom. A hundred and twelve enemy survivors were rescued and made prisoners of war.

33 Interceptors Shot Down

At Chichi Jima, whose small harbor is the largest in the Bonin group, 33 Jap fighter planes attemping to intercept the raid were shot down.

A medium cargo ship was bombed and sunk at Chichi Jima. Four small cargo vessels and six small craft were damaged there.

Four multi-engined seaplanes also were damaged at Chichi Jima.

At Iwo Jima 14 enemy planes were destroyed on the ground. Two more probably were shot down in combat.

Planes of the task force blasted fuel tanks, barracks, airfields and ground installations on all three islands.

Four Planes, Five Men Lost

Nimitz said American losses in the new carrier strike, the third at enemy island groups this week, were four planes and five flying personnel.

Other island chains hit by United States task forces earlier in the week are the Kuriles, far to the north, and the Marianas, the latter in pre-invasion attacks.

The Bonin Island bases are those nearest Japan in the stepping-stone chain of enemy staging bases by which fighting planes are ferried to conquered New Guinea and the Dutch East Indies.

The Fighting On Saipan

The thrust onto Saipan, near the southern end of the Marianas and within 1,500 miles of Tokyo and the Philippines, seeks to sever that chain of bases.

Admiral Nimitz' account of the fighting on Saipan was given in his Communique No. 52. It follows:

"United States assault troops are engaged in bitter fighting against defending forces on Saipan island.

"On June 14 (west Longitude United States date) and during the night of June 14-15 our troops were withdrawn a short distance toward the beach in some sectors in the face of intense mortar and artillery fire. Positions were consolidated and during the night our naval forces carried out a heavy bombardment of enemy strong points.

Line Advanced Half Mile

"On the morning of June 15 enemy resistance in the strongly held sector north of Charan Kanoa was broken. At midday a major element of our forces commenced an attack which advanced our line nearly a half mile in the southern sector of the island. Lesser advances were made in other sectors.

"Our assumption that Saipan Island would be strongly held because of its strategic location in the Japanese defense system has been proved correct. Preliminary estimates indicate there are upward of two divisions of enemy troops defending Saipan."

In a communique last night, Admiral Nimitz declared that beachheads were secure. He also disclosed at that time that the enemy has tanks on the island, saying they had been used in counterattacks against the Americans.

planes, the Yanks secured beachheads Wednesday, moving in from behind Saipan, a 72-square-mile island 3,800 miles southwest of Pearl Harbor.

Headland Captured

They captured Agingan point, a headland on the southwest coast. They battled two miles north across canefields to the sugar mill community of Charan-Kanoa. They were placed in reports covering action through Thursday within five miles of Garapan, Saipan's major town of 10,000 population.

Supported by shells of offshore warships and bombs of planes from aircraft carriers, they beat off stiff counterattacks by Japanese tanks.

Good Progress Made

"In general, fighting is heavy but good progress is being made against well-organized defenses," Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced last night in his second communique on the operation. The first announced the invasion but supplied no confirmation of a Tokyo radio report that an attempt also had been made to invade near-by Tinian.

(Tinian was not mentioned, however, in a Friday morning imperial headquarters announcement transmitted to Japanese areas by Tokyo radio and monitored in New York by NBC. It said that two landing attempts were "repulsed into the sea," but the Americans "attacked for the third time and are now being engaged in battle.")

Jap Guns Silenced

Battleships and cruisers, opening up with their guns after carrier planes knocked out Japan's southern Marianas air force Saturday and Sunday, silenced most of the Saipan coastal batteries and anti-aircraft positions.

Shells of the warships and rockets fired by planes and infantry landing craft effectively curtained the troops moving ashore.

"Initial reports indicate our casualties are moderate," Admiral Nimitz said. Tokyo radio claimed the invaders suffered 1,800 casualties and lost 40 landing barges.

Quick Victory Doubted

Saipan is relatively flat, adaptable for the Superfortresses which bombed Japan's industrial areas yesterday. But the same flatness prompted the invasion commander, Vice-Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, to expect opposition for the first time in the Pacific amphibious campaigns by mobile artillery. He warned that lightning victories in the Marshalls may not be duplicated at Saipan.

William L. Worden, Associated Press war correspondent who accompanied the expeditionary force, said Admiral Turner described the huge force of men and ships "as the most experienced amphibious war fleet in the world."

Saipan's invaders leapfrogged 1,100 miles west of Admiral Nimitz's previous forward base in the Marshalls. They also sailed more than 600 miles past Truk, air and naval base fortified for a quarter of a century by Japan—and now bypassed. Truk is being neutralized against interfering with the Marianas operation by Central and Southwest Pacific Liberators. They have pounded it more than twenty times during the first two weeks of June.

Today Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced that while the pre-invasion softening up of the Marianas was under way his big bombers from the Admiralties set a record for land-based raiders of Truk by pouring 180 tons of explosives on it from Monday and Tuesday.

His bombers also have been neutralizing Palau, Carolines naval base 600 miles southwest of the Marianas and today he reported the war's first land-based strike at the air base of Yap about midway between Palau and Guam. The Saipan invasion was the first big central Pacific operation to have the powerfully coordinated support of MacArthur's air arm based on recently seized New Guinea airfields. Saipan is 1,500 miles east of the Philippines. Its capture would setup the right prong to parallel one on the left being driven toward the Philippines by MacArthur from Dutch New Guinea.

Commodore Perry Saw Value Of Bonin Islands

Pearl Harbor, June 16 (AP)—Back in 1853 Commodore Matthew Perry saw the strategic value of the Bonin Islands, pounded by an American carrier task force.

Perry, on his historic voyage to open Japan to United States ships, stopped at Chici Jima, largest of the 20 rugged islands in the group.

At that time he urged the United States to establish a coaling station there.

Nothing was done, however, and the Japanese moved in seven years later and colonized the islands.

U. S. Fleet Hits Bonin Isles, Japs Say

JUN 17 1944

New York, June 16 (AP)—The Japanese announced today that an Allied naval task force yesterday afternoon attacked the Bonin Island group, between 600 and 700 miles southeast of Japan proper.

An Imperial Headquarters communique broadcast by Domei said planes from the force struck at two of the islands—Chichi Jima, in the northern section of the group, and Iwo Jima, about 100 miles to the southeast.

No Allied Confirmation

Although Allied sources have made no mention of such a raid so close to Japan, the enemy report came while American landing forces were battling the Japanese garrisons after going ashore in the Mariannas, another 700 miles or so to the southeast. The Japanese broadcasts declared that damage in the Bonin Islands raids was "extremely slight" and claimed that 17 of the raiding planes were shot down.

Text Of Communique

Text of the communique, as broadcast by the Tokyo radio to Japanese areas, follows:

'On the afternoon of June 16 (Tokyo date) an enemy task force attacked the Ogasawara (Bonin) Islands, raiding Chichi Jima and Iwo Jima. Our forces in that area intercepted them and shot down more than 17 planes. Our loss was very slight."

FCC monitors reported that Japanese Domei also had transmitted the Japanese communique in an English-language wireless dispatch directed to Pacific areas.

One Division Landed On Saipan, Japs Say

New York, June 16 (AP)—An American invasion force of "about one division" made the landing on Saipan Island in the Marianas group early Thursday after two unsuccessful attempts and now is "directing its main strength in the Woleai sector," the Japanese Domei agency said today in an English-language wireless dispatch directed to the United States.

The Domei dispatch, reported to the Office of War Information by United States Government monitors, said the Japanese garrison was "now carrying out fierce attacks against the enemy force which effected a landing on that island yesterday afternoon."

Three Attempts Reported

"The enemy task force, which appeared in the waters of the Marianas Islands at dawn June 15 (Tokyo date), made landing preparations at a point about 10,000 meters off Saipan Island," the dispatch said.

"Notwithstanding severe blows sustained twice at the hands of the Japanese garrison, they returned for the third time to effect a landing on the western shore of Saipan Island with a force of about one division.

Heavy Toll Claimed

"Intercepting the enemy's invasion," Domei said, "our garrison forces are now continuing the fierce battle with the invaders. At present the enemy is directing its main strength in the Woleai sector.

"Taking advantage of darkness," Domei continued, "our forces from dusk June 15 carried out a series of night attacks, dealing heavy losses to the enemy. In effecting the landing the enemy used tank-laden Alligators but our forces attacked them at the shore line and overturned 16 of them in the water up to 4 A. M. this morning.

"Meanwhile the enemy up to the present has not yet succeeded in landing any troops on Tinian Island."

Japanese bases in the Bonin and Volcano island groups southeast of Japan Wednesday, shooting down 47 enemy planes, sinking two enemy ships, damaging ten others and blasting barracks, air fields and fuel supplies.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander in chief, reported today the new strike deep into enemy-controlled waters by a carrier task force.

Both the Bonin and Volcano island groups are on a direct line between the western Pacific Marianas and the homeland of Japan. The Bonins include 97 islands, many ideal for use as air fields.

Strong aerial opposition was beaten down by the carrier based planes raiding Chichi Jima in the Bonins, only 592 miles from Tokyo. There 33 enemy planes sought to intercept the attacking fliers. All were shot out of the air. Four multi-engined enemy seaplanes also were damaged. Results of another attack on Haha Jima in the Bonins were not reported.

At Iwo Jima, 140 miles to the south in the Volcano islands another 14 planes were destroyed. They failed to get off the ground before they were bombed and strafed by the attacking planes. Two enemy aircraft which succeeded in leaving the runways in an attempt to intercept the American forces were shot down.

Surface shipping was battered heavily by planes in the Chichi Jima area. At the island itself one medium-sized cargo ship was sunk and ten smaller craft including four small cargo ships were damaged. Nearby a medium transport, steaming near the Bonins, was damaged heavily by bomber planes.

Then an American destroyer sped in and sank the vessel and picked up 112 Japanese struggling in the water. All were made prisoners of war.

American losses in the furious action were light. Nimitz reported that only four American aircraft and five flight personnel were lost.

Japanese troops hanging helplessly on the dead ends of a severed life-line.

Truk faces the useless position that Pearl Harbor would be in for our forces if there were any enemy position between the Hawaiian Islands and the West Coast.

The Japanese troops on Truk and on the dozens of other Caroline Islands bases can be left to starve or to be cleaned up.

Japs' Major Line

For according to the best military estimates here the grand scheme of Pacific conquest of which the Saipan assault is a major part calls for a series of huge jumps from the coast of China, by the forces of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

The Saipan attack carried the Nimitz forces from their forward position on Eniwetok Island in the Marshalls across more than 1,000 miles of ocean to the Mariana group. This group is part of the Guam-Bonin line, stretching south from Tokyo to the Carolines. It has been the most important single line in Japan's Pacific defense system.

Next Jump Pondered

Now that the line is being broken Truk outflanked, it would appear that Nimitz's next jump could carry him either to Luzon Island, northernmost and most important of the Philippines, or southwestward, to the Palau Islands.

This latter move would be necessary if it is decided that Palau is needed as an air and naval base to protect the route over which MacArthur's troops must strike from New Guinea into the Philippines.

Meanwhile, MacArthur may be expected to extend his own bases northwestward as rapidly as possible along the rim of the Netherlands East Indies from his present forward and still contested position in the Schouten Islands, off the northwestern hump of New Guinea.

Washington authorities would not be surprised if these steps were taken swiftly enough to get the invasion of the Philippines well underway this year.

have reported that several hilltops in the group appear to have been converted into gun emplacements, indicating that the Japanese have strongly fortified the islands.

Earthquakes There Frequent

All of the 97 islands and islets in the group are subject to volcanic disturbances and typhoons are frequent. Frequently several earthquakes are recorded in a single day, and it is not considered unusual for an islet to disappear altogether overnight or have a new one heaved up from the ocean floor.

The harbor port Lloyd on Chichi Jima, also known as Peel Island or Father Island, is suitable as a refuge for a few medium-sized craft.

Hodge-Podge Population

Shortly after the first World War, Japanese began moving into the Bonins in considerable numbers. They established sugar and pineapple plantations and have harvested various exotic tropical woods from the islands. The beaches are smooth, coral sand.

The population has been described as a hodge-podge of the races of the world, including Hawaiian, Italian, American, Danish and British ancestry mixed with the dark-skinned Pacific island natives. No white men are known to have visited the islands since 1935.

C. C. F. PARTY WINS IN SASKATCHEWAN

Regina, Saskatchewan, June 16 (A. P.).—The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation swept yesterday's Prairie province elections, latest returns indicated today, with the premiership falling to 40-year-old Thomas Clement Douglas, a former Baptist minister. Conceded election were forty-three members of the C. C. F., a bloc of Labor, Farmer and Socialist parties, organized in 1932, which advocates the establishment of planned and socialized economy, the immediate socialization of all banking and financial machinery, and other reforms.

Only four members of the Liberal party were conceded election in the early returns; C. C. F. candidates led in two of four doubtful seats, and Liberals in the rest. The 52d seat—Cumberland—will be decided June 24.

This victory was accomplished by the C. C. F. over the Liberal administration, headed since 1935 by Premier W. J. Patterson, with little more than half the total ballots cast. The Progressive Conservatives and the various independent candidates failed to elect a single occupant for the fifty-two seats.

Canada Gets First Socialist Regime

Regina, Saskatchewan, June 16 (AP)—Scoring an overwhelming victory in yesterday's Saskatchewan provincial election, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, Canada's Socialistic party, prepared today to establish the first CCF Government in the Dominion.

The CCF campaigned on a platform favoring promotion and maintenance of cooperatives and thorough development of natural resources.

With nearly all returns in today, the CCF had won at least 43 of the 52 seats in the provincial Legislature, and the outgoing Liberal Government, whose party makes up the Dominion Government at Ottawa, had won only four. In the outgoing Legislature the Liberals held 33 seats and the CCF 11.

Iceland Formally Severs Its Links With Denmark

Republic To Be Proclaimed Today; Althing Meets

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, June 16 (AP).—Iceland formally abrogated the Danish-Icelandic Union Treaty today and will be proclaimed the world's newest republic tomorrow.

Executing the mandate of last month's referendum in which voters approved establishment of a republic, the Althing, Iceland's legislative body, formally abrogated the union treaty and unanimously passed a bill declaring the country a republic.

Tomorrow Parliament will have an open air meeting to proclaim rebirth of the republic and to elect a President for a one-year term. The meeting will be at the Thingvellir (Parliament Plains), where the 1,000-year-old Althing has met for centuries.

Every church bell in the country will be rung. Reykjavik was gayly decorated with flags today to mark the opening of the two-day celebration.

Present at today's abrogation sessions were envoys of the United States, Britain, Norway, Sweden and Fighting French.

STORMS AHEAD FOR ROOSEVELT BIG FOUR PLAN

Republicans Want to Know What Role the Small Nations Will Play.

PRINCIPLES MEET APPROVAL

La Follette Asks if U. S. Is to Be Committed Before or After Peace Terms Are Known.

Washington, June 16 (A. P.).—Republicans called on President Roosevelt today to define the role of small nations in a proposed International Security Council some which legislators said could operate militarily only by unanimous consent of the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China.

Overnight study of the President's statement of plans for a post-war paece-preserving organization produced mixed reaction in Congress, with these developments indicating there is stormy weather ahead for the administration's preliminary scheme for international co-operation.

1. Disclosure that the rough draft of the American plan places the decision on military action to suppress aggression primarily in the hands of the "big four," with any one of them permitted to veto the use of force.

2. A demand by Senator Bridges (Re.-N. H.), who has supported the President's foreign policies in the past, for Mr. Roosevelt to say whether little nations will have a representative vote on a proposed international council or will be "subordinated to the Big Four."

3. Criticism of the President by Senator Ball (R.-Minn.), an exponent of all-out collaboration, for "using some of the language the so-called isolationists have employed to oppose any effective world co-operation" in Mr. Roosevelt's declaration against "a superstate with its own police forces and other paraphernalia of coercive power."

Questions Time Element.

4. An assertion by Senator La Follette (Prog.-Wis.), who holds strong nationalistic views, that the President's outline of security aims "fails to mention the most important question, namely, whether this proposed organization should be established and the United States committed to it prior or after the time when the broad, general terms of the peace are known to the Congress and the country."

5. General approval of the objectives of the plan by most Democrats and cautious endorsement of its principles by Republicans.

The President said in a statement yesterday after a conference with State Department officials and others that the maintenance of future peace and security must be the joint task of all peace-loving nations and that plans are being drawn for establishment of a "fully representative" world organization and an international court of justice.

"It is our further thought," the statement continued, "that the organization would provide for a council, elected annually by the fully representative body of all nations, which would include the four major nations and a suitable number of other nations."

The understanding is general in the Senate that the proposed council could order the use of military force against a potential or actual aggressor only by a "special majority" of its members. This would mean, it was said, that the "Big Four" would have to vote unanimously on this question. Similarly, if the "Big Four" voted to employ force, the other nations could not overrule the decision.

Senator Ball said that under such a system, the proposed organization would be doomed to failure.

"All an aggressor would have to do would be to get one of the big four to sympathize with his viewpoint and there would be no military action," he said.

Administration leaders said the "special majority" provision had been inserted to eliminate, if possible, the controversy which they expect would greet any proposal to bind the United States to use its military power when it did not wish to do so.

BRAZIL INDORSES REGIME IN BOLIVIA

Washington, June 16 (A. P.).—The Brazilian Government, through its Ambassador to the United States, made official representations today to the United States in behalf of the Bolivian regime of Major Gualberto Villarroel. This development has given great impetus to this Government's study of Bolivian recognition, a State Department official told the Associated Press. Some diplomatic circles, meanwhile, predicted that recognition is not far away—possibly before the July 2 elections.

Carlos Martins, the Brazilian Ambassador, after a conference with Secretary of State Hull, told newspaper men that he felt confident that the Bolivian situation would be resolved and added that he was hopeful of an early solution because "we cannot stay like this forever."

Ambassador Martin's conference with Secretary Hull, it was learned, brought quick reaction in the department. Conferences immediately were scheduled by State Department officials interested in this Government's policy toward Bolivia and the "matter is moving along rapidly," said one official.

Also scheduled to confer today with Secretary Hull is Dr. Aurelio Concheso, Cuban Ambassador to the United States, and it is expected that his conversation will deal, in part at least, with the Bolivian subject.

BLACK MARKET POLICING NEAR

House Group Backs Funds for Enforcement Staff.

JUN 17 1944

Washington, June 16 (A. P.).—Funds to combat what OPA Administrator Chester Bowles called a growing black market, by the addition of 1,239 enforcement workers, were approved today by the House Appropriations Committee.

The chief of the Office of Price Administration said the additional enforcement was needed especially in the meat industry.

The committee said it believed additional enforcement work was necessary to break up illegal markets as it sent to the floor a $2,595,165,536 deficiency supply bill for more than a score of Federal departments and subordinate agencies whose current year funds were insufficient.

Of the total, only $232,483,058 represented new appropriations, $507,682,476 being reappropriated balances of funds previously provided and $1,855,000,000 being contact authorizations, all of which was for the Navy.

The largest single allotment of new funds was $177,750,000 for OPA's activities for the fiscal year starting July 1. While not a deficiency item, it was carried in the deficiency bill because of congressional delay in enacting the new price control act.

Higher Budget for OPA.

The OPA's allotment was only $4,502,000 below budget estimates but exceeded current year appropriations for that agency by $8,250,000,

The committee commended OPA for its "genuine effort" to bring about economies and improve enforcement.

Testifying before the committee during hearings on the bill, Mr. Bowles had declared "the signs indicate that the black market may be picking up again," requiring special staffs in New York, Boston and Chicago.

Only $20,057 of new funds was allotted to the Navy to meet deficiencies in current appropriations. However, $385,000,000 of previously appropriated funds was continued available for the Bureau of Ships and the Bureau of Ordnance, plus $55,000,000 contract authorization for the development of new type rockets and rocket guns and $1,800,000,000 for the conversion or construction of an additional 1,000,000 tons of landing craft.

CIO CONVENTION ADOPTS PLATFORM ENDORSING FDR

WASHINGTON, June 16. — (AP) A convention called to adopt a program for the CIO Political Action committee today endorsed President Roosevelt and Vice President Wallace for reelection and approved a platform asking a guaranteed annual wage for workers and a post-war planned economy "to develop a new life of plenty."

The 300 delegates representing CIO unions gave their loudest applause, and a few scattered cheers, for a special resolution endorsing Wallace. It was offered by R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, and declared that Wallace has "demonstrated his firm attachment to progressive principles."

Committee Offers Platform

The endorsement of President Roosevelt was contained in the 3,600 word platform offered to the convention by a resolutions committee.

The platform was adopted without change and with no floor discussion except for a brief speech by Ferdinand Smith, New York city, representing the National Maritime union.

Smith took the floor after reading of a section asking legislation to "prohibit activities or propaganda directed against any individuals because of their racial, religious or national origin," immediate passage of an Anti-Poll Tax bill, and enactment of "a genuine soldier vote bill."

Smith said that section was the most important of all and praised what he termed the CIO Political Action committee's "liquidation—I like that word" of representatives Starnes, Costello and Dies.

It was the first public claim from a CIO source for the defeat of Starnes in the Alabama and Costello in the California Democratic primaries and for the decision of Chairman Dies (D-Tex) of the House Committee on un-American Activities not to run for reelection. Dies gave political aims as his reason for withdrawing from the Texas primary.

Convention Recesses

After adoption of the platform-program, the convention recessed until tomorrow. James B. Carey, CIO secretary, told reporters that h anticipated tomorrow's session would be concerned chiefly with the question of financing activities in support of the program.

The Republican National committee has charged that the CIO committee, which acknowledges it has raised a fund of over $700,000, is violating the Corrupt Practices act. Attorney General Biddle has said he has found nothing unlawful in its activities.

Philip Murray, CIO president who presided at the convention, told the delegates the CIO committee "has nothing to hide."

"We want everybody to know what we are doing," he said.

Landing Craft Displace Theory Port Is Needed

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Brig. Gen. George C. Stewart, chief of transportation in North African theater, said today that use of new landing craft had displaced the theory that a port must be acquired first in a military landing made from the sea.

No ports were available in some of the Italian landings, he said, but tremendous stores were moved ashore with the use of LSTs, LCIs and the amhibious trucks known as "ducks." He explained that at Anzio the amount of supplies taken ashore was limited by the space to store it, not by transportation facilities.

300,000 Private Planes Foreseen

Boston, June 16 (AP)—A prediction that there would be 300,000 civilian planes and 6,000 airports in the United States four years after the war ends was made today by Charles I. Stanton, Civil Aeronautics Administrator.

In an address before the 75th quarterly meeting of the New England Council, he said the 300,000 figure was "small" compared with the 32,000,000 automobile registered in 1941.

At present, he added, there are 25,000 planes and 3,000 airports in the United States.

Needed For National Survival

The Civil Aeronautics Administrator emphasized that "no modern nation can survive and prosper without air power" and said "the base of such air power is a sound civilian aviation structure."

Stanton recommended that Federal and State governments become partners in financing and building airport systems, in general accord with principles worked out in building the national highway system.

"Nine out of ten of the 300,000 civilian planes will be small aircraft flown by private flyers for business or pleasure or both," he said, adding that "most of the younger generation is going to learn to fly whether we like it or not."

Three Categories Of Craft

Stanton predicted the private planes of the future would fall into three general categories:

1. Conventionally designed plane, seating two to eight passengers with a 90-200-mile-an hour speed and cruising range of 400 to 600 miles. Cost about $1,000 to $20,000.

2. The "armchair" plane, slower, less maneuverable, simpler and safer to fly, two to six passengers, at 90 to 150 miles an hour and costing $1,000 to $10,000.

3. Helicopters, rocket ships and "roadable" planes with detachable wings.

GOP To Ponder Proposals Of Candidates

[By The Associated Press]

Supporters of the three leading possibilities for the Republican Presidential nomination — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio and Lieut. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen—have assurances today that their favorite's views will receive consideration by the party's platform drafters.

Friends of Dewey already have conferred with some members of the resolutions committee, which will start work on a platform Wednesday, prior to the convention. They are understood to have given general approval to a tentative draft of a foreign-policy plank and to have made known their stand on other issues.

Bricker's views will be represented on the committee by Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio).

Senator Ball (R., Minn.) said in Washington today that he plans to appear before the committee June 24 to urge it to take a strong stand for international post-war peace cooperation, in line with the views of Stassen, former Minnesota Governor who now is in the navy.

Armed, Seagoing Hospitals To Accompany Convoys

Chicago, June 16 (AP)—A floating hospital that will go to sea as part of our regular convoy escorts has been tested in Lake Michigan, the navy revealed today.

The craft, the PCE (R) 853 (Patrol Craft Escort, Rescue), has bunks for 57 passengers, is equipped with complete hospital facilities including operating table, dispensary and X-ray.

These rescue ships are manned by seven officers and 100 men and will have a physician aboard. They are being built here by the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Company.

In addition to their rescue work the vessels make good following up landing craft in invasions, the builders said. Commander Paul S. Goen, supervisor of shipbuilding at Chicago, said the PCE is one of the largest patrol vessels used by the navy for convoy escort work.

It costs between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000, can remain at sea for long periods and is armed with big guns, several anti-aircraft rifles and depth-charge throwers.

Presidential nominee who withdrew from this year's race, has been expressing his views on the platform in a series of newspaper articles and National Chairman Harrison E. Spangler announced yesterday at Chicago that Willkie will be invited to the convention and asked to present his stand on the platform.

Spangler said the views of former President Hoover and of former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas also would be solicited on platform planks.

There were reports from Albany, meanwhile, that Dewey will make a quick train trip to Chicago to accept the nomination if he wins it. Bricker already has planned to be on hand for the convention. Stassen can't leave his navy duties unless he is nominated.

Michigan Drive For Dewey

A Michigan drive to draft Dewey has brought him petitions signed by 13,000 persons urging him to become a candidate.

The 550 petitions were received yesterday from Mrs. W. R. Wooden, of Battle Creek, who was identified in an accompanying letter as co-chairman of the sponsorship committee of the "Draft-Dewey Movement of Michigan." She said the signatures were obtained throughout Michigan, Dewey's native State. The petitions arrived at the Capitol in the absence of the Governor, who is spending the week at his farm near Pawling. He was informed of their receipt, but had no comment.

PAC To Offer Platform

The Republicans shared the spotlight today with a group that avowedly is rooting for President Roosevelt for a fourth term—the CIO Political Action Committee.

Meeting in Washington, the CIO group planned to adopt a platform which Chairman Sidney Hillman said would be urged upon the major parties.

The New York Herald Tribune quoted "high Democratic political sources" as reporting the President told the party chairman, Robert E. Hannegan, that whether he is nominated again is "something the delegates will have to decide" and also that he wants Vice-President Wallace renominated.

Indiana Democrats gathered to nominate a State ticket and select convention delegates with four votes. Twenty-two of their delegates were chosen in the district last night, two of them with instructions to vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

ISIGNY, FRANCE, JUNE 15-(DELAYED)-(AP)-DESTRUCTION OF THIS ONE-TIME ENEMY POSITION IS DECLARED BY ALLIED ARMY AND NAVY MEN TO BE A PERFECT EXAMPLE OF WHAT NAVAL GUNFIRE CAN DO IN HELPING AN INVASION.

THIS TOWN, WITH ITS MEDIEVAL HOUSES, LOOKS LIKE HELL MIGHT AFTER THE THERMOMETER HAD RISEN ABOVE THE MAXIMUM AND BURST.

SHELLFIRE FROM THE AMERICAN BATTLESHIP TEXAS AND DESTROYERS COOKE AND SATTERLEE AND THE BRITISH CRUISER GLASGOW WAS SO DESTRUCTIVE THAT THE GERMAN DEFENDERS FLED PELL-MELL ALONG WITH THE FRENCH CIVILIANS.

WHEN ALLIED SOLDIERS ARRIVED THEY FOUND THE TOWN A SMOKING RUIN. THE HEART OF THE TOWN WAS ABSOLUTELY LEVELED. WHEN I REACHED HERE, CIVILIANS WERE RETURNING ALONG WITH ADVANCING AMERICAN TROOPS.

THE CITY HALL, A LONG, FOUR-STORY BUILDING WHICH HAD HOUSED THE GERMANS, HAS BEEN TAKEN OVER BY THE AMERICANS, WITH A FIRST LIEUTENANT FUNCTIONING AS CIVIL AFFAIRS OFFICER.

"I WAS TOLD THIS WAS HEADQUARTERS OF THE NAZI NAVY," SAID THE LIEUTENANT. "THIS BUILDING WAS USED AS A REST QUARTERS FOR GERMAN SUBMARINES."

THE GERMANS HAD FLED SHRVASTILY THEY LEFT ALL THEIR PERSONAL EQUIPMENT BEHIND, INCLUDING SMALL ARMS, FAVORED HELMETS, LETTERS FROM HOME, AND THOUSANDS OF DOCUMENTS AND PACKAGES OF PRINTED PROPAGANDA.

THEY HAD NOT EVEN UNPACKED THEIR GASMASKS, AND THERE WAS HALF-

EATEN FOOD ON THE TABLES.

IN FRONT OF THE BUILDING I MET CAPT.LOUIS D.BARBE, 32, OF LAKE CHARLES, LA., BOMB DISPOSAL OFFICER WHO LEARNED ABOUT EXPLOSIVES WHEN HE WORKED FOR THE HUMBLE OIL COMPANY. HE WAS LOOKING FOR AN UNEXPLODED BOMB WHICH HAD BEEN REPORTED IN THE VICINITY, SO I SHOWED HIM A HOLE WHERE SOME MILITARY POLICE HAD TOLD ME A BOMB LAY.

BARBE DISAPPEARED INTO THE HOLE WITH A LONG METAL ROD. HE POKED THE ROD INTO THE SOFT SAND BUT SAID HE COULD NOT FEEL THE BOMB, SO IT WAS DEEP ENOUGH TO BE SAFE. AT HIS DIRECTION, AN AMERICAN BULLDOZER FILLED THE HOLE AND RESTORED THE ROAD IN A MATTER OF MINUTES.

BARBE, WHO RECENTLY HAD DISARMED A SHELL IN TREVIERES, SAID HIS MAIN JOB WAS TO FLOAT AROUND THE FRONT DISARMING DUDS IN THIS ORDER: FIRST, NEAR HOSPITALS; SECOND, NEAR COMMAND POSTS; AND FINALLY, ON SUPPLY ROUTES.

JUN 17 1944

HE SAID HE HAD DISARMED MANY GERMAN ROCKETS WHICH LAY ALL AROUND THE COUNTRYSIDE AND COULD BE EXPLODED BY THE SLIGHTEST JAR.

HERE ALSO I MET TWO ARMY PRIVATES WHO HAD HELPED DIRECT NAVAL GUNFIRE SO ACCURATELY. THEY WERE EDWARD NOSR, 31, OF 926 1/2 PLEASANT AVE., BREMERTON, WASH., AND F.J.HERBERT, 25, OF 24 WESTBURY PARK RD., WATERTOWN, CONN. THEY CREPT INTO THE TOWN WITH A NAVY OFFICER, AN ARMY OFFICER AND 12 SOLDIERS.

TARGETS WERE SPOTTED SYSTEMATICALLY AND SHIPS' FIRE ORDERED BY RADIO.

THE GERMAN EQUIPMENT CAPTURED IN THIS SECTOR IS EXCELLENT. IT INCLUDES A NEW TYPE OF MACHINE GUN WHICH CAN BE FITTED INTO A SMALL CASE TWO FEET, FOUR INCHES WIDE AND EASILY AND QUICKLY REASSEMBLED. ITS MACHINING IS PERFECT.

JUNE 16-(AP)-PICKINGS WERE FEW FOR ALLIED FIGHTER PLANES OVER THE NORMANDY BATTLEFIELDS OF FRANCE TODAY, BUT FLIGHT OFFICER STEVEN GERICK OF PITTSBURGH, PA., SHOT DOWN HIS SEVENTH GERMAN PLANE SINCE D-DAY.

AN AMERICAN BEACHHEAD, NORMANDY, JUNE 15-(DELAYED)-(AP)-ENSIGN JACK D. PERRY, 24, OF LOOMIS, CALIF., GUIDING A SMALL LANDING CRAFT ASHORE TO PICK UP CASUALTIES, ALMOST BECAME ONE HIMSELF. JUN 17 1944

THE BOAT STRUCK A MINE, AND THE EXPLOSION KNOCKED HIM DOWN AND BLEW FOUR SAILORS OVERBOARD. PERRY THREW LIFE BELTS INTO THE WATER AS THE BOAT SANK BENEATH HIM. HE FLOATED CLEAR.

ALL WERE SAVED EXCEPT ONE MAN, WHO IT WAS REPORTED UNOFFICIALLY WAS PICKED UP BY ANOTHER CRAFT AND TAKEN TO BRITAIN.

BY DON WHITEHEAD JUN 17 1944

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS NEAR ISIGNY, JUNE 15-(AP)--AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS SURROUNDED IN ENEMY TERRITORY FOR 48 HOURS HAVE FOUGHT THEIR WAY THROUGH THE ENEMY TO REJOIN THEIR UNIT AFTER FIGHTING IN WHICH EVEN THE BRIGADIER GENERAL WAS TOSSING HAND GRENADES AT THE GERMANS.

IT IS UNUSUAL FOR ONE STAR GENERALS TO BE WITH SMALL ASSAULT ELEMENTS PROBING DEEP INTO ENEMY LINES, BUT IN THIS BEACHHEAD BATTLE THERE ARE MANY STRANGE THINGS HAPPENING. ONE REASON FOR THE DOUGHBOYS' SUCCESSES IS THAT THEIR OFFICERS LEAD THEM INTO ACTION RATHER THAN PUSH THEM AHEAD.

ONE OUTFIT WAS BEING TROUBLED ON ITS RIGHT FLANK BY THE HARRASSING FIRE OF SNIPERS, MACHINE GUNS AND MORTARS, SO IT WAS DECIDED TO SEND A GROUP UNDER THE COMMAND OF Maj. ANTHONY MILLER AND CAPT.

ALEXANDER POUSKA, JR., BOTH OF BALTIMORE, TO PROBE A SECTOR ACROSS THE VIRE RIVER.

JUN 17 1944

UNDER COVER DARKNESS, THE INFANTRYMEN CROSSED THE RIVER IN ASSAULT BOATS WITHOUT OPPOSITION, BUT AFTER ADVANCING ABOUT 1,000 YARDS THEY RAN INTO A HAIL OF FIRE FROM AUTOMATIC WEAPONS. DURING THE FIGHTING, THE GROUP SPLIT, ONE MAKING ITS WAY BACK ACROSS THE RIVER WHILE THE OTHER CONTINUED.

THE GENERAL, MILLER AND POUSKA HAD 150 MEN WITH THEM WHEN THE FIRST FIGHT WAS OVER, AND THEY & WERE CONTACTED BY CAPT. JOHN C. BRASHEARS, 5714 KENMORE ROAD, BALTIMORE, A KEEN LIA ISON OFFICER BRASHEARS HAD MADE HIS WAY ACROSS THE RIVER AND REACHED THE UNIT. WHEN HE STARTED BACK ALONG A WOODED LAND HE TURNED A CURVE AND RAN HEAD ON INTO A GERMAN SERGEANT WITH FIVE MEN.

JUN 17 1944

"THE SERGEANT AND I WERE BOTH AS SCARED AS HELL," BRASHEARS LAUGHED, "BUT HIS SURPRISE LASTED LONGER THAN MINE. I SHOT HIM WITH A RIFLE AND THEN DUCKED INTO A HEDGEROW TO MAKE MY WAY BACK TO WHERE THE GENERAL AND OUR MEN WERE."

JUN 17 1944

THE UNIT SENT OUT PATROLS BUT THEY RAN INTO FIRE FROM ALL DIRECTIONS AND THE FIRE WAS PARTICULARLY HEAVY FROM THE LANE WHERE BRASHEARS SHOT THE GERMAN SERGEANT.

SO BRASHEARS AND SERGEANT WILLIAM MOATES, ALSO OF BALTIMORE, ORGANISED A COMBAT TEAM AND WENT OUT TO CLEAN UP THE AREA. THEY RAN INTO FIRE FROM A FARMHOUSE NEARBY.

"A RIFLE GRENADIER SLIPPED UP TO WITHIN 50 YARDS OF THE KNANS AND LAID A GRENADE AMONG THEM," BRASHEARS SAID. "THEN ONE OF OUR MEN THREW A HAND GRENADE AT CLOSE RANGE. WHEN WE MOVED UP THERE WERE THREE OR FOUR DEAD GERMANS IN THE FARMYARD. THE OTHERS HAD CLEARED UP."

THE GROUPS SHOT THEIR WAY THROUGH THIS RESISTANCE AND STARTED TO MAKE THEIR WAY BACK TO THEIROWN LINE, BUT THE GENERAL DECIDED TO MAKE ONE MORE TRY AT REACHING THE OBJECTIVE, ALTHOUGH THEY HAD USED UP THEIR EMERGENCY RATIONS AND WERE RUNNING SHORT OF AMMUNITION.

30.24—16305

JUN 17 1944

THE GERMANS HAD CUT A GAP IN THE HEDGEROW OUTSIDE THE VILLAGE AND HAD SET UP FIELDS OF FIRE COMMANDING THE APPROACHES. THE GROUP WORKED AROUND THEM AS NIGHT WAS FALLING ONLY TO FIND THEMSELVES IN THE MIDST OF BOTH GERMAN AND AMERICAN ARTILLERY. SO THEY DUG IN FOR THE NIGHT.

THE NEXT DAY THE GENERAL, THE MAJOR AND THE CAPTAIN BROUGHT THEIR MEN BACK SAFELY.

CARENTAN, FRANCE, JUNE 14 (DELAYED)-(AP)--THIS SHELL-BLASTED TOWN HAS CHANGED HANDS FOUR TIMES AND IF IT KEEPS UP THE BATTLE FOR CARENTAN MAY GO DOWN AS ONE OF THE BLOODIEST OF THE WAR.

WHEN I ARRIVED HERE TODAY, THE AMERICANS HAD DRIVEN THE NAZIS AND SATELLITE TROOPS ABOUT TWO MILES FROM THE EDGE OF THE CITY.

THE COMBINED SHELLING FROM TWO ARMIES IS RAPIDLY REDUCING THE TOWN TO RUIN.

JUN 17 1944

I DRIVE HERE IN A JEEP WITH PVTS. CLAUDE HENLEY, SELMA, ALA, AND E.C. MIZE, WINSTON SALEM, N.C. THEY WERE SO INTERESTED IN GETTING TO A TEMPORARY GARAGE TO GET THEIR TIRES REPAIRED THAT THEY IGNORED ENEMY 88S DROPPING ALONG THE ROAD.

THE FRENCH WE SAW WERE MOSTLY APATHETIC.

AT A CROSSROADS NEAR THE FRONT, I MET TWO MPS, PVTS. STUART WARE, 29, OF 24 NORTH BELVEDERE, MEMPHIS, TENN., AND RALPH K GROSSMAN, 747 EAST FIFTH ST., NEW YORK CITY, WHO WERE DIRECTING TRAFFIC AMID A CLOUD OF DUST FROM VEHICLES AND SHELLINGS. JUN 17 1944

A BAR AT A NEARBY INTERSECTION WAS HALF BLOWN AWAY, BUT THE FRENCH PROPRIETOR WAS WORKING IN THE DUST AND DEBRIS AND WAS DOING A LANDOFFICE BUSINESS WITH AMERICANS.

OUTSIDE, LONG LINES OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS SLOGGED THEIR WAY TOWARDS THE FRONT, MIXING WITH VEHICLES, TANKS AND HALFTRACKS.

ONE FRENCH CIVILIAN, ABOUT 45, BEGGED A SOLDIER FOR CHOCOLATE FOR HIS SICK CHILD. OBTAINING IT, HE WALKED 10 PACES AND THEN ATE IT.

JUN 17 1944

TWO SOLDIERS DROVE BY IN A JEEP WITH A MAN IN CIVILIAN CLOTHING. THE "CIVILIAN" WAS IN REALITY AS NAZI SOLDIER SNIPER, DISGUISED AS A PEASANT.

ADD LONDON PLANE SHOOTING xx NEIGHBORHOOD

MY ESTIMATE THAT A FEW ALLIED PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN IS BASED ON OBSERVATIONS OF ACTION INVOLVING FIGHTERS. I HEARD NO REPORTS OF TRANSPORTS BEING SHOT DOWN AS WAS THE CASE IN SICILY. JUN 17 1944

THE TOTAL NUMBER OF PLANES LOST FROM THIS CAUSE IS NOT GREAT. IN ADDITION, HOWEVER, THERE WAS DANGER TO SHIP AND SHORE PERSONNEL

FROM THE ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE, AND SOME CASUALTIES WERE SUFFERED.

ABOARD OUR FLAGSHIP THERE WERE ALERTS EVERY NIGHT FROM TUESDAY THROUGH SUNDAY, AND WHILE OUR SHIP DID NOT ALWAYS FIRE, THERE WERE ALMOST INVARIABLY BURSTS FROM SCORES OF SHIPS.

JUN 17 1944

IN A FEW INSTANCES THERE WERE NO ENEMY PLANES OVER AT ALL, AND AT OTHER TIMES THEY MIXED IN WITH OUR NIGHT FIGHTERS, SO THAT OUR FIRE ENDANGERED OUR PLANES. THE TENDENCY OF REGULAR NAVY MEN IS TO BLAME "TRIGGER-HAPPY" GUNNERS ON SOME MERCHANT SHIPS FOR FIRING NERVOUSWY AT ANY PLANE SIGHTED OR HEARD AT NIGHT, THUS STAMPEDING OTHERS INTO THROWING UP BARRAGES.

ABOARD ONE SHIP 11 MEN WERE WOUNDED BY A 20 MM. SHELL FROM ANOTHER CRAFT, AND MEN ALONG THE BEACHES HAVE HAD A GOOD MANY CASUALTIES FROM ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE. MANY TOLD ME THEY FEARED IT MORE THAN THE BOMBS OR STRAFING OF THE GERMAN AIRMEN.

EVERYONE SO FAR IS AMAZED AT THE WEAKNESS OF THE GERMAN AIR EFFORTS AGAINST FAT SHIPPING TARGETS SITTING OFF THE NORMANDY SHORE. AS FAR AS I WAS ABLE TO LEARN, THERE WERE NEVER MORE THAN ABOUT 15 GERMANS OVER THE SHIPPING AREA AT ONE TIME. OFTEN THE INTRUDERS NUMBERED ONLY THREE OR FOUR AND SEEMED MORE BENT ON RECONNAISSANCE THAN ON ATTACKING.

(A DISPATCH FROM WASHINGTON SAID MILITARY MEN THERE REGARDED THE PILOTLESS PLANE AS A DEFINITELY DANGEROUS WEAPON AND WERE PUZZLED THAT THE GERMANS DID NOT EMPLOY IT AGAINST ALLIED INVASION FORCES LAST WEEK.)

ALTHOUGH INHABITANTS OF THE ZONE WHICH FIRST EXPERIENCED THE ROBOT ATTACK OSTENTATIOUSLY IGNORED TODAY'S ALARMS, MANY CARRIED THEIR HELMETS AS THEY MOVED THROUGH THE STREETS. ALL SCHOOLS WERE LET OUT FOR THE DAY. ONE SOLDIER ON LEAVE WAS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN BLOWN FROM HIS BATH INTO AN ADJACENT SINK BY THE EXPLOSION OF ONE PLANE.

SOME DESCRIBED THE NOISE OF THE NEW WEAPON AS SIMILAR TO THAT OF AN EXPRESS TRAIN.

"IT'S SO SPOOKY, SOMEHOW," SAID A WOMAN WHO SAW ONE OF THE PLANES CAUGHT BY SEARCHLIGHTS. "IMAGINE, PLANES WITH NOBODY IN THEM."

LONDON, JUNE 16-(AP)--BATTLES BETWEEN FRENCH PATRIOTS

AND THE VICHY MILITIA AND GERMAN OCCUPATION TROOPS ARE SPREADING THROUFH THE INTERIOR OF FRANCE, UNDERGROUND REPORTS TO OFFICIAL FRENCH QUARTERS IN LONDON TODAY SAID. JUN 17 1944

INCREASING NUMBERS OF POLICE AND GENDARMES WERE REPORTED DESERTING TO JOIN THE RESISTANCE FORCES. JUN 17 1944

LENDING SUPPORT TO THESE REPORTS WAS AN ANNOUNCEMENT OVER THE GERMAN-CONTROLLED PARIS RADIO THAT TRIBUNALS HAD BEEN ESTABLISHED TO ARREST AND TRY WITHOUT NOTICE ANYONE DESERTING HIS OFFICIAL POSITION.

THE VICHY RADIO SAID A NEW SYSTEM OF "TRIBUNALS FOR THE MAINTENANCE OF ORDER" HAD BEEN SET UP UNDER THE CONTROL OF JOSEPH DARNAND, VICHY'S DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PUBLIC ORDER. THESE TRIBUNALS ARE AUTHORIZED TO IMPOSE SENTENCES UP TO DEATH FOR DESERTION FROM DARNAND'S ARMED MILITIA OR OTHER CRIMES, THE BROADCAST SAID.

THE VICHY RADIO BROADCAST AN OFFICIAL DENIAL OF "WIDESPREAD RUMORS THAT THE FIRST REGIMENT OF FRANCE (THE ONLY REGULAR FRENCH ARMED FORCE AUTHORIZED BY THE GERMANS UNDER THE ARMISTICE) HAS REFUSED TO OBEY ORDERS.

FRENCH SOURCES HERE SAID THE MAQUIS BEAT OFF GERMAN ATTACKS IN DAUPHINE PROVINCE AND THE GUERRILLAS WERE "IN CONTACT WITH THE ENEMY" IN THE VOSGES, THE MARNE AND ARDENNES DISTRICTS. JUN 17 1944

PATRIOTS SKIRMISHING WITH THE GERMANS IN SOUTHWEST FRANCE WERE REPORTED TO HAVE DESTROYED A NUMBER OF ARMORED CARS. RAILWAY LINES XXXXX WERE REPORTED CUT IN THE REGION SOUTH OF THE GARONNE RIVER AND IN MANY PLACES IN NORTHERN FRANCE.

SPANISH DISPATCHES INDICATED GERMAN MERCENARIES IN SOUTHERN FRANCE HAD DESERTED EN MASSE AND THAT "THOUSANDS" OF GUERRILLAS WERE MASQUERADING IN GERMAN BATTLEDRESS, WHICH THEY APPARENTLY OBTAINED IN THE SEIZURE OF GERMAN WAR MATERIEL.

JAPANESE RAID (300)

LONDON, JUNE 16-(AP)-THE GERMAN DNB AGENCY, QUOTING A TOKYO IMPERIAL HEADQUARTERS BROADCAT, SAID TODAY THAT "IT IS REPORTED OFFICIALLY FROM JAPAN THAT NO ENEMY AIRCRAFT WERE OVER TOKYO" DURING THE RAIDS BY THE UNITED STATES' NEW B-29 SUPERFORTRESSES ON JAPAN.

"DOMEI (JAPANESE NEWS AGENCY) CALLS THE OFFICIAL AMERICAN REPORTS THAT AMERICAN BOMBERS ATTACKED TOKYO AND DROPPED A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER OF BOMBS ON THE TOWN A RIDICULOUS PROPAGANDA TRIVK," SAID DNB. "IT WAS ONLY A SORT OF A SURPRISE RECONNAISSANCE FLYING TOWARDS THE NORTHERN PART OF KYUSHU."

(THERE HAD BEEN NO OFFICIAL AMERICAN MENTION OF ANY SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES UP TO THE TIME THE DNB BROADCAST WAS RECORDED HERE BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

A BROADCAST DOMEI VERSION OF THE RAIDS AS RECORDED BY THE BRITISH MINISTRY OF INFORMATION SAID U.S. PLANES WERE DETECTED IN JAPAN AT 11 A.M., JUNE 15. JUN 17 1944

"IN THIS ATTACK OUR DEFENSE UNITS DEFINITELY BROUGHT DOWN SEVEN AIRCRAFT INCLUDING A B-29."

THE BROADCAST CLAIMED THE RAIDING FORCE THEN "TOOK TO ITS HEELS."

THE DOMEI BROADCAST CONTINUED: "THE PLANES CAME FROM SIAN IN THE CHINESE PROVINCE OF SHENSI. SINCE THEY DROPPED ONLY A SMALL NUMBER OF BOMBS IT IS MOST LIKELY THEIR AIM WAS ONLY TO BRING ANXIETY TO THE JAPANESE HOME FRONT. SOME CASUALTIES OCCURRED."

"AN ENEMY BOMBER WHILE TRYING TO MAKE ITS GETAWAY BLINDLY BOMBED" A SCHOOL IN THE SUBURBS OF KOKURA CITY, THE REPORT ADDED.

"OUR FORCES WERE LONG AWARE THAT ENEMY B-29S HAD MADE THEIR APPEARANCE IN CHINA."

THE RAID WAS DECLARED AIMED AT "HITTING OUR MORALE," BUT WAS "INEFFECTIVE," AND "THERE ARE DISTINCT SIGNS THAT OUR MORALE HEIGHTENED."

DOMEI SAID THE LARGEST NUMBER OF PERSONS KILLED AT ANY ONE PLACE WAS "TEN INMATES OF THE KOKURA ARMY HOSPITAL."

LONDON, JUNE 16-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF HERBERT STANLEY MORRISON'S ADDRESS BEFORE COMMONS TODAY IN WHICH HE DESCRIBED NEW NAZI PILOTLESS PLANES:

JUN 17 1944

"IT HAS BEEN KNOWN FOR SOME TIME THAT THE ENEMY WAS MAKING PREPARATIONS FOR USE OF PILOTLESS AIRCRAFT AGAINST THIS COUNTRY.

"HE HAS NOW STARTED TO USE THIS MUCH VAUNTED WEAPON. A SMALL NUMBER OF THESE MISSILES WAS USED IN THE RAIDS TUESDAY MORNING AND THEIR FALL WAS SCATTERED OVER A WIDE AREA. A LARGER NUMBER WAS USED LAST NIGHT AND THIS MORNING.

"ON THE FIRST OCCASION THEY CAUSED A FEW CASUALTIES BUT THE ATTACK WAS LIGHT AND DAMAGE ON THE WHOLE WAS INCONSIDERABLE.

"LAST NIGHT'S ATTACK WAS MORE SERIOUS AND I HAVE NOT AS YET FULL PARTICULARS OF THE CASUALTIES AND DAMAGE, NOR OF THE NUMBER OF PILOTLESS AIRCRAFT DESTROYED BEFORE THEY COULD EXPLODE.

"THE ENEMY'S PREPARATIONS HAVE NOT, OF COURSE, PASSED UNNOTICED, AND COUNTERMEASURES HAVE ALREADY BEEN AND WILL CONTINUE TO BE APPLIED WITH FULL VIGOR. IT IS, HOWEVER, PROBABLE THAT ATTACKS WILL CONTINUE. SUBJECT TO EXPERIENCE, THE USUAL SIREN WARNING WILL BE GIVEN FOR SUCH ATTACKS.

JUN 17 1944

"MEANWHILE IT IS IMPORTANT NOT TO GIVE THE ENEMY ANY INFORMATION WHICH WOULD HELP HIM IN DIRECTING HIS SHOOTING BY TELLING HIM WHERE HIS MISSILES LANDED.

"IT MAY BE DIFFICULT TO DISTINGUISH THESE ATTACKS FROM ORDINARY AIR RAIDS AND THEREFORE IT HAS BEEN DECIDED THAT, FOR THE PRESENT, INFORMATION PUBLISHED ABOUT AIR RAIDS IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND--THAT IS TO SAY SOUTH OF A LINE FROM THE WASH TO THE BRISTOL CHANNEL--WILL NOT GIVE ANY INDICATION WHERE THE AIR RAID HAS TAKEN PLACE, BEYOND SAYING IT HAS OCCURRED IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND.

JUN 17 1944

B23 (SEG)

"WHILE I THOUGHT IT RIGHT TO GIVE THE HOUSE AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY INFORMATION ABOUT USE OF THIS NEW WEAPON BY THE ENEMY, AVAILABLE INFORMATION DOES NOT SUGGEST THAT EXAGGERATED IMPORTANCE NEED BE ATTACHED TO THE DEVELOPMENT.

"ALL POSSIBLE STEPS ARE OF COURSE BEING TAKEN TO FRUSTRATE THE ENEMY'S ATTEMPTS TO CAUSE NUISANCE RAIDS BY MEANS WHICH DO NOT IMPERIL THE LIVES OF HIS PILOTS.

"MEANWHILE THE NATION SHOULD CARRY ON WITH ITS NORMAL BUSINESS.

"FURTHER, AS THE RAIDS BY PILOTLESS AIRCRAFT MAY OCCUR DURING DAYLIGHT WHEN THE STREETS ARE FULL OF PEOPLE, AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS WILL BE USED TO SHOOT DOWN THE MACHINES, I MUST IMPRESS ON THE PUBLIC THE IMPORTANCE OF NOT EXPOSING THEMSELVES UNNECESSARILY TO DANGER BY REMAINING IN THE STREETS OUT OF CURIOSITY INSTEAD OF TAKING TO THE NEAREST COVER WHILE THE GUNS ARE FIRING.

"FOR THE TIME BEING, AT ANY RATE, THE GUNS WILL SHOOT, BUT THAT IS LIABLE TO REVIEW AS WE GO ALONG IN THE LIGHT OF EXPERIENCE AND WHAT IS EXPEDIENT.

JUN 17 1944

"MEMBERS WILL NOTICE THE ARRANGEMENT WE HAVE MADE WITH THE PRESS WITH A VIEW TO AVOIDING THE ENEMY KNOWING WHERE HIS PILOTLESS AIRCRAFT HAVE FALLEN.

"I AM SURE ALL MEMBERS, IN QUESTIONS THEY MAY PUT DOWN, OR IN SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTIONS AND OBSERVATIONS, WILL THEMSELVES ACT UP TO THE PRACTICE WHICH WE HAVE ASKED THE PRESS TO OBSERVE."

ROME, JUNE 16-(AP)-OF THE AMERICAN WOMEN WHO WENT THROUGH THE WAR IN ROME, THE FORMER EDITH BODRERO MACY OF NEW YORK NOT ONLY CAME THROUGH SAFELY, BUT PRODUCED AN HEIR FOR ONE OF THE OLDEST HOUSES OF EUROPE.

JUN 17 1944

SHE IS THE WIFE OF RANIERI BOURBON DEL MONTE, PRINCE OF SAN FAUSTINO. HER SON, MONTINO, WAS BORN IN ROME IN JUNE, 1942.

THE DAUGHTER OF THE PRINCESS BY AN EARLIER MARRIAGE, EDITH MACY, 17, WAS WITH HER MOTHER IN ITALY THROUGH THE WAR. SHE LIKEWISE CAME THROUGH UNHARMED AND SAID SHE HAD GROWN A GOOD DEAL DURING THE PERIOD AND GAINED WEIGHT.

JUN 17 1944

IN RESPONSE TO A MESSAGE FROM HER UNCLE, J.NOEL MACY, WESTCHESTER COUNTY, (N.Y.) PUBLISHER, EDITH SAID SHE WAS WELL AND HAPPY AND WOULD LIKE WORD OF HER COUSINS AND STEP-BROTHER IN AMERICA. THE GIRL CONTINUED HER STUDIES DURING THE WAR, TAKING LESSONS IN ARCHITECTURE AT HER HOME. SHE HOPES TO BE AN ARCHITECT.

THE PRINCESS WAS BORN IN ITALY. HER FATHER IS GEN.ALESSANDRO BODRERO OF THE ITALIAN ARMY, NOW LIVING IN RETIREMENT IN ROME. HER MOTHER WAS CATHERINE SPALDING OF NEW YORK, NOW MRS.WILLIAM CLEARWATER OF 444 EAST 57TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

HER HUSBAND'S MOTHER ALSO WAS AN AMERICAN, JANE CAMPBELL OF BERNARDSVILLE, N.J., WHO FOR YEARS WAS PROMINENT IN ROME AS PRINCESS OF SAN FAUSTINO, AND WHO DIED HERE IN 1938.

JUN 17 1944

THE FAMILY NAME OF THE SAN FAUSTINOS IS BOURBON DEL MONTE. DEL MONTE IS ONE OF THE OLDEST ITALIAN FAMILIES, ITS FOUNDER HAVING ENTERED ITALY WITH CHARLEMAGNE IN THE YEAR 802, AND THE FAMILY HAD A RIGHT TO COIN ITS OWN MONEY. IT BECAME ALLIED BY MARRIAGE WITH THE SPANISH BOURBONS MANY CENTURIES LATER.

THE SAN FAUSTINOS SPENT THE WAR IN ITALY BY CHOICE.

"WE WERE IN AMERICA UNTIL THE SPRING OF 1940," THE PRINCESS SAID. "WE FELT CERTAIN ITALY WOULD NOT GET INTO THE WAR, AND AS MY HUSBAND WAS ITALIAN, HE FELT IT HIS DUTY TO RETURN. I AM AN AMERICAN CITIZEN

THE PRINCE WORKED IN THE ITALIAN PROPAGANDA OFFICE UNTIL SEPTEMBER, WHEN HE REFUSED TO SERVE THE FASCIST REPUBLIC. HE HAD TO HIDE AT TIMES AFTER THAT.

JUN 17 1944

"WE SELDOM WENT OUT OF OUR OWN GARDEN," THE PRINCESS SAID. "THERE WAS ALWAYS THE POSSIBILITY THE GERMANS MIGHT INTERN AMERICAN WOMAN, BUT NONE OF THEM IN ROME WAS MOLESTED. AT ONE PERIOD I HID MY DAUGHT FOR A FEW DAYS AT THE HOME OF A NEUTRAL DIPLOMAT."

THE SON BORN TWO YEARS AGO, IS THE PRINCE'S ONLY OFFSPRING AND THE ONLY ONE TO CARRY THE FAMILY NAME AFTER HE DIES. THE PRINCESS SAID THAT HAVING A CHILD UNDER WARTIME CONDITIONS IN ROME WAS DIFFICULT, BUT SHE WAS GLAD SHE HAD GIVEN THE FAMILY AN HEIR, AND SHE SAID THE BOY WAS QUITE HEALTHY.

SHE SAID SHE HAD BEEN WHOLLY OUT OF TOUCH WITH THE FAMILY IN AMERICA AND WOULD LIKE WORD ESPECIALLY ABOUT AN AUNT, COUNTESS JULIA BENNA, OF 84 SOUTH GRAND AVENUE, PASADENA, CALIF., AND EDITH'S AUNT, MRS.WALTER C.LADD OF BERNARDSVILLE, N.J.

GETTING A COUPLE OF MILES AHEAD OF THEIR FORWARD UNITS RECENTLY THEY WENT INTO A VACANT FARM HOUSE OFF HIGHWAY 6 VIRTUALLY AT THE EDGE OF ROME AND SET UP A COMMAND POST.

JUN 17 1944

AFTER PUTTING THEIR ARMS DOWN THEY DECIDED TO HUNT FOR SOUVENIRS AMONG THE GERMAN EQUIPMENT LYING AROUND THE PLACE. LEBITSKY AND CUTRIGHT WENT DOWN THE LANE WHILE TINELLI AND MOORE STARTED AMBLING ALONG THE SIDE OF THE HOUSE.

WHEN A CAR DROVE UP, MOORE AND TINELLI THINKING IT CONTAINED AMERICANS HOLLERED "HI." THE OCCUPANTS OF THE CAR, APPARENTLY THINKING THE SOLDIERS AT THE SIDE OF THE HOUSE WERE THEIR PALS, HOLLERED "HI" RIGHT BACK.

WHEN MOORE AND TINELLI TOOK A GOOD LUCK AT THE CAR AND SAW A GERMAN OFFICER AND ENLISTED MAN STEP OUT THEY GOT QUITE A SURPRISE. THEY RUSHED OVER TO THE GERMANS JUST AS LEBITSKY AND CUTRIGHT SHOWED UP.

THROUGH CUTRIGHT WHO SPEAKS GERMAN THE FOUR AMERICANS LEARNED THAT THE FARM HOUSE HAD BEEN A GERMAN COMMAND POST LESS THAN THREE HOURS BEFORE. THE NAZI LIEUTENANT AND THE SOLDIERS HAD GONE TO THE REAR TO BRING UP RATIONS AND WHILE THEY WERE AWAY THE REST OF THEIR OUTFIT OBVIOUSLY HAD HIT THE ROAD, AND FAST.

"IF THAT'S THE WAY OUR MATES ARE GOING TO TREAT US," THE GERMAN LIEUTENANT TOLD CUTRIGHT, "HERE ARE THE KEYS TO THE CAR AND HERE'S MY GUN. I SURRENDER."

ABOARD JOINT EXPEDITIONARY FORCE FLAGSHIP, SAIPAN ISLAND, JUNE 17-(SATURDAY) UNITED STATES ASSAULT TROOPS FOUGHT INLAND OVER THE GREEN ROLLING HILLS OF SOUTHERN SAIPAN TODAY, AFTER A STREET BY STREET CONQUEST OF THE TOWN OF CHARAN-KANAO.
THEY LANDED NEAR THAT SUGAR MILL TOWN WEDNESDAY UNDER THE FIERCEST JAPANESE FIRE SINCE TARAWA.
FROM THE

JUN 17 1944

BR

IDGE OF THIS FLAGSHIP, I SAW ASSAULT WAVES LOADED IN ALLIGATORS CLAW THEIR WAY OVER THE BARRIER REEF AND MOVE ON TO THE BEACHES, SUPPORTED BY THUNDERING SALVOES OF NAVAL GUNS, FLAMING ROCKETS AND THE AUTOMATIC WEAPONS FROM LANDING CRAFT.
X X X LANDING CRA T.
DESPITE POWERF L SUPPORT AND A FEARSOME FLEET AND AERIAL PREPARATION, THE ALLIGATORS MOVED TOWARD SHORE UNDER A SHOWER OF JAPANESE LONG-RANGE MORTARS AND ARTILLERY FROM THE HILLS, RISING TOWARD THE 15[illegible]O-FOOT PEAK, MT. APOTCHAU, ON THE LEFT FLANK OF THE ASSAULT BEACH.
THE JAPANESE WERE UNDER A NAVAL AND AERIAL BOMBARDMENT FOR SEVERAL DAYS PRECEDING OUR ATTACK AND EVACUATED CIVILIANS FROM CHARAN-KANOA, THE POPULATION OF WHICH WAS ESTIMATED AT 3,000. BUT THEY LEFT A STRONG REAR GUARD WHICH THE AMERICANS CLEANED OUT IN THE FIRST PACIFIC FIGHTING COMPARABLE TO EUROPE'S HOUSE-TO-HOUSE ENCOUNTERS.
SAIPAN IS IN THE HEART OF THE MARIANAS AND THE PORTAL OF THE JAPANESE INNER EMPIRE DEFENSE PERIMETER.
THE CAMPAIGN IS ACTUALLY LIKE GUADALCANAL AND TARAWA COMBINED --THE TROOPS WERE FACED WITH A SAVAGE LAND BATTLE AFTER SURVIVING THE FIGHT FOR THE BEACHHEAD AND WITH SCANT PROSPECT OF A RAPID CLEANUP, SUCH AS IS POSSIBLE IN ATOLL WARFARE.
HOWEVER, THE FRUITS OF VICTORY WOULD BE COMMENSURATE WITH THE RISK ON SAIP

N. ITS CAPTURE WOULD CUT OFF GUAM, OPEN THE ROAD TO THE PHILIPPINES AND SEVER JAPAN'S SUPPLY ROUTES TO THE CAROLINE ISLANDS.

AMERICAN TROOPS LANDED ALONG A TWO MILE FRONT ON EITHER SIDE OF CHARAN-KANOA WHICH LIES ALONG THE SOUTHWEST COAST, BACKED BY THE LIOBOONE HILLS RISING TOWARD THE SHEER CLIFFS OF MAGICIENNE BAY ON THE OPPOSITE COAST.
THE UNITS WHICH WENT ASHORE SOUTH OF CHARAN-KANOA JUMPED OFF WITH A POWERFUL ATTACK TODAY WHICH CARRIED THEM CLOSE TO THE ASLITO AIRDROME. MEANWHILE THE NORTHERN UNITS CONSOLIDATED THE BEACHHEAD AREA BELOW THE PRINCIPAL CITY OF GARAPAN, ON SAIPAN HARBOR, SOME FIVE MILES NORTH OF CHARAN-KANOA.
THROUGHOUT THE DAY, GARAPAN WAS UNDER ARTILLERY ATTACK. FIRES CRACKLED THROUGH ITS ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, SENDING UP GREAT ROLLING PUFFS OF FLAMES TOWA

R JUN 17 1944

D THE BLACK AND WHITE SMOKE WHICH SHROUDED THE ISLAND AND THE SEA. A PALL OF GREY HUNG OVER THE ROADS AND THE WATER.
THE CASUALTIES ON SAIPAN WERE NOT EXCEPTED TO EQUAL THE TARAWA FIGURES, BUT ASSAULT BATTALIONS SUFFERED MATERIAL LOSSES, AND THE JAPANESE WERE STILL THROWING MORTARS--THEIR FAVORITE WEAPON --INTO THE BEACHHEAD AREA.
THE HEAVIEST FIGHTING DEVELOPED BEHIND CHARAN-KANOA, NEAR A SWAMPY LAKE IN THE SUSUPE AREA. THERE, THE JAPANESE MOUNTED A TANK-SUPPORTED COUNTER ATTACK WHICH WAS TURNED BACK.
THE AMERICANS SECURED THE NARROW CHARAN-KANOA AIRSTRIP BORDERING THE BEACH DURING THEIR INITIAL ATTACK. AS YET, HOWEVER, IT IS NOT OUT OF MORTAR RANGE.
THANKS TO THE PREPARATORY STRIKES AGAINST DOZENS OF JAPANESE BASES IN THE CAROLINES, NIPPON WAS UNABLE TO SEND ALOFT A SINGLE PLANE TO INTERFERE WITH LANDING OPERATIONS. THE ARRIVAL AT DUSK OF FIVE JAPANESE TORPEDO PLANES WAS NULLIFIED BY AN ANTIAIRCRAFT BARRAGE WHICH FORCED THEM TO JETTISON THEIR EXPLOSIVES HARMLESSLY.

UNITED STATES NAVAL FORCES PATROLLED THE TWO AND ONE-HALF MILE CHANNEL SEPARATING SAIPAN AND TINIAN ISLANDS EFFECTIVELY AND PREVENTED AN ARTILLERY ENFILADE DURING THE ASSAULT. NAVAL UNITS KNOCKED OUT THE TINIAN BATTERIES.
TINIAN IS A FLAT, GREEN ISLAND RESEMBLING A PLATEAU OASIS IN THE AMERICAN SOUTHWEST.
OUR TASK FORCE ARRIVED OFF SAIPAN EXACTLY ON SCHEDULE, AND THE SHIPS CARRYING ASSAULT TROOPS WERE IN THEIR PRESCRIBED POSITIONS WITHIN TWO MINUTES OF THE TIMES SPECIFIED IN PLANS DRAWN UP WEEKS

30.24— 16317

EARLIER.
SUNRISE CAME THROUGH BANKED CUMULUS CLOUDS BEHIND THE ISLAND'S VOLCANIC PEAK TO ILLUMINATE THE SEA, BOBBING WITH LANDING CRAFT.
BATTLESHIPS AND CRUISERS ALREADY HAD BEGUN A ROARING REVEILLE, AND AS THE ORANGE DAWN CHANGED TO GOLD, CARRIER-BASED PLANES SWEPT IN TO DROP NEARLY 100 TONS OF BOMBS ON THE INVASION BEACHES.
THE POWERFUL HAMMERING OF THE BEACHES APPARENTLY FORCED THE JAPANESE TO ABANDON ANY PLANS TO DEFEND THEM WITH AUTOMATIC WEAPONS AS THEY DID AT TARAWA. THE ASSAULT FORCES SUFFERED ONLY MORTAR AND ARTILLERY FIRE AS THEY WENT IN.
A FEW MINUTES BEFORE THEIR ARRIVAL, THE FIRST WAVE OF BOMBERS GOT A DIRECT HIT ON AN OIL AND AMMUNITION DUMP, WHICH SENT UP PULSATING BALLS OF FIRE FOLLOWED BY A BLACK CONE OF SMOKE LIKE AN ERUPTING VOLCANO. THE DUMP WAS ATHWART A RIDGE BEHIND CHARAN-KANOA.
THE TROOPS FIRST REACHING SHORE CHARGED TOWARD THE AIRSTRIP, BYPASSING THE TOWN WHICH WAS THE ASSIGNMENT OF SUBSEQUENT LANDING WAVES. THEY WERE FORCED TO SLOW UP AND CONSOLIDATED THEIR GAINS, HOWEVER, AS MORTAR FIRE WAS INTENSIFIED.
FOR A TIME THE ATTACKERS WERE IN THE POSITION OF SEEKING AN INVISIBLE ENEMY, IN EVIDENCE ONLY BY THE DEADLY MISSILES DROPPING FROM THE SKY.
THE AMERICANS OCCUPIED AGINGAN POINT, AT THE SOUTHWESTERN TIP OF THE ISLAND, DURING THE INITIAL ATTACK AND FOUND HUGE SUGAR MILLS IN FLAMES. AN IMITATION SCOTCH WHISKY DISTILLERY SHARED THE SAME FATE.
AS THE BATTLE PROGRESSES IN THE MORE MOUNTAINOUS REGIONS IN THE CENTER AND NORTH OF THE 13 MILE LONG ISLAND, IT IS LIKELY TO BECOME MORE BITTER, WITH THE LARGE JAPANESE GARRISON PRESENTING WELL-ORGANIZED DEFENSES.
NAVAL AND AIR SUPPORT AND SHARPSHOOTING ARTILLERY KNOCKED OUT SEVERAL OF THE MOST TROUBLESOME JAPANESE DEFENSE POINTS.
THIS PRELUDED THE GREATEST BATTLE THUS FAR OF THE PACIFIC WAR. BUT A BITTER STRUGGLE WAS EXPECTED. IT HIGHLIGHTS THE PROGRESS OF HOSTILITIES IN THE LAST SIX MONTHS, WITH THE JAPANESE NOW FIGHTING LESS THAN 1400 MILES FROM THEIR HOMELAND.

U.S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, JUNE 16 (AP)-INVADING YANKS, RECOILING FROM A BRIEF REVERSE, HAVE BATTLED FURTHER INLAND ON FIERCELY-DEFENDED SAIPAN IN THE MARIANAS, ADM. CHESTER W.NIMITZ REPORTED TONIGHT A FEW HOURS AFTER DISCLOSING A BOLD TASK FORCE FORAY NEARER JAPAN IN THE BONIN ISLANDS.
HE SAID IN TONIGHT'S COMMUNIQUE THAT THE SAIPAN INVADERS, AFTER BEING HURLED BACK A SHORT DISTANCE, ACHIEVED A HARD-WON HALF MILE OF GROUND AT CHARAN-KANOA ON THE SOUTHWEST COAST OF SAIPAN.
EARLIER HE HAD REPORTED THAT THE TASK FORCE, STRIKING ON THE SAME DAY SAIPAN WAS INVADED, HAD MOVED HALF WAY BETWEEN THE MARIANAS AND THE JAPANESE HOMELAND TO DOWN 47 PLANES AND SINK TWO SHIPS IN THE BONIN AND VOLCANO ISLANDS. THESE BLOWS BY CARRIER PLANES FELL WITHIN 588 MILES OF YOKOHAMA.
NIMITZ REPORTED IN A COMMUNIQUE
E THAT THE ENEMY RESISTED WITH NTENSE MORTAR AND ARTILLERY FIRE BUT THE AMERICAN POSITIONS WERE ONSOLIDATED DURING THE NIGHT OF JUNE 14 AS NAVAL FORCES
EAVILY BOMBARDED ENEMY INSTALLATIONS.
HE REPORTED THAT AT MIDDAY ON JUNE 15 A MAJOR ELEMENT OF THE YANKS BEGAN AN ATTACK WHICH ADVANCED THE LINES NEARLY HALF A MILE IN THE PALM-STUDDED CHARAN-KANOA AREA AND THAT LESSER ADVANCES WERE MADE

30.24— 16317

IN OTHER UNIDENTIFIED SECTORS.
PRELIMINARY ESTIMATES INDICATE THAT TWO JAPANESE DIVISIONS ARE DEFENDING SAIPAN, NIMITZ STATED AFTER REPORTING:
"OUR ASSUMPTION THAT SAIPAN ISLAND WOULD BE STRONGLY HELD BECAUSE OF ITS STRATEGIC LOCATION IN THE JAPANESE DEFENSIVE SYSTEM HAS BEEN PROVEN CORRECT."
THERE STILL WAS NO ANNOUNCEMENT HERE REGARDING THE NUMBER OF AMERICANS LANDED ON SAIPAN WEDNESDAY. TOKYO RADIO REPORTED ONE DIVISION (15,000) MEN) HAD BEEN SET ASHORE.
A JAPANESE DIVISION NORMALLY IS BETWEEN 10,000 AND 15,000.
ALTHOUGH THE COMMUNIQUE SPOKE OF FIGHTING ONLY IN GENERAL TERMS IT APPEARS THE YANKS HAVE ADVANCED NEARLY TWO MILES NORTH FROM AGINGAN POINT BEACHHEAD. THIS PROGRESS WAS MADE BY BITTEREST FIGHTING AGAINST MORTAR, ARTILLERY, MACHINEGUN FIRE AND TANKS THROUGH RICH SUGAR CANE FIELDS AND HEAVILY PALM-COVERED LAND.
THE COMMUNIQUE TODAY DID NOT MENTION TANK ACTION ON EITHER SIDE ALTHOUGH LAST NIGHT'S COMMUNIQUE REPORTED ENEMY COUNTERATTACKS WITH TANKS AND TOKYO RADIO SAID 16 AMERICAN TANKS WERE DESTROYED.

THE FIRST MAN TO BE WOUNDED WAS SGT.WALTER GILONSKE, 95 YORK AVENUE, NEW BRIGHTON, STATEN ISLAND, A GUNNER, WHO SUFFERED A SLIGHT LEG INJURY. GILONSKE HAS BEEN AWARDED THE PURPLE HEART.

MAJ.CHARLES HANSEN, CASPER, WYO., PILOED THE SUPERFORTRESS WITH CAPT.STEPHEN SILVERMAN OF NEWTON,MASS., THE NAVIGATOR; LIEUT.HAROLD HEINBAUGH OF MILLERSBURG, PA., THE CO-PILOT AND LIEUT.ROY PEERMAN OF GREAT BEND,KANS., THE BOMBARDIER. THE OTHER CREWMEN WERE MASTER SERGEANTS ROBERT GIDLEY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, ROBERT COREY, MIDLOTHIAN,ILL., TECHNICAL SGT. ALBERT LOBOZZO, CANONSBURG,PA.; AND SERGEANTS DENVER EDINGTON OF MCDERMOTT, OHIO AND JAMES BRACKEN, BRIDGEPORT,CONN.

(THIS CHANCE ENCOUNTER WAS VIEWED IN WASHINGTON YESTERDAY AS PROVIDING A SATISFACTORY ANSWER TO THE QUESTION OF WHETHER THE B-29S COULD PROTECT THEMSELVES. WASHINGTON'S INFORMATION WAS THAT THE ATTACKING JAPANESE PLANES NUMBERED A DOZEN AND THAT TWO OF THEM WERE SHOT DOWN. BRIG.GEN.H.S.HANSELL, CHIEF OF THE STAFF OF THE 20TH AIRFORCE, SAID THE BIG CRAFT ACQUITTED ITSELF VERY WELL IN THE FIGHT.)

AN ADVANCED BASE FOURTEENTH U.S. AIR FORCE, EASTERN CHINA (DELAYED) (AP)- THIS BASE IS ONE OF THE PRIME OBJECTIVES OF THE JAPANESE DRIVER FOR CONTROL OF THE CANTON-HANKOW RAILWAY.

JUN 17 1944

FORTY MINUTES BY AIR FROM HERE, WHILE I WRITE, P-40'S AND P-51'S OF A FOURTEENTH AIR FORCE FIGHTER GROUP COMMANDED BY A SLOUCHED, SOFT, VOICED TEXAN, COLONEL DAVID L.HILL, ARE KILLING JAPANESE BY THE DOZENS IN THEIR LANDING BARGES ON THE BAYOUS OF TUNG TING LAKE.

HERE UNDER THE BROAD VERANDAH OF THEIR MUD-AND-WATTLE ALERT SHACK OTHER FIGHTER PILOTS ARE LOUNGING AND AWAITING THEIR TURNS IN THE AIR.

ANOTHER BATTLE FOR CHANGSHA AND A DEEPER FOOTHOLD ON THE CANTON-HANKOW LINE IS SHAPING UP. THIS MORNING THE CHINESE REPORTED TO TEX HILL THAT A JAPANESE COLUMN STOOD ONLY FIVE KILOMETERS FROM THAT EMPTY AND ALREADY SMOKING CITY. HILL, HIMSELF, WITH THREE OTHER P-40 PILOTS WENT UP FOR A LOOK- AND, IF POSSIBLE, A CRACK AT THE FOE.

3024 — 16319

JUN 17 1944

FIRES WHICH PILOTS SAW BURNING IN CHANGSHA EVIDENTLY WERE BUT THE START OF A DESTRUCTION THAT WILL BE COMPLETED IF THE CITY MUST BE YIELDED TO THE JAPANESE. THE ENEMY WOULD INHERIT ONLY "SCORCHED EARTH AND BROKEN TILE" UNDER THE CHINESE POLICY OF DESTROYING WHAT THEY CANNOT HOLD.

CHANGSHA WAS EVACUATED BY ITS CIVILIAN POPULATION SOME DAYS AGO. BY ALL REPORTS IT WAS AN ORDERLY WITHDRAWAL. JUNKS AND SAMPANS ON THE SIANG RIVER CARRIED MOST OF THE REFUGEES TO SAFETY. OTHERS SET OUT WITH THEIR MOST VALUABLE POSSESSIONS ACROSS THE NETWORK OF RICE PADDY PATHWAYS.

THIS CORRESPONDENT ARRIVED AT THIS BASE, EXPECTING TO SEE PERHAPS, PREPARATIONS FOR ITS ABANDONMENT BY THE FOURTEENTH AIR FORCE. INSTEAD HE FOUND A STRENGTHENED FORCED OF AMERICAN AIR FIGHTERS WITH MISSIONS ALMOST CONSTANTLY IN THE AIR DURING DAYLIGHT AND A COMMANDER, HILL, DETERMINED TO CARRY ON THE BATTLE AS LONG AS IT IS TACTICALLY POSSIBLE.

THE DEFENSIVE POWER OF THE CHINESE DIVISIONS UNDER GENERAL HSUEH YUEH GOVERNOR OF HUNAN PROVINCE WILL DECIDE WHETHER THIS BASE CAN BE HELD. THE CHINESE SHOWED EVERY SIGN OF MAKING CHANGSHA ITSELF, WITH ITS STREET CORNER PILLBOXES, THE KEYSTONE OF THEIR DEFENSE LINE.

THERE WOULDN'T BE MUCH IN THE WAY OF A NATURAL DEFENSE LINE LEFT FOR THE CHINESE SOUTH OF CHANGSHA.

JUN 17 1944

ONLY ONE MORE JAPANESE MOVE REMAINS TO MAKE THE PRESENT SITUATION THE MOST CRITICAL SINCE THE JAPANESE SUCCESSES OF 1937 AND 1938. THAT WOULD BE A NORTHWARD THRUST FROM THE CANTON REGION TO TIE IN WITH THE PRESENT SOUTHWARD DRIVE ALONG THE RAILWAY. THERE HAVE BEEN FREQUENT REPORTS OF TROOP MOVEMENTS IN KWANGTUNG SUGGESTING THAT INTENTION ON THE PART OF THE ENEMY.

IN DEED, BEFORE THIS DISPATCH IS PUBLISHED, THAT NORTHWARD DRIVE

3024 — 16319

MAY HAVE STARTED. CHINA, AND WITH HER THE AMERICAN FORCES IN CHINA, ARE APPROACHING THEIR GREATEST CRISIS.

JUN 17 1944

THE JAPANESE ARE CLEARLY DETERMINED TO DENY TO THE FOURTEENTH AIR FORCE ITS EASTERN CHINA BASES— BASES VITAL TO THE SUPPORT OF ANY LANDING SUCH AS THAT PLEDGED BY ADMIRAL NIMITZ. THIS THEY COULD DO BY CONQUEST OF THE HANKOW -CANTON LINE. HAVING LEARNED LESSONS IN REPEATED DEFEATS BEFORE CHANGSHA THEY HAVE CONCENTRATED MORE TROOPS THAN EVER BEFORE FOR THE ASSAULT.

FOR MONTHS A GREAT SHARE OF AIR FREIGHT TO CHINA HAS GONE TO BUILDI UP CHINESE MILITARY POWER IN YUNNAN PROVINCE FOR THE OFFENSIVE LAUNCHED IN MAY ACROSS THE SALWEEN RIVER. THE SALWEEN OFFENSIVE WAS PART OF A PLAN TO REOPEN NORTHERN BURMA FOR OVERLAND TRANSPORT WHICH IN TURN MIGHT PERMIT AN AND OFFENSIVE IN CONJECTIONWITH THE NIMITZ ASSAULT ON A JAPANESE -HELD PORT.

ONE HEARS HERE THE QUESTION: WHAT USE WILL IT BE TO HAVE A ROAD THROUGH NORTHERN BURMA IF WHILE GETTING IT WE LOSE OUR FOOTHOLDS IN EASTERN CHINA?? (CONCLUSION FOLLOWS FOR AP)

SUPERFORTRESSES

A U.S. SUPERFORTRESS BASE IN WESTERN CHINA, JUNE 16-(AP)-THE THREE GENERALS, CHAIN-SMOKING CIGARETTES AND DRINKING BLACK COFFEE, WERE SITTING BEFORE A BIG MAP ON THE WALL IN THE OPERATIONS ROOM HERE LAST NIGHT WHEN LT.COL.WILLIAM H.BLANCHARD OF BOSTON, MASS., RUSHED IN FROM THE AIRCRAFT CONTROL ROOM. JUN 17 1944

BLANCHARD, A DEPUTY WING COMMANDER, TRIED TO BE POLITE BUT SHOUTED: "I HAVE THE PLEASURE TO SAY THAT IT'S 'BETTY' OVER THE TARGET."

THAT CODE WORD MEANT "BOMBS AWAY" ON YAWATA, JAPANESE STEEL CENTER 500 MILES SOUTHWEST OF TOKYO, IN THE FIRST SUPERFORTRESS FLEET STRIKE AT THE ENEMY HOMELAND.

BRIG.GEN.KENNETH B.WOLFE, IN CHARGE OF THE 20TH AIR FORCE MISSION AGAINST YAWATA, HAD BEEN WAITING WITH MAJ.GEN.GEORGE B.STRATEMEYER, SECOND IN COMMAND OF THE ALLIED AIR FORCES IN THE SOUTHEAST ASIA THEATER, AND BRIG.GEN.JOHN E.UPSTON, OF TAWAS CITY, MICH., ASSISTANT CHIEF OF STAFF TO WOLFE.

THE WORD "BETTY," INSPIRED BY THE NAME OF THE WIFE OF LT.COL. JAMES D.GARCIA, A NATIVE OF IDALIA, COL., WAS RELAYED PROMPTLY TO WASHINGTON, WHERE THE FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE ATTACK WAS MADE.

GARCIA WAS ABOARD ONE OF THE SIX LEADING PLANES WHOSE PILOTS HAD BEEN INSTRUCTED TO BREAK RADIO SILENCE WITH "BETTY, BETTY, BETTY..." WHEN THE FIRST PACKET OF EXPLOSIVES DROPPED DOWN IN THE NIGHT ON YAWATA.

HIS WIFE IS A MEMBER OF A PROMINENT STEEL FAMILY OF WEIRTON, W.VA.

ON THE CHART IN THE OPERATIONS ROOM THE HONORED NOTATION OF HAVING DROPPED THE FIRST LOAD ON YAWATA WENT BESIDE PLANE NO. 279, PILOTED BY MAJ.DONALD J.HUMPHREY OF POSTVILLE, IOWA. THE TIME WAS 10:58 P.M. LOCAL TIME (11:58 A.M. THURSDAY, EASTERN WAR TIME, OR 12:58 A.M. FRIDAY, JAPANESE TIME).

ANOTHER FAMILY INVOLVEMENT IN THE AFFAIR WAS THAT COLONEL GARCIA FLEW IN A PLANE PILOTED BY LT.COL.WINTON CLOSE OF LOS ANGELES, WHO THE HUSBAND OF A SISTER OF GARCIA'S WIFE, BETTY.

A SECOND "BETTY" FIGURED REMOTELY. CPL.PAUL TURNER, OF KIRKLI' IND., RADIO OPERATOR WHO INTERCEPTED THE FIRST "BETTY-BETTY"BETT' VERY PLEASED. LOOKING UP FROM HIS TYPEWRITER HE SAID "WHY, THA' MY GIRL'S NAME, TOO--BETTY GORHAM. HE THEN TOOK A SNAPSHOT ~~OU~~ out of his WALLET TO PROVE IT.

JAP AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS (320)

JUN 17 1944

BY RUSSELL BRINES

ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR EDITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, JUNE 15--THE JAPANESE DEPEND UPON MEDIEVAL FIRE-FIGHTING METHODS AND THE CONFUSED, IF SWEATING, LABOR OF THOUSANDS TO COMBAT BOMBER-STREWN DEVASTATION.

VOLUNTEERS HAVE WORKED PATIENTLY FOR YEARS TO PERFECT A CIVILIAN DEFENSE SYSTEM WHICH HIGH-RANKING JAPANESE OFFICERS BEFORE THE WAR ADMITTED WOULD BE USELESS AGAINST A RAIN OF INCENDIARY BOMBS.

EXCEPT FOR THE STEEL-CONCRETE BUSINESS SECTIONS AND NEW FACTORIES OF TOKYO AND OTHER MAIN CITIES, JAPAN IS A CROWDED MASS OF WOODEN FLIMSINESS. IN PEACETIME, PROFESSIONAL FIREMEN MADE NO EFFORT TO EXTINGUISH A WELL-STARTED FIRE, BUT DYNAMITED HOUSES AT EITHER END OF UNUSUALLY LONG BLOCKS TO LOCALIZE RAPIDLY-SPREADING FLAMES.

I HAVE WATCHED MANY AIR RAID DRILLS IN TOKYO. LONG BUCKET BRIGADES -- THE WATER SLOPPED BADLY BY EAGER MEN AND WOMEN -- AND SAND WERE THE CHIEF WEAPONS AGAINST THE WARTIME HOLOCAUST THE

30.24 — 16321

MILITARISTS EXPECTED. FIRST AID SQUADS -- TYPICALLY OVER-MANNED, WITH SIX MEN TO A STRETCHER -- ANTI-GAS UNITS, VOLUNTEER POLICE, AIRCRAFT SPOTTERS ALL WORKED WITH ENTHUSIASTIC CONFUSION. PEDESTRIANS HUDDLED NEAR BUILDINGS DURING SIMULATED RAIDS FOR THEY HAD NO OTHER SHELTER.

EACH NEIGHBORHOOD, EACH OFFICE BUILDING AND FACTORY THROUGHOUT THE HOMELAND HAS ITS VARIOUS PERMANENT AIR RAID SQUADS, LONG-PRACTICED BUT INCAPABLE OF MORE THAN SLIGHT RELIEF FOR THE WOUNDED IN THE HYSTERIA OF HEAVY ATTACK. PROFESSIONAL FIREMEN AND EQUIPMENT, SCARCE IN EVEN THE LARGEST CITIES, ARE RESERVED TO PROTECT VITAL FACTORIES, THE MILITARISTS' PRIMARY CONCERN.

SO INTERSPERSED ARE VITAL OBJECTIVES AND RESIDENCES THAT WIDESPREAD DISTRESS IS UNAVOIDABLE.

YET, AS IN PAST CALAMITIES, THE JAPANESE QUICKLY MAY REBUILD HOMES AND ALL BUT THE LARGEST FACTORIES. A TIGHT GOVERNMENT CHECK-RIN AND LONG PROPAGANDA PREPARATION PROBABLY WILL QUICKLY RESTORE NORMALCY, AFTER SUCH ATTACKS AS THURSDAY'S B-29 RAID, AMONG HARDSHIP-NURTURED PEOPLE. WHEN I LEFT ASIA AS A REPATRIATE IN LATE 1942, THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE THAT EVEN SUSTAINED ASSAULTS WOULD CAUSE MORALE TO CRACK.

ALLIED STRIKING POWER HAS DELIVERED THESE BLOWS AGAINST THE JAPANESE ENEMY WITHIN THE LAST TWO DAYS:

JUN 17 1944

1. THE IMPERIAL STEEL WORKS AT YAWATA, CORRESPONDING TO GERMANY'S KRUPP WORKS, WERE LEFT "GLOWING MASSES OF WRECKAGE," A REPORTER ON ONE OF THE SUPERFORTRESSES SAID.

2. ADMIRAL NIMITZ'S INVADERS DUG DEEPER INTO SAIPAN ISLAND IN THE MARIANAS, THE CAPTURE OF WHICH WOULD SEVER JAPANESE PLANE ROUTES TO THE SOUTH AND POSSIBLY HER SEA SUPPLY LANES.

3. TOKYO REPORTED NAVAL TASK FORCES STRIKING HEAVILY AT THE BONIN ISLANDS, ADMINISTERED AS PART OF THE TOKYO METROPOLITAN AREA, 600 TO 700 MILES SOUTHEAST OF JAPAN PROPER.

4. THE ENEMY ALSO REPORTED AIR ATTACKS ON KOREA, JAPANESE ASIATIC MAINLAND TERRITORY SEPARATED FROM THE HOME ISLANDS BY ONLY 120 MILES OF WATER.

5. LT.GEN.JOSEPH W.STILWELL REPORTED THE 14TH AIRFORCE KILLED 1,200 JAPANESE TROOPS IN THE HUNAN AREA OF CHINA AROUND BESIEGED CHANGSHA.

6. BRITISH AND AMERICAN TROOPS WERE AT BATTLE GRIPS FOR THE THREE MAJOR JAPANESE BASES IN NORTH BURMA--MYITKYINA, MOGAUNG AND KAMAING. THE ENEMY ALSO WAS BEING CLEARED PAINFULLY AND SLOWLY FROM NORTHEAST INDIA.

7. GEN.MACARTHUR'S SOUTHWEST PACIFIC FORCES WERE MOVING IN ON BAIK ISLAND OFF NORTHWESTERN NEW GHINEA AND IN TWO DAYS DUMPED BOMBS LOADS ON THE ENEMY'S SOUTH PACIFIC BASES OF TRUK AND YAP.

"THE ATTACK ON THE JAPANESE MAINLAND BY THE B29S DEMONSTRATED ONE FACT [illegible] WHICH OUR AIR FORCE HAS LONG BEEN ENDEAVORING TO LEARN. THE LESSON BEING STUDIED TODAY, AS THE REPORTS OF PILOTS AND CREWS ARE COMPILED, IS THAT WHILE THE ENEMY WAS CAUGHT BY SURPRISE IN THE INITIAL ATTACKS, HE HAS PREPARED DEFENSES AND HE CAN MARSHAL ENOUGH NIGHT-FIGHTER PLANES TO CAUSE AT LEAST SOME INTERFERENCE WITH OUR BOMBING PATTERN. FOR THE MOST PART, DURING THE FIRST PERIOD OF THIS REGULAR MISSION AGAINST THE JAPANESE MAINLAND, VERY LITTLE DEVELOPED EXCEPT SEARCHLIGHTS AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT. IN THE SECOND PHASE, THE ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE DIED DOWN.

"THAT TO EXPERIENCED FLIERS IS THE SIGNAL THAT NIGHT FIGHTERS HAVE TAKEN OFF. THE THIRD PERIOD WAS THE CRUCIAL ONE, WHEN THE JAP FIGHTERS ACTUALLY PRESSED THEIR ATTACK HOME X X X WITH ONLY MEAGER RESULTS. B-29'S REPORTING BACK TO BASES IN THE EARLY MORNING HOURS OF FRIDAY COULD SHOW SOME BULLET-HOLES BUT VERY LITTLE MATERIAL DAMAGE. THE B-29, PLANNED AND EXECUTED AS AN OFFENSIVE WEAPON HAS, ITS OWN PILO BELIEVE, PROVED ITS WORTH.

"THE PRIMARY RESULT OF THE ATTACK AGAINST YAWATA WAS SURPRISE. THE FIRST DIPS OVER THE TARGET FOUND THAT THE AREA WAS UNGUARDED AGAINST THE DESTRUCTIVE RESULTS OF THE BOMB-LOADS. IN ITSELF, THAT ONE FACTOR IS OF VITAL IMPORTANCE SINCE THE IRON AND STEEL COMPANY IN THE HARBOR AREA IS THE FACTORY THAT JAPAN NEEDS TO KEEP HER WAR MACHINE RUNNING AGAINST US AND OUR ALLIES. WHAT EFFECT THIS BOMBING MISSION MAY HAVE ON THE COURSE OF THE WAR NOT EVEN THE PEOPLE WHO HAVE PLANNED THE RAID WILL KNOW, BUT IT IS AN ASSURED FACT THAT THE WHOLE PLAN, MAPPED OUT LONG AGO AND CARRIED THROUGH TO RELATIVELY SUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION, HAS BROUGHT MORE IMPORTANCE TO OU

LONG-RANGE BOMBING PROGRAM AND SIMILARLY TO THE ENEMY'S OFTEN-PUBLICIZED DEFENSE PLAN.

"THE BOYS WHO FLEW THE RAID LAST NIGHT NOW KNOW THAT THERE ARE DEFENSES THERE, BUT THEY ALSO KNOW THAT THEY ARE NOT AS FORMIDABL AS THEY HAVE BEEN MADE OUT TO BE BY THE JAPS. THE B-29 RAID, THE FIRST ON THE JAPANESE MAINLAND FROM CHINESE BASES, STARTED OFF WITH A BANG AND FINISHED WITH A FLOURISH. FROM FIRST TO FINISH, IT WAS AN AMERICAN SHOW, WITH AMERICAN PLANES, AMERICAN BOMBS, AMERICAN APPARATUS AND AMERICAN CREWS.

"BUT THERE ARE TWO OTHER NATIONS INVOLVED IN THE PLANNING OF

THIS GIGANTIC AIR OFFENSIVE. FIRST, CHINA -- BECAUSE WITHOUT HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF CHINESE LABORERS CALLED 'COOLIES,' THE RAIDS WOULD NEVER HAVE BEEN POSSIBLE, BECAUSE THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN NO AIRFIELDS FROM WHICH TO BOMB. THE SECOND NATION INVOLVED -- THAT'S JAPAN, INVOLVED ITSELF BY THE SNEAK ATTACK ON PEARL HARBOR ON THAT INFAMOUS DAY OF DEC 7TH, 1941." JUN 17 1944

DA91 SAEW

"THE TWO MINUTES THAT PRECEDED IT, HOWEVER, WERE--AS WE SAY IN THE AIR FORCE--RUGGED. IN THE FIRST PLACE, THE ALARM HAD ALREADY BEEN GIVEN BY THE FIRST TWO PLANES. THE SEARCHLIGHT BATTERIES WERE FULL ON. THE ENEMY AIRCRAFT WAS BLAZING BELOW, AND EVEN BEFORE WE GOT NEAR THE TARGET AREA, WE HAD TO WEAVE AND DODGE OUR WAY IN. IT WASN'T TOO BAD AT FIRST, BUT IT GOT STEADILY WORSE AS WE FLEW STEADILY EASTWARD TOWARD THE FINE TARGET OF THE IMPERIAL STEEL AND IRON WORKS OF YAWATA. FLAK BEGAN TO SPRAY THE SHIP. THE WEAVING SEARCHLIGHTS PICKED US UP TIME AND AGAIN, ONLY TO LOSE US ALMOST IMMEDIATELY. AND THEN IT HAPPENED! JUN 17 1944

"ONE FIELD BATTERY CAUGHT US IN ITS HUGE, SAVAGE ACK ACK. FROM THAT TIME ON UNTIL WE OUTRAN THE BEACONS, THE WHOLE CABIN WAS LIT UP LIKE MADISON SQUARE GARDEN ON HOCKEY NIGHT. A WHINE AND A SPUTTER ON THE NOSE TOLD OF A BULLET-HIT; DULL THUD ON THE RIGHT WING WAS A PIECE OF SHRAPNEL, AS WE FOUND OUT LATER. WE JUST TURNED AND TURNED...THOSE FAITHFUL ENGINES KEPT RIGHT ON GOING WITHOUT ONE MOMENT'S HESITATION.

"ONE OF THE STRANGE THINGS WHICH WE ENCOUNTERED OVER THE TARGET, AS SO MANY OTHERS PLANES DID, WAS THE ABSENCE OF JAP NIGHT-FIGHTERS. WE DIDN'T SEE A SINGLE ONE, AND OUR GUNNERS WERE DISAPPOINTED, TO SAY THE LEAST. WE THOUGHT ONCE IN THE EXCITEMENT THAT WE SAW SOMETHING THAT LOOKED LIKE A FIGHTER, BUT WE NEVER COULD PLACE IT. AND ALL THIS TIME--WHICH WERE SECONDS, COMPARATIVELY, BUT HOURS PROPORTIONATELY, THE ACK-ACK WAS BOOMING AND THE SEARCHLIGHTS WERE POKING THEIR LONG NOSES INTO THE SHIP. SOME OF THE OTHER CREWS WERE NOT SO LUCKY.

"AS THE LONG LINES OF B-29'S BEGAN TO STRING OUT, THE JAPS HAD MORE TIME TO ORGANIZE THEIR SUPPLY DEFENSIVES. THE ENEMY PILOTS GOT THEIR SHIPS INTO THE COMBAT AREA, AND THE FIGHT WAS ON!

JUN 17 1944

B39 (Q IN)

"JUST SINCE I'VE COME BACK TO CHUNGKING FOR THESE BROADCAST, ONE OF MY FRIENDS HAS ASKED ME TO DESCRIBE AN AERIAL FIGHT BETWEEN A B-29 AND THE JAP BOMBER. WELL, THE ANSWER IS THERE IS NO SUCH THING--BECAUSE IT JUST CAN'T HAPPEN. THERE ARE CASES ON RECORD WHERE A JAP PILOT DOVE AT A B-29 WHICH HE SAW ONLY A MOMENT BEFORE HIM, AND WHEN HE PULLED UP HE DIDN'T KNOW IT WASN'T THERE. THAT'S JUST A SMALL RECOMMENDATION OF THE SPEED WITH WHICH THESE HUGE BOMBERS CAN BATTLE.

"IT DIDN'T ALWAYS WORK THAT WAY LAST NIGHT, AND SOME CREWS HAD A LOT OF FUN SNIPING AWAY FROM THEIR VARIOUS POSITIONS WHILE THE JAPS SOUGHT TO FORCE THE DRAGONFLY'S TOUGH HIKE LIKE A MOUSE POKING AT AN ELEPHANT.

"THERE WERE A COUPLE OF SMART GUYS IN MY SHIP. FOR EXAMPLE, THE ONE WHO CAME ON THE INTER-PHONE JUST AS WE WERE ENTERING THE TARGET RUN WITH, 'HEY, CHIEF, LET'S GET OUT OF HERE. SOMEBODY'S

30.24 - 16375

"AND THE BOY WHO WAS ASKED IN THE MIDST OF THE EXCITEMENT OVER THE SAME INTER-PHONE, 'HEY, AL, ARE YOU A CLOUD-HOPPER YET?.

"AND AL'S REPLY: 'WELL, NOT THAT I KNOW OF.' JUN 17 1944

"ALL THIS WAS GOING ON WHILE THE DEADLY BUSINESS OF BOMBING THE JAP TARGET WAS BEING PROSECUTED. THE BOMBARDIER WAS AT HIS SIGHTS, THE NAVIGATOR WAS WORKING TO SET THE COURSE RIGHT AND THE TWO PILOTS WERE WAVING AND DODGING. THEY DID A MAGNIFICENT JOB. AND FOR SOME IT WAS THEIR FIRST COMBAT MISSION. BUT THE 20TH BOMBER COMMAND, BECAUSE OF THE VALUE IN DOLLARS OF ITS SHIPS AND THE VALUE IN TACTICU OF ITS OPERATIONS, SPECIALIZES IN GOOD CREWS.

"WE ONLY STAYED FOR ABOUT TEN MINUTES OVER THAT OUTER DEFENSE, BUT IT SEEMED TEN TIMES THAT LONG. WE ENTERED THE BOMB-RUN AS THE JAPS THEMSELVES LIT UP THE TARGET AND THE SEARCHLIGHTS STILL PLAYED ON THE PLANES. THERE WERE NO HALF-MEASURES IN THAT COMBAT LAST NIG WE HAD TO KILL AND DESTROY OR BE KILLED AND DESTROYED. THE BOMBS WENT DOWN TOWARD THEIR GREAT TARGETS SMASHING INTO THE HEART OF THE JAPANESE STEEL INDUSTRY. AND THEN IT WAS THAT ONE OF THE CREW-MEMBERS GAVE ME A KICK AND SAID, 'GOSH, ISN'T IT PRETTY DOWN THERE?'

"WELL, LOADED DOWN WITH A PARACHUTE AND MAE WEST LIFE-PRESERVER AND A FLAK SUIT AND HELMET TO PROTECT ME FROM FLYING FRAGMENTS, I WAS [illegible] ESPECIALLY INTERESTED IN THE SCENERY, BUT MORE ON THOSE SHARP FLASHES BEING POURED AT US...WHOLESALE NO RETAIL.

"YOU MAY HAVE HEARD IT SUNG, AS I HAVE, BY MARCHING CADETS, BY YOUNG OFFICERS JUST COMMISSIONED, BUT NEVER IN SUCH A SITUATION COULD YOU HEAR IT SUNG WITH THE VITALITY AND SPIRIT OF THE RIGHTFUL AGGRESSOR, WITH THE JOY OF HAVING BEEN IN THE VERY SHADOW OF THOSE WHO DON'T COME BACK, BUT DID, SOMEWHOW. "AFTER THE LONG FLIGHT BACK TO BASE, THERE WAS THE USUAL QUESTIONING OF THE CREW-MEMBERS---WHAT THEY'D SEEN, WHAT THEY'D DONE UNDER CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES, AND WHAT THEIR REACTIONS WERE TO THE ENEMY OPPOSITION.

"HERE AGAIN ANOTHER DIVERGENCE OF OPINION RESULTED, ANOTHER DIFFERENCE IN EXPERIENCE WAS SHOWN. SOME OF THEM HAD ENCOUNTERED ONLY FLAK; OTHERS HAD COME UP AGAINST THE NIGHT-FIGHTERS. THE TWO EVENTS WERE, TO THEIR MINDS, ENTIRELY DIFFERENT. BUT IT STILL ADDED UP TO THE SAME THING---THAT YOU CAN'T FIGHT A ONE-SIDED WAR EVEN WITH B-29 DRAGONFLIES.

"THERE WAS LITTLE BAD NEWS FROM ALL THOSE RETURNING. NOTHING LIKE WHAT MIGHT HAVE XEEN EXPECTED FROM A MISSION SUCH AS THIS ONE. THE FINAL RESULT WAS ALMOST FANTASTIC AS THE REPORTS BEGAN TO POUR IN FROM THE BASES. THIS PLANE CAME IN PERHAPS WITH ONE RUDDER MISSING AND THAT PLANE CAME IN WITH A HUGE HOLE IN ONE WING, BUT FLYING PROUDLY, ALTHOUGH SOMEWHAT DISABLED PERHAPS. AND NEARLY ALL GOT BACK AND THEIR CREWS WITH THEM.

With American Troops on the Cherbourg Peninsula, June 17 (AP)—When American troops stormed across the Douve river today to drive the Germans off the high grounds on the other side, one German raged:

"You crazy Americans! This is not war, it is madness."

NIGHT

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Sunday, June 18 (AP)—The United States Ninth Division, which shattered the Germans at Bizerte in Tunisia, teamed up yesterday with the 82nd Air-Borne Division in a break-through of German lines which put the Americans on high ground only four miles from the west coast and virtually cut in two the Cherbourg peninsula.

JUN 18 1944

Thousands of German troops were on the verge of being trapped inside Cherbourg port, 18 miles north of the corridor driven west of captured St. Sauveur le Vicomte, said a front dispatch from Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent. The west coast road was under American artillery bombardment.

Bradley Leads Troops

Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, ground commander who led the Americans to their triumph of Bizerte in May, 1943, was directing the swift break-through which had rolled to within a mile of St. Lo d'Ourville on the west coast road—last possible German escape route out of Cherbourg.

Some front dispatches said the Germans were fleeing southward to escape the American trap, but General Bradley earlier had predicted a last-ditch German stand in Cherbourg, whose harbor is vital to the Allies in order to hasten supplies and reinforcements.

German broadcasts last night, however, began minimizing Cherbourg's importance, which could mean Nazi resignation to its eventual isolation and capture. Civilian refugees said the Germans already were forcing civilians to evacuate the city.

Hand-To-Hand Battles

American troops were fighting hand-to-hand battles in the streets of Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg.

Whitehead's dispatch disclosed the presence of the Ninth Division in action for the first time in Normandy. The Ninth was the division which took Port Lyautey in the French Morocco landing in November, 1942, fought at El Guettar in southern Tunisia, and participated in the final encirclement of scores of thousands of Germans and Italians on Cap Bon.

North of St. Sauveur, Whitehead said, the Yank infantrymen broke across the Douve river. They rode on tanks and fired machine-guns as the armored units plunged through shallow waters in the drive to seal off Cherbourg.

German Lines Strafed

American airmen were strafing the German lines of retreat out of the area.

One front-line correspondent said an American column rolled through St. Jacques-de-Nehou, four miles northwest of St. Sauveur and seven miles from the west coast, in a swift exploitation of German disorganization.

The two American divisions had heavy support from artillerymen. Whitehead said their fire already had effectively cut the west coast road.

Yanks Gain Below Isigny

Headquarters communique No. 24, issued just before midnight, merely announced that "Allied forces have pushed deeper into Normandy" in gains which swept through St. Sauveur and that other troops to the southeast have reached the Vire-et-Taute Canal south of Isigny.

[Editor's Note—This is the sector held, at last report, by the 29th Division.]

Villages east and west of Tilly-sur-Seulles on the British end of the front also were captured, the communique said.

A heavy German counterattack was expected by the Allied command, but in its first special communique on the situation inside France, Allied headquarters announced that patriots had "delayed considerably the movement of German reserves to the combat zone" by smashing bridges and railways and fighting openly against the German conqueror.

JUN 18 1944

Guerrilla Activity

"Guerrilla operations against the enemy are in full swing and in some areas the army of the French forces of the interior are in full control," the bulletin said. The Maquis [illegible] 300 German prisoners and wiped out Nazi garrisons in some towns and villages, it added.

On the fifth day of a furious battle at Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg, a report from the 21st Army Group headquarters of General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery said the enemy had "not been wholly ousted from Montebourg." A front dispatch Friday night said the United States Fourth Division had retaken that town in the most direct threat to Cherbourg.

Yanks Gain At Montebourg

Other American troops attacking north of Quineville, four miles northeast of Montebourg on the extreme coastal flank, were reported to have made slight gains about 14 miles from Cherbourg. These troops were trying to hurl the Germans away from effective artillery range so that supplies could be unloaded at Quineville.

The heaviest fighting in the British sector raged north of Troarn at the eastern end of the Allied line, where the British gained slightly. The Germans threw in two heavy tank-supported counterattacks on British positions at Breville and Escoville, but were beaten off at "extremely costly" casualties to the enemy, headquarters said. Both these villages are two miles east of the Orne and from three to four miles northwest of Troarn.

"The Biggest Flareup"

These attacks were "the biggest flareup on this sector since D-day," an officer said.

German troops are dug in on a semi-circle from 2½ to 4 miles outside Caen, embattled old gothic town seven miles west of Troarn, a front dispatch from Roger Greene, Associated Press correspondent, said. The British battleship Ramillies still was assisting the ground troops by hurling its big shells into the area.

Another front dispatch said British-Canadian forces had taken two small settlements south of Caen in the Allied effort to pinch off that German "hinge" position.

Inconclusive but heavy tank fighting continued in the Tilly-Sur-Seulles sector wast of Caen, but in the Caumont area to the southwest, where the Allies have penetrated nearly 20 miles inland from the sea, British troops took some "limited" objectives, headquarters said.

Six Miles From St. Lo

American troops on the British right flank still were reported about six miles northeast of St. Lo, the big mid-Normandy communications hub, as they have been for several days.

In a new push north of St. Lo the Yanks reached the canal junction of the Vire and Taute rivers near St. Jean-de-Daye, six miles south of Isigny and eight miles north of St. Lo.

Headquarters emphasized that General Montgomery would not begin his big attack until fully ready, and with Montgomery that means until he has a terrific artillery firepower.

Allied Airmen Busy

Allied airmen during the day pounded a half-dozen Nazi airbases in a great arc extending nearly half way around the battle zone. Approximately 1,000 United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators participated, and fighter-bombers struck at motor convoys, bridges, tanks and gun emplacements on the Cherbourg peninsula.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that almost two thirds of the bridges over the Seine, Oise and Loire rivers, German reinforcement routes into Normandy, had been knocked out by Allied airmen.

Bad weather again hampered unloading on the wave-battered beachheads, but on the 12th day of the invasion it was announced that landings were fully abreast of schedule despite this handicap.

Americans Shelling Foe's Last Road To The Port

JUN 18 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (AP)—United States troops punched forward two to three miles today in the drive to choke off Cherbourg peninsula, and as artillery hammered the Nazis' last escape road a United States fighter pilot reported signs of enemy flight from the cape and its big port.

Today's American advance carried northwest of St. Sauveur le Vicomte—whose fall cut Cherbourg's river which bends westward above the town.

Other forces farther south plunged within four miles of La Haye du Puits, road junction of the Nazis' last escape route at the shortest neck of the peninsula, and big guns hurled shells on that highway.

"Underground Doing Its Part"

Supreme headquarters in special communique No. 1 declared the French underground has swung into full-fledged sabotage, paralyzing road and rail traffic in many places to delay the movement of German reserves to the front, and even seizing villages in some areas and wiping out Nazi detachments in direct attacks, with 300 Germans reported captured by Maquis.

The "Army of French Forces of the Interior" has "played its assigned role in the battle of liberation," headquarters said, and attained its objectives in the majority of cases of planned sabotage.

Yanks Near Bricquebec

The advance beyond St. Sauveur le Vicomte carried Americans within about four miles of Bricquebec, junction of roads leading to Cherbourg and to Valognes, ten miles southeast of the port. Other United States troops have recaptured Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg on the back-door route to the port.

British troops attacking north of Caumont near the center of the 100-mile front took some "limited" objectives, and the Allies made another advance north of Troarn, at the eastern tip of the line, headquarters said.

British Drive Nazis Back

A dispatch from the front said the British Tommies repulsed a five-pronged Nazi attack east of the Orne river—an attack designed to protect defenses of Caen—and then themselves counterattacked, sweeping the Germans back several miles southward and seizing a village. This fighting, an officer said, "was the biggest flareup in this sector since D-day and we seem to have more than held our own."

Another front dispatch said British-Canadian forces had taken two little settlements south of Caen in small-scale fighting.

This dispatch said the Germans were hugging a perimeter of defenses varying in depth from 2.5 to 3.7 miles around Caen; besides having a bristling array of guns, they are lodged behind an arc of dug-in tanks.

"Our Troops Moving In Fast"

As the artillery blasted the Germans' last road on their dwindling western strip of the peninsula, an American flyer said he saw enemy trucks and staff cars moving south, and declared he believed the Germans "want to get out of there, but our troops are moving in fast."

Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the Allied ground commander, had told a press conference earlier that there were as yet no signs of any German move to evacuate the peninsula. Bradley declared the Nazis might fight as long as possible for Cherbourg even if the top of the peninsula were isolated, perhaps moving their troops out of the powerfully gunned city in small boats by night to the Channel islands and then to Brittany.

Cherbourg did threaten nevertheless to become another Sevasta-pol for the Germans, with their escape cut off except by sea, as happened in the Crimea.

Yanks Take 8,500 Prisoners

The Americans alone have captured 8,500 Germans so far, and evacuated them from Normandy, General Bradley said.

Ninth Air Force outfits are continuing their work of establishing bases in France in spite of German sniper fire and German bombing at night.

Bad weather and rough seas hampered unloading as well as other operations and it seemed unlikely that the Allies would make a full-scale attack until the weather improves and they can use their air superiority to the full.

Attacks Costly To Nazis

The Germans made two heavy and "extremely costly" counterattacks in the Troarn area, east of Caen, which were repulsed.

In these attacks Field Marshal Erwin Rommel used tanks and infantry in efforts to penetrate British positions at Breville and Escoville, respectively seven and four and a half miles northeast of Caen.

Caen Fires Die Out

Lieut. Walter Turniers, of Highlands, N. J., said the Germans were not moving any more equipment toward Caen.

"They must have everything up there they need," he said. "We didn't even see a railroad train going that way any more."

Fires which have been burning for days in Caen, Carentan and St. Lo have at last gone out, Turniers reported.

It was disclosed officially that General Bradley has two army corps under his command—the 5th and 7th. The 5th is composed of the 1st, 2d and 29th divisions, while the 7th includes the 82d and 101st air-borne and the 4th infantry divisions. It was these forces which made the only new advances along the bridgehead front.

Marshes And Hills Ahead

The Americans who captured St. Sauveur yesterday, after heavy fighting today, were digging in and getting set for an expected heavy German counterattack. The advance farther west in this sector appeared likely to be slow since the country is marshy and hilly in spots and lends itself readily to defense.

Whitehead Tells Of Break-Through From St. Sauveur

By DON WHITEHEAD

With the American Troops on the Cherbourg Peninsula, June 17 (AP)—American doughboys stood on heights overlooking the sea today and looked down across the narrow corridor which is the Germans' only escape route from the Cherbourg peninsula.

With breathtaking swiftness and courage the fighting Ninth Infantry Division broke through with the 82nd Air-Borne Division to close a fist of iror. on the neck of the peninsula where thousands of Germans are threatened with entrapment.

Corridor Raked

With machine guns and cannon raking this corridor which has only one main exposed road running down the western coastline, the enemy's last exit route virtually was closed as this was written tonight. Little can move down that highway without coming under direct, withering fire which the Americans are able to pour across it.

Thus 12 days after the invasion the doughboys of the veteran Ninth Division, which fought in North Africa and Sicily, have smashed through stubborn German defenses in a brilliant move with the 82d Air-Borne, which fought in Sicily and Italy.

Nazis Try To Flee

Despite artillery fire and Allied fighters and dive bombers, the Germans are trying to pull out some troops and equipment in broad daylight. They moved down the gantlet of flying steel in a desperate last move to save what apparently are some of the best elements of the forces caught by the American break-through, which came yesterday morning and swept across the peninsula like a prairie fire.

Our troops thrust from the sad, ruined little town of St. Sauveur to the vicinity of Besneville, which is only two miles from the crossroads halfway between the towns of Barneville and La Haya du Puits. Over this crossroads the enemy was pulling out transports and material in a frantic effort to get it beyond the reaching grasp of the doughboys.

Advance Was Sudden

The whole advance during the last 36 hours has been so sudden and swift that it is confusing even to those of us watching the drive. But briefly here is what happened during those vital hours:

Thursday the doughboys were locked in a bitter hedge-to-hedge battle across the green bullet-stripped fields littered with the carcases of dead cattle.

Progress was slow, with every hedge a strong point where the enemy made a final stand. This was particularly true of enemy machine-gun and mortar squads, who are 100 per cent. Nazi.

Our advance was so slow it was almost a stalemate. Then late on Thursday the German resistance began softening up. Friday morning the dam broke. The Germans suddenly caved in. They began a wild effort to pull away from the pressure the Americans were keeping on them.

Americans Sweep On

The Americans swept forward, and 82nd Division units drove through St. Sauveur. Once it was a lovely little village on the west bank of the meandering Douve river, but when I entered it with parachute troopers it was a shattered, lifeless thing of ugliness.

North of St. Sauveur the doughboys broke across the Douve river by riding on tanks and firing their machine guns as the machines lumbered through shallow waters and rolled on westward in the dive to shear off the peninsula.

This was the break they had been fighting for, and it was being exploited as swiftly as possible to keep the enemy disorganized and rocking back on his heels.

Crossroads Under Fire

Now the Americans are looking down on the sea with direct fire on the crossroads about a mile northeast of St. Lo-d'Ourville, which is southwest of St. Sauveur.

When it became apparent that the Germans were trying to pull out of the area, with heavy movement on the road, including some vehicles less than eight yards apart, Allied air forces went to work on them. The Germans countered with the heaviest show of daylight fighter strength I have seen since D-day—four Focke-Wulf 190's.

Civilians said roads out of Cherbourg were lined with carts and trucks loaded with people and belongings. Most are heading for rural places or to Les Pieux and Bricquebec in hopes of finding sanctuary.

Forces Win Control of One-Fifth of Island off Italian Mainland.

ROME, June 17—(AP) French troops landed today on Elba, five miles west of the Italian mainland, and by nightfall had won control of one-fifth of that Napoleonic exile island against German resistance which Allied quarters described as strong at some places.

Nearby Pianosa was secured quickly without opposition, but the German garrison and coastal artillery were making a scrap for Elba's 85 square miles.

Allied Advance In Italy

Conquest of Elba would keep the Allied sea flank abreast of the advance on the mainland, where Allied troops today rolled steadily forward toward the German's Pisa-Florence-Rimini line.

Known as "Detachment B," the French attacking Elba were commanded by Gen. Jean De Lattre De Tassigny and transported and supported by American, British and French naval units. Allied air forces that included French squadrons, bombed the island.

(The Berlin radio said the landings were made both at the south and north ends of the island, one of them just west of its major city of Porto Ferraio. A German communique told of heavy fighting "still going on" against a "weak German garrison" defending the island.

Island Raided

Fighter-bombers aided yesterday in preparations for the landings, destroying a fuel dump, scoring six hits on island's radio station, and striking at boats and dock installations at Porto Ferraio, Marino Di Campo and Porto Longone.

The island, about seven miles from the nearest mainland point is roughly opposite Grosseto, near the west Italian coast, which fell to swiftly advancing Fifth army troops yesterday. The city, nearly 100 airline miles from Rome, is a road junction and site of German air fields.

British Eighth army troops drove 12 miles north of Orvieto and occupied Monteleone, about 45 miles east of Grosseto. A bit farther east, armored elements pushing north from Todi reached a point 13 miles south of Perugia, reported held by the Germans in some strength.

About 35 miles to the east of the Orvieto sector, other Eighth army troops surged through Spoleto, Trevi and Foligno on Highway Three. Montefalco was also reported to have fallen in this drive.

In the Adriatic sector, the British made contact with partisan forces already in possession of Teramo, 15 miles from the coast and 30 miles northwest of Pescara.

70 Miles from Pisa

These advances placed the Allied line about 70 miles from Pisa and Florence in the west and central sectors and roughly 100 miles from the eastern anchor of the German defense line at Rimini. The Nazis may attempt a stand along this line. There still was no indication of any determined Nazi stand before they reach that prepared position, for which they appeared to be salvaging all possible strength.

Rail and road bridges in the Florence-Pisa-Bologna area were attacked by medium bombers, and fighters ripped roads, rail lines, bridges, motor transport and rolling stock there, the Allied communique said.

The Mediterranean air force took a heavy toll of enemy craft in widespread attacks, destroying 70 at a cost of 12 heavy bombers and nine other planes. In addition, fighters attacked enemy concentrations in Yugoslavia, destroying a large number of motor vehicles.

The Fifth army was expected to take quick advantage of its capture of Grosseto by using the air facilities there for attacks on Nazi prepared positions in the northern Apennines, whose foothills touch Florence, Pisa and Livorno. The latter, just below Pisa on the coast, is an important naval base.

21,000 Prisoners Captured

The Fifth army alone thus far was credited with capture of 21,000 prisoners.

Elba, which has a population of 33,700, according to the 1930 census, is the site of extensive iron ore deposits. It is about 18 miles long, and lies about five miles southwest of Piombino, on the Italian mainland.

French Troops Invade Elba; Battle On

Rome, June 17 (AP)—Allied headquarters announced tonight that French forces which landed on Elba Island, where Napoleon once spent a short-lived exile, had encountered strong enemy resistance on several parts of the island.

Pianosa, a small island to the southwest, has been occupied, headquarters said.

Earlier reports received in Rome said Elba already had been secured by the Allies. This was not borne out by subsequent reports, but it was not likely the Germans were prepared to put up prolonged resistance.

Close To Corsica

A special communique said a detachment of the French Army B, led by Maj. Gen Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, had landed on the barren rock island.

The landing on the strategically valuable island close to occupied Corsica came as Allied forces on the mainland swept on northward against a faltering enemy who showed no sign of making an immediate stand.

(Radio France at Algiers said that Pianosa Island, eight miles south of the western tip of Elba, also "was occupied by French troops and prisoners were taken.")

Planes Prepare Path

Fighter-bombers made preparatory raids for the Elba landing yesterday, destroying a petrol dump on the island and scoring six hits on a radio station, it was announced. Two attacks were made on a 250-foot motor vessel at Portoferraio. It was left listing.

Another 350-foot motor ship in the harbor was damaged by a direct hit and four small boats were destroyed. Dock installations at Marino di Campo, on the south coast of the island, also were attacked and three small boats were destroyed. Bombers also started fires at Porto Longone.

Foligno Captured

In a swift thrust up the center of the Italian mainland front the Eighth Army captured Foligno, about 27 airline miles north of Terni, whose fall was announced only yesterday. Spoleto and Trevi, along the route, also were seized.

Spoleto, with a population of 35,000, and Foligno, with about 45,000, were the most important cities falling to British troops. The capture of Foligno placed the British within about 20 airline miles of the central Italian pivot town of Perugia, which is about 72 miles southeast of Florence.

Perugia Threatened

Farther west armored elements driving on from Todi reached a point only 13 miles south of Perugia, which was reported held by the Germans in some strength. The village of Montelcone was occupied.

So rapidly did the Germans withdraw before this thrust that the British seized three bridges intact.

Allied patrols on the Adriatic sector made contact with Italian Partisan forces as they reached the road junction of Teramo.

On the west coast the Fifth Army overran Grosseto, on the coast opposite Elba and some 100 airline miles northwest of Rome.

21,000 Taken Prisoner

Prisoners taken by the Fifth Army alone since the beginning of the offensive now total more than 21,000, it was announced.

There still was no indication that the Germans planned to make a determined stand before reaching prepared positions north of Florence, and recent actions indicate they are trying to salvage as much strength as possible to man these positions.

There has been, for example, a noticeable lack of major artillery fire from the fleeing enemy. The new line behind Florence starts on the west at Carrara, passes through an area about seven miles north of Lucca, about five miles north of Pistoia and 18 miles north of Florence.

Pillboxes Prepared

Pillboxes, gun emplacements and infantry positions are being constructed in that area.

Heavy bombers and fighters attacking oil refineries at Vienna and Bratislava yesterday and mediums striking road and rail targets in northern Italy destroyed 70 enemy planes, it was announced. Twelve heavy bombers and nine other planes were lost.

Smoke billowed up more than three miles over Vienna after the heavies dealt one more blow in the campaign to dry up the oil supply of the German war machine by bombing five oil refineries. Enemy resistance in the sky was fierce, and some fighters fired rockets.

South Africans Gain

South African armored forces, fighting in the sector between Foligno and Grosseto made contact with the battered Hermann Goering Division north of Lake Bolsena.

(A German broadcast said that landings on Elba were made at both the southern and northern end of the island, with one just west of Portoferraio, the island's major city. The broadcast said "fighting is still going on," with a "small German garrison" defending the island.

French Holding A Fifth of Elba In Stiff Fighting

JUN 21 1944

Troops Push Way Ashore Despite Fierce Shelling by Germans' Artillery

By Daniel De Luce

WITH THE FRENCH FORCES STORMING ELBA, June 17 (AP).—French assault troops stormed ashore on the southern coast of this historic island five miles off Italy's west coast today, and by nightfall had won control of one-fifth of the island's eighty-five square miles in fighting which still was in progress against the German garrison.

[An official announcement at Algiers late Saturday night said the Elba operations "continue to develop successfully." Early strong German resistance was said to have been overcome with the aid of American and British naval support while five bombing attacks knocked out big gun emplacements at the eastern end of the island.]

German coastal guns delayed the landing of ammunition for the troops ashore, but British Rear Admiral T. H. Troubridge, directing naval operations from the bridge of an infantry landing craft, was sending more small craft in across the sandbars and shoals seven hours after the first main landing.

The French forces, commanded by General Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, included the commando-type Battalion de Hoc, mostly returned from metropolitan France. These went ashore at midnight.

They weer to knock out the German coastal guns, but nothing more has been heard from them.

Rocket barges blasted away at the beaches, clearing the way for the principal assault just before the troops landed.

Colonial infantry nevertheless met considerable German artillery fire. A Naval lieutenant from one of the landing craft described it this way: "They weer just up there waiting for us. They held their fire until we touched shore, then let us have it."

RUSSIAN ARMY NEARS VIIPURI

JUN 18 1944

JUN 21 1944

Port Understood To Be In Process Of Evacuation

London, June 17 (AP)—The Russians smashed within 25 miles of Viipuri from two directions today, capturing Perkjarvi on the main railway of the Karelian isthmus and Kuolemajarvi on the coastal rail line, Moscow announced tonight, and the port of Viipuri itself was understood to be in the process of evacuation.

These two important railway towns on the most direct routes to Finland's second largest city were enveloped as Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's troops occupied more than 120 populated places in another day of fierce fighting, Moscow's broadcast communique disclosed.

Both Perkjarvi and Kuolemajarvi are just under 25 miles from Viipuri, which Finnish dispatches reaching Stockholm said had been ordered emptied of civilians.

Raasuli Captured

Another wave of the Red army, sweeping up the eastern side of the isthmus despite the natural obstacles of lakes and marshes, captured Raasuli on still another railroad, Moscow said, indicating that the width of the Finnish front had been widened to more than 65 miles.

While the center of the Russian drive up the isthmus reached within 25 miles of Viipuri, advance patrols and reconnaissance units probed even closer. The thunder of Soviet big guns could be plainly heard in the Finnish port.

Govorov's infantry forces, said to total at least six divisions, were being supported by planes and tanks and for the first time were reported using rocket-firing cannon.

Bring Up Fresh Troops

The Russians as well as the Finns were bringing up fresh troops as the battle area widened and the tone of dispatches from Moscow made the early conquest of Viipuri appear inevitable.

The Moscow radio reported that all Finnish railways had discontinued passenger traffic and were carrying only troops and military material into the Karelian isthmus to meet the attack.

The Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter said the Finns were throwing every available man into the conflict and had moved all troops eastward from the Ahvenanmaa (Aland) Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.

Other Finnish reports declared a battle on a great scale was being waged in the Siiranmaki sector.

U. S. Move Under Censorship

Censorship in Finland was said to have kept from the public there news of the United States action in ordering Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister, and his aides to leave the United States, but it was expected Finns would hear of the action through the Moscow radio and that the incident, even though not a complete American break with Finland, would have a psychological effect on the home front.

The nightly Moscow communique again said that there were no changes on other sectors of the front, but German propagandists continued to claim that the drive against Finland was simply a prelude to greater offensives to come on the Eastern front.

Soviet Preparations Cited

The Berlin radio said "continuous preparations for the Soviet offensive have been observed, especially in the areas of Gomel and Smolensk."

The Hungarian communique asserted increased Russian reconnaissance activity had been noted in the Hungarian sector in the last week and that some of the Soviet operations had been carried out with forces up to battalion strength.

Capture 100 Towns.

London, June 17 (A. P.).—Soviet infantrymen, advancing after artillery blasted Finnish fortified positions, have captured more than 100 populated places in the Karelian Isthmus drive on the key coastal Viipuri gateway, Moscow said today.

JUN 21 1944

Among newly taken communities listed in the broadcast Russian communique was Uusikirkko, slightly more than thirty-two miles southwest of Viipuri. Others were Jukkola, Virola, Masseljarvi, Pistola and Purto-Leitlila, all in the same area.

JUN 18 1944

Moscow radio reports indicated other points captured were as close as twenty-five miles to Viipuri.

Swedish estimates said the Russian forces total 70,000 men. They are divided into two main columns, one driving along the direct route through Kivannapa and the other along the indirect coastal route. Other forces are hammering at both flanks of the enemy, making the offensive a four-pronged drive.

The Finns claimed that counter-attacks had thrown back Red Army troops near Siiranmaeki. Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim was quoted in a Stockholm dispatch as saying that his troops could hold out only two and a half months at terrific cost against the crushing Soviet offensive.

FINNS REPORTED LEAVING VIIPURI

Helsinki Says Evacuation Is Now Under Way.

JUN 18 1944

Stockholm, June 17 (A. P.).—Compulsory evacuation of the Finnish city of Viipuri, toward which the Russians are driving with a great weight of men and armor, now is in progress, Helsinki dispatches reported today.

Refugees also are streaming from other Karelian towns under longstanding plans, dispatches said.

Finnish reports said a large-scale battle was being fought in the vicinity of Siiranmaki. For the first time in the Finnish-Russian war the Red Army was said to be employing rocket cannon.

In an attempt to throw every available man into the struggle to stop the Soviets, the Finns were reported by the Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter to have moved all troops eastward from the Ahvenanmaa (Aland) Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.

Finns Blow Up Bridges.

Moscow, June 17 (A. P.).—The Finns are blowing up all the bridges on two highways leading to Viipuri on the Karelian Isthmus, seeking to halt the Red Army's entry into the city, front dispatches said today.

But Soviet capture of the city appeared inevitable. The rumble of Russian big guns already was echoing strongly in its streets.

"As the offensive develops the battles assume a more violent character," said Red Star Correspondent Grigory Ivanov. "All attempts to stop the offensive are failing."

With more than 100 newly captured populated points behind them the Russians with strong artillery and bomber support hurled an impressive weight of tanks, tommy-gunners and infantry in massive waves across the Karelian Isthmus.

Drive Across Isthmus

With more than 100 newly captured populated points behind them the Russians with strong artillery and bomber support hurled an impressive weight of tanks, tommy-gunners and infantry in massive waves across the Karelian Isthmus.

(A Finnish communique admitted the Finns had abandoned Uusikirkko, about 32 miles southeast of Viipuri after severe fighting in which they previously claimed to have killed 5,000 Russians and knocked out 25 tanks.

(The communique also announced withdrawal from Seivistoe and Kanneljaervi, in the same area, and said "the enemy's pressure continued very powerful.")

Other newly taken communities were Jukkola, Virola, Masseljarvi, Pistola and Purto-Leitlila, all in the same area.

Spitfires Tackle 'Buzz-Bomb' Invaders

JUN 18 1944

JUN 28 1944

London, June 17 (AP)—One of the German rocket plane-bombs rumbled over a cricket field in southern England today, trailing a 30-foot tail of flame, and exploded in a near-by field with a great blast. The game went right on.

Long

London, June 17 (AP)—Germany's new explosive robot planes, dispatched across the Channel in weather that sharply reduced Allied air activity, struck blindly in parts of southern England in intermittent attacks through the night and early morning.

Several persons were killed and a number injured when one of the fire-spitting projectiles made a direct hit on a nurses' home at a hospital. Rescuers said they thought a number of persons were buried.

Another wrecked a shop, trapping four people for six hours in the cellar. Firemen had to fight flames before rescue squads could start digging, and when the four were released water in the cellar had almost reached their necks.

Rockets Shot At Robots

Fast German night fighter-bombers also crossed the Channel, ducking in and out of clouds and dropping flares in an apparent attempt to confuse British defenses, but rockets from ack-ack batteries plunged steadily upward, and a number of the pilotless craft were reported to have crashed.

Putting caution before curiosity, people of southern England flocked into bomb shelters, most of which were jammed throughout the night.

RAF Spitfire pilots, with the same daring that brought them fame in the 1940-41 battle of Britain, were diving through terrific fire from their own ack-ack guns in bids to destroy these new German "buzz bombs."

Don't Always Explode

Fighter pilots are expected to spearhead the defense against the robots. Hits may not always explode the craft, but flyers are reported able to bring them down where they would do the least harm.

Before one of the robot planes came down it was observed streaking across the sky with orange flames darting from its tail and ack-ack bursting all around it.

While everyone is speculating about the flying bombs, this much seems to be agreed upon—that they have high speed, a bright red tail light, spit flames from their exhaust fly on a straight, low course, and hum rhythmatically like a motorboat.

The Allied aerial hammering for months of the Pas de Calais coast, generally believed to be the robot launching area, and Prime Minister Churchill's warning in the House of Commons months ago that new methods of attack could be expected, appeared enough proof for the man in the street that the Allied high command had not been caught napping.

Strange Raid Recalled

And some recalled, too, a raid of nearly a year ago—one that seemed strange at the time—when several hundred heavy RAF bombers pounded a forest at Peenemunde on the Baltic coast near Stettin. They battered a research station where Germans were believed to be experimenting with the robots.

A Stockholm dispatch said Swedish correspondents had quoted a German military spokesman as saying what has happened so far is only the overture. It still is a question whether the new weapon will mark another phase in war as did the airplane in the last World War."

JUN 18 1944

One the Nazis Say

The German radio meanwhile that dynamite meteors continued to rain on the south of England, which it described as the Hinterland of the invasion battle of Normandy. London's harbors and headquarters of Gen. D. Eisenhower were among the targets the Germans hoped to reach, it was made plain.

The inaccuracy of the projectiles was admitted and Berlin said they could not be used in Normandy without danger to German troops.

German propagandists went all out, however, in describing the robot planes which, they said, were just a curtain raiser. One said that German reconnaissance showed conflagrations in London visible for more than 100 miles, and that one convoy which got within reach of the meteors burned like a blazing torch.

No Details Released.

Germans released no details about the flying bomb but said that England on Friday experienced "a 16-hour alarm, the longest of this war."

British morning newspapers asserted that if Hitler had hoped to disrupt British morale and weaken their will to war he had failed utterly.

"The British people will not demand protection at home to the detriment of the major task abroad," declared the London Daily Express.

"Each smoking missile that comes through the air over here is one piece of German output the less to be used against the armies fighting for the liberation of Europe," the London Daily Herald said. "Anyway, our men in Normandy are facing much worse. We do not complain at the fact that once again civilian Britain stands in the front line—and this time we share some of the trials of an army on the offensive, an army marching to victory."

JUN 18 1944

Winged Bomb Attacks Move Into Fourth Day

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Sunday, June 18 (AP)—More of the Germans' winged bombs, the so-called robot planes, came hurtling across the Channel into southern England during the night as the Nazis' "counterinvasion attack" moved into its fourth consecutive day.

In the newest attacks they came over the land by and singly every few minutes. Several of them flew through some of the heaviest anti-aircraft fire of the war as Britain shifted its ack-ack defenses to counter the devilish plane-bombs.

Number Killed Or Injured

Damage was caused in various localities and a number of persons were killed or injured. One of the flying bombs was reported to have wiped out four houses. Another hit a nurses' home at a hospital, killing several persons and injuring others.

[German radio commentators let their imagination run free in describing reports of the consternation caused in England by the robots.

[One Berlin broadcast credited a Stockholm dispatch as saying the British Government had ordered the evacuation of London because air-raid shelters failed to offer adequate protection. Another said "England is trembling and London is ablaze" and still another reported that on Friday afternoon tremendous fires along the southern British coast had been observed from Rouen, England. Rouen is approximately 100 miles from the English coast.]

There was no indication from any point in southern England of unusual movements of the population. In fact, reports from localities struck by the weird projectiles said normal life was being conducted. Reports from the damaged places said persons who went to shelters generally had escaped unhurt.

These robot projectiles, fired off tracks in the Pas de Calais area of France, twenty miles across the Channel from England, are not radio-controlled and have not had the slightest effect on the flow of supplies to the Allied front in Normandy.

30. 24— 16331

A compass in the nose keeps the weapon on a rough course but it may fall miles from where it is aimed.

JUN 18 1944

Stripping the "secrets" from this highly inaccurate weapon, Allied technicians have discovered that it operates under definite limitations. Although it has tremendous potentialities these are unlikely to be developed in this war.

The Germans themselves say it cannot be used on the Normandy front for fear of hitting German troops.

JUN 18 1944

Britain's anti-aircraft defenses have been reorganized to combat the pilotless planes. New gun-sites have been chosen for the guns to obtain a maximum fire power against the robot planes before they reach populated areas. Guns of all caliber are being fired and at night often are used in conjunction with searchlights.

Machine-guns, 22-mm. and 40-mm. Bofors, heavy and super-heavy guns and even rocket anti-aircraft guns manned at night by Home Guards have been used successfully in the Channel Straits area.

Gunners at anti-aircraft sites use the same instruments in charting the course of the pilotless planes as they do with ordinary planes.

Intermittent explosions from these rocket plane-bombs occurred during the night and throughout the day. Several persons were killed and a number injured when one of the fire-spitting flying bombs hit a nurses' home at a hospital. Rescuers were digging for those possibly buried in the wreckage. Another trapped four people for six hours in a cellar which had flooded up to their necks before they were rescued.

Already a considerable proportion of the pilotless planes have been destroyed in the air by anti-aircraft fire, an authoritative British source said. The German high command said the British were putting up the greatest anti-aircraft barrage since the beginning of the war and the entire southeastern coast is like a "wall of fire."

Intensive counter-measures being used by British against the new weapon also may have prompted Hans Fritsche, a German radio commentator, to observe: "If any one in Germany believes England can be blasted to pieces by the new weapon he is a fool."

The British announced that there was "some enemy activity over southern England" this afternoon and evening and "from a small number of places incidents causing damage and casualties have been reported." General Sir Frederick Pile, Commander in Chief of Britain's Anti-Aircraft Command, personally inspected the latest defense methods at a gun site. He was accompanied by scientists who have developed some of the new secret tactical defense schemes that are in operation.

F. G. Miles, British aircraft designer, said the British government as early as 1940 had rejected designs for a pilotless plane, on the ground that it was "an indiscriminate weapon" for waging war on civilians.

R. A. F. planes during the night pounded the Pas-de-Calais area after yesterday's assault by American heavy bombers in an effort to destroy the launching grounds of these robot planes. But perhaps the only effective remedy would be an Allied ground drive to clear the Germans off that coast.

The projectile can be mass-produced cheaply and fired in great quantities with simple apparatus. The weapon is the Nazi "Big Bertha" of this war. It is comparable to artillery or regular bomber attacks, but has not the accuracy of those orthodox weapons.

With perhaps a 100-mile range the rocket bomb can be thrown miles off its generally aimed course by wind, down drafts or other air currents. The Germans have no control over it after it is fired.

In flight it makes an odd noise and sparks shoot from its tail—a jet propulsion by an efficient motor so simple as to surprise war scientists.

Built like an airplane it has small wings and is constructed largely of iron and is quite heavy. It has a head like a sewer pipe with a radiator which takes air into the combustion chamber as the craft thrusts forward. Here a simple spark device ignites a mixture of fuel, expanding pressure closes the radiator and forces an explosion out of the tail, giving the rocket a new propulsion.

The explosions in flight are so rapid as to give a continuous whirring sound like a regular airplane motor. The fuselage is filled with explosives which are detonated when the plane runs out of fuel and strikes the earth.

Its speed is probably around 250 miles an hour, and while it can be fixed to fly slowly or curve; it flies mostly on a straight line at varying heights from 700 feet up.

Even the German High Command in announcing that London and southern England has been under fire from the weapon almost continuously since 11:40 p. m. Thursday night could only say that heavy damage "is assumed."

Experts Belittle The Robots

JUN 18 1944

Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (AP)—Allied armament experts viewed Hitler's not too secret robot plane today as the "Big Bertha" of this war, conceding that it has tremendous potentialities but having not much more than nuisance value in its present stage of development.

JUN 18 1944

The glamor is being stripped rapidly from the new German weapon by Allied scientists, and it is not the mysterious earth-shaking device pictured by the Germans and public imagination.

It is not radio-guided and once it leaves the Germans it is out of control of the forces firing it.

Ton Of Explosives

One military observer, asked to describe its worth, said: "We could achieve the same military value by taking a couple of hundred medium bombers and letting them fly singly over Germany, dropping bombs indiscriminately."

This weapon is nothing much more than development of a child's Fourth of July rocket with wings on it and made of iron. It carries about a ton of explosives which go off when it hits the ground after its fuel runs out.

The Germans can roughly estimate the number of miles it will travel and point it in the right direction, but after that the rocket bomb is on its own. High winds or air currents might throw it miles off its course.

Kin To The Bazooka

In practice it is a development of the six-barrelled German rocket-firing nebelwerfer or American bazooka.

At the present stage of development the range of the rocket bomb is limited. Capture of the Pas de Calais area of France would cripple its use or make it ineffective for hitting England altogether.

The rocket bomb can be overtaken by any American or British fighter plane and shot down as long as the fighter stays some distance away in case it explodes. The device usually travels in a straight line but could be made to fly in a curve which, however, would destroy what little accuracy it has. In flight it makes an odd roaring noise and red sparks come out of its tail.

Simple To Operate

Its military value is roughly the same as the famous German long-range and inaccurate "Big Bertha" that shelled Paris in the last war although the robot plane is able to deliver a much greater weight of explosives.

The rocket's potentialities lie in its simplicity of operation and small cost of construction, meaning that it can be produced in great quantities. But to make the weapon effective, means will have to be developed to make it accurate.

BRITISH BOMBERS HIT BACK AT NAZIS

JUN 18 1944

Germans Say RAF in Area Hit, Tanks Blast Rocket Emplacements.

Hardness

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, June 18—(AP) British bombers struck back at the Germans early today as the Nazis continued to fire their flying bombs at southern England.

(The German radio said that the Berlin area was bombed.)

NIGHT

A great fleet of RAF planes crossed the east coast during the night, headed toward the Reich, after other Allied bombers had delivered a series of powerful blows throughout the afternoon and early evening against the Pas De Calais coast of northern France from which the Nazis are launching their pilotless plane bombs.

England Raided

The pilotless planes have been striking England for the last 48 hours and the Air Ministry announced tonight that enemy activity over southern England this afternoon caused damage and casualties in number of places.

While selected squadrons of U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators and RAF Spitfires hit the Pas De Calais region one thousand other American heavy bombers and fighters ranged over the length and breadth of the Normandy fighting front in direct support of the invasion troops. The tempo of the aerial assaults increased during the afternoon and evening as the weather cleared. Seven of the Germans' rapidly dwindling air fields in France were blasted.

The Paris radio reported the town of Lisieux in flames after a furious 10-minute raid. Lisieux, 40 miles east of Caen, is an important junction for roads running to Caen and north to Trouville on the coast.

The daylight operations against the robot plane targets cost the Americans two heavy bombers and one fighter. In addition five other fighters and nine fighter-bombers were missing from the various aerial activity of the U. S. forces. At least ten enemy planes were destroyed, including three on the ground.

Lt. Rodney Ellis, Jr., of Due West, S. C., bagged two of four aircraft destroyed by the Ninth, returning to his base with a badly battered Thunderbolt. The two other kills in his group were made by Lt. Raymond Stewart of Daytona Beach, Fla., and Capt. Henry Shurlds of Lexington, Miss.

Male 540 Sorties

The U. S. Ninth air force announced that 540 sorties had been made over the Normandy battlefield by its fighters up to 6 p.m. and disclosed that some of its bombers were carrying explosives loaded at airstrips on the beachhead.

The raids on the Pas-De-Calais coast nearest England followed heavy RAF assaults on the same area during the night, which in turn came after a late daylight attack by American planes Friday.

Nazi Airfields Raided

The German airfields raided by the Eighth air force Fortresses and Liberators this morning stretch in a great arc in the Paris, Boulogne and southern Normandy areas, nearly halfway around the Normandy battle zone.

American Mustangs of the Second tactical air force spattered German motor transport along the shell-pitted roads back of the Normandy front while RAF fighters, fighter-bombers and rocket-firing planes shot up enemy positions, troop concentrations and the Mezidon railway yards.

Ninth airforce Mustangs and Thunderbolts blasted an enemy air field on the Cherbourg peninsula, and in direct aid to the Allied ground forces attacked motor convoys, tanks and machine-gun nests. Other targets included a railroad bridge south of St. Lo and yards, railroad guns and tracks in the same vicinity.

Allied headquarters reported that the aerial "battle of the bridges," which began well before D Day and has continued steadily, has produced highly successful results. This campaign to destroy the spans across which the Germans must move over the Rivers Seine, Oise and Loire, showed this score:

Seine: Of thirteen railroad bridges, nine completely down and two damaged; eleven out of eighteen highway bridges knocked down and two others rendered unserviceable.

Loire: Six out of eleven railroad bridges destroyed and four unserviceable; nine out of twenty highway bridges smashed and five unserviceable.

Oise: One of four railroad bridges demolished and one unserviceable; road bridges useless.

Aerial activity generally increased during the afternoon as the weather turned better. German planes still were not much in evidence, however.

Yanks Hammer Six Air Bases In France

JUN 21 1944

DAY

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (AP)—American heavy bombers pounded half a dozen Nazi air bases in a great arc extending nearly half way around the Normandy battle zone today.

Six airfields in southern Normandy, the Paris area and near Boulogne were hit by around 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators as the Germans continued to hurl pilotless planes against Britain in spite of a double-barreled blow by Allied bombers against the French sector from which they are launched.

Range Over Battlefront

Clouds again hampered the bombers just as they did yesterday when the heavies slashed at the Pas-de-Calais coast and three airfields in France, but the weather was somewhat improved and fighter-bombers ranged over and beyond the Normandy fighting zone in attacks on motor convoys, bridges, tanks, machine-gun nests and a German airfield on the Cherbourg peninsula.

Six Mustangs and two Thunderbolts failed to return from these late forenoon missions, although one pilot landed safely behind Allied lines.

RAF heavies also hit the Calais coast last night while others hammered the synthetic-oil plant near Duisburg and targets in Berlin.

Robot Base Reported Hit

Aneta, Dutch news agency, said a Netherlands air officer in the RAF reported one of the rocket plane bases was wrecked in an attack at Doullens.

Spitfire bombers returned to the Calais coast to strike more military objectives, perhaps the pilotless-plane emplacements.

Mustangs bombed the rail yards at Mezidon and with Thunderbolts attacked tracks south of St. Lo, German machine-gun nests east of Foligny and JU-52 German transports on an airfield.

The night blow against Pas de Calais came a few hours after United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators in the last hours of daylight yesterday pounded these same installations.

JUN 18 1944

Although unfavorable flying weather once more hampered the air support of the invasion armies yesterday, Supreme Headquarters said that 2,500 sorties—individual plane flights—were made by Allied air units, about 1,000 of them by American heavy bombers and their escort in the twilight smash at Pas de Calais.

The night attack on Berlin was made by Mosquitoes, while British Lancasters and Halifaxes continued the Allied campaign aimed at drying up Hitler's war machine by dumping tons of explosives on the Fischer Tropsch synthetic oil plant at Sterkrade, about five miles north of Duisburg. It was the second time this week that the R. A. F. had gone over Germany in strength.

Thirty-three R. A. F. bombers were missing from last night's operations, described by the Air Ministry as involving a very strong force. This indicated that about 1,000 planes were used.

R. A. F. bomber crewmen said that opposition in the Ruhr area last night was as strong as ever. Enemy searchlights were ineffective because of the thick cloud cover, but the Ruhr defenses put up an intense barrage and many fighters were out all along the route.

The Nazi fighters dropped what appeared to be a new type of flare over the path of the British bombers, and numerous combats ensued.

One Halifax pilot said that the flares used by the enemy fighters burst fairly high with a yellow light which lasted five or six seconds.

"Then it dropped like a stone for about 3,000 feet," he said, "and once more burst into an intense yellow light which again lasted for several seconds. After that it started falling again and finally glowed orange and red before going out. I saw about a half dozen of these during the flight."

Two German minesweepers were left burning and an armed trawler was damaged today in an attack by cannon-firing Beaufighters of the R. A. F. coastal command off the Dutch coast. One plane is missing. Another Coastal Command squadron attacked four E-boats off the same coast. The Berlin radio said that waves of bombers attacked a German convoy off northern Norway yesterday, sinking one ship and damaging another.

The Fischer Tropsch oil plant, one of ten in the Ruhr and Rhineland, has a capacity of almost 138,000 tons a year. About one third of the Nazi oil comes from synthetic plants, many of which have recently been damaged severely in attacks from Britain and Italy.

In addition to striking the Pas de Calais area, the earlier American raid hit three Nazi air bases in the vicinity of Paris and Laon, 80 miles to the northeast. One bomber and four escorting fighters failed to return.

The fighters inaugurated a new technique by dumping their auxiliary tanks half full of gasoline on targets and then starting fires with incendiary bullets. In this manner enemy transport was destroyed, freight and tank cars were left burning, and a number of ammunition cars were exploded.

Fighter pilots reported destroying or damaging about 500 railway cars, 11 locomotives, 21 trucks, 10 tanks, one military building, 54 tank cars, an armored car, a gun emplacement, a flak tower and a power transmitter yesterday.

North German Coast Reported Under Seige

London, June 17 (AP)—The Moscow radio, quoting a Tass News Agency report from Stockholm, said today a state of siege has been proclaimed along the entire northern coast of Germany.

Field Marshal Hermann Goering was reported touring the coast, accompanied by representatives of the army and navy, experts on military engineering, and the Todt (defense engineering) organization.

London, June 17 (A. P.).—Guerrilla action has flared up only 150 miles south of the Caen battlefield, Spanish border dispatches said today, while underground reports to official French quarters in London declared battles of French patriots against Vichy militia and German occupation troops were spreading throughout France.

Several hundred guerrillas, riding in trucks, entered Bressuire Wednesday, isolated the Nazi garrison, then spent four hours wrecking five rail lines that cross the town, and dynamiting roads and bridges, the dispatches said

Chrome Is Found In Reich, Nazis Say

London, June 17 (AP)—The Vichy radio relayed today a Berlin report that Germany was hopeful of becoming independent of all imports of chrome and wolfram, ores vital to the armament industry.

"Chrome has been found in Germany now and it is hoped that lost imports can be replaced," the broadcast said.

The Allies, bringing pressure against neutral countries, have succeeded in persuading Turkey to halt all shipments of chrome to Germany and Portugal to cease all exports of wolfram to the Reich. Spain is limiting its wolfram shipments to Germany to token amounts.

Tito's Men Drive Nazis From Three Towns

London, July 17 (AP)—Marshal Tito's Partisan forces have driven the Germans out of three western Bosnian towns — Prozor, Bravsko and Kljuc—with heavy losses and the Nazis are rushing up reinforcements to stem the drive, said tonight's Yukoslav communique recorded by the Ministry of Information.

The war bulletin said 800 Germans, Bulgarians and Quislings were killed as the Partisans pressed their Serbian offensive, and that much material was captured.

British, Nazis to Trade Civilians

LONDON, June 17 (AP)—Great Britain and Germany are to exchange an unspecified number of interned civilians, the Foreign Office announced tonight. The Swedish liner Drottningholm will be used. Arrangements were made through the Swiss.

Nazis Report Sinking 3 Ships

LONDON, June 17 (AP)—The Berlin radio asserted today that German submarines sank one destroyer and two transport vessels totaling 11,000 tons in the Atlantic.

General De Gaulle Returns To His Assembly At Algiers

London, June 17 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle has returned to the seat of the French "provisional government" in Algiers, leaving in Normandy instructions to his representatives for full collaboration with the military and in London fears over the future of British-American-French relations.

Although his brief visit to his native land alleviated a tense situation slightly, there is scant evidence his consultations with Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower produced a solution of differences admittedly acute.

British Press Raps U. S.

The British press kept up its clamor for an immediate accord. Most of its criticism has been directed at the United States, although some has fallen Churchill's way for backing up President Roosevelt's refusal to extend recognition.

The French scouted the accusation advanced in some quarters that recognition has been denied because the general has "dictatorial" tendencies, citing his trip to Algiers to consult the assembly before going to Washington to see Mr. Roosevelt.

[The French press service in Algiers said de Gaulle would address the French consultative assembly in Algiers tomorrow on the anniversary of his first broadcast from London after the French surrender. Radio France in Algiers said the general arrived there at noon today by plane.]

German Propaganda

The situation has taken on increased seriousness because German propaganda is using the lack of accord in its efforts to stir up Frenchmen against invading troops and to dissuade them from acts of cooperation.

De Gaulle's action in establishing representatives in the liberated area and instructing them to help in administering civil affairs has counteracted this propaganda in some measure.

This is expected to provide a test which will determine whether General Eisenhower will be inflicted with the headaches that arose in the old days of the Allied Military Government in the Mediterranean.

The Tribune declared the "tortuous and indefinite suspicion-arousing policy of Washington during the past 12 months had rallied more support to de Gaulle than his own propaganda or politics could achieve."

Nazis Say Allies Have 500,000 For New D Day

See Blow at Dunkerque-Ostend Area; Minimize the Value of Cherbourg

LONDON, June 17 (AP).—A German broadcast estimated tonight that General Dwight D. Eisenhower has fifty to sixty divisions of 500,000 to 900,000 men waiting for the "second phase of the invasion, which in all probability will be an attack on the French-Belgian coastal area" northeast of the Normandy coast.

The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press, said this force includes four airborne divisions, and forms a second invasion army. Berlin said it is stationed between the southeastern coast of England and London, and in the area between London and the mouth of the Humber River.

General Eisenhower probably would try to capture the area "between Ostend and Dunkerque whence he intends to launch a drive northeastward and southeastward," the broadcast concluded.

The broadcast was typical of German attempts to elicit information which has been placed under strict Allied censorship.

As the Americans drove to cut off the Cherbourg peninsula the Germans took up the propaganda theme that the port of Cherbourg was unimportant. Should the Americans cut it off "German forces are now sufficiently numerous to seal it off and render the whole peninsula useless to them," one broadcast said.

A Stockholm dispatch, quoting the Free Norwegian Legation in the first report on the situation inside Norway since the invasion of France began, and the Germans had moved out three regiments of 6,000 to 8,000 fully armed troops, transferring them to Denmark to bolster defenses there.

Coastal defense ports in Norway were placed on a permanent alert and more rigorous controls over shipping off the western shore were inaugurated, the legation said.

A Moscow broadcast quoting a Tass agency report from Stockholm said that a state of siege had been proclaimed along the entire North Sea coast of Germany—another area about which the Germans have expressed concern. Reich Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering was said to have toured the coast accompanied by army and navy engineers and Todt organization representatives.

The German Transocean News Agency said that German garrisons on Jersey and Guernsey, occupied British Channel Islands off the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula, were "expecting an Allied attack hourly" and that Guernsey had been bombed by Allied planes the last few days.

Biggest Liners Can Dock At Quays of Cherbourg

Its Capture Will Give Allies a Prize Similar to Naples

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (AP).—The port of Cherbourg, now on the verge of being isolated by the American attack, is a rich prize for the invading armies comparable on a smaller scale to what the capture of Naples meant in the invasion of Italy.

Ten-centuries-old Cherbourg can dock the heaviest liners at quays 1,830 feet long and seventy feet wide. Behind its breakwater a great number of ships could lie in safety from the attacks of U-boats or E-boats and unload in shelters against the rough water and high winds which now are hampering the Allied build-up.

Although the Nazis undoubtedly will carry out extensive demolitions, both Naples and Tripoli have proved that ports cannot be destroyed so that they cannot soon be put in working order again.

The long Cherbourg breakwater might be blown at several points and even a part of the entrance to the harbor blocked, but Allied naval engineers will be able to take care of these things quickly.

The railroad line leading from the port also will give the Allies a chance to move heavy guns and tanks much more rapidly to the front.

Full-Scale Sabotage By French Aids Allies

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (AP). Full-scale activity of French patriot forces operating inside France is giving complete support to the invasion by broad, planned sabotage of German rail and road communications, headquarters declared today in a special communique.

Bridges have been destroyed, train derailed, at least 70 locomotive abotaged, and all road and rail traffic has been stopped in the Rhone valley, the bulletin said.

300 Prisoners Taken

In direct fighting operations, French patriots have taken 300 German prisoners, attacked garrisons, fought their way through streets and in some places have even occupied villages.

The special communique text:

"Since June 6 the army of French forces of the interior has increased both in size and the scope of its activities. This army has undertaken a large plan of sabotage which includes, in part, the paralyzing of rail and road traffic and the interruption of telegraph and telephone communications.

"In the majority of these cases their objectives have been attained.

Three Canals Attacked

"The destruction of railways has been most effective. Bridges have been destroyed, derailments effected, and at least 70 locomotives sabotaged.

"It is reported that both road and rail traffic is completely stopped in the valley of the Rhone.

"Canals have not been spared. One has been damaged and one cut and another has been put out of action. Four consecutive locks of another have been destroyed.

"Many acts of sabotage have been carried out against transformer stations.

Nazi Reserves Delayed

"It is neither possible nor desirable to enumerate all the many effective acts of destruction which have been carried out.

"However, these multiple and simultaneous cases of sabotage coordinated with the Allied effort have delayed considerably the movement of German reserves to the combat zone.

"Direct action also has been taken against the enemy. Maquis are reported to have taken 300 prisoners. German garrisons have been attacked. In some areas villages have been occupied. Street fighting has occurred elsewhere; enemy detachments have been destroyed.

Guerrillas In Full Swing

"Guerrilla operations against the enemy are in full swing and in some areas the army of French forces of the interior is in full control.

"At the end of the first week of operations on the shores of France, the army of French forces of the interior has with its British and American comrades played its assigned role in the battle of liberation."

'It's a Girl' Flashed To Airman by Plane

NINTH AIR FORCE FIGHTER BASE, England, June 17 (AP).—A 99th Air Force Thunderbolt flew a private courier service to Sergeant Robert R. Hayes, of Rome, N. Y., a ground crewman on an advanced air strip in France. Hayes wanted to know when he became a father.

Pilot Colonel Gilbert L. Meyers, of Milford, Iowa, gave him the news. He flew over the field, and in broad chalk letters on the under-carriage of this Thunderbolt was the message: "It's a girl."

Robot Hit On Hospital Described By Nurse

Somewhere in Southern England, June 17 (AP)—One nurse in a nurses' home that received a direct hit said she was awakened early today by the approach of a robot plane "which looked like a ball of fire in the sky."

In a matter of seconds, she went on, "there was a terrific explosion and the whole place seemed to blow up. I was covered with debris.

"When I got myself free I found a part of the home demolished. I heard cries of nurses trapped under the debris. We got some of them free by clearing away the wreckage with our hands."

Several Are Killed

A few nurses were killed and some patients died in the main hospital building, which was badly damaged.

Today rescue squads searched for nurses and patients believed trapped. Others dug into the ruins of a children's ward looking for youngsters believed entombed. Two boys were known to be killed.

A member of the hospital medical staff said a woman was undergoing an appendectomy when the glider bomb struck.

"The doctors carried on calmly although a fire followed the explosion," he said. "After they had successfully concluded the operation, the doctors went out and assisted in the rescue work. The fire was soon put out."

One of the heroines was a young nurse who was badly injured in the face, but who stayed on with her patients in the bomb-blasted ward, attending their injuries and calming them.

Rocket Bomb Is 'That Thing' To Wary Britons

People Take to Shelters, but Believe Terror Weapon Is Hitler's 'Last Throw'

Yorkshire

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, June 17 (AP). — The people of this unidentifiable corner of Southern England gave Hitler's infernal new terror-weapon a wide berth last night.

JUN 18 1944

News of the devilish bogey had spread like wildfire since the night before, and the people ran to bomb shelters.

They hadn't had time to find a name for this unearthly bogey which the Germans flung at them after using the menace of a secret weapon so long in a war of nerves. They just called it "that Thing" or simply "It."

But the ones consulted didn't concede "It" had much of a future.

One old gentleman, pausing at a shelter door, said "I think it will come to a sticky end. I don't think it will be a success at all."

This particular community's shelter was occupied mostly by women and children. The women, and some old men among them, crouched in silence and awaited the weird roar of the mechanical demon which the Germans had devised to torment them.

Snipers Fail to Halt Work On U. S. Bases in France

9th Air Force Men Also Defy Bombs and Falling Flak

AN AMERICAN FIGHTER BASE IN ENGLAND, June 17 (AP). —Ninth Air Force outfits are carrying on their work of establishing bases in France in spite of German bombings and sniper fire at night.

JUN 18 1944

An officer standing on a runway was killed by a sniper.

An American at one base said his companions slept with their helmets on for protection against showers of merican anti-aircraft shell fragments.

"Red-hot balls of flak were going whoomp, whoomp all around us," Lieutenant Alonzo Morgan, of Glens Falls, N. Y., said.

American fighter pilots returning from Normandy said the Germans are using every kind of rifle they can get their hands on, no matter what its vintage.

Abandoned German rifles were dated anywhere from 1917 to 1939, and one 1903 model Remington made in the United States was found.

YANK LOSSES IN NORMANDY PUT AT 15,883

3,283 Killed In 11 Days. First And 29th Divisions Hit Hardest

JUN 18 1944

By DON WHITEHEAD

With the American Forces in France, June 17 (AP)—American army casualties totaled 3,283 dead and 12,600 wounded up to midnight last night in the first 11 days of the invasion of France, and the beachhead has become "absolutely secure," the Germans having "lost their last chance to drive us back into the sea," Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley announced today.

NIGHT

Obviously in good spirits, the tall, weather-beaten Missourian who commands American forces in France appeared for the first time before a group of beachhead correspondents and gave them a report which confirmed his pre-invasion confidence that the campaign would be carried out without the blood bath predicted by the enemy.

29th Division Mentioned

Bradley said casualties on the central beachhead, where the First Division and elements of the 29th had landed, were higher than was anticipated, but that, on the other hand, casualties on the peninsula beachhead were lower.

[The American casualties in action to date were expected to exceed those of the British or Canadians, not yet announced, a dispatch from London said, because the American First and 29th encountered heaviest fighting when they ran into a German division holding maneuvers on the difficult beach. In 24 hours of fighting they advanced only 100 yards in some places, while, on the other hand, both British and Canadians made original landings comparatively easily, encountering their heavier fighting later.

[American naval casualties in the invasion already have been announced as very light.]

JUN 18 1944

While the beachhead was secure, however, a bitter fight was in prospect for Cherbourg, Bradley said. Discussing the situation on the Cherbourg peninsula, where the 82nd Airborne Division yesterday captured St. Sauveur-le Vicomte and threatened the enemy's final escape corridor, he said the Germans might battle for the port as long as possible, even after isolation of the peninsula.

He added that Cherbourg has strong all-around defenses prepared, with big guns aiming seaward and strong anti-aircraft batteries. Enemy strength on the peninsula, he said, may run well into five figures, and should the escape route be closed, the Germans might attempt evacuation by small boats in darkness to Channel islands and then to Brittany.

16 Nazi Divisions In Normandy

The American commander estimated the number of German divisions in France to be in the middle sixties, with 16 divisions or elements thrown against the entire Normandy bridgehead areas.

Bradley said the enemy might be unable to move all his divisions in France against the beachhead, because defenses must be manned in other parts of the country and garrisons must maintain control of a turbulent civilian population.

American troops since landing, Bradley said, have captured or [illegible] evacuated from the beaches 8,500 prisoners.

The general spoke in glowing terms of the courage of the American doughboy in establishing the beachhead. His first words as the correspondents gathered in his tent were in praise of the infantrymen, the parachute troops and their leaders.

Praises Troops' Valor

"Only by the guts, valor and extreme bravery on the part of the men and their leaders involved were we able to make the landing a success," he said, "and I cannot say too much for the parachute troopers who dropped in the rear and made the job easier for the beach troops. They did a marvelous job."

Since D-day, Bradley said, there were two critical periods when the Germans might have created serious situations by attacks in force, both periods now past.

The first was during the time when the doughboys fought their way ashore at the central beachhead, when a reinforced division was striving to throw them back into the sea. The second, he said, was when American forces trying to make junction between beachheads secured north of Carentan, a soft spot at the time because it was a junction of the American Seventh Corps on the peninsula and the Fifth Corps on the central beachhead. Tank-supported doughboys in this case beat back a heavy German attack on Carentan and firmly established the junction.

Bradley also had high praise for the support given the assault troops by the navy, recalling that some warships ran to within 500 yards of the beach in shelling enemy strong points. He also praised the air forces which kept the enemy's reserves from forming in front of assault waves.

Beachhead Casualty Figures Compared

JUN 18 1944

Washington, June 17 (AP)—The casualty cost of 15,883 men to American forces in breaching Hitler's coastal fortifications and securing the Normandy beachhead is substantially above the price paid for other major operations, but different factors make impossible any exact comparison.

The closest comparison with an operation where American forces subdued a heavily fortified beach position probably is the marines' landings at Tarawa in the Gilbert Islands last year. There the total marine casualties of 3,069 was made up of 958 dead, 2,084 wounded and 27 missing.

Salerno Casualties

At Salerno, Italy, last September, American forces landed against heavy opposition to establish a beachhead. The army reported that six days of fighting at the outset of that operation resulted in 3,500 casualties of all categories.

In six days of fighting through the formidable Nazi defense lines just south of Rome, the American army lost about 1,100 killed and 3,900 wounded.

Making impractical any comparison of the losses in these battles, however, are such factors as the total number of men involved, the area of fighting (the Normandy beachhead currently covers a 60-mile strip of coast, compared with a mile or two of beach at Tarawa) and such intangible elements as the psychology of the enemy troops.

3283 YANKS KILLED IN INVASION SO FAR

JUN 18 1944

Bradley Reports Beachhead Has Also Cost U. S. 12,600 Wounded Since D Day— Reveals Two Critical Periods.

Whitehead

With American Forces in France, June 17 (A. P.).—The American Army has 3,283 killed and 12,600 wounded in opening the western front in Normandy, Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today.

DAY

The total of 15,883 casualties was for the first eleven days of the campaign, and included reports up to midnight last night, Gen. Bradley said.

He paid high tribute to the courage of doughboys in establishing the beachhead on the European continent.

Gen. Bradley appeared before beachhead correspondents in a group for the first time to discuss the campaign.

He said that casualties on the central beachhead, where the American First Division and elements of the Twenty-ninth Division landed, had run higher than anticipated.

This casualty report confirmed Gen. Bradley's confidence before the invasion when he predicted that the Continent could be invaded without creating the bloodbath which the enemy insisted would result and which many persons expected.

Gen. Bradley's first words to the correspondents who gathered in the tent under the shade of a huge beech tree were in praise of his doughboys and parachute troops and their leaders.

"Only by guts, valor and extreme bravery on the part of the men and their leaders involved were we able to make the landing a success," he said, "and I cannot say too much for the parachute troops who dropped in the rear and made the job easier for the beach troops. They did a marvelous job."

Two Critical Periods.

The General disclosed that since D day there had been two critical periods when the Germans might have created a serious situation by an attack in force.

The first period, he said, was when the doughboys fighting their way ashore in the central beachhead were encountering a reinforced Nazi division. This was where the First Division and supporting elements of the Twenty-ninth fought their historic beach battle.

The second critical time was when American forces were trying to make their junction of beachheads secure north of Carentan. This was a soft spot at the time because it was a junction point between the American Seventh Corps on the Cherbourg peninsula and the Fifth Corps on the central beachhead.

The General declared emphatically that he thought the enemy now had lost his chance to drive the Allies back into the sea and that the beachhead now was absolutely secure.

Yanks Take 8500 Nazis.

Since their landings American troops have captured and evacuated 8,500 prisoners, Gen. Bradley said.

Using a twig from a beech tree as a pointer in the manner of a schoolmaster, he outlined the situation to correspondents. He estimated the number of German divisions in France to be at more than sixty, with sixteen divisions or elements fighting against the entire Normandy bridgehead.

The general declared the enemy would be unable to move all his divisions in France into the Normandy front because defenses must be manned in other parts of the country, and garrisons have to maintain control of the civilian population.

JUN 18 1944

Gen. Bradley gave high praise to the Navy's support of the assault troops, recalling that some warships ran to within 500 yards of the beaches pouring shellfire into enemy strongpoints. He lauded the air forces which kept the enemy's reserves from forming in front of the assault waves.

Cherbourg Defenses Strong.

Discussing the situation on Cherbourg peninsula, where the United States 82d Airborne Division captured St. Sauveur le Vicomte yesterday in a surge threatening the enemy's last escape corridor, Gen. Bradley said the Germans might fight for the port of Cherbourg as long as possible even though the peninsula were isolated. He said Cherbourg has strong all-around defenses prepared with big guns pointing out to sea, and many anti-aircraft batteries. The indications are, he added, that the enemy's strength on the Cherbourg sector runs well into five figures.

Should their escape corridor be closed on the west side of the Peninsula, there is a chance that the Germans might try to evacuate by small boats at night.

He said operations were proceeding pretty much as planned except that last minute changes had to be made when the Germans moved two new divisions onto the peninsula to support the single division that had been stationed there.

Freed French Face Hardships

ON AN AMERICAN BEACHHEAD, France, June 16 (Delayed) (AP).—Life is still hard for French people liberated by the invading armies.

This strip of coast still is a battle area; inhabitants must exist by their own ingenuity, and that is the principal hardship now. Conditions will improve as fighting moves inland and coastal towns and villages recover from the shock of assault.

But there is freedom in the air. Already Norman folk are walking the streets with a firmer tread. Children dance and sing on the corners.

When this fishing village—Grandcamp-les-Bains—was taken from the Germans, the streets were deserted. Some of the population returned the next day, and on the following night the streets were full again, a few cafes were open and housewives knitted placidly at open windows.

The village was lucky in that the Allies won it without the use of much artillery. Only a few houses were smashed by shells.

Other towns were not so fortunate, particularly Isigny and Carentan. From this shelling arises one of the most pressing problems for Army authorities charged with administration of civil affairs—the problem of housing.

Both the Army and Navy are working on means of allowing Frenchmen to fish again. Their boats have been in harbor for three months under Nazi pre-invasion orders that fishing was "Verboten." As soon as possible, the authorities want to clear a channel for fishing fleets which will aid materially in meeting the food problem.

Germans Abandon William's Citadel; Mines Not Set

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, June 17 (AP).—Gunfire rumbles around the ancient feudal castle of William the Conqueror and jeeps roll down the narrow ramp where William and his Norman barons in 1066 rode forth on chargers to conquer England.

DAY

Today the massive-walled, turreted bastion stands as a sentinel over the Allied-occupied countryside, a powerful stronghold if the Germans had chosen to defend it.

But the enemy apparently fled in near panic. Important papers were left behind and thousands of booby traps and mines lay on the flagstoned floor waiting to be hooked up when the castle fell to Allied vanguards by 3 p. m. on D Day.

JUN 18 1944

One of the last notations in the German commandant's book was replete with orders for hastening the installation of mines. One entry read "Dienst fur den 6.6 1944"—June 6 invasion day.

From the deep cellar vaults to the turret tops plenty of mines had been put in place, but not a single one had been set to go off.

Record Air-Cargo Fleet Flies Supplies to France

C-47s Land Ammunition, Small Arms and Medical Items

JUN 18 1944

ADVANCED LANDING GROUND, France, June 16 (Delayed) (AP).—The greatest number of freight-carrying C-47s to land on French soil since the invasion began came down here and at another advanced landing ground today with tons of small arms, ammunition and medical supplies.

Major Stephen Parkinson, of Plandome, L. I., who used to pilot planes for Marshall Field, was in command. They flew under cover of P-47 fighters.

The planes are the same which, under the Troop Carrier Command of the 9th United States Army Air Force, dropped thousands of parachute troops in Normandy and towed gliders across the Channel. Now they are busy toting vital supplies to the fighting forces.

The load today included grenades, rockets and blood plasma. Ambulances brought twenty wounded soldiers, two of them Germans, to the airfield for removal on the supply planes' return trip to Great Britain. Eighteen C-47s were in the group landing force.

British Halt 5-Way Blow Of Nazis East of the Orne

JUN 18 1944

But Germans Cling to Strong Defense Ring Around Caen

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, June 17 (AP).—The Germans are hugging a perimeter of defenses varying in depth from 2.5 to 3.7 miles around Caen, after being thrown back in a sharp five-way attack on British airborne forces east of the River Orne.

The Nazis struck from five directions in pre-dawn darkness yesterday, seeking to drive the Allies from vital high ground. The battle raged more than eight hours, with the British stubbornly holding their positions.

Then, as the momentum of the German assault ebbed, the British lashed out in a counter-attack which swept the enemy back miles southward and the British captured a village.

The Germans were described as holding a powerful defense ring around bomb-and-shell-battered Caen. Besides having a bristling array of guns, they are lodged behind an arc of dug-in tanks.

Rome Bread Ration Increased

Rome, June 17 (AP)—The Allied Military Government announced today an increase in Rome's bread ration from 100 to 150 grams (3.5 ounces to 5.3 ounces) daily starting next Wednesday.

All Arrests In Rome Reported To Governor

JUN 18 1944

Rome, June 17 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Harry Johnson, military governor of Rome said today that he was inaugurating a system under which all arrests made in the city by either Allied military authorities or Italian police would be reported to him immediately.

NIGHT

"I expect to have on my desk the name of every person arrested and the charge on which he was arrested within two hours after the arrest is made," Johnson said. "The purpose is to prevent the possibility of mistreatment of any of those arrested and of arresting the wrong person by mistake."

The general said the number of civil arrests in two weeks of Allied occupation of Rome had been far less than in a city of corresponding size in the United States, and that this was a tribute to law and order prevailing here.

MPs Search Communist Headquarters For Arms

JUN 18 1944

Rome, June 17 (AP)—American police operating under the Allied Military Government entered headquarters of the Communist party in Rome June 7, searched the premises for firearms, by found none, party officials said today.

There were no arrests. The Communists said the soldiers at first "acted roughly," but that an officer later expressed regrets.

AMG officials confirmed that the raid was made, but said it was a small affair carried on in routine enforcement of military regulations requiring civilians to turn in firearms.

Among civilians ordered to surrender their arms were members of partisan squads who engaged in guerilla fighting against the Germans in Rome's outskirts as the Allies entered the city.

Rome Gets Electricity For Four Hours A Day

JUN 18 1944

Rome, June 17 (AP) — Electricity now is available in Rome for four hours daily, the city being divided into four districts with current on in the respective districts at different hours.

Current is generated by steam stations capable of producing 25,000 kilowatts daily. The city's normal requirement is 125,000 kilowatts daily, but the full supply is not available because of German destruction of lines carrying power from the north, and damage to the power sources between Rome and the front.

The city also still lacks a full water supply because of a shortage of fuel used to operate the pumps.

Rome Black Mart Prices Rise

JUN 18 1944

ROME, June 17 (AP).—An announcement by Allied Military Government officials that for the present only a limited amount of relief food could be made available for civilians has shot up black market prices in Rome again. These prices had fallen sharply when the Allied 5th Army entered the city.

Bjornsson Named First President Of Iceland

JUN 18 1944

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 17 (AP). Sveinn Bjornsson, who has served as regent for the last three years, was chosen today as the first President of Iceland, the world's newest republic.

Executing the mandate of last month's referendum in which the voters approved the establishment of a republic, the Althing, Iceland's legislative body, formally abrogated the Danish-Icelandic union of treaty yesterday.

Congratulated By Roosevelt

Washington, June 17 (AP)—President Roosevelt sent a message today congratulating Sveinn Bjornsson upon his election as the first President of Iceland, which became an independent republic yesterday. Secretary of State Hull similarly congratulated Vilhjalmur Thor, Icelandic Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Nazis Shifting Troops From Norway To France

JUN 18 1944

Stockholm, June 17 (AP)—The Free Norwegian Legation reported today that from 6,000 to 8,000 German troops were withdrawn from Norway three days after the Allied invasion of France, apparently to bolster forces in Denmark.

The first report from inside Norway since D-day said police received orders on how to evacuate the civil administration from Oslo in case of an emergency.

Stilwell, Chinese Make First Juncture

JUN 18 1944

By William F. Boni

Chinese Expeditionary Force Headquarters, Salween Front, June 16 (AP—Delayed)—A token juncture of the Chinese expeditionary force and Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's forces was effected with the capture by Chinese guerillas of Lauhkuan, well to the west of Hpwaw pass and 60 airline miles northeast of Myitkyina.

This first China-Burma link since the Japanese occupation of Burma was effected by the guerrillas and Kachin Levies under General Stilwell.

Meanwhile, the situation around Lunglng has been stabilized and improved.

Reinforced Chinese troops north of the town halted Japanese forces who crossed the Shweli river after driving down from Tengchung.

At the same time Chinese elimination of Japanese strong points near Lameng will open the way for control of the Burma road from the Salween river to Lungling.

Chungking, June 17 (A. P.).—Japanese forces which have bypassed Changsha in Hunan province are now threatening Lukow, thirty miles south of the strategic city, the Chinese high command disclosed today.

Fighting was in progress only eight miles northeast of Lukow, whose fall would open the way to a Japanese push on the vitally important city of Hengyang.

Salween Force Gains Touch With Stilwell

Chinese Expeditionary Force Headquarters, Salween Front, June 16 (AP—Delayed)—Guerrillas of the Chinese expeditionary force slashing westward from the Salween river have effected a token junction with the forces of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell in North Burma, capturing Lauhkuan and Htawgaw, on the Hpimaw-Myitkyina trail just 60 miles northeast of Myitkyina, it was disclosed today.

At that point the guerrillas met Kachin levies under Stilwell's command, establishing the first link between China and Burma since the Japanese occupation of Burma. Lauhkuan is about 60 miles northwest of the principal Japanese Yunnan province base of Tengchung.

Stabilized At Lungling

A Chinese communique said the situation around Lungling, second most important Yunnan base which fell recently to their offensive, had been stabilized and improved, and that reinforced Chinese north of the city halted the enemy who crossed the Shweli river in a drive from Tengchung.

The Chinese said they were eliminating strong Japanese points near Lameng, in the Lungling area, to open the way for control of the Burma Road from the Salween to Lungling.

The communique said in the northern sector of the Salween front the Mamien Pass area was cleared completely of enemy troops when the Chinese occupied and reinforced strong points late this week.

Chinese Predict Tokyo Destruction

JUN 18 1944

Chungking, June 17 (A. P.).—Chinese newspapers today praised the attack by United States Superfortresses on Japan, predicted mass air attacks would follow and envisioned eventual destruction of the "paper metropolis" of Tokyo.

Chungking's Central News Agency foresaw Tokyo converted into dust and ashes by a force of 1,500 of the new long-range bombers executing incessant assaults

HUNAN BATTLE SWINGS SOUTH

JUN 18 1944

Japs Threaten Lukow And Drive Toward Hengyang

Chungking, June 17 (AP)—With Changsha virtually isolated and all avenues of retreat closed to the defenders, the Hunan province fighting has shifted swiftly to the south, with the Japanese threatening Lukow and driving on the southern Hunan rail junction of Hengyang, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

Apparently attempting to seize the junction of a railway from Kwangsi province with the north-south Canton-Hankow line, the Japanese by-passed besieged Changsha and drove to a point just north of Chuchow, 25 miles to the south and eight miles above Lukow. Here, the Chinese communique said, they were halted, and bitter fighting was in progress.

Could Be Springboard

Fall of Hengyang could be even more serious to the Chinese than loss of the defended Changsha. The city, 85 miles south of Changsha, could become a springboard for a Japanese advance either on Kweilin in northern Kwangsi or Kukong, Kwangsi's provisional capital. Its loss would disrupt rail communications with Kwangsi and with the southeast coastal province of Kawngtung.

The bulletin also said an enemy unit in civilian clothes had infiltrated the eastern bank of the Siang river opposite Siangtan, 23 miles south of Changsha, but suffered heavy casualties.

Calls Changsha "Calm"

In Changhsha itself, the communique said, the situation "remains calm as usual," with bitter fighting continuing on the outskirts. The communique told of a "sanguinary engagement" in progress in the suburbs of Liuyang, 30 miles due east of Changsha, while 50 miles to the northwest of the besieged city, Chinese counterattacking in the direction of Yiyang were five miles from Yuankiang on the south shore of Tungting Lake.

The communique admitted that yesterday the enemy again broke into the north and east gates of Ningsiang, 30 miles northwest of Changsha.

Report Honan Gains

To the north, in Honan province, Chinese troops made "further progress" in a counterattack against an enemy column retreating toward Shangsien, 45 miles east of the Shensi province city of Tungkwan, the communique said. The highway center of Junan, 125 miles southeast of Chenghsien, north-central enemy base in Honan, also was captured, the Chinese said, but the communique acknowledged enemy progress southward from Siping on the Peiping-Hankow line.

The latter drive, an attempt to reeseal the gaps in the line held by the Chinese, reached Suiping, 110 miles south of Chengsien, and was headed farther southward, the communique said.

Japs Threaten City South Of Changsha

JUN 18 1944

Chungking, June 17 (AP)—Japanese forces which have by-passed Changsha in Hunan province are now threatening Lukow, 30 miles south of the strategic city, the Chinese high command disclosed today.

Fighting was in progress only eight miles northeast of Lukow, whose fall would open the way to a Japanese push on the vitally important city of Hengyang, where the railway from Kwangsi province to the southwest meets the north-south Canton-Hankow line.

Loss Would Be Serious

The loss of Hengyang, 65 airline miles from Lukow, would be more serious to the Chinese than the fall of Changsha even, for it would disrupt railway communications with the two southern provinces of Kwangsi and Kwangtung and serve as a springboard for an advance either on Kweilin, in northern Kwangsi, or Kukong (Hsiaokwan), the provisional capital of Kwangsi.

The high command claimed that Changsha was still in Chinese hands, but every avenue of retreat for the defenders was cut.

In Honan province to the north, meanwhile, the Chinese made further progress in an eastward push along the Lunghai railway and were approaching Shangsien, 45 miles east of Tungkwan at the end of the Yellow river.

The Chinese also recaptured the important highway center of Juchi, 125 miles southwest of Chenghsien (Chengchow).

But the Japanese were making progress southward along the Pieping-Hankow railway to reseal their hold on that line, taking the town of Suiping, 110 miles south of Chenghsien, and reducing the Chinese-held gap in the line to less than 45 miles.

Chiang's Order Obeyed

Heavy fighting is taking place in the southeastern suburbs of Changsha, but the garrison is complying with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's orders to defend the city at all costs, the Chinese high command announced.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, army spokesman, reiterated belief that the Japanese were aiming at conquering the whole of the Canton-Hankow railway.

Men On Way Hear In... Saipan News

With Expeditionary Forces en Route to Saipan, June 5 (A. P.—Delayed)—Thousands of American fighting men with these expeditionary forces on the way to Japan's Marianas islands, heard news of the European invasion in mid-Pacific as transports carried them toward their own D-Day at Saipan island.

This ship's shortwave radio brought first word of the Allied landings in France to the transport group flagship at 7 P. M. Although not broadcast over the ships' loudspeakers, the news spread rapidly.

Officers hugged the amplifier in the wardroom for hours picking up details. The news was accepted with glee by the Pacific fighters. Their view is that if the assault on Hitler's Europe goes well it will help shorten the war against Japan.

Navy Cleared Saipan Beaches

JUN 18 1944

Yanks Capture Airstrip in Initial Attack but Then Meet Resistance.

By RICHARD W. JOHNSTON.

Representing the Combined Allied Press. Distributed by the Associated Press.

Aboard Joint Expeditionary Force Flagship, Saipan Island, June 17.—United States assault troops fought inland over the green rolling hills of southern Saipan today, after a street-by-street conquest of the town of Charan-Kanao. They landed near that sugar mill town Wednesday under the fiercest Japanese fire since Tarawa.

From the bridge of this flagship, I saw assault waves loaded in alligators claw their way over the barrier reef and move on to the beaches, supported by thundering salvoes of naval guns, flaming rockets and the automatic weapons from landing craft.

Despite powerful support and a fearsome fleet and aerial preparation, the alligators moved toward shore under a shower of Japanese long-range mortars and artillery from the hills, rising toward the 1,500-foot peak, Mount Apotchau, on the left flank of the assault beach.

The Japanese were under a naval and aerial bombardment for several days preceding our attack and evacuated civilians from Charan-Kanoa, the population of which was estimated at 3,000. But they left a strong rear guard which the Americans cleaned out in the first Pacific fighting comparable to Europe's house-to-house encounters.

Portal of Japan's Empire.

Saipan is in the heart of the Marianas and the portal of the Japanese inner empire defense perimeter.

The campaign is actually like Guadalcanal and Tarawa combined—the troops were faced with a savage land battle after surviving the fight for the beachhead and with scant prospect of a rapid cleanup, such as is possible in atoll warfare.

However, the fruits of victory would be commensurate with the risk on Saipan. Its capture would cut off Guam, open the road to the Phillipines and sever Japan's supply routes to the Caroline Islands.

Land on Two-mile Front.

American troops landed along a two-mile front on either side of Charan-Kanoa, which lies along the southwest coast, backed by the Lioboone Hills rising toward the sheer cliffs of Magicienne Bay on the opposite coast.

The units which went ashore south of Charan-Kanoa jumped off with a powerful attack today which carried them close to the Aslito airdrome. Meanwhile the northern units consolidated the beachhead area below the principal city of Garapan, on Saipan Harbor, some five miles north of Charan-Kanoa.

Throughout the day, Garapan was under artillery attack. Fires crackled through its Oriental buildings, sending up great rolling puffs of flames toward the black and white smoke which shrouded the island and the sea. A pall of gray hung over the roads and the water.

The casualties on Saipan were not expected to equal the Tarawa figures, but assault battalions suffered material losses, and the Japanese were still throwing mortars — their favorite weapon —into the beachhead area.

JUN 18 1944

Battle Near Lake.

The heaviest fighting developed behind Charan-Kanoa, near a swampy lake in the Susupe area. There the Japanese mounted a tank - supported counter-attack which was turned back.

The Americans secured the narrow Charan-Kanoa airstrip bordering the beach during their initial attack. As yet, however, it is not out of mortar range.

Thanks to the preparatory strikes against dozens of Japanese bases in the Carolines, Nippon was unable to send aloft a single plane to interfere with landing operations. The arrival at dusk of five Japanese torpedo planes was nullified by an anti-aircraft barrage which forced them to jettison their explosives harmlessly.

United States naval forces patrolled the two and one-half-mile channel separating Saipan and Tinian islands effectively and prevented an artillery enfilade during the assault. Naval units knocked out the Tinian batteries.

Push Slowly Inland.

U. S. Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 17 (A. P.).—Grimly fighting Yank invaders, after street-by-street seizure of a coastal town and capture of its airstrip, punched slowly inland today on Saipan in the Marianas, unlocking bombed Japan's inner defense perimeter.

Official sources also disclosed that a task force had made the war's first attack on the Bonin and Kazan islands, destroying forty-seven planes, sinking two ships and damaging ten. This completed the dramatic picture of a grand scale air and naval operation which smashed Japan's steel industry and every base for 3,000 miles along a defense line from Paramushiro to Palau. The Bonins were the last link.

Raid On Fog-Veiled

Matsuwa By U. S. Ships Described

JUN 18 1944

By Norman Bell

Aboard a United States Task Force Flagship, June 17 (AP)—Japan's North Pacific headache hurt in a new spot—Matsuwa Island in the Kuriles—today from the shells poured into it out of the foggy night by this task force.

The 30-minute bombardment of Tegan Point airfield and administrative headquarters early June 13 was a remarkable exhibition of navigation and gunnery. The small but important island base was completely concealed from the ships by fog, but officers declared modern devices assured accurate shelling on the concentrated target area.

Top Of The Empire

The action, latest move by Vice-Admiral Frank Jack Fletcher, commander of the North Pacific, to harass the Japanese at the top of the empire, came while they were suffering from terrific body blows delivered by carrier task forces in the Marianas.

The bombarding task force was the strongest sent against the enemy in the North Pacific since the Attu and Kiska campaigns last year.

The force was commanded by Rear Admiral Ernest G. Small, with Rear Admiral Allen E. Smith, on another flagship, as second in command.

Navigation Praised

Admiral Small commended the entire force on the success of the operation, praising particularly the navigation and gunnery skill displayed in surmounting handicaps of fog and night firing.

The fog was welcome in one important respect—it served the task force as a protective covering against air attack. Japanese planes were unable to forestall the impending blow or strike back after it was delivered.

All indications were that Matsuwa, possibly the enemy's air and naval operations headquarters for the Kuriles, was taken completely by surprise.

Time Difference

The defenders "got the works" shortly after midnight by their time. It was June 14 to them. But the task force hadn't bothered to change watches as it moved westward, and by the ship's clocks the bombardment started at 5.15 A. M. It continued with blazing fury for 30 minutes.

Hundreds of tons of shells tore through the night and fog at unseen targets concentrated upon enemy installations around Tagan point airfield on the southeastern two-mile apron of Matsuwa's volcanic peak. While larger ships made the bombardment run, Capt. Hilyer K. F. Gearing, of Annapolis, commanding the destroyers, led some of his small but deadly ships in to cut off any Japanese vessels that might try to flee. None was encountered.

Smothered In Fog

Destroyers remaining with the main bombardment force were led by Commander W. G. Cooper, of Georgia.

The enemy undoubtedly started shooting back as soon as they got to their guns but any flashes from the island were smothered by fog. No task-force ship was hit.

There was no immediate air action involved on either side. The operation was observed from this of [illegible] to Commodore [illegible]es, commander of the [illegible]s Fleet Air Wing 4.

One eerie touch—an unusually phosphorescent glow around the ships—was observed as the task force moved silently through the calm sea. Sailors at their battle stations exclaimed at the weird glow which contrasted so sharply with black sky and gray fog.

At 5.11 A. M. the voice of Lieut Com. Harry J. Gallagher, of Bridgeport, Conn., Admiral Small's flag operations officer, came over the communications system.

"Give Them The Works"

"In just four minutes" he said, "we will give them the works."

The huddle of officers on the bridge counted off the minutes—one, two, three. The captain gave the order for the flagship to open fire. The guns roared.

Red flashes of larger guns were blinding. Speeding shells created a tremendous swishing sound as if they actually were tearing the fog apart to get at the Japanese.

Matsuwa remained throughout just a blank spot off in the night toward which the guns pointed.

U. S. Deepens Its Beachhead In Saipan Battle

JUN 18 1944

Marines and Soldiers Drive Inland Along a 5½-Mile Front; Navy Shells Guam

By The Associated Press

UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, June 17.—Battling determined Japanese resistance, American marines and Army troops have expanded the beachhead on southern Saipan, in the Mariana Islands, to a maximum depth of two miles along a five-and-one-half-mile front, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced tonight in a communique.

In frenzied fighting through Thursday night and Friday, assault forces made gains averaging 1,500 yards and captured the village of Himashisu, more than half way across the island from the beachhead.

These developments were reported soon after it was disclosed that American warships had bombarded Guam for the first time since that former American outpost in the Marianas was captured by the Japanese in December, 1941.

Before dawn Friday, Japanese defenders of Saipan, numbering an estimated two divisions (30,000 men), launched a determined counter-attack.

The enemy thrust, supported by tanks, was hurled back. Twenty-five Japanese tanks were destroyed and the enemy cost in lives was heavy.

The communique said the area now controlled by the American forces on the southwest side of Saipan extends from a point outside the key town of Garapan, five and one-half miles southward to Agigan.

Agigan is a village nearly half-way across Saipan's point's northern end.

Before launching their counter-attack, the Japanese maintained many steady mortar and artillery fires on American positions throughout the night. American warships countered with shellings of enemy strongpoints.

After repelling the Japanese counter-thrusts, American assault troops launched the offensive which pushed forward for general advances of 1,500 yards.

The points of deepest penetration are two miles inland from Saipan's western shore and the fighting line now skirts the western edge of Aslito Airdrome, which has a 3,600-foot fighter strip.

In the Friday push, forward American echelons drove into the naval airbase at Aslito Airdrome but later had to be withdrawn under severe enemy fire.

This was the second officially announced withdrawal under enemy pressure and indicates the ferocity of the struggle with the strong defending Japanese force.

Carrier bombers and fighters supported the Friday offensive with bombing and strafing attacks on Japanese positions.

Attack On Carrier Fails

Wednesday night Japanese torpedo planes attempted to attack the aircraft carrier force supporting the Saipan invasion, but were driven off without damage to any American ships.

The heavy bombardment of Guam, former American naval base 116 miles south of Saipan, was carried out Thursday.

The Japanese on Saipan were facing a determined invasion army of United States Marines supported by elements of an army division. The Yanks were driving toward Aslito airdrome after partly overcoming murderous Japanese mortar fire.

Shelling Knocks Out Mortars

The mortars, favorite Japanese weapons, appeared to have been hard hit by naval and artillery shells.

Forced to withdraw in some sectors in the initial phases of the fighting near their beachheads, the Yanks finally consolidated their positions and, aided by the naval and air bombardments, advanced northward.

They took the sugar-mill town of Charan-Kanoa and its air strip after street battling and brought Garapan, chief town on Saipan, under American artillery fire.

Heaviest Attacks Of War

While Saipan was the only Japanese Pacific base hit by American amphibious forces during the week, Nippon felt the weight of American naval and air power in heavier measure than at any time since the start of the war.

Powerful navy task forces, operating along a front of some 2,500 miles, smashed the Japanese from the Kuriles in the far north to the Guam-Saipan region of the Marianas. Task-force planes hammered the Bonin and Kazan islands, 588 miles southeast of Yokohama.

Supporting the American invasion of the Marianas, Yank flyers blasted far-flung Japanese Pacific air bases within range of Saipan.

Estimates 30,000 Defenders

Admiral Nimitz estimated that about 30,000 Nipponese were defending Saipan, which he had assumed before the invasion "would be strongly held because of its strategic location in the Japanese defense system." The Tokyo radio guessed that the American invasion force totaled 15,000.

Reports from newsmen at Saipan predicted slow, savage land fighting there with scant prospect of a rapid cleanup.

Rembert James, an Associated Press correspondent with the Marianas expeditionary forces, said the Japanese view Saipan as a major shield on the southern approaches to the Rising Sun empire. It lies along direct air and shipping lanes between Japan and Truk, in the Carolines, and other southern Nippon bases.

Could Control Marianas

James reported Saipan airfields could be used to put all of the Marianas under complete Yank aerial control and would bring the Bonins, the Kazans, and other islands immediately off the Japanese mainland, under the bombsights of land-based American planes.

Nimitz' Saturday communique told of the Kudiel raids June 14 and 15. Army Liberators blasted Matsuwa, Paramushiro and Shimushiri Wednesday. Five Nippon interceptors roared up at Matsuwa and 14 at Paramushiro. One enemy fighter was shot down and a Japanese bomber damaged.

The same day navy Venturas bombed Paramushiro and Shumushu, meeting 15 Japanese fighters.

Army Liberators again hit Shimushiri Thursday. Some of the American planes were damaged.

Army, navy and marine planes of the central Pacific command bombed Japanese installations in the Marshalls and the eastern Carolines June 13 and 15.

Yanks On Saipan Drive Inland

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 17 (AP)—Grimly fighting Yank invaders after street-by-street seizure of a coastal town and capture of its airstrip marched slowly inland today on Saipan, in the Marianas, unlocking Japan's inner defese perimeter.

Official sources also disclosed that a task force had made the war's first attack on the Bonin and Kazan Islands, destroying 47 planes, sinking 2 ships and damaging 10. This completed the dramatic picture of a grand-scale air and naval operation which smashed at Japan's steel industry and every base for 3,000 miles along a defense line from Paramushiro to Palau.

Fighting Is Fierce

The first eyewitness reports from Saipan, where the American forces which landed Wednesday have won the town of Charan-Kanoa, supported official accounts of a bitter battle.

"The campaign is actually like Gaudalcanal ard Tarawa combined," Richard W. Johnson, representing the combined Allied press, wrote today aboard a flagship at Saipan.

"The troops were faced with a savage land battle after surviving the fight for the beachhead and with scant prospect of a rapid cleanup."

Hand-To-Hand Battle

He said "the casualties were not expected to equal the Tarawa figures but assault battalions suffered material losses."

After the intense battleship bombardment and the 100-ton bombing by carrier planes had forced the Japs back from the beaches, the Yanks landed on both sides of Charan-Kanoa on Saipan's southwest coast, 1,500 miles from Tokyo. The enemy evacuated Charan-Kanoa's 3,000 civilians, but Johnson said they left behind a strong rear guard which had to be "cleaned out in the first Pacific fighting comparable to Europe's house-to-house encounters."

Field Still Under Fire

He reported the Charan-Kanoa airstrip still is under enemy mortar fire; on the south end of the beachhead, the Yanks opened "a powerful attack today which carried them close to the Aslito airdrome"; on the north end, less than five miles below Garapan, the main town of Saipan.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced last night that the Yanks recoiled from an earlier reverse to score their success at Charan-Kanoa. Then he added this cautious note:

"Our assumption that Saipan Island would be strongly held because of its strategic location in the Japanese defense system has been proven correct. Preliminary estimates indicate there are upward of two divisions of enemy troops defending Saipan."

Reinforcements Blocked

Two divisions nominally total 30,000 men.

Earlier Nimitz disclosed that on the day of the invasion a task force moved between the Marianas and Japan; presumably to block any reinforcement from that direction, and sent out carrier planes against the Kazan and Bonin Islands.

The strike at Bonins, 588 miles from Yokohama, probably entailed a task force approach closer to Japan than the one made to launch the Tokyo raiders in 1942.

Kuriles Attacked

Report of the Bonin raid afforded this complete picture of a huge coordinated effort:

KURILES—Shelled and bombed Monday and Tuesday by a task force.

JAPAN — Raided Thursday by China-based B-29s, reported to have knocked out one fifth of Japan's steel industry at Yawata.

BONIN AND KAZAN ISLANDS—Bombed Wednesday by a second carrier plane task force.

MARIANAS — First attacked last Saturday by yet another task force which turned the operation into an invasion Wednesday.

WESTERN CAROLINES—Bombed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's New Guinea-based Liberators to prevent enemy airfields at Yap, Woleai and Palau from sending planes to Saipan.

Four Planes Lost

Tokyo radio, first announcing the attacks on Chichi and Haha, in the Bonins, and Iwo, in the Kazan group, claimed "more than 17" raiders were shot down, but Nimitz listed the cost as four planes and five airmen.

The enemy air and shipping losses raised the total of planes destroyed there and in the Marianas since Saturday above 190 and the ship sunk to 16.

Britain Honors Comdr. Rivinus

Raid Destroys 50 Planes At Sorong

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Sunday, June 18 (AP)—More than 50 Mitchell bombers, escorted by a large force of Lightnings, smacked Sorong, on the northwestern tip of Dutch New Guinea, and destroyed more than 50 planes on the ground and in the air, headquarters announced today.

Sorong—which Gen. Douglas MacArthur termed "the enemy's last effective base in New Guinea—was hit Friday in a raid by which headquarters said "complete tactical surprise was obtained."

Most of the Nipponese planes were destroyed on the ground. The Lightnings struck down several craft which were coming into the air.

The American Sixth Army Friday drove the Japanese from a key ridge 800 yards north of the Mokmer airstrip on Biak Island, off northern Dutch New Guinea. Four 5-inch guns and large quantities of supplies were captured.

In aerial forays Thursday, 68 tons of bombs were dropped on Truk, and 100 tons blasted airdromes at Rabaul, New Britain. The Truk raid stirred aloft 15 interceptors and one was shot down.

A headquarters spokesman said several enemy warships were in the harbor during the attack.

Sorong is about 660 miles from Hollandia, recently captured airdrome on Dutch New Guinea.

U. S. Artillery Pushing Japanese Back on Biak

Foe Plays Waiting Game, but Yields to Superior Gunfire

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, June 17 (AP).—American drive and superior weight of equipment—notably artillery—are winning the battle of Biak Island.

Complete victory on that islet off northern Dutch New Guinea seemed doubtful in earlier stages of the campaign, but now appears certain.

After nearly a week on Biak, this correspondent was impressed by the ruggedness and determination of the American infantry in combatting nature and a Japanese garrison which has staged a wily, tenacious fight.

The enemy on Biak is not a foolhardy fanatic, madly sacrificing his life for his emperor. He has played a clever, waiting game; seldom attacking but yielding ground when necessary and then only foot by foot, at the maximum price he could exact.

CHINESE TAKE KAMAING BASE

Stilwell Force Also Seizes Village Farther South

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, June 17 (AP)—The Chinese 22d Army after a seven-day siege has captured Kamaing, the principal Japanese supply base in North Burma and the key enemy stronghold in the Mogaung valley, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters announced today.

South of Kamaing, which fell yesterday, the Chinese seized the town of Parentu, while in the main North Burma bastion of Myitkyina Chinese and American troops continued to make gains in the north and west sectors.

Reports Token Junction

[A field dispatch from William Boni, Associated Press correspondent on the Salween front, Saturday said that a token junction with Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's North Burma forces was made by Chinese guerrillas, who captured Lauhkaun, well to the west of Hpmaw Pass and 60 air-line miles northeast of Myitkyina.]

[This was the first China-Burma link since the Japanese occupation of Burma. Both the Burma campaign and the Salween offensive launched by the Chinese from western Yunnan Province are aimed principally at reopening an overland route to China.]

The Ja[illegible] were reported to be reinfo[illegible] the area they hold in the Mo[illegible]g valley and around Myitkyina, but their railway lines were unusable, and the enemy was obliged to bring whatever fresh troops he could on foot, an official headquarters spokesman said.

Allied progress in this area has been slow, he added, but a junction was expected in the near future of Chinese troops driving southward from Kamaing with Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's airborne Chindits near the town of Mogaung.

Bishenpur Drive Forecast

Operations over the whole Burma-India front are likely to continue right through the monsoon. Japanese strength in Burma now is twice what it was at the end of the last monsoon, and enemy reinforcements were observed in the India sectors south of Bishenpur, where a separate Allied campaign was expected to attempt driving the enemy southward.

On the Imphal plain the situation was said to be reasonably satisfactory, with Allied forces there steadily supplied by air. Many Japanese battalions in the area have been cut to a fifth of their normal strength in recent fighting.

The spokesman predicted that the Japanese would be cleared from the Kohima-Imphal road in a matter of weeks, subsequent to action which would throw the enemy back into the eastern Chindwin area.

Today's communique said the enemy was forced from positions on the Kohima front in a considerable area around Tsozipfemai, 16 miles southeast of Kohima, which previously had assured him use of part of the Jessami track. At the same time, the bulletin said, Allied troops pushed to the neighborhood of Gaziphema, important point on the Japanese communication lines.

Chinese Take Jap Base Of Kamaing

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 17 (AP)—The Chinese 22d Division has captured the Japanese base of Kamaing, approximately 40 miles northwest of besieged Myitkyina, in northern Burma, it was announced officially today.

Kamaing, described by Admiral

30 24 - 16337

30. 24— 16337

Lord Louis Mountbatten's communique as "a principal supply base in North Burma and a key point of the Mogaung Valley," fell after a seven-day siege.

At Myitkyina itself, Allied forces made some gains in the north and west sectors of that big city.

South of Kamaing, the communique continued, Chinese forces captured Parentu, 3½ miles northwest of Mogaung.

Monsoon Slows Operations

The war bulletin said the Japanese had been forced out of positions in "a considerable area" 16 miles southeast of Kohima in the India-Burma border sector, and that the Allies had cleared some enemy positions on the Kohima-Imphal road.

Severe monsoon conditions slowed operations in the Imphal sector, the communique added.

A headquarters spokesman in reviewing the military situation in India's east border region predicted today that the Japanese would be cleared from the Kohima-Imphal road in a matter of weeks and that the Allies in a subsequent action would throw the enemy back east of the Chindwin river.

Air Supply Steady

The situation in the Imphal plain was described as reasonably satisfactory. The air supply of Allied forces there is steady.

Many Japanese battalions were said to have been cut down to one fifth their normal strength in recent fighting.

Enemy reinforcements were observed south of Bishenpur, 18 miles southwest of Imphal, where a separate campaign is described as likely to throw the Japanese southward.

The Japanese are reinforcing their garrisons in the Mogaung-Myitkyina area in north Burma but in doing so they have had to walk in as the railway is not usable.

Chinese forces moving westward from the Salween river in Yunnan province are "fighting splendidly," the spokesman said, but progress is slow due to the weather and the conditions of the roads which are limited to one-way jeep traffic.

Superfortress Dropped Cans In Eastern Area

JUN 18 1944

United States Superfortress Base, Eastern India, June 8 (AP—Delayed)—Two empty tomato-juice cans were the first "bombs" dropped by a Superfortress in the China-Burma-India theater.

They came from a plane piloted by Col. Leonard (Jake) Harman, Boise, Idaho, group commander who landed at this eastern India base 49½ flying hours after leaving the United States. Harman opened the bomb days and dropped the cans on a runway just before landing.

His Superfortress was the first to reach this area, but not the first to leave the United States. Capt. William Stewart, North Hollywood, Cal., who piloted the first B-29 out of the States, ran into a series of circumstances forcing him to fly more than 17,000 miles before reaching India.

When he arrived at Puerto Rico Stewart was ordered to return to the United States, then to England, where he toured more than a week showing the plane to members of the Eighth Air Force and the RAF.

B-29 Plans Nearly Upset

JUN 18 1944

By Thoburn Wiant

Superfortress Base in Western China, June 8 (AP)—(Delayed)—Brig. Gen. Kenneth B. Wolfe, 47, of Riverside, Cal., head of the 20th Superfortress Bomber Command, disclosed today that the B-29 program was nearly disrupted when the first experimental plane crashed near Seattle February 18, 1943, killing all the Boeing Company's flight-testing personnel.

Wolfe said "loss of this airplane personnel was an extremely severe shock and broke the continuity of thought and effort devoted to the program up to that time."

Only Few Knew It Well

"Only a small group of army air force personnel had intimate knowledge of the airplane and its equipment. Operational people of army air forces had only a small amount of information and were naturally pessimistic about the original design and new engines.

"You can imagine how General Arnold (chief of the Army Air Forces) felt and what he was up against when he decided that he was going to get those planes into combat anyhow."

Wolfe was placed in charge and told to carry out the plans in whatever manner he deemed best.

Colonels His Assistants

Wolfe's first move was to surround himself with able assistants including Colonels Leonard Harman, Boise, Idaho; Alva Harvey, Cleburne, Texas; Howard Couch, Lawrence, Kan.; Pearl Robey, Casey, Ill.; Charles Moore, Cardondale, Ill., and Lewis Parker, Wray, Colorado.

The second experimental Superfortress nearly crashed in June, 1943, on its first flight test because a careless mechanic had hooked up the aileron controls in reverse. With Harmon as pilot, the huge plane lifted from the runway but began reacting crazily.

Aided by crew working on a split-second basis, Harman safely landed with a wing clearing a revetment only a few feet.

Training Unit Formed

Harmon, now a group commander, thus averted another drastic setback to the program besides saving the lives of everyone aboard. That same month Wolfe was ordered to organize the first B-29 bombardment wing to train pilots and crew members for Superfortresses.

Topping the list of officers, Wolfe picked Brig. Gen. Laverne G. Saunders—of army football fame—who already had established combat reputation in the South Pacific. Saunders was named assistant chief of staff in charge of operations.

The wing was then built around battle-wise veterans of Pearl Harbor, Guadalcanal, the Solomons, Aleutians, African, Asiatic and European fronts.

Wolfe's Formula

Only a few Superfortresses were available at first, so the wing trained mostly on B-17s, B-24s and B-26s. The 20th Bomber Command was organized last autumn. Wolfe stepped up to head this organization while Saunders took over the wing. This spring the command crossed to the China-Burma-India theater a little more than a year after the Seattle crash.

Wolfe's formula for getting a job done is "surround yourself with competent, enthusiastic people; indoctrinate them with the mission and objective, tell them what you want done and leave 'the how' to them."

Wolfe, who has flown all types of aircraft and is now rated a command pilot combat observer, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for getting the Superfortress job done.

Earthquake Recorded

Mexico City, June 17 (AP) — A light earth tremor was recorded at 5.22.54 P. M. yesterday at the central seismological station at Tacubaya. It is estimated to have been about 422 miles from here.

U-Boat Sinks Canadian Ship

HALIFAX, June 17 (AP).—A resurgence of U-boat warfare close to the Canadian Atlantic coast last March was revealed last night when authorities permitted disclosure of the sinking of the Nova Scotia steamship Watuka just off this coast. The vessel went down March 22 with the loss of one man. Twenty-five others escaped.

13 Americans Reported Safe With Mihailovic

JUN 18 1944

New York, June 17 (AP)—The information delegate of the Yugoslav Government today released a dispatch from headquarters of Gen. Draja Mihailovic announcing that 13 Americans, who had been forced to abandon damaged planes, were safe with units of Mihailovic's forces and were awaiting Allied planes to return them to Italian bases.

The dispatch said the 13 wished to advise their families that they were safe and in good hands.

Mills Unhit, Japs Say

JUN 18 1944

New York, June 17 (AP)—The Japanese Domei Agency, in an English language broadcast, declared today that the Yawata steel mills, blasted by B-29 Superfortresses Thursday night, remain undamaged, notwithstanding enemy claims to the contrary," and asserted the American flyers were misled by fires of "burning wheat stalks near a farm house.

"It is presumed that the enemy raiders mistook the fires of burning wheat stalks in front of this farm house for the fires in the industrial section," said the broadcast, recorded here by United States Government monitors.

Reports of the bombing by American correspondents said towering pillars of flames visible for 60 miles were left by the raiders, and it was estimated that a fifth of Japan's steel production at Yawata may have been knocked out.

Admiral Halsey Gets His Wish: A Fleet of His Own to Hit Foe

JUN 18 1944

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Admiral William F. Halsey jr. today was given the job he wants—a fighting command in the war against the Japanese.

The sixty-one-year-old admiral who drove the Japanese from the South Pacific and thereby worked himself out of an assignment as commander of the South Pacific forces, was designated officially as "commander of the 3d Fleet."

That designation sounds like an administrative job, but it isn't. Actually, it means that Admiral Halsey, known to his intimates as "Bull," will have a fleet of his own to assail the Japanese, whom he hates violently.

Admiral Halsey commanded naval forces throughout the long months of fighting that ended with elimination of the Japanese in the Solomon Islands and complete naval control of the South Pacific area. Since then his new assignment has been a prime subject for speculation in naval circles.

Always, it was agreed by those who knew him that if he had his way he wouldn't be bound down to a desk job. He indicated strongly that he was getting his wishes when he formally relinquished his command of the South Pacific only a few days ago and told officers and men there—he referred to them always as "shipmates"—that "I'll see you on the road to Tokyo."

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific commander in chief, confirmed that today, announcing that because of the relative quiet in the South Pacific area, Halsey had been given command of the third fleet to "operate in the Pacific Ocean."

He gave little information on the new command — the designation is primarily for organizational purposes—but said Admiral Halsey would operate "in the same way" that the 5th Fleet operates under Admiral Raymond A. Spruance. Admiral Spruance and his fleet have missed few actions in the Pacific.

Admiral Halsey on a recent visit to Washington told newspaper reporters that he had just one fear—that the war might be brought to an end before he struck Japan. "Don't let that happen," he pleaded.

Enjoys Battle

That he enjoys battle—and he's a master strategist — is demonstrated by a story his shipmates like to tell. It was in the midst of one of the early naval air strikes. A junior officer saw him reading a novel on the bridge. He asked Admiral Halsey how he could relax enough to read during battle. "Why?" asked Halsey. "We planned the battle, didn't we? And it's going according to plan, isn't it?"

His early actions against the Japanese figuratively were carried out as a "scrap with his bare fists," for naval forces at that time had been reduced to a minimum.

He saw plenty of battles and has some of the highest decorations. He commanded the force which took the aircraft carrier Hornet close to Japan's shores in 1942 so that Army bombers under Major General James Doolittle could take off to bomb Tokyo. He took his force deep into the Japanese waters in January, 1942, for a strike at the Marshall and Gilbert Islands—the first big naval offensive of the war. He carried out the first raid on Wake Island after Japanese conquered the little marine garrison there.

Born in Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 30, 1882, he is the son of Captain William Frederick Halsey and likes to say that he has spent his whole life in the Navy. He was appointed to the Naval Academy by President McKinley in 1900 and was graduated in 1904. He won the Navy Cross in World War I for his services as commanding officer of destroyers convoying troops and supplies across the Atlantic and battling German submarines.

De Gaulle Plans An Early Visit To Washington

Tells Roosevelt He Hopes to Come Soon; Expected to Receive Full Honors

JUN 18 1944

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP).—General Charles de Gaulle, acting as "chief of the provisional government" of France which the United States does not recognize, has advised President Roosevelt that he hopes to be able to come here either late this month or early in July.

His response through diplomatic channels left the way open for a decision not to come, since it was based on the expressed provision that "circumstances" will permit the trip.

If he does come, it is generally agreed among White House advisers that he will be accorded the full honors and courtesies due a visiting dignitary. It is expected that he will be quartered at Blair House, the State Department's official lodging for foreign heads and other ranking notables.

Arrangements now contemplated appear designed to give De Gaulle about the same treatment he would receive as a visiting head of government, but not to do anything that would imply official recognition.

Co-operation Is Sought

This purpose reflects the general impression here that President Roosevelt presently holds no intention of modifying his decision against recognition. What he is said to hope for from a meeting with De Gaulle is some agreement on military co-operation in a man-to-man talk.

De Gaulle, on the other hand, is believed here to want to come to Washington for the purpose of seeking recognition. United States officials interpret all his official moves, including his decision not to work with General Dwight D. Eisenhower on final military arrangements for the invasion, as designed to that end.

Speculation in diplomatic quarters raises the question whether this evident conflict of intentions can be reconciled by compromise and agreement on both side. If there is no hope for such progress, many authorities here say the visit may not be made.

President Roosevelt said on June 9 that he had agreed to receive De Gaulle if the general should visit Washington. He designated two periods—June 22-30 or July 6-14—in which he would be available here.

Knutson Protests Stand On Finns

JUN 18 1944

Washington, June 17 (AP)—President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull were accused today by Representative Knutson (R., Minn.) of having given "the Russians a free hand to invade Finland and wage a war of extermination, which is as savage and barbaric as it is unjustifiable."

The Minnesotan made his protest on the floor of the House one day after Hjalmar Procope, Finnish minister, and his principal aides had been given virtual orders to leave the country as soon as possible because of what the State Department called activities "inimical to the interests of the United States."

"Paid Her Obligations"

"Today Finland is without powerful friends but it was not ever thus," he said.

"It is not so long ago that the officials of this Administration pointed out to Finland and the Finns as a shining example of honor, honesty and rectitude. Of all the nations who owed us money, she was practically the only one who did not repudiate her obligations to this country.

"Finland met her obligations promptly, proudly and gladly.

Feels Humiliated

"Mr. Roosevelt and his Administration may hold Finland up to scorn, but millions of Americans who have longer memories than Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull feel humiliated over the shabby treatment that this Administration has accorded the Finnish people."

The ban was imposed late yesterday on Procope—Finland's representative in Washington during several critical years—when he was called to the State Department and handed his passport and "requested" to go home as soon as transportation could be arranged.

The unprecedented action, which did not involve an actual diplomatic break with Finland, extended also to three counselors of the Finnish legation and to the families of all four diplomats.

Complete Break Possible

The action, regardless of the incident which caused it, brought American Finnish relations to their lowest point. It apparently increased the probability of a complete break with Finland, although the United States Government has thus far avoided that final rupture in every crisis.

It has, however, accused Finland of playing the German game to the detriment of the United States and its allies.

Ever since Finland became involved in war with Russia and Great Britain three years ago—her second war with Russia in this decade—Procope and legation aides have been forbidden by the State Department to engage in propaganda activities on behalf of their country. They have been free to answer questions put to them by reporters, but could not initiate statements on their own.

Army Demands Heavy Increase In Tank Output

JUN 18 1944

Invasion Losses Far Above Estimates; Plants Shut Recently May Be Opened

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP).—An "extremely heavy" increase in the production of tanks, caused by reports from the invasion beachhead that their expenditure was running three times the anticipated rate, has been ordered by the military high command.

The demand resulting from clashes of Allied armor with Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's panzer divisions will mean that United States plants which halted tank-production several months ago must reopen their production lines, well informed government sources said.

The new demand indicated an abrupt change in military thinking, for tank production was de-emphasized after the campaign in North Africa, when tank destroyers and mobile artillery cut the Nazi armored units to pieces. American tank production schedules were cut more than half at that time.

The renewed emphasis on tanks will require great tonnages of steel, it was stated, although new production schedules have not been set and the plants to be reopened have not yet been singled out.

Invasion experience also has shown, production officials said, that heavy truck production now running about 25 per cent behind schedule will have to be jerked up to schedule immediately as a means of military transport in lieu of shattered French railroads.

The drain of the expanded tank program on steel was expected to be especially heavily felt since plate production is already slightly behind schedule, even for the cargo ship construction program.

Production officials said that the major job in building up tank output would be the recruitment of labor.

Locomotive production is expected to suffer, since many of the tank production lines were in locomotive plants, and officials said the revived tank program also would retard plans for partial reconversion to consumers' goods production because of the heavy new drains on steel, castings, forgings and other parts and materials.

Roosevelt Hails Fighting Spirit Of Polish Nation

JUN 18 1944

Tells Prime Minister It Is the Best Guaranty of His Homeland's Future

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP).—President Roosevelt said today the "best pledge that Poland shall resume her rightful place among the free nations of the world" is to be found in the spirit and determination of her fighting men.

The statement was made in an exchange of letters between the President and Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of Poland who arrived back in London today after a visit to Washington.

Neither letter made any reference to any agreements or other concrete accomplishments of the visit.

Following are the texts of the letters:

The President

"My dear Mr. Prime Minister:

"I wish to take this opportunity, just before your departure, to wish you a safe return after your most welcome visit to Washington.

"I particularly desire to express to you the pleasure I have had in seeing you again, which enabled me to have most frank, sincere and friendly exchanges of views with you on the many questions which are of mutual interest to us.

"I need hardly tell you how much the American people admire the courage and fortitude of the Polish people, who for almost five years have borne with brave and stout hearts the cruel hardships of war and oppression. Their steadfast determination to be free again and the indomitable spirit of their fighting men constitute the best pledge that Poland shall reassume her rightful place among the free nations of the world.

"The forces of liberation are on the march to certain victory and the establishment of a peace based upon the principles of freedom, democracy, mutual understanding and security for all liberty-loving people.

"Permit me to express again how much I appreciated the opportunity of renewing our acquaintance. I feel that such personal exchanges of views cannot but contribute to mutual understanding.

"Very sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

"His Excellency, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk,

"Prime Minister of Poland."

The Prime Minister

"Mr. President:

"I am deeply touched and most sincerely grateful for the great kindness and hospitality which I have received from you during my visit. May I thank you from the bottom of my heart for all the proofs of your kindness and for giving me so many opportunities of seeing you and of having frank talks with you on the vital subjects and problems which affect Poland and Europe now and after the war.

"I should like to thank you not only for your most friendly and kind reception but especially for your deep and so broad approach to the problems of the future.

"The ideals and principles of the Atlantic Charter and of the Four Freedoms of which you are the initiator are for us Poles in our hard fight for the speedy liberation of our country that encouragehent and inspiration which we most need on our way of struggle, suffering and work.

"The loss of individual freedom and of all that man possessed has strengthened the Polish people in their love, respect and yearning for that freedom. The fate of the people shared by all social classes irrespective of their origin and religion has brought man closer to man in my country so strongly that it has cemented the foundations of democracy and created the conditions necessary to mutual understanding and collaboration. This love of freedom increases the striving to make it secure when, after the final victory, it will be necessary to build new foundations for nations and peace-loving peoples.

"I leave greatly impressed by the conversations which I was privileged to have with you, by your views and your wide knowledge of human and national problems.

"I would be very happy if the few modest suggestions which you gave me the opportunity of contributing in our talks could even in the slightest way serve the common cause and be of some use to you, Mr. President, who is leading your nation in this great fight for the common cause together with your allies, giving so much of yourself and carrying so great a responsibility as regards the fulfillment of the ideals with which you have inspired the hearts of the soldiers and fighters for freedom.

"Accept, Mr. President, the assurances of my deepest gratitude and of my highest consideration.

"S. MIKOLAJCZYK."

NAVY REVISES LIST

WASHINGTON, June 17—(AP)—The Navy revised today the classification of casualties resulting from an explosion of ammunition being unloaded in Pearl Harbor, May 21 but made no changes in the total figures of 27 men killed, 100 missing and 389 wounded.

The revisions were in the branches of service to which the casualties were assigned.

The press release changed the number of Navy personnel dead from 9 to 10, Marine Corps dead from 10 to 8, and reported one Coast Guardsman killed. Eight Army personnel also were killed.

WPB Approves Jamaica Rum Import Schedule

Washington, June 17 (AP)—The War Production Board today announced authorization for the importation of approximately 400,000 proof gallons of rum under three years of age from Jamaica within the next 90 days.

The allocations cover the full quota for 1944 agreed upon between the British and United States governments, WPA said.

Chemicals bureau officials said the rum has been allocated on the following basis:

Applicants with a history of importation from 1940 to 1942 receive 100 per cent. of their average yearly imports for that period or the amount they imported in 1943, whichever was greater. Total allocation in this category is 182,961 proof gallons.

British Labor Ready to Aid Unions in Axis Countries

I. F. T. U. Council Agrees in Principle With A. F. L. Position

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP).—The major British and American trade unions appear to be agreed now that the United Nations should help trade union men in Germany and Italy re-establish their organizations.

The American Federation of Labor already has appointed a representative in Italy, Lugi Antonini, vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. And today Robert J. Watt, international representative for the A. F. L., announced receipt of information from the International Federation of Trade Unions, headed by Sir Walter Citrine, of England, that the I. F. T. U. agrees in principle.

The apparent agreement comes after some confusion between British and American leaders, and after an acrimonious tilt between Mr. Watt and Sir Walter at April's international labor organization conference in Philadelphia.

Hull Backs Plan to Rescue 2,000 Refugees From Nazis

JUN 18 1944

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP).—An inter-American effort will be made to rescue 2,000 racial and political refugees from Germany and German-occupied territory before they are subjected to treatment which may annihilate the entire group.

This was disclosed today by an announcement from Secretary of State Cordell Hull that the United States would participate.

The 2,000 are now in special Nazi concentration camps. They are identified with various racial and political minorities, but hold travel permits or other protective documents issued by various American or other non-European governments. It is the possession of these documents, enabling them to claim the protection of some Allied or neutral government, which sets them apart from the untold thousands of Europeans held by the Germans.

Mr. Hull made known this country's willingness to participate in the joint program with other American nations by releasing a letter to Dr. Alberto Guani, president of the emergency advisory committee for political defense at Montevideo, Uruguay.

Dr. Guani sent here May 31 a resolution adopted by the committee calling for joint action to exchange German nationals held in this hemisphere for the European refugees who possess "papers" giving them a claim to be freed.

"I note," Mr. Hull wrote, "that this resolution proposes that the American republics concert and intensify their efforts to rescue from German hands some thousands of oppressed minorities holding non-European documentation; that this be done by joint proposals to exchange German nationals from the American republics for these persecuted groups; and that such exchanges can be achieved consistently with security considerations surrounding exchanges previously formulated by your committee in the interest of hemispheric defense.

"My government will be most happy to participate actively in such an inter-American program."

An explanatory statement released with copies of the resolution said the 2,000 refugees have been segregated by the Germans with a view to exchanging them for German nationals.

However, since they have not been exchanged to date, the explanation conained, the Germans have indicated an intention to deprive them of their special treatment and subject them to the usual measures for racial and political minorities having no claim to protection.

"These measures," it said, "are notoriously of the most brutal character, involving forced labor and other extreme cruelties. It has come to the attention of the committee that the persecution of such minority groups has been recently intensified.

"Therefore, only the most urgent and decisive steps will prevent the annihilation of the persons under reference."

Roosevelt Backs Efforts For Jews

New York, June 17 (AP)—A message from President Roosevelt, promising continued efforts in the liberation of all Jews from occupied Poland, was read tonight at the opening session of the convention of the American Federation of Polish Jews.

The President's message, addressed to Benjamin Winter, New York realtor, who died Friday night, said:

30.24— 16339

"It gives me pleasure to extend my greeting to you and the members of your organization on the occasion of the meeting of its 35th convention.

"The problems which confront you in the noble work of rehabilitation of the Polish Jewry provide a challenge, the poignancy of which fills men's hearts with a determination so deep and strong that, despite all odds, the efforts will continue until the liberation of these innocent people is achieved."

The convention brought together 400 delegates from organizations of American Jews of Polish descent, and was called to formulate plans for the reconstruction of Polish Jewry after the war.

U. S. Begins Robot Probe

JUN 18 1944

Washington, June 17 (AP)—A Senatorial investigation into United States development of pilotless planes was projected today as the aftermath of Nazi blows on southern England by secret robot bombers.

Chairman Truman (D., Mo.) said he would direct Chief Counsel Hugh Fulton of the Senate War Investigating Committee to undertake a private inquiry at once. Officials of the army, navy and Marines aircraft forces and of the glider industry will be questioned, Truman told a reporter, with a view to giving the committee a full picture of American progress. The Glider Institute of the Americas requested the inquiry soon after disclosure of the English raids.

Cannon Sees Collapse Of Nazi Armies By Sept

JUN 18 1944

Washington, June 17 (AP)—Representative Cannon (D., Mo.) told the House today it could expect a collapse of the German armies by September and the surrender of the Nazis by Christmas, and "perhaps much sooner."

The chairman of the Appropriations Committee made the statements at a discussion of a deficiency supply bill.

"There is a general belief that the German armies will collapse not later than the first or second week of September, and perhaps much sooner," he declared, adding his view that "unconditional surrender" of Germany could be expected before the end of December.

ALUMINUM CURBS EASED BY WPB TO AID RECONVERSION

JUN 18 1944

Plants Can Order Machines, Tools Needed for Peacetime Production.

SEEKS TO END 'DOUBTS'

Nelson Gives Industry Go-Ahead on Building of Models of Postwar Products.

WASHINGTON, June 17. — (AP) Chairman Donald M. Nelson tonight relaxed War Production board controls on aluminum in a move toward the orderly reconversion of industry, and made it possible for war plants to order—even while the war continues—the machines and tools which will be needed for peacetime production.

Nelson also gave industry a go-ahead on the building of a single working model of any planned post-war product, whether an automobile, a refrigerator, or a railway pullman car.

For Protection of Economy

The WPB chief said that "precious little" in the way of increased civilian output could result in the immediate future, but described his action as the first in a series of moves to protect the whole economy by lifting certain controls "no longer essential to protect war production."

"We all know that when military operations are far enough advanced, big reductions will be made in the over-all war production program," Nelson's statement said.

"Nobody can predict with certainty how long it will be before those over-all reductions begin.

"Whenever they begin large numbers of men and women will lose their war jobs. If they are to find other work without long delay and if plants are not to stand idle unnecessarily, industry must be ready at that time to move at once into sharply increased production of civilian goods," Nelson said.

By taking carefully-controlled action now to assure a smooth transition from wartime to peacetime production, Nelson declared he felt the government could put an end to "doubts and worries about post-war business and jobs" that were causing many people to consider quitting war work and establishing themselves in civilian enterprise.

More War Production

Right now, Nelson said, the invasion of Europe makes it imperative that military production be brought up to schedule and kept there. "The tank program, for instance, was ordered stepped up last week, and other increases will undoubtedly follow," he said.

Nelson asserted he relied on regulations of the War Manpower commission and WPB to insure that the new lifting of restrictions did not interfere with war production.

JUN 18 1944

"Labor is counting, too, on the patriotic good sense of American manufacturers," he stated. "They know that post-war considerations cannot be allowed to stand in the way of their meeting war production schedules. Abuses of the new WPB policy could only mean the clamping down of additional restrictions as soon as signs of interference with war output appear."

WPB officials said the new aluminum policy would mean some increase in pots, pans, kitchen ware and similar simple products, but no increase in washing machines or other large durable-goods items.

The three new steps to "help industry plan and prepare for the reconversion period" are as follows:

1. Ordered revocation of the general WPB order which restricts aluminum and magnesium to military uses, so that manufacturers may produce needed products "whatever and whenever manpower is available." As a companion action, Nelson gave WPB regional offices power to permit individual companies to use the two light metals in making certain consumer goods now prohibited, where labor supply permits.

2. Directed that manufacturers may buy machinery, tools, and dies for civilian production starting July 1; where possible, these wants will be filled from surplus stocks, but if necessary, WPB will validate the placing of new orders where they will not interfere with war production.

3. Announced that an order now is being prepared which will let any manufacturer obtain enough materials and parts to "make and test a single working model of any product planned for post-war production"; the manufacturers will apply to WPB field offices for the materials.

Manifesto of WPB Policy

Nelson's statement included a manifesto of WPB policy on two questions posed by industrial leaders for many months. He declared:

First: That WPB will permit plants in areas of easy labor supply to enter the civilian markets before competing concerns in tight labor areas which have large war contracts are able to do so.

"Any hardship worked on any business concern by this development is in my judgment regrettable, but unavoidable," the WPB chief said. "The country cannot afford to delay the return to civilian production until all manufacturers in each industry have terminated their essential war work and are in a position to resume production at the same time."

Second: The progressive lifting of WPB controls may also result in the manufacture of civilian goods by companies which did not produce them before the war, even though the appearance of such new competition "will no doubt be unwelcome to previously established concerns in the same industries and now engaged on war contracts."

Repeating again that his decision might mean "regrettable but avoidable" hardships, Nelson nevertheless declared: "If the government were to attempt to prevent new competition, there would clearly be grave danger of shackling the country with a regimented economy for a long time to come."

Land Says Ship Output Will Be Increased

JUN 18 1944

Washington, June 17 (AP)—Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, said today the volume of work in merchant shipyards "is to be increased very shortly and not decreased or cut back."

The present shipbuilding program, previously announced as more than 20,000,000 deadweight tons for the year, is based on recommendations of the joint chiefs of staff, who are urging increased efforts to deliver ships speedily, Admiral Land declared in a statement.

Land said his announcement was intended to offset "an epidemic of irresponsible rumors" that cargo ship construction was soon to be curtailed. The rumors are so persistent, he said, as to indicate deliberate efforts to sabotage the shipbuilding program.

Collier Maurice Tracy Sinks Off Barnegat

JUN 18 1944

New York, June 17 (AP)—Sinking of the coastal collier Maurice Tracy at 3:45 A. M. today in a collision with a Liberty ship about seven miles off Barnegat was announced by headquarters of the Eastern Sea Frontier.

All members of the crew were saved. The freighter was damaged in the bow but able to proceed.

Captive Nazis Accused

Texas Sheriff Lays False Leaflets on Invasion Losses to Prisoners

CORSICANA, Tex., June 17 (AP). —Sheriff Cap Cufington said today that pamphlets criticizing Allied censorship and giving exaggerated totals of Allied invasion losses had appeared in central Texas and been traced to Nazi prisoners at Mexia, Tex.

He said the leaflets, reporting seven Allied divisions annihilated, sixty-four warships sunk and 1,300 gliders and 1,436 planes destroyed in the first three days of the invasion of France, were signed by the printed words "American-Soviet Committee."

More Surprises Seen For Jap Home Front

Monterey, Cal., June 17 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Thomas G. Hearn, home from 27 months' service in the China-Burma-India theater, said today "the American-British-Chinese team has other surprises in store for the Nipponese."

Hearn, who is Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's chief of staff, was commenting on the raid of the Superfortresses.

"Henceforth the Jap home front will get the news of their approaching defeat in a language which they can understand and which their propagandists cannot deny or refute," GFeneral Hearn said in an interview.

ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT DON WHITEHEAD DESCRIBED THE FIGHTING ENTRY OF AMERICAN TROOPS INTO ST.SAVEUR AT NOON FRIDAY.

IT MARKED A THREE-MILE GAIN FROM REIGNEVILLE ACROSS THE DOUVE RIVER.

WHITEHEAD, WHO ENTERED THE TOWN WITH AMERICAN PATROLS, TOLD OF BITTER HOUSE-TO-HOUSE FIGHTING BY FANATICAL YOUNG NAZI SOLDIERS.

STRATEGICALLY, THE AMERICAN THREAT TO THE PENINSULA WAS A JUN 18 1944 30-MILE ARC FROM QUINEVILLE ON THE EAST COAST, SOUTHWEST THROUGH MONTEBOURG AND ST.SAVEUR AND THEN SOUTHEAST TO THE CARENTAN AREA.

THE U.S. BATTLESHIPS TEXAS, NEVADA AND ARKANSAS AIDED THE DRIVE BY DTMBARDING GERMAN POSITIONS AHEAD OF THE AMERICANS IN THE CARENTAN AND ISIGNY AREAS, LAST NIGHT'S COMMUNIQUE NO. 22 REPORTED.

BAD WEATHER HAMPERED AERIAL SUPPORT OF THE INVASION YESTERDAY.

SOUTHEASTWARDS FROM THE PENINSULA BATTLEFRONT ALLIED FORCES HAD A STRONG HOLD ON CAUMONT, THEIR DEEPEST PENETRATION INTO FRANCE BUT PATROLS REPORTED HEAVY ENEMY CONCENTRATIONS IN THE WOODED HILLS SOUTH OF THAT POINT.

SEVEN MILES EAST OF CAUMONT A HEAVY ENGAGEMENT WAS IN PROGRESS IN THE VICINITY OF VILLERS-BOCAGE.

IT WOULD TAKE A LUCKY HIT--IN FACT, A MILLION-IN-ONE CHANCE IN THE PRESENT STAGE OF THE OPERATION--FOR ONE OF THE ROCKET PLANE JUN 18 1944 BOMBS TO HIT A MILITARY TARGET. THE RESULTS THUS FAR ACHIEVED BY THE WEAPON COULD BE ACHIEVED BY A MODERN "BIG BERTHA" DROPPING SHELLS INDISCRIMINATELY OVER A WIDE AREA.

IT IS STRICTLY A NAZI "REVENGE" WEAPON FOR USE AGAINST THE JUN 18 1944 BRITISH CIVILIAN POPULATION, AND IS AIMED AT MORALE RATHER THAN MILITARY TARGETS, DESPITE BROADCAST GERMAN CLAIMS OF HAVING DONE HEAVY DAMAGE TO AN ALLIED CHANNEL CONVOY.

CIVILIANS HAVE TAKEN TO WEARING THEIR TIN HATS AGAIN. ARE GRIMLY DIGGING IN THE WRECKAGE OF HOMES FOR SURVIVORS AND ARE SWEARING AT ADOLF HITLER. GERMAN PROPAGANDISTS ARE MAKING MUCH OF "THE THING" AS IT IS CALLED BY THE BRITISH CIVILIAN. ONE RADIO COMMENTATOR DESCRIBED IT AS A "DYNAMITE METEOR" AND SAID ITS USE SIGNALED THE "HOUR OF RETALIATION." JUN 18 1944

SOMETIMES THE ROCKET PLANES ARE HIT IN THE AIR BY ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE AND EXPLODED, BUT THERE ALWAYS IS THE DANGER IN FIRING OVER A CROWDED AREA THAT ONLY A WING WILL BE KNOCKED OFF OF THE ROCKET, CAUSING ITS EXPLOSIVE-LADEN BODY TO DROP IN A CROWD.

THERE WAS NO AUTHENTIC REPORTS YET ON WHAT THE GERMANS ARE DOING IN CHERBOURG OR WHETHER ANY DEMOLITIONS ARE IN PROGRESS IN THE HARBOR AREA, WHICH OBVIOUSLY THE ENEMY WANTS TO DENY US AS LONG AS POSSIBLE.

THE NEXT LOGICAL LINE FOR A LAST-STAND DEFENSE OF CHERBOURG WOULD BE IN THE VICINITY OF VALOGNES, NORTHWEST OF MONTEBOURG. THE LATTER NOW IS SECURELY IN AMERICAN CONTROL. NORTH OF VALOGNES IS HIGH PLATEAU GROUND WHICH DOMINATES THE TERRAIN ROLLING DOWN TO CHERBOURG.

THE SWIFT ADVANCE OF THE AMERICANS THREW THE GERMANS INTO SUCH CONFUSION THAT SOME CAPTURED TROOPS DIDN'T EVEN KNOW WHO THEIR COMMANDERS WERE OR WHERE THEY WERE SUPPOSED TO GO.

WHEN THE AMERICANS STORMED ACROSS THE DOUVE RIVER TO DRIVE THE GERMANS OFF THE HIGH GROUNDS ON THE OTHER SIDE, ONE GERMAN RAGED:

"YOU CRAZY AMERICANS! THIS IS NOT WAR, IT IS MADNESS!"

THE ADVANCE WAS SO FAST THE DOUGHBOYS DID NOT ENCOUNTER ANY DEMOLITIONS OR MINES. NEAR ORGLANDES, NORTHEAST OF ST.SAUVEUR, THEY CAPTURED A COMPLETE GERMAN FIELD HOSPITAL IN WHICH THERE WERE ABOUT A HUNDRED WOUNDED, SOME OF THEM AMERICAN PARATROOPERS AND MEDICS WHO JUMPED BEHIND THE ENEMY LINES D-DAY.

AS6

THE NINTH DIVISION ENCOUNTERED HARD FIGHTING TODAY IN MAKING THE LAST ADVANCE TO HIGH GROUND OVERLOOKING THE SEA BUT THEY WOULD NOT BE STOPPED. HOWEVER THE GERMANS MANAGED TO EXTRICATE THREE BATTERIES OF 88'S BEFORE THEY WERE OVERRUN ALTHOUGH NOT ALL THE CREWS WERE ABLE TO GET AWAY.

THERE ARE NO INDICATIONS YET THAT THE GERMANS ARE TRYING TO MAKE A GENERAL EVACUATION OF THE PENINSULA OR INTEND TO GIVE UP CHERBOURG WITHOUT A BITTER FIGHT. TROOPS NOW IN THE LINE AGAINST THE AMERICANS MAY MAKE A SACRIFICE STAND.

IN OTHER SECTORS OF THE AMERICAN BEACHHEAD DOUGHBOYS MADE LOCAL GAINS TO STRAIGHTEN OUT THEIR LINES. IN THE CARENTAN SECTOR THEY MOVED WELL BEYOND THE VIRE-TAUTE RIVERS CANAL.

THE NINTH DIVISION WHICH WAS IDENTIFIED TODAY AS BEING ON THE BEACHHEAD ORIGINALLY WAS COMPOSED OF MEN LARGELY FROM NEW YORK AND PENNSYLVANIA WITH ARTILLERY FROM THE NEW ENGLAND STATES BUT THE FLOW OF REPLACEMENTS DURING THE NORTH AFRICAN AND SICILIAN CAMPAIGNS HAS MADE IT AN ALL-AMERICAN DIVISION WITH MEN FROM EVERY STATE IN THE UNION AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

ONE OF THE DIVISION'S COMBAT TEAMS LANDED JUST EAST OF ALGIERS IN THE INVASION OF NORTH AFRICA WHILE ANOTHER LANDED AT PORT LYAUTEY, FRENCH MOROCCO. BOTH HAD HARD FIGHTS TO TAKE THEIR OBJECTIVES.

LATER THE ENTIRE DIVISION WENT INTO ACTION IN TUNISIA. IN SICILY THE DIVISION HELPED IN THE CAPTURE OF TROINA, THE BATTLE WHICH BROKE THE BACK OF ENEMY RESISTANCE ON THAT ISLAND.

NIGHT LEAD UNDERGROUND

BY RICHARD KASISCHKE

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 17-(AP)-THE ALLIED SUPREME COMMAND HAILED A SUCCESSFUL FRONT-BEHIND-THE-FRONT IN FRANCE TODAY WITH A SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE PROCLAIMING THAT THE FRENCH UNDERGROUND ARMY HAD EXECUTED A MASTER PLAN OF SABOTAGE AND OPEN RESISTANCE TO THE NAZIS SINCE THE INVASION BEGAN JUNE 6.

THE COMMUNIQUE SAID FRENCH GUERRILLA OPERATIONS WERE "IN FULL SWING," DESPITE THE FACT THAT NEITHER THE SUPREME COMMANDER, GEN. DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER, NOR THE FIGHTING FRENCH LEADER, GEN. CHARLES DE GAULLE, HAD YET ISSUED ANY GENERAL "CALL TO ARMS" TO THE FRENCH PEOPLE.

JUN 18 1944

THE FRENCH HAVE BEEN RECEIVING FROM THE ALLIED COMMAND DAILY BROADCASTS OF INSTRUCTIONS, NEWS AND WARNINGS, HOWEVER.

"MULTIPLE AND SIMULTANEOUS CASES OF SABOTAGE COORDINATED WITH THE ALLIED EFFORT," WERE CREDITED BY THE COMMUNIQUE WITH CONSIDERABLY DELAYING THE MOVEMENT OF GERMAN RESERVES TO THE NORMANDY BATTLEFRONTS. IT SAID SABOTAGE OF GERMAN TRAFFIC HAD COMPLETELY STOPPED ROAD AND RAIL MOVEMENTS IN THE RHONE VALLEY OF SOUTHERN FU AND THAT THE FRENCH "MEN OF THE MAQUIS" HAD "GAINED "FULL CONTROL" OF SOME INTERIOR AREAS IN STREET-BY-STREET FIGHTS FOR VILLAGES AND TOWNS.

THOSE VETERAN BATTLERS WERE CREDITED WITH CAPTURING 300 GERMANS AND MAKING WIDESPREAD RAIDS ON NAZI GARRISONS.

THE SHAKY VICHY REGIME CONTINUED TO OPPOSE THE RISING RESISTANCE, BUT SEVERAL REPORTS SAID IT WAS DOING SO WITHOUT AVAIL. THE FRENCH RADIO AT ALGIERS SAID PART OF THE FIRST REGIMENT OF THE VICHY ARMY HAD DESERTED TO THE GUERRILLAS WITH ALL ITS ARMS AND EQUIPMENT.

THE ALLIED COMMUNIQUE SAID THE GUERRILLAS HAD DESTROYED BRIDGES AND TRAINS AND DERAILED AT LEAST 70 LOCOMOTIVES IN 12 DAYS.

TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMMUNICATIONS HAVE BEEN SEVERELY HAMPERED AND MANY ACTS OF SABOTAGE HAVE BEEN CARRIED OUT AGAINST ELECTRIC TRANSFORMER STATIONS. IT SAID, ADDING THAT IT WAS NEITHER POSSIBLE

NOR DESIRABLE TO ENUMATE ALL THE MANY EFFECTIVE ACTS OF DESTRUCTION.
THE COMMUNIQUE CONCLUDED THAT "THE ARMY OF THE FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR" WAS "PLAYING ITS ASSIGNED ROLE IN THE BATTLE OF LIBERATION."

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 17-(AP)-ONE OF THE STRANGEST CHAPTERS OF THE WAR ON THE WESTERN FRONT WAS BEING WRITTEN OFF TODAY--THE STORY OF THE DEATH THIS AFTERNOON OF 150 GERMAN TROOPS WHO HAVE BEEN HOLDING OUT SINCE D-DAY DEEP UNDERGROUND IN A CONCRETE BASTION.

THE STRONGHOLD IS SUNK 50 FEET DEEP IN THE CENTER OF AN OPEN FIELD THICKLY PLANTED WITH MINES. THE POSITION IS A MILE AND A HALF FROM THE BEACH AND FIVE MILES BEHIND ALLIED FRONT LINE TRENCHES.

THE ATTACK BEGAN AT 3:15 P.M., WHEN A FIELD GUN FIRED THE FIRST WARNING SHOT AT THE GERMAN GARRISON WHICH HAD BEEN SPORADICALLY SHELLING AND SNIPING ALLIED TROOPS MOVING UP TO THE FRONT FOR THE PAST 11 DAYS.

ALL THAT COULD BE SEEN WAS A SERIES OF GRASS-COVERED MOUNDS RISING PERHAPS 10 FEET FROM A FLAT MEADOW WHERE THREE COWS WERE GRAZING A QUARTER OF A MILE AWAY.

AT 3:55 SMOKE SHELLS LAY A THICK SCREEN AT THE EDGE OF THE FIELD TO MASK THE APPROACH OF ALLIED TANKS. AT 4 P.M., THE BARRAGE WAS INTENSIFIED KICKING UP A STORM OF YELLOW DUST LIKE A TEXAS TORNADO.

A 4:12 LIVID STREAKS OF FLAME SPURTED FROM THE NAZI GUN SLITS.
MACHINE-GUNS

AT 4:12 LIVID STREAKS OF FLAME SPURTED FROM THE NAZI GUN SLITS. MACHINE-GUNS CRACKLED WILDLY AND TRACER BULLETS FLASHED LIKE RUBIES IN THE BRILLIANT AFTERNOON SUNSHINE.

AT 5:15 BRITISH TANKS LUMBERED ACROSS THE FIELD. SEVERAL MINES EXPLODED AS THEY WADDLED LIKE MONSTER TURTLES TOWARD THE OBJECTIVES. THE TANKS CLAMBERED ATOP THE SMALL PITTED MOUNDS.

AT 5:22 SHOCK TROOPS COULD BE SEEN CAUTIOUSLY ADVANCING FROM SCRUB WOOD AT THE FAR SIDE OF THE FIELD. THE GERMANS OPENED FIRE ON THE TROOPS AND THE BRITISH TOMMIES HIT THE GROUND. A TANK SLID DOWN THE MOUND AND APPROACHED THE FRONT OF THE STRONGPOINT.

A TERRIFIC SHEET OF FLAME ENVELOPED THE TANK.

JUN 18 1944

"POOR CHAP, HE'S GONE," A BRITISH MAJOR SAID AS HE WATCHED THE ACTION THROUGH FIELD GLASSES. "NO, HE ISN'T. HE'S MOVING," HE SUDDENLY EXCLAIMED.

THE TANK LURCHED OFF TO A BETTER VANTAGE POINT AND AS I WRITE NOW THE GERMAN GUNS IN THE BASTION HAVE BEEN SILENCED AND QUIET HAS SETTLED OVER THE BATTLEFIELD.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY NEAR GROSSETO, JUNE 17-(AP)-IN THE ADVANCE NORTHWEST OF ROME THIS YANKEE OUTFIT HAS CUT UP THE GERMAN'S 162ND TURKOMAN DIVISION SO BADLY AND KEPT AFTER THE NAZIS SO FAST THAT PRISONERS HAVE BEEN ROUNDED UP ALMOST IN EVERY WAY IMAGINABLE.

IT IS FORBIDDEN TO GIVE THE EXACT TOTAL OF PRISONERS TAKEN BUT OFFICERS OF THE OUTFIT SAID IT RUNS INTO THE "HUNDREDS."

SOME PRISONERS EVEN HAVE BEEN LEFT BEHIND WHILE THEY SLEPT.

THE BOYS TELL THE STORY OF AN M.P. DIRECTING TRAFFIC AT A CROSSROADS BACK OF THE FRONT WHO LOOKED OVER HIS SHOULDER AND SAW AN ENEMY LIEUTENANT SITTING ON A RAIL FENCE WAITING TO SURRENDER.

"WAIT TILL I'M OFF DUTY AND I'LL TAKE YOU IN," SAID THE M.P.

SO THE GERMAN WAITED HALF AN HOUR AND THE SOLDIER TOOK HIM IN TO A PRISONER CAGE.

THEN THERE WAS LT. FRANK MCFARLAND, CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX., WHO WAS BRINGING A LOAD OF RATIONS UP FROM THE REAR. HE LOOKED DOWN A SIDE ROAD AND SAW SEVEN JERRIES FAR BEHIND THE LINES. HE CALLED PVT. BERT MATZ, 92 MARION ST., BROOKLINE, MASS., AND CORP. WILLIAM KEEFE, 9 TEMPLE STXMN ARLINGTON, MASS., AND THE TRIO ROUNDED UP THE GERMANS AND HERDED THEM VIA JEEP TO AN ENCLOSURE.

PVTS.GEORGE P.MCMILLAN, 120 FIFTEEN NORTHEAST, SIXTH AVE., MIAMI, FLA., AND OSCAR PEDERSEN, ARDMORE, PA., WERE HUNTING SOUVENIRS IN A TOWN ABOVE CIVITAVECCHIA WHEN THEY CAME FACE TO FACE WITH A GERMAN CARRYING A MACHINE PISTOL.

PVT.JERRY BROZ, SHINER, TEX., HEARD SINGING AND LAUGHING IN A HOUSE AND THOUGHT HE'D JOIN THE PARTY. HE WALKED IN AND FOUND SOME GERMANS WITH A BIG BOTTLE OF WINE. HE HOLLERED "HANDS UP" AND THAT ENDED THE PARTY.

LT.ROBERT M.MORTON, BIRMINGHAM, ALA., LOOKING FOR MINES AND BOOBY TRAPS ALONG THE ROADS AND WOODS, FOUND 13 SNIPERS IN THE WOODS AND JUST ESCORTED THEM IN.

HENRY SPOHR, 2552 STANLEY ST., LONG ISLAND CITY, N.Y., BROUGHT IN SEVERAL PRISONERS HE FOUND IN THE BUSHES. SO DID PVT.VETO MONTELBANO, BOSSIER CITY, LA., AFTER FIRING JUST ONE SHOT TOWARD SOME NAZIS.

AND FINALLY THERE'S THE SOMEWHAT RED-FACED SERGEANT WHOSE NAME I WON'T MENTION. HE WAS GUARDING PRISONERS IN AN ENCLOSURE AT ONE PLACE. THE ARMY ADVANCED SO FAR IN A FEW DAYS THAT HE HAD TO MOVE UP AND OPEN ANOTHER PEN. NEXT MORNING A SOLDIER BROUGHT IN TWO PRISONERS AND ASKED IF THEY'D BE SAFE WITH THE SERGEANT.

"SURE," SAID THE SERGEANT. "WHY?"

ABOARD U.S. EXPEDITIONARY FORCE FLAGSHIP ENROUTE TO SAIPAN, JUNE 10-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE PACIFIC WAR ENTERED A NEW PHASE WHEN THE HIGH COMMAND OF THE UNITED STATES FLEET SENT LAND FORCES AGAINST SAIPAN ISLAND, IN THE SOUTHERN MARIANAS.

(AMERICAN FORCES LANDED ON SAIPAN JUNE 14 AND, IN SPITE OF DESPERATE JAPANESE RESISTANCE, HAVE CAPTURED ONE TOWN AND AN AIRSTRIP AFTER INITIAL SETBACKS.)

JUN 18 1944

ONE OF THE NAVY'S TOP SECRETS FOR MONTHS HAS BEEN THE FACT THAT SAIPAN, ABOUT 1,500 MILES SOUTHEAST OF TOKYO, WAS ON ADM. CHESTER W.NIMITZ'S LIST OF JAPANESE STRONGHOLDS EARMARKED FOR CAPTURE. SEIZURE OF THE VOLCANIC ISLAND WOULD REPRESENT A NEW AMERICAN WESTWARD ADVANCE OF SOME 1,150 MILES--A LONG HOP FROM THE PREVIOUS ADVANCED BASE IN THE MARSHALLS.

IT WAS CAREFULLY LAID STRATEGY, HINGING ON EXPERIENCES THROUGHOUT THE PACIFIC, THAT LAUNCHED THE PRESENT EXPEDITION AGAINST THE STRONGLY HELD JAPANESE BASE.

SAIPAN, IS IMMEDIATELY NORTH OF GUAM AND LIES AT THE VERY CROSS-ROADS OF THE RISING SUN EMPIRE. IT IS ON THE ALMOST DIRECT ROUTE BETWEEN PEARL HARBOR, APPROXIMATELY 3,700 MILES EASTWARD, AND MANILA, A LITTLE MORE THAN 1,600 MILES WESTWARD.

THE JAPANESE VIEW SAIPAN AS A MAJOR SHIELD FOR THE SOUTHERN APPROACHES TO NIPPON PROPER. IT IS ON THE DIRECT AIR AND SHIPPING LANES BETWEEN JAPAN AND TRUK, IN THE CAROLINES AND OTHER SOUTHERN BASES. IT IS A SUPPLY CENTER FOR JAPAN'S INNER SOUTH SEAS FORCES AND ITS AIRFIELDS ARE REFUELING STATIONS BETWEEN THE MIKADO'S EMPIRE AND THE SOUTH.

AMERICAN FLIERS, WITH SAIPAN'S AIRDROMES IN THEIR POSSESSION, COULD AERIALLY DOMINATE ALL THE MARIANAS AND BRING ISLANDS CLOSER TO JAPAN, SUCH AS THE BONINS AND THE KAZANS, UNDER THIS BOMBSIGHTS.

ALL THE CAROLINES WOULD BE CUT OFF FROM THE NORTH. THUS JAPAN'S SOUTHBOUND SUPPLY LINES WOULD HAVE TO BE REROUTED FAR WEST VIA THE PHILIPPINES AND PALAU.

UP TO THIS TIME AMERICAN LAND FORCES HAVE BATTLED THE JAPANESE UNDER TROPICAL CONDITIONS. SAIPAN IS A DIFFERENT STORY. HERE THE YANK INVADERS WILL BE FIGHTING ON GROUND RESEMBLING THAT BACK HOME. SAIPAN IS A LAND MASS, NOT AN ATOLL. THERE ARE TREES BUT NO JUNGLES.

TWENTY-NINE SURVIVORS OF THE ENEMY SHIPS WERE PICKED UP AND MADE PRISONERS. THIS MAKES THE TOTAL OF 201 SURVIVORS FROM JAP SHIPS MADE PRISONERS SINCE THE BATTLE OF SAIPAN STARTED A WEEK AGO IN SOFTENING UP CARRIER ATTACKS.

A TOTAL OF 21 NIPPONESE SHIPS OF ALL TYPES HAVE BEEN SUNK.

CAPTURE OF T E VILLAGE OF HIMASHISU NORTH OF ASLITO AIRDROME PUT AMERICAN FORCES NEAREST THE EAST SHORE IN THEIR DRIVE TO SWEEP THE JAPS FROM SAIPAN'S SOUTHERN HALF WHICH IS ROLLING CANEFIELD COUNTRY.

HIMASHISU IS ABOUT IN THE CENTER OF THE IALAND'S NARROWEST AREA AND LIES ABOUT TWO MILES WEST OF THE STEEP SHORE OF MAGICIENNE BAY.

DENVER, JUNE 17-(AP)-AMERICA'S WINGED COLOSSUS, THE B-29 BOMBER, IS NOT SIMPLY FLOWN. IT IS "ENGINEERED."

SO MANY AND COMPLEX ARE THE MECHANICAL DEMANDS OF THE WORLD'S MIGHTIEST BATTLESHIPS OF THE AIR, THE PILOT MUST HAVE ASSISTANCE OF A SPECIAL KIND. TO MEET THIS NEED, THE B-29 IS EQUIPPED WITH A SEPARATE ENGINEERING AND CONTROL STATION RESERVED FOR THE MAN WHO MUST KNOW THE RIGHT ANSWER AT ALL TIMES, THE FLIGHT ENGINEER.

THE FLIGHT ENGINEER IS NEW ON THE LIST OF AIRCREW SPECIALISTS.

ORIGINALLY ESTABLISHED IN APRIL, 1943, AT SHEPPARD FIELD, TEXAS, THE TRAINING COMMAND'S FLIGHT ENGINEER COURSE NOW AT LOWRY FIELD RECEIVES OFFICERS, AND ENLISTED MEN TO LEARN INTRICACIES OF THE GREAT BOMBER'S STRUCTURAL AND MECHANICAL MAKEUP.

FLIGHT ENGINEERS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR "CRUISE PLANNING," IN WHICH, PRIOR TO A COMBAT MISSION, THEY COMPUTE THE POWER SETTINGS, AMOUNT OF FUEL NEEDED, SPEED OF CLIMB, RPM SETTINGS AND OTHER FACTORS GOVERNING B-29 PERFORMANCE IN BATTLE.

INSIDE THE SUPERFORTRESS' FUSELAGE, THE FLIGHT ENGINEER HAS AN ENGINEERING AND CONTROL STATION WHERE HE MAY WATCH INSTRUMENT INDICATIONS AND ADVISE THE PILOT WHEN CHANGES IN ALTITUDE, SPEED OR FUEL MIXTURE ARE NEEDED.

BEFORE GRADUATING, FLIGHT ENGINEER STUDENTS PARTICIPATE IN SIMULATED COMBAT FLIGHTS RANGING FROM SIX HOURS TO LONG, OVERNIGHT MISSIONS ACROSS THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS. FOR THESE TRIPS, B-17'S AND AT-22'S ARE USED. THE AT-22--A CONVERTED B-24 LIBERATOR BOMBER--HAS SIX FLIGHT ENGINEERING STATIONS INSIDE ITS FUSELAGE, EACH AN EXACT REPLICA OF THE STATION INSIDE A B-29.

INSTRUCTORS SAY THEIR BIGGEST PROBLEM IS TEACHING STUDENTS TO THINK AS ENGINEERS RATHER THAN AS MECHANICS.

GERMAN DIVISION SMASHED IN FIRST ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Nazi Force Massacred in Bitter Two-Hour Battle, Artillery Barrage.

ENEMY REMNANTS FLEE

Allies Advance Within Six Miles of St. Lo in Center of Beachhead.

JUN 19 1944 JAS.M. 2016

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, June 19. — (AP) American troops, headed by the Ninth division, blasted a seven-mile-wide path across the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula Sunday, putting a stranglehold on 25,000 to 30,000 Germans in and around the prized port of Cherbourg, and then slashed the Nazi 77th division to pieces in a bloody massacre when the enemy frantically tried to break out.

The Allied midnight communique, confirming earlier dispatches direct from the field, said the peninsula was cut off from the rest of Normandy when the Americans reached the west coast near Barneville-Sur-Mer.

The battle on which the success of the bold American stroke hinged began seven hours after the first troops had reached the sea. It raged for two hours, with the Ninth division laying down the heaviest concentration of mortar fire since D-day and climaxing it with an artillery "serenade"—a thundering chorus of every available gun hurling shells into the point of greatest danger.

JUN 19 1944

Nazi Division Destroyed

The German 77th division, attacking in waves, virtually committed suicide in this inferno. Its remnants finally fled north under relentless assault from Allied fighter planes and dive-bombers that littered the roads to Bricquebec with new Nazi dead. American Thunderbolts alone were credited by the 9th Air force with killing or wounding at least 800 of the fleeing foe.

Following up the Nazi retreat, the Americans steadily widened their salient and rushed up reinforcements and guns in anticipation of new counter-attacks from either north or south.

Reports from 21st army group headquarters said, however, that any real rescue attempt by the Germans was unlikely and that the vital port of Cherbourg would not remain long in enemy hands.

Six Miles from St. Lo

The Allied communique contained word of no new developments elsewhere on the front but confirmed that in the center of the beachhead area a steady advance had brought the Allies within six miles of St. Lo, a key road junction. On the eastern flank, the British and Canadians still were tightly engaging German armor.

Despite low clouds over Europe, 1,300 Flying Fortresses and Liberators—the biggest single force yet hurled against a tactical target in daylight—pounded Germany, while lighter planes ranged the Normandy battlefront in a variety of attacks.

A terrific punch by the veteran U. S. Ninth infantry division—rolling 12 1-2 miles in two days for the invasion's fastest gain — drove clear across the peninsula and secured the seacoast between Cape Carteret, 18 miles southwest of Cherbourg, and St. Lo-D'Ourville.

It blocked off some 400 square miles of the upper peninsula, and thousands of Germans faced with a possible Sevastopol defense of France's third largest port. The first spearhead reached the coast at 11 p.m. Saturday night.

Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's shock troops forged this line 24 miles across the cape—the deepest invasion penetration—to chop off Cherbourg while Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British and Canadians held four Nazi armored divisions deadlocked on the eastern flank in Normandy.

The Ninth division veterans of North Africa broke out west and south of fallen St. Sauveur le Vicomte, clinched a hold on Barneville 10 miles west, then drove on two and one-half miles to occupy Cape Carteret in sight of the channel islands, and fanned south to take St. Lo-D'Ourville.

The danger-point of their cross-peninsular belt is a sector only four miles wide at St. Sauveur le Vicomte, and the Americans' likeliest immediate move is to widen it against the peril of counter-attacks by smashing down the rail and road line to La Haye du Puits, a funnel for German reinforcements farther down on the peninsula.

Other Americans holding the northeastern end of the Cherbourg line are engaged in heavy fighting in the Montebourg-Quineville sector some 14 miles southeast of the big port.

Fierce German defenses broke suddenly under the cross-peninsula hammer drive, and sweeping forward "like a wild prairie fire" the Americans crossed the Germans' last escape road and then won seven miles of the western Atlantic shores, headquarters and front dispatches declared.

The break-through halted the flight by road of Germans rushing to escape from the broad poocket through a gauntlet of cannon and machine-gun fire from ground and air forces.

Fifteen thousand Nazis have been captured in the 13-day-old liberation drive, headquarters said, including 150 taken yesterday when the Allies, at the cost of one soldier, mopped up Douvres, by-passed strongpoint 10 miles north of Caen.

Elsewhere on the 116-mile jagged battlefront, American spearheads breaking through toward St. Lo along the central sector reached within less than six miles of that vital communications hub. British forces farther east made limited gains near Tilly-Sur-Seulles, west of Caen.

The Cherbourg trap was sprung on Britain's lustrous anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo, and marked the beginning of the end for the vital port of Cherbourg.

Sealed off were believed to be what was left of at least two mauled German infantry divisions in addition to a normal garrison force of about the same size.

The Americans reaching the western coast of Cherbourg peninsula apparently were consolidating quickly against any German counterblows from the north or south, or both.

Twenty-First Army group headquarters said the enemy made desperate efforts to withdraw his forces from the fast-closing trap in the last few hours, but was severely handicapped by incessant strafing from the air.

Cut off from escape except by sea, the Germans may make a last-ditch defense of Cherbourg port, a prime objective for the Allies which would permit funnelling vast reinforcements and supplies into the invasion push.

The high ground forming a perimeter around Cherbourg contains many rocky outcroppings which have been turned into strong defensive positions. It was pointed out at supreme headquarters that the difficult nature of the terrain plus the strength of enemy forces make it important that the line to the western shores should be on a broad front to minimize the danger of a simultaneous counter-punch from the north and south.

Americans battling toward Cherbourg in the Montebourg sector face rolling hills permitting stern defense.

The Germans southeast of Cherbourg are fighting fiercely. Quineville still is in American hands, but the Nazis have not yet been pushed out of artillery range to permit full use of landing facilities there.

At Montebourg the Americans have not yet been able to regain control of the town, although it is under heavy fire and fighting has swayed through its streets several times.

(Berlin radio, possibly preparing the way for the loss of the whole northern end of Cherbourg peninsula, said "the important decisions" would not be made in the peninsula area, "but in the sector between St. Lo and Caen.)

It literally was a massacre—the massacre of St. Jacque de Nehou. That is where the Americans battered the Germans in one of the bloodiest encounters of the invasion.

St. Jacques de Nehou lies directly north of the St. Lo-d'Ourville crossroads, where the doughboys first sliced across the peninsula to cut off the enemy escape route.

There, near St. Jacques the Germans made their bid to escape, under orders rumored to have been from their high commander. But before giving an account of this bitter engagement, there is some background which should be given.

When the Ninth division burst through stubborn German defenses on Friday and swept forward toward the sea, units of the division drove to the high ground east of Barneville, while another unit pushed on to a ridge northeast of St. Lo-d'Ourville. Then units of the northern force pushed on into Barneville, while southern troops moved into St. Lo-d'Ourville, thus cutting the coast road in two places.

In the meantime the enemy's 77th division troops attempted to withdraw south to La Haye du Puits, but the routes for withdrawal already had been cut by doughboys moving much faster than the enemy had anticipated.

The German 77th division made a desperate effort at 6 a.m. today to break through the doughboys' wedge of steel. Their infantry, supported by armor, moved southward.

In the early morning haze, a battle of small arms fire broke out. Then the bigger guns engaged in the fighting, and for a confused, exciting time, the battle raged seemingly in all directions.

The battle raged for about two hours, with the Americans putting their heaviest mortar-fire concentration on the enemy since the original landings. On top of this, the artillery called for "a serenade," while the infantry had orders to hold on at all costs.

When the artillery calls for a serenade it means that every gun in the group drops its other missions and begins firing on the area where the danger is greatest. This particular serenade poured more than 1,000 shells onto the Germans.

The enemy attack wavered. It slowed. Then it broke under this awful pounding. The German columns began pulling back. The fields around St. Jacques are littered with German dead. Their bodies lie along the hedgerows and in meadows splashed with the rainbow colors of flowers. Their attack was mass suicide.

After this abortive attempt to break out of the trap, the enemy began moving north on the roads to Bricquebec, while other columns poured into the same town from the other side. The Allied air forces immediately pounced on this tempting target. Fighters and dive-bombers smashed at transport converging on the town, and, as one officer said, "The fliers had a field day."

Meanwhile, in the corridor occupied by the Americans between Barneville and St. Lo d'Ourville, the infantry was flushing out small groups of Germans and destroying isolated points of resistance. The enemy was so confused that many prisoners said they did not know who their commanders were or where they were supposed to go.

Ninth Division Cuts off Cherbourg in Swift Drive

By DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS ON CHERBOURG PENINSULA, June 18—(AP) American troops have cut through the Cherbourg neck in a "last mile" drive and have beaten off the last fanatical German attempt to break out of the peninsular trap.

JUN 19 1944

The American Ninth division solidly sealed the last enemy escape corridor today, capping a dramatic and historic three and a half day drive westward to the sea.

The doughboys cut the peninsula's west coastline last night and officially reached the sea at 11 p.m. June 17 to climax the swift thrust.

Now the stopper is in the bottle and the big question is how long it will take to clean out stubborn resistance and smash through to the port of Cherbourg.

I visited the closed corridor today with other correspondents and got an idea of the confusion which enveloped the Germans when the American advance swept forward so that the last of the enemy units were literally running in circles trying to find a way out of the trap.

But there was no way out except to overrun the Yankees' strangling line to the sea—and the Germans already had tried that and failed.

The Americans cut the western coastline road in two places—at Barneville and at St. Lo. Lo d'Ourville—and immediately got set to repulse the Germans' counter attack which came today.

Americans were behind Germans and Germans were behind Americans. But the major difference was the Yanks knew their mission while the Germans did not know which way to turn.

Capture Nazi Guides

The main road from Barneville to St. Lo d'Ourville was cut at 10 p. m., last night, and an example of German confusion was that when our troops reached the St. Lo d'Ourville crossroads they captured five Nazi military police who had been put there to direct traffic down an escape route to the south.

By coincidence, it was almost four years to the day when British troops used the same crossroads as a defense point to hold the Germans while other troops were being evacuated from the Cherbourg peninsula to England.

The Americans cut the peninsula at the exact point where they had planned before the invasion—although the commanding officers of the various units did not know where this point was when studying the tactical problem.

Before they left England they worked out attack problems on sand tables showing simulated terrain in this area.

"When we reached that point," one said, "it was like coming home. Every officer knew where he was and what he had to do."

With John Thompson of The Chicago Tribune and William Stoneman of The Chicago Daily News, I climbed to a hilltop overlooking the sea and gazed down on the escape corridor which had been closed by the doughboys.

In a tall elm tree, Lt. George Connolly of Arlington, Mass., had an observation post, observing the effect of artillery fire on enemy positions.

We had taken over the area where the enemy manned positions, expecting a possible landing from the west side of the peninsula rather than the east.

Below us lay the narrow corridor which the doughboys had closed to the enemy and beyond was the blue sea. Behind us, American guns rumbled and shells rustled over to burst in enemy positions.

Fires burning in the area of St. Lo d'Ourville threw a pall of smoke into the sky and there were other fires burning in the green countryside, testifying to the accuracy of the U. S. batteries.

From the north came the steady thumping of our bombs falling on enemy columns and the rattle of strafing, with the whining dive of planes.

And while the harsh sounds of war beat in waves over our little hill there came from the trees the cheerful melody of songbirds singing in the green branches.

1,300 BOMBERS HIT HAMBURG'S OIL REFINERIES

AUSTIN BEALMEAR

All American Armada In Wide Sweep Meets No Enemy Fighters

JUN 19 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 18—(AP) An all-American armada of more than 1,300 heavy bombers dealt punishing blows to oil refineries and storage plants in the Hamburg area and other targets in northwest Germany today while up to 250 other heavy bombers pounded the Pas-De-Calais sector of France in the sixth Allied assault on that German "secret weapon" bases area.

This continuing assault on the Pas-De-Calais area came as the Germans continued their flying bomb attacks on southern England throughout the day and on into the evening, causing additional damage and casualties.

Planes Cross Channel

Just before dark, a long procession of RAF bombers headed across the channel toward France. Several hours later their targets still had not been officially identified.

Although American planes struck from Hamburg on down through western Germany, where three airfields were bombed, and on into the ris area, where Mustangs attacked supply lines, the German air force put up no serious opposition.

Not one enemy fighter arose to challenge the great fleet striking into Germany but the Germans threw up a flak barrage described as one of the heaviest ever encountered.

More than 1,000 individual flights were made by Ninth air force Thunderbolts, Lightnings and Mustangs in their attacks on hundreds of moving targets on the Cherbourg peninsula, blows at military objectives of Pas-De-Calais and sweeps into central France near Paris, Amiens and Arras.

It was announced that these pilots saw only two enemy aircraft all day. Eleven of the U. S. fighters failed to return.

Numerous oil refineries and depots were battered in the Hamburg area raid, the headquarters announcement said.

The bombing was done through clouds and detailed results could not be announced immediately, but the Supreme headquarters announcement said the weather was not thick enough to keep German fighters grounded had they been eager for combat. Only about 500 American fighters accompanied the mighty formations of heavy bombers.

Support Ground Troops

Medium, light and fighter-bombers also were out in strength during the day in constant close support of Allied ground troops in France. Many squadrons concentrated on laying down a withering fire on enemy forces being thrown back by the Americans as they smashed across Cherbourg peninsula to the western coast.

With the exception of airfields in western Europe, oil refineries and synthetic oil plants have been the targets hit heaviest by Allied bombers since the invasion of Normandy got under way.

Today's airfield attacks brought to 15 the number of German fighter bases smacked by American heavy bombers in the past two days. In two missions yesterday, the Americans struck a dozen landing fields in a wide area behind the Normandy battle zone in addition to heaping new destruction on the rocket gun sector of Pas-De-Calais, which was also hit by R.A.F. fighter-bombers. The Saturday attacks indicated that the onslaught against established enemy bases in France has been so effective that Allied bombers now have turned to ripping up emergency fields.

37 Planes Downed

The latest tabulation on yesterday's combat scores showed 37 German planes downed over France—about 10 per cent of the total air forces the enemy risked during the day and night—to 44 Allied losses—around one per cent of the sorties flown.

American medium Marauder bombers during one of Sunday's sorties drove 80 miles southwest of the battle lines to heavily attack the railyard at Rennes. Other Marauders joined with Havocs in bombing German ammunition dumps in Fort D'Andaine south of Villers-Bocage and other targets close behind the enemy's lines.

The Marauders caught three long freight trains at the Rennes yards. Crewmen said their bombs plunged into three large buildings adjacent to the railway lines, tearing up tracks and derailing a number of cars. All the Marauders and Havocs returned safely.

Formations of American Mustangs, attacking transport and supply targets southwest of Paris, damaged more than 70 trucks, destroyed two freight trains and five locomotives, and hit roads and bridges in sweeps near Montreuil-Bellay and Saumur.

Thunderbolt units, swooping low to machine-gun rail yards in other sectors of France, shot up three locomotives.

In addition to the night assaults on enemy installations in northern France, RAF bombers laid mines in enemy waters and a force of Mosquitos struck targets in Berlin and western Germany. Still other Mosquitos roamed behind the Normandy battle front in assaults on rail lines, highways and bridges. The night forays cost one plane.

Anti-Aircraft Protection Of Beachhead Best Ever

Bradley's Troops in This Branch Exceed Army's 1939 Total

AMERICAN BEACHHEAD, France, June 17 (Delayed) (AP).—Probably no place in the world is better protected from aerial attack than the strip of Normandy coast on which American forces are landing supplies for the air invasion army.

In describing the greatest concentration of potential anti-aircraft fire in history, Lieutenant-General Omar N. Bradley's anti-aircraft officer disclosed today that on D Day and D Plus One more anti-aircraft troops were landed on the beachhead than were in the entire American Army in 1939.

Although German planes have not attempted to attack in force on the beachheads in the eleven days, it was reported that American gunners have more than 100 enemy planes to their credit.

Commandos Oust Last Nazi Pocket

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

With the British Forces in France, June 17 (AP—Delayed)—In a two-hour battle far behind the front lines, assault engineers and Commandos cleaned out the last remaining enemy strong point on the British-Canadian beachhead today—an underground position by-passed by invasion troops on D-day.

The position, sunk 50 feet in the center of an open field thick with mines, was a mile and a half from the beach and five miles behind the front.

First it was shelled by guns firing over open sights, then tanks waddled up the slope and raked it with more shells. Next, assault engineers blasted their way through mine fields and wire barriers, and finally the Commandos charged in with bayonets.

The Nazis signaled with white flags that they had had enough and nearly 200 of them, nerves shattered by the bombardment, unshaven and beaten, came from their trenches and underground tunnels.

Bombers Shatter Nazi Strength In Boulogne

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 18 (AP)—The Bomber Command has shattered Nazi strength in Boulogne, with at least nine R-boats (combat mine sweepers) and many other naval craft destroyed in a raid June 16, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

Reconnaissance photographs showed 13 craft 100 to 200 feet long wrecked or party submerged, the announcement said.

The heavy load of bombs dropped—more than 1,300 tons—cratered the quays and wrecked various naval buildings and installations including huge oil storage tanks and lock gates. A railway bridge and railway yards were damaged heavily, the ministry said.

Nazis Lose Last Beach Fort

WITH BRITISH FORCES, IN FRANCE, June 17 (Delayed) (AP).—In a two-hour battle far behind the front lines assault engineers and commandos cleaned out the last remaining enemy strongpoint on the British-Canadian beachhead today—an underground position by-passed by invasion troops on D Day.

The position, sunk fifty feet in the center of an open field thick with mines, was a mile and a half from the beach and five miles behind the front.

First it was shelled by guns firing over open sights, then tanks waddled up the slope and raked it with more shells. Next assault engineers blasted their way through mine fields and wire barriers and finally the Commandos charged in with bayonets.

The Nazis signaled with white flags that they had had enough and nearly 200 of them, nerves shattered by the bombardment, unshaven and beaten, came from their trenches and underground tunnels.

For twelve days the Germans had been a nuisance to the beachhead, sniping at night, occasionally shelling near-by camps and roads with a few 50-mm guns and wirelessing information to Germans in the Caen area.

Everything above ground was destroyed by the British-Canadian assault, but elaborate underground chambers and tunnels where a Radar station was situated still were intact.

Report Leap-Frog Landing

LONDON, June 18 (AP).—The German D. N. B. news agency reported in a broadcast today that the Allies made a commando landing early yesterday in the San Giorgio-Civitanova area on the Adriatic coast of Italy.

There was no confirmation of this report from Allied sources. Such a landing would be well ahead of the last positions which the Allies have reported held on that coast.

Nazis Fear New Landings

LONDON, June 18 (AP),—A German war correspondent broadcasting from Normandy via the Berlin radio reported tonight that large formations of Allied shipping were cruising off the French coast and the German high command believed the Allies were about to start the "second phase" of the invasion.

London, June 18 (AP)—Just before dark, a long procession of RAF bombers headed across the Channel toward France. Several hours later their targets still had not been officially identified.

Budapest Police Chief Arrested

London, Monday, June 19 (AP)—The Moscow radio said in a broadcast recorded early today by the Soviet monitor that the Budapest police chief, Alexander Eliasz, had been arrested by the German Gestapo on suspicion of sympathizing with a secret anti-German organization active in the Hungarian capital.

FRENCH ADVANCE IN ELBA BATTLES

Eighth Army in Italy Reaches Perugia, 85 Miles Above Rome.

ROME, June 18 — (AP) French colonials cleared the Germans from their central and southern strongholds on Elba today in a drive to secure the seaward flank of a mainland push rolling up the Italian peninsula all along the line.

The Eighth army fought yesterday into the outskirts of Perugia, big road hub 85 miles north of Rome and about 72 miles southeast of Florence, near where the enemy may make a stand for what may be a final reckoning in Italy.

Dispatches from the barren isle where Napoleon spent his first exile revealed that the operation was a combined effort of the Allies, with the French storming ashore after British and United States naval units, with an assist ffom British Commandos and Allied air forces, had cleared the way.

Associated Press Correspondent Joseph Dynan in a field dispatch said ships were bringing wounded to Bastia, in Corsica across the narrow strait from Elba, and that a number of prisoners had been taken.

A brief naval announcement said British and U. S. units carrying the French to Elba were preceded by minesweepers while gunboats garrison, entered Golfo di Campo harbor and knocked out a gunboat lying at a jetty in Marina di Campo with a sudden volley of 35 grenades.

The assault craft tossed grappling irons onto the gunboat in the old naval tradition, threw in the grenades, wiped out the crew with revolvers, bayonets and blackjacks, then withdrew as German batteries opened up on their own gunboat and blew it up with a shot into the ammunition locker.

Refugees Fight Nazis

Once ashore, famed French colonials and a Commando-type battalion made up chiefly of refugees from metropolitan France, assigned to a special mission of clearing out enemy strong points in southern, central and southeastern Elba achieved every objective ahead of schedule, headquarters announced.

Five bombing attacks had silenced some enemy batteries on Cap D'Enfola, north central extremity of the island and one of the chief obstacles to landings, and rocket-firing craft blazed away at beach defenses, but some units hit the beach in a storm of enemy artillery fire.

As the French seized dominating points and ridges, however, troops and equipment began reaching the shore on schedule.

Lieut. Edwin J. Pesek, a fighter pilot from Halletsville, Texas, said "there were so many landing boats moving in we could hardly see the water."

Pilots of fighters and fighter-bombers, who after attacking enemy batteries flew on to sweep enemy positions, said a number of fires blazed in Porto Ferraio, the principal port, and expressed belief many were started by fleeing Germans.

On the mainland, the Fifth Army was meeting so little resistance on the seaward front that supply was a greater problem than the enemy.

Reconnaissance units moved north out of Grosseto, along heavily mined routes while the main body coming up more slowly occupied the height of Monte Moscona, some five miles north of the city. Farther east another column was about five miles south of Radicofani, which is 25 miles north of Lake Bolsena.

The Eighth Army closing in on Perugia met stubborn resistance at some points, particularly on the road north from Todi, but the advance had continued at a fast pace for several days.

Germans Battle At Trasimeno

To the west reconnaissance forces took Pornello and continued on northwest. The Germans were fighting bitterly south of Lake Trasimeno to protect units threatened with entrapment.

But the British reached Montegabbione, 11 miles south of the lake, and late yesterday fighting was proceeding in and around Citta Della Pieve, which is five miles northwest of Montegabbione.

Other points cleared include Marsciano, a city with a population of 17,500 some 12 miles east of Montegabbione, Spello and Fratta.

The Eighth moved swiftly past lines of smouldering German equipment knocked out by Allied air attacks.

In open stretches, tanks sped far ahead of footsore, supporting infantry, advancing as fast as 15 miles a day.

On the Adriatic sector, the 30 miles of road between Popoli and Aquila were cleared and a slow advance continued.

Perugia a Tourist Center

Perugia, the outskirts of which the British 8th Army has approached in its drive up the Umbrian Valley in central Italy, has long been frequented by American and British tourists. The city is situated about 1,000 feet above the valley of the River Tiber. It is built in an antiquated style, partly on top of the hill and partly on the slopes. Numerous buildings and monuments of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, paintings of the Umbrian school and a picturesque landscape make Perugia one of the most interesting places in Italy.

Ancient buildings and monuments include the Cathedral of San Lorenzo, a Gothic structure of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, in the plan of a Latin cross; the Palazzo Communale, with fine Gothic facades and a collection of Umbrian pictures and ceramics; San Domenico, a Gothic edifice, with a monument of Pope Benedict XI, and a fourteenth-century university, containing an important museum of Etruscan and Roman antiquities.

New York, June 18 (AP)—The British radio said tonight the Germans had reported an Allied amphibious "Commando raid" on the Italian Adriatic coast in the area above Perugia.

Perugia, where the British Eighth Army now is fighting in the outskirts, is 70 miles inland from the Adriatic on an east-west line.

AP Writer Injured In Elba Landing

With the French Forces Storming Elba, June 18 (AP)—One correspondent was injured and two were tossed into the sea by an explosion during the French landing on this island yesterday.

Stephen Barber, Associated Press correspondent who was aboard a landing craft, suffered injuries which were described as not serious but sufficient to require his removal to a hospital in Bastia, Corsica. Barber, whose home is in Egypt, was assigned to cover British naval operations. The manner in which he was injured was not disclosed.

Frank Coniff, of the International News Service and Walter Lucas, of the London Daily Express, were thrown into the water when a shell hit their landing craft. They were picked up uninjured after several hours adrift in lifebelts.

Goums Find Mules Like To Travel Sidewise

With French Forces on Elba, June 18 (AP)—The Goums, hardy Moroccan mountaineers who were among French troops invading the island of Elba, found after some experimentation that the mules they intended to use in the operation, unlike horses, did not suffer from seasickness. But a rough sea trip could make them dizzy and despondent.

They experimented further. They found that if the mules could travel sidewise instead of lengthwise they would be less despondent about it all. The mules made the trip lashed to the boats in such a way that they traveled sidewise, and weathered their voyage nicely.

Countess Born In U. S. Tells of Escape in Italy

Trip Through Nazi Lines Described by Daughter of Ogden H. Hammond

ROME, June 17 (Delayed) (AP).—The American wife of Count Guerrino Roberti told today how she and her husband rattled through Italy in a mule-drawn cart after the Italian capitulation last September so her husband could slip through the German lines to Salerno.

Countess Roberti, whose father is Ogden H. Hammond, of New

30. 24 — 16357

York, a former Ambassador to Spain, is one of the large colony of American women with Italian husbands who were stranded at Rome after the Germans moved in.

The count, with his friend Alberico Casardi, husband of the former Virginia Harris, of Columbia, Mo., crossed the mountains with a sheep herder for a guide.

The trip over the mountains and through the enemy lines to reach the jumping-off spot required a journey by mule cart, and all four made the trip one moonlit night. After farewells, the count and Casardi disappeared up the trail.

The countess has still be unable to communicate directly with her husband, but she knows both men are safe and have been serving in the Italian Foreign Ministry for months.

Other American women here include the Duchess of Villarosa, whose son by a former marriage, Robert Goelet jr., is a grandnephew of the late Brigadier General Cornelius Vanderbilt. The son is in the army somewhere overseas.

Sergeant Just Lay There And Looked at a Flower

He Had an Hour Before Attack, and He Enjoyed That Hour

WITH THE A. E. F. ON THE ITALIAN FRONT, May 22 (delayed) (AP)—"If there's anybody I hate," said the sergeant, "it's these damned Pollyannas who are always finding something good in every lousy thing that happens to a guy."

He drove on a moment in silence, jerking the jeep expertly around donkey carts. There was no need to answer him. He was building up to something.

"But this stinking life in the line has done one good thing for me," he said finally. "I've learned to get a kick outa every single minute I'm alive; while it's happening, too. I used to never know I'd been having a good time until it was all over. Now I know while it's going on.

"And it's funny," he said, easing on the brakes as the long line of front-bound traffic jammed at a junction, "it's funny the way you learn how good everything is. Just before we moved up last week we had to sweat out a long wait. Know what I did? For a solid hour I laid there in the grass and looked at a little blue flower. Don't know what kind it was, but I could tell you all about it. It was the prettiest flower I've ever seen, and I guess I enjoyed that hour more than any I ever spent in my life."

ous cities throughout the African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns, said the beauty of this temple eclipsed even that of the Synagogue of Oran, which many have described as the finest they had seen.

There are 4,000 less Jews in Rome than there were before the war. Temple officers said the Nazis had deported many of the city's Jewish population of 14,000.

The synagogue was closed from September 9 until last Friday.

Jewish Synagogue Reopens As Rome Is Freed Of Nazis

Rome, June 18 (AP)—The impressive Jewish synagogue of the Eternal City has reopened its doors, removing for the first time in nine months of occupation the bars placed upon it by the Nazis.

The first complete service in the temple since it was closed was marked by a fervent prayer of thanks for deliverance of the Italian capital.

Full Ceremony Held

The sacred Torah, the brass-bound candelabra and the precious altar ornaments were recovered from their hiding places Friday night, and a full Sabbath ceremony took place—the first one since the poverty-stricken, looted Jewish population was forbidden by the Germans to keep open its house of worship because they were unable to pay the tribute demanded by the Nazis for that privilege.

The large, stone temple on the Tiber was thronged for the service. Scores of American soldiers of Jewish faith were among the worshipers, many of them recently from the front.

Praises Its Beauty

One American soldier, Private Joseph Ruben Carl, of Chicago, who has attended services in various cities throughout the African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns, said the beauty of this temple eclipsed even that of the Synagogue of Oran, which many have described as the finest they had seen.

There are 4,000 less Jews in Rome than there were before the war. Temple officers said the Nazis had deported many of the city's Jewish population of 14,000.

The synagogue was closed from September 9 until last Friday.

Tito And Subasic In Parley Reach Yugoslav Agreement

Bari, Italy, June 18 (AP)—Marshal Tito and the royal Yugoslav Government announced today an accord had been reached to help the peoples of Yugoslavia liberate their country as speedily as possible.

The accord was reached at conferences in Yugoslavia attended by Dr. Ivan Subasic, charged by King Peter of Yugoslavia to form a new cabinet under the royal government in exile; Marshal Tito, guerrilla chieftain and head of the National Liberation Committee, and other parties.

News Agency Authorized

A communique issued by the conferees in announcing the accord said discussions had occurred from June 14 to June 17. The site of the meeting was kept secret.

The official statement said "authorization has been made to the 'new Yugoslav' news agency to issue the communique."

The text of the communique:

"In liberated territory discussions have been going on from June 14 to June 17 between the president of the National Liberation Committee and Dr. Ivan Subasic, minister of the royal Yugoslav Government.

Anti-Fascist Unit Present

"Also present at the meeting were members of the Presidium of the Yugoslav Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation and of the National Liberation Committee.

"The mutual effort for the furtherance of the struggle of the nations of Yugoslavia with the goal to unify to the broadest extent possible the national forces was the spirit which motivated both sides to institute these negotiations.

"The participating parties reached agreement and mutual accord on many problems. Yugoslav-Allied relations will no doubt be strengthened even more and the Yugoslav peoples will be aided in their fight to free as rapidly as possible their country."

[Subasic said before leaving London he intended to consult "all resistance movements" in his homeland, which would include Gen. Draja Miahilovic, King Peter's former War Minister. Peter's prime conciliatory gesture toward Tito has been the ouster of Mihailovic in dissolution of the Cabinet of Brozhidar Puric.]

Tito Partisans Report ,400 Of Foe Killed,

London, June 18 (AP)—A Yugoslav Partisan communique reported tonight that from May 25 to June 10 Marshal Tito's forces had slain 8,000 Germans and Quislings in western Bosnia, had killed 1,500 in eastern Bosnia in the past six days, and another 900 in recent operations in Banija.

The communique said the Germans' "seventh offensive" in western Bosnia had been beaten back.

"Allied aircraft have successfully helped our units and inflicted great losses on the enemy, both in men and material," the bulletin said.

Names Scenes Of Fighting

It said fighting in western Bosnia was continuing in the sector "between Livino, Kupres, Bugojno, Banjaluka and near Jajce."

In Serbia, the communique said, "soldiers of a Bulgarian battalion and 77 Bulgarian officers surrendered to our 24th Serbian Division."

German advances in Sanjak were repelled by counterattacks, the Partisans declared, adding that the "enemy suffered heavy losses."

Mannerheim Line Cracks, Reds 17 Miles from Viipuri

Finnish Premier Calls on His People to Fight to the End.

London, June 18 (AP)—Russia's Leningrad army under Marshal Leonid A. Govorov has smashed through the old Mannerheim Line whose collapse caused Finland's capitulation in the 1939-40 winter war, and is within 17 miles of Finland's second city of Viipuri at the top of the Karelian isthmus, Moscow announced tonight.

Finnish Premier Edwin Linkomies, acknowledging that the Russians had scored a "considerable success" in their effort to knock Finland out of the war, called on his people to fight on to the end.

"We are fighting for our freedom," Linkomies said in a Helsinki broadcast. "We cannot imagine life here except as a free and independent people."

Koivisto Is Seized

Koivisto, western anchor of the old Mannerheim Line, was seized by the Russians who pushed on through Maksiahti, 17 miles south of Viipuri, the Russian communique said. Koivisto, also known as Bjorko, is on the Gulf of Finland, and its capture represented a 53-mile coastal gain in nine days since the offensive began June 10 at Beloostrov.

The first part of the Mannerheim Line to be broken was at Murila, on the coast 12 miles southeast of Koivisto, said the broadcast.

Viipuri, with a peacetime population of 70,000, is being evacuated, German broadcasts said.

The Russians were declared to have gained all along a 72-mile front from Koivisto and Makslahti in the west to Valkjarvi and Rautu in the east. Valkjarvi is 25 miles from Lake Ladoga, and Rautu is 11 miles inland.

100 Populated Places Captured

More than 100 populated places were captured, Moscow said, and Govorov was made a marshal of the Soviet Union because of the successful offensive. The troops under Govorov smashed through the Mannerheim Line within 24 hours after reaching it, having previously cracked two Finnish defense lines which Russian officers said were the strongest yet encountered in the war.

Govorov directed the 1939-40 offensive which cracked the Mannerheim Line and brought about Finnish capitulation. His troops seized Koivisto and the strongly fortified Koivisto islands just off the coast February 26, 1940. But it took the Russians nearly four months in that previous conflict.

Finns' Retreat Rapid

Soviet dispatches said Finnish troops, their fighting qualities always respected by the Russians, were surrendering with less resistance this time. Thousands of others were retreating toward Viipuri, Moscow said, leaving still-warm meals on tables in abandoned dugouts.

"They (the Finns) haven't even time to remove military trains which are left at evacuated railway stations, or to blow up mined bridges," the Moscow radio said. "Even factories are found to be in full working order and can be put into use immediately."

The Soviet bulletin announcing the break-through said Russian infantrymen were powerfully supported by artillery and aviation, and there were indications that the Germans were furnishing only meager support to Finland, their cobelligerent.

A Finnish bulletin earlier had said that German flyers operating on the front shot down 12 of 32 Russian planes encountered in two days.

No changes occurred elsewhere on the Russian front, Moscow said, but Soviet flyers Saturday night were said to have attacked German central front bases at Baranovichi, Pinsk and Minsk, touching off fires amid airdrome installations, ammunition dumps and fuel tanks. One Soviet plane was lost.

Thinks Aim Will Be Attained

Asking his people to "stand firm," Linkomies declared that Finland, as a small nation which he said had been set upon by a larger one, had no course except to resist as long as possible.

"In spite of everything we unshakeably believe that no matter through what phases the battle goes it will result in the realization of our aim: The securing of our country's freedom," Linkomies continued. "The small has just as much right to the freedom and security as the great nation. Therefore the small nation is ready to fight for its freedom.

"Nowadays justice is not one of the factors that influence the destiny of nations. Cold calculations of interest and brute force seems to dictate decisions. Nevertheless we believe in the victory of justice. During past centuries law and justice has been honored absolutely in this country.

"Forty-five years ago it was our faith in justice that made our people in seemingly hopeless circumstances begin the fight for our rights against the "Russification" measures of Czarist Russia. We know that that fight did not put us to shame."

Finland now fights, he declared "for the right of existence of small nations."

"No Finn of today has illusions about the serious reality of war. Our whole being is attached to hopes of peace and our sincere desire is to be allowed to live at peace with our neighbors. If there is no other alternative we are, however, ready to go on fighting. . . .

"A battle is not only being waged on our borders. A great war, which has lasted for years, is apparently headed toward its decisive stage."

ERIC JOHNSTON VISITS FRONT

U. S. Business Leader Sees Russ-Finn Battle Area

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

With the Red Army in Karelia, June 18 (AP)—The Red army has reached the old Mannerheim line across the isthmus of Karelia, Finland's last hope of defense, after smashing two new Finnish fortified belts which were built amid the primitive forests and lakes.

Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad veterans fought their way forward through the Ussikirkko sector to the Mannerheim fortresses where they first defeated the Finns in 1940.

The Finns rushed up reinforcements in an effort to hold their forts but with the first line overwhelmed and the second main line along the Raivolan-Yoki river broken their chances appeared slim.

Johnston Sees Battle Area

I came to this front with the first party of foreign correspondents to penetrate Karelia since the isthmus became a battle field in 1939.

Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce who is in Russia on Premier Josef Stalin's invitation, made a separate visit to the region accompanied by his assistant, Joyce O'Hara and the writer, W. L. White.

We saw the starting point of the Russian offensive in the Beloostrov sector where Red army artillery laid down one of the heaviest barrages of the war June 10 and infantry and tanks launched an attack the same day to push across the Sestra river.

320 Guns To Each Mile

The first Finnish line consisted of barbed-wire entanglements, mine fields, trenches lined with tree branches and thick log dugouts.

The single novelty was a portable tank barrier with steel-bound wooden frame filled with granite.

Russian guns stationed only five yards apart pulverized these positions. Officers estimated they had 200 guns for each kilometer (five eighths of a mile) at the most important points compared with the 96 to the kilometer used to break the German blockade of Leningrad.

General Govorov and his aides, standing on a hill top within range of enemy rifle fire, directed the operations.

Raivola-Yoki Line Smashed

Advancing ten miles, the Russians encountered the Raivola-Yoki line in a dense, boulder-strewn forest. There forts were established every 50 yards at most critical points along a line extending from Lake Ladoga to the Gulf of Finland.

This line had steel and concrete pill boxes, steel-covered fire points, seven stretches of barbed wire and five rows of granite tank barriers.

Lieut. Col. Lev Barshai, fortification specialist, said this was the strongest line of the war. The density of fire was unequalled, he said, even by the Siegfried line, and the defenses were stronger and deeper than those of the Mannerheim line itself.

Big guns of Kronstadt fortress helped to break this line, pounding the enemy from the Gulf of Finland.

RAF Fighters Try to Stop Rocket Bombs Over Channel

More Explosives Cause Damage, Casualties in Southern England.

LONDON, June 18—(AP) Adolf Hitler's stubby-winged comet bombs scattered destruction across southern England today, as the trumpeting Berlin radio applied the new tag of "hell hounds" to the secret weapons and challenged lurid fantastic pictures of "horror and devastation" in their wake.

But this weapon no longer was a secret to British ground gunners and fighter pilots who rapidly were getting their sights trained on the ghostly rockets. A number were believed to have been destroyed in flight.

R.A.F. Shoots Down Rocket

R.A.F. fighters patrolling over the channel and on the watch for the pilotless planes were believed to have bagged at least one during the morning, and during the night the path of the bombs which zoomed inland was marked by solid bursts of anti-aircraft fire.

Easily visible in the bright June sunshine, a number of the fire-spitting, jet-propelled rockets streaked across the straits during the day, causing damage and casualties, but their scatter-gun effect scarcely could match the lurid accounts of destruction which tumbled in an unending torrent from the German radio.

One commentator for Transocean, the Nazi propaganda agency, gave this account which he said came from returning air combat crews:

"They say a horrid picture. At many places the night was lit by extensive fires and amid this scene of fire blazing to the sky the tremendous explosions gave witness to the devastating effect of the German weapon."

A German-inspired report from Madrid, quoting an unnamed Swedish eyewitness, said that "the panic in London was far greater than in 1940."

Bristol Ports Held In Range

Another Transocean account told of a "thick and impenetrable pall of smoke" over the Thames, "which extended several thousand feet up."

The German communique, which has devoted much of its daily account of the war to the story of this vaunted weapon, confined itself to a terse, one-sentence report today, which said that "the heaviest harassing fire continues to be directed against London and its outskirts without interruption."

Chapel Damaged

One of the pilotless craft plunged into a chapel in southern England, where a Sunday service was in progress. A passing convoy of United States Army ambulances joined in the rescue work.

In another place, where a rocket bomb struck a group of hospital buildings, a perspiring policeman found that "those Yanks are wonderful," after volunteer squads of American troops pitched in and worked feverishly to clear the debris. Only one small building of the group was left standing and ten persons were killed, including some members of the hospital staff.

A group of churchgoers was injured in another town, but for the most part Sunday strollers were able to see the rockets coming in time to duck to shelter. Another rocket bomb destroyed a convent, and at another place two were killed and three injured by an anti-aircraft shell sent against the machines.

German military circles now are saying that even targets on the Bristol channel will be within reach of the pilotless planes, and hinted that Portsmouth and Plymouth were next on the list for attack.

DOCTORS SPEED

WOUNDED BACK

Evacuation Pace From France Exceeds Expectations

London, June 18 (AP)—The wounded late returning from the battlefields of Normandy in better condition than even the medical officers expected and the evacuation pace moves so swiftly that the patients already have been flown to the United States.

Col. Howard Doan, of La Salle, Ill., executive officer on the staff of the chief surgeon of the United States Army Medical Corps in the European theater, made that statement today.

Program Greatest In History

Speed in caring for wounded on the spot and speed in moving them back are stressed in an elaborate program—greatest in medical history—worked out by United States Army, Navy and Air Force medical staffs.

Doan said these plans had worked even better than expected, and, as the patients are arriving with clean wounds, the infection rate is low, and gas gangrene is no problem.

Shock Cases Reduced

Medical officers are also surprised by the small number of shock patients. Doan said this was due to treatment at the front lines. Patients are arriving who have had one or more transfusions of plasma or even whole blood—which testifies to the efficiency on the far shore.

Battalion aid stations back of the fighting front are equipped to give blood transfusions as in any hospital. Sulfa drugs and penicillin are holding down infections.

Several field hospitals and even evacuation hospitals have been set up in France ahead of schedule.

Air evacuation to the United States was decided upon, Doan said, because of the proximity of Britain to the fighting zone.

Gen. Marshall Lauds Men Facing Fire First Time

Chief of Staff Finds Reassurance in Untried Divisions

LONDON, June 18 (AP)—General George C. Marshall, American Chief of Staff, today called the performance of untried American divisions "probably the most reassuring aspect" of the "tremendously impressive" Normandy invasion.

In a statement to the Army newspaper "Stars and Stripes" General Marshall said he found on his recent visit to the battlefront "evidence of a high standard of leadership throughout."

The western front invasion was "perfectly co-ordinated," he said.

"From every portion of the line where our men are fighting came reports of the aggressive action, skill and high morale displayed by the American soldier," he said. "Those engaging in their first combat carried themselves like the veterans of experienced divisions. This probably was the most reassuring aspect of the operations to us and the most depressing to the enemy."

Striking Dock Workers See Army Take Jobs

London, June 18 (AP)—Aberdeen dock workers stood by and watched the army do their jobs today, with no settlement of their five-day-old strike in prospect.

Demanding an increase in coal unloading gangs from four to six men, 350 workers have left their jobs. Coal merchants protested that adoption of the proposal would raise retail coal prices above the Government controlled maximum.

New Propeller Boon To Thunderbolts

An Eighth Air Force Fighter Base in England, June 18 (AP)—A "paddle blade" designed to give Thunderbolts a faster rate of climb was partly responsible for the phenominal success of these usually high-flying planes in low-level invasion duty.

Combined with "water injections," a system for giving an extra spurt of power in an emergency, the new propeller now is standard equipment for all Thunderbolts of the Eighth Air Force.

The large, eight-gunned aircraft formerly was strictly a high-altitude machine, but now it is known as an all-altitude fighter, and admiring pilots term it the "old dog of the skies."

The new propeller is wider, longer and somewhat heavier than the old one.

Rundstedt's G. H. Q. Is Cave in Mountain

STOCKHOLM, June 18 (AP).—Field Marshal Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt's general staff headquarters is built deep in a mountain somewhere in France beneath a small chapel where French civilians worship without knowing what goes on below, the Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm "Tidningen" reported today.

The description was written by Christie C. Jaederlund, who apparently was told the details but did not see it. He wrote that Rundstedt lives in a near-by castle and to keep his identity secret does not wear his field marshal's uniform.

De Gaulle Says France Will Attain Its Goal

Algiers, June 18 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today told the Consultative Assembly in a speech marking the fourth anniversary of his first appeal for French resistance that France had overcome many obstacles and "those that remain certainly will not prevent us from reaching our goal."

De Gaulle spoke of the sacrifices made by the French, and said his country's tribulations "have not always enjoyed the full comprehension of others."

CHINESE MILE FROM MOGAUNG

Juncture With Chendits East Of Burma Town Imminent

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 18 (AP)—Chinese troops have captured the northern approach to the town of Mogaung, and a juncture with Chindits east of the town appeared imminent as Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's forces penetrated to within 200 yards of the Mogaung Valley bridge, it was announced tonight.

The new Chinese advance, in which the village of Gurkhaywa was taken, placed them approximately a mile north of the town, the bulletin said. This represented a gain of two and one half miles since the capture of Parentu, northwest of Mogaung.

Bazookas Used At Myitkyina

While mopping-up operations continued in the newly captured Japanese supply base of Kamaing, 20 miles north of Mogaung, American troops storming the main enemy bastion of Myitkyina, 40 miles to the east of Kamaing, killed more than 100 Japanese in an advance in which flame throwers and "bazooka" rocket guns were employed to destroy enemy strong points around the city. This was the first announcement of the use of bazookas in the north Burma fighting.

Concentrated artillery effectively supported operations around Myitkyina, and just west of the city, Chinese harassing patrols struck at the Japanese rear, inflicting heavy casualties the communique said.

At the same time one Chinese force was reported to have cut the Waingnaw ferry in the railroad yards in the south central portion of the base.

Gains On Salween Front

[On the Yunnan province front in China, where the Salween river offensive already has made its first token juncture with Kachin levies from North Burma under Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, capture by the Chinese of Chiaotou was announced in a Chungking communique reporting continuous heavy fighting since before daylight Friday.

[The enemy was said to have withdrawn in two columns, one of them across the Shweli river in the northern Yunnan sector. Chinese forces in swift pursuit were the first regular troops to cross and fight west of the Shweli. The second column withdrew toward Watien, 35 miles northeast of the main enemy base of Tengchung, the communique said, adding that large quantities of arms and materials were taken at Chiaotou.

[Heavy fighting was reported on the Burma road at Sungshan, about five miles west of the Salween river, where Chinese seized new positions.

Lungling Airfields Cleared

[In the sector around the captured Burma road town of Lungling, the Chinese cleared all enemy forces from the airfield and the area surrounding the town, took part of a hill bisected by the town's west wall, and pinned down enemy reinforcements coming in from the direction of Tenchung, 35 miles to the northwest, the communique said. Chinese troops also blocked other reinforcements moving up from Mangshih, to the south of Lungling.]

On the Kohima front in India Allied troops advanced steadily despite monsoon conditions and enemy demolitions, the communique said, forcing the enemy from rearguard positions. Other Allied troops have reached the track leading from Tuphema to Kharasom in the Imphal road area.

Air support was said to have caused great disorder in Japanese concentrations and movements, despite the heavy rains which limited air operations on other sectors.

JAPANESE TAKE 3 STRONGHOLDS IN HUNAN PROVINCE

CHUNGKING, June 18 — (AP) Three important Chinese strongholds have fallen to swift, slashing Japanese advances in Hunan province, and to the fourth in Honan province, the enemy also has made serious gains along the Peiping-Hankow railway, the Chinese high command admitted tonight.

Driving to the south of by-passed Changsha, the Japanese have captured Chuchow, 75 miles northeast of the vital railway junction of Hengyang and 25 miles southeast of Changsha, while another column, driving 25 miles southwest of the surrounded provincial capital, seized Siangtan on the west bank of the Siang river, a communique said.

Enter Liuyuang

At the same time, another facet of the many-pronged Japanese Hunan province offensive drove into Liuyang, fiercely defended city 30 miles east of Changsha.

In the suburbs of Changsha itself, ordered by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek held at any cost, intense fighting raged in the suburbs, the communique said.

The columns which by-passed the capital evidently had Hengyang as their goal. This Canton-Hankow line city is an important junction of railroads connecting Hunan province with Kwangsi and the southeastern coastal province of Kwangtung.

Conquest of both the Canton-Hankow and the Peiping-Hankow rail lines would give the Japanese a complete north-south transcontinental line of rail communications, would neutralize some Allied air fields, and would facilitate enemy offensive and defensive operations against any future American landings on the China coast.

3 Centers Toll

Chuchow and Liuyang fell to the advancing invaders Friday, the communique said, Siangtan fell last night.

The predicament of Changsha, itself was accentuated, the High command admitted, with the likelihood that its defenders' only loophole for retreat might be choked off any moment.

Four hundred miles to the north, in Honan province, the Japanese, striking southward to close gaps in the Peiping-Hankow line, have retaken the important city of Kioshan, 135 miles south of Chenghsien, and have pushed further toward Sinyang.

The only Chinese success reported by the High command today was in the north of Honan province, along the Lunghai railway in the Yellow river area. There the Chinese, striking eastward, were said to have advanced on Shanhsien, about 45 miles east of the Shensi gateway city of Tungkwan.

AN ADVANCED BASE OF THE UNITED STATES FOURTEENTH AIR FORCE, Eastern China, June 14 (Delayed) (AP)—This base is one of the prime objectives of the Japanese drive for control of the Canton-Hankow Railway. Forty minutes away by air, P-40's and P-51's of a Fourteenth Air Force fighter group are killing Japanese by the dozens and barges on Tungting Lake.

Changsha was evacuated by its civilian population some days ago. Junks and sampans on the Siang River carried most of the refugees to safety. Others set out across the network of rice paddy pathways.

No preparations for abandonment of this base have been made. A strengthened force of American air fighters are almost constantly in the air during daylight.

The defensive power of the Chinese divisions under Gen. Hsueh Yueh, Governor of Hunan Province, will decide whether this base can be held. The Chinese showed every sign of making Changsha the keystone of their defense line.

Only one more Japanese move remains to make the present situation the most critical since the Japanese successes of 1937 and 1938. That would be a northward thrust from the Canton region to tie in with the present southward drive along the railway.

The Japanese are clearly determined to deny to the Fourteenth Air Force its eastern China bases, vital to the support of any landing such as that pledged by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. This they could do by conquest of the Hankow-Canton line. They have concentrated more troops than ever before for the assault.

5 JAP CARGO SHIPS SUNK BY BOMBERS IN RAID ON SORONG

New Attack Follows Destruction of Planes at Enemy Base.

YANKS GAIN ON SAIPAN

13 Troop-Carrying Barges Blasted in Landing Attempt.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Monday, June 19—(AP) Mitchell medium bombers sank five Japanese merchantmen in a follow-up raid upon Sorong in Dutch New Guinea, headquarters, announced today.

On Friday, more than 50 Mitchells with a Lightning escort hit Sorong drome and destroyed more than 550 enemy planes on the ground and in the air.

Coastal Vessels Wrecked

In the second attack on Saturday the medium bombers sank two 3,000-ton ships and three small freighters and damaged two 1,500-ton vessels. Six small coastal vessels also were wrecked.

On Biak island off Dutch New Guinea, Americans were closing in on the Japanese forces atop a ridge north of Mokmer airdrome.

One hundred and twenty two more Jap dead were counted Friday.

Liberators meanwhile dropped 89 tons of bombs at Truk and 56 tons at Rabaul airdrome.

Twenty Japanese fighters employing aerial bombs unsuccessfully attempted to prevent the attack upon the once-powerful Dublon base on Truk atoll in the central Carolines. The enemy formation accidentally destroyed one of its own planes.

One Corsair Lost

The Rabaul raid cost the Allies one Corsair fighter and one Dauntless divebomber, shot down by Japanese anti-aircraft gunners grown expert during the months of New Britain attacks.

On Biak, where 1,655 abandoned enemy dead have been counted since the island was invaded May 27, American lines now extend from half a [illegible] west of Mokmer airstrip, on the beach, and due north into the hills. Principal fighting is on the right flank north of the airdrome, where the Yanks are enveloping the left side of the enemy lines.

Until the two recent attacks upon Sorong, that base on the western tip of Dutch New Guinea had been regarded as the last effective Japanese airport on the island. There was no interception of the Saturday attack upon shipping. Details of the Friday raid, announced by a headquarters spokesman, disclosed that Mitchell medium bombers destroyed 21 enemy planes on the ground and shot down four, while their P-38 escort shot 255 out of the sky.

YANKS PARRY SEA STAB AT SAIPAN ISLE

Sink 13 Jap Troop Barges As Amphibious Counterattack Fails

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 18 (AP). A Japanese attempt to counterattack the Yanks fighting desperately on southwestern Saipan Island was repulsed with the destruction of 13 Japanese troop-carrying barges, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Armed American landing craft yesterday smashed this movement aimed at landing troops south of Garapan and cutting off the Americans, who have already captured approximately ten square miles of the island. MCMURTRY

The capacity of Japanese barges varies from 20 to 100 men, so Nipponese casualties might have been anywhere from 260 to 1,300 troops.

Called Sneak Attack

The brief communique did not say whether any of the enemy soldiers landed. Nor did it hint at the number of Japanese craft involved. Nimitz also did not indicate what type of landing craft repulsed the counterattack nor whether the enemy used any larger supporting vessels.

Lacking the latter information, it was presumed that the Nipponese attempted to slip along the shore for a sneak strike in the darkness of early morning.

Alternately smashing down Japanese counterattacks and attacking across the shell-torn canefields of southern Saipan, American assault troops have advanced halfway across Japan's most heavily fortified island in the Marianas chain.

25 Tanks Wiped Out

Twenty-five Japanese tanks were wiped out and heavy casualties inflicted when the enemy made a determined counterattack before dawn Friday, Admiral Nimitz announced yesterday.

After sunrise United States marines and infantrymen renewed their advance. They captured the village of Hinashisu and drove to the edge of Aslito airdrome, two miles from their original beachhead.

By nightfall they had advanced an average of 1,500 yards. The entire 5½-mile length of the American front was under heavy enemy fire.

Old Destroyer Steals Show

An aged destroyer which saw action in World War I and has since been converted into a destroyer transport, stole the spotlight from battleships and aircraft carriers.

Unaided, it sank five enemy coastal freighters. 29 survivors were made prisoners of war. Since the start of the Saipan invasion last Wednesday, 21 Japanese ships have been sunk and 201 enemy sailors taken prisoner.

A garrison estimated at 30,000 Japanese is defending the island, which is about 1,500 miles from Tokyo.

tion, during the period from June 11 to the present, two enemy battleships were seriously damaged, one warship was sunk, two carriers have been seriously damaged and 124 American planes were shot down."

Barges Carry 20 to 100 Men

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, June 18 (AP)—The capacity of Japanese barges varies from twenty to 100 men. So Japanese casualties in the Saipan barge thrust might have been anywhere from 260 to 1,300 troops.

WACs Plan To 'Pretty Up' Tropical Gully

By Asahel Bush

Johns Gully, New Caledonia, May 29 (AP)—Down here in Johns Gully, where the breezes seldom blow and the sun shines bright all the day, WACs are inventing their most tropical wackery.

The first WAC detail, consisting of Pfc. Olivia Wyndham, of Sandy Hook, Conn., and a cordon of officers, arrived a week ago from Australia. Nine more came yesterday and another half dozen this morning. There'll be some 500 in time.

Private Wyndham is a photographer attached to the WAC press-relations unit and a veteran of the last war, when as a British subject she received a medal and campaign ribbons for Red Cross service in France.

Bleak And Drab

Right now, Johns Gully is pretty bleak and drab—just another army camp. Inside the high wire stockade on foundations of rocky red clay are lines of cement-floored barracks, each containing parallel rows of canvas cots—those and nothing more.

"It's all right, I guess," remarked T/4c. Minnie E. Holden a bit wistfully, "but we'll be fixing it up." Cook Holden, whose home is Fogelsville, Pa., arrived only today and so still is undecided as to what she intends to do specifically toward prettying up the place.

Not so Pfc. Thelma Boyer, a clerk from St. Louis, who's had a day longer to ponder the question. "I lay awake for hours last night thinking what I would do," she said. "I'm going to build a dressing table of orange crates draped with banana leaves, and I'm going to put up window boxes if I can find some flower seed. We're all pretty good at carpentering. You should see how we fixed up an orderly room in the short time we were down south."

Not Dismayed

Winsome Private Catherine Rogers of Boston, whose husband returned home on leave from the navy two weeks after she sailed, is not at all dismayed by prospective discomforts and inconveniences of a tropical existence. "I wanted to come up here and I was glad when given the chance," she said.

Private Rogers and Sergt. Alice Chemistruck, of Rockville, Conn., another cook, were impressed by their first views of the fuzzy-haired, beaded, beflowered natives. They arrived Sunday—the day when the natives always turn out to stroll the highways from dawn until dusk.

"Why, one of them came right into our post exchange," said Private Rodgers. "She was wearing the cleanest white shirt imaginable."

Butchering Job

The sultry heat of Johns Gully most deeply concerns Private Margaret M. Zavatsky, of Edwardsville, Pa., who is ticketed for a kitchen job, where it is hot anyhow.

"I expect to be a butcher," Private Zavatsky said. "I taught butchering at Fort Oglethorpe and I butchered in Australia. It will be easier here, though, because there are not so many of us." (It will be easier here, too, Margaret, because there's not so much fresh meat).

The New Guinea WACs are in charge of Madeline A. Vance, of Winthrop, Mass.

However the WACs' life here may differ from that at home in other respects, it will be almost as safe. Johns Gully is hundreds of miles removed from the nearest combat area.

SCIENCE WAR BOARD STUDIED

12-Man Group Will Consider Creating 'High Command'

Washington, June 18 (AP)—A 12-man committee of army, navy and scientific experts will get to work this week on one of the least known but possibly one of the most important proposals for post-war security—the creation of a scientific high command ranking with the command staffs of the army and navy.

Some of the persons backing the project, who include Secretary Forrestal, of the Navy Department, and Secretary Stimson, of the War Department, are said to feel that this shares top place with their plans to prevent the scrapping of the nation's naval, land and air power after the war.

One of the main objectives is to set up the organization in such a way that it will be responsive to new and daring ideas in warfare and will not be open to the charge of "brass hat" conservatism or interference.

Forrestal and Stimson persuaded Charles E. Wilson, vice-chairman of the War Production Board, to serve as chairman of their special committee which has the job of plotting the scientific command in policy and detail.

To the committee they then named four scientists, four admirals representing the navy and four generals representing the army.

Heads Of Service Panels

The scientists are Dr. J. C. Hunsaker, of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics; Dr. F. B. Jewett, Bell Telephone research chief; Dr. Karl Compton, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. M. A. Tuve, of the Carnegie Institute.

The navy panel is headed by Rear Admiral Julius Furer, coordinator of research for the Navy Department, and Brig. Gen. W. F. Tompkins, director of special planning for the army general staff, heads the army section.

It is up to this group in the meetings beginning this week to decide whether the post-war scientific organization should have its own research facilities or farm out research projects on contract to scientific institutions; to determine exactly what relationship it should maintain with the army and navy and decide how it should be financed.

Eventually the decisions will be communicated to Congress. The House Committee on Post-War Military Planning is already interested in the project.

The form of organization which has received most favorable discussion is that the office should have a director who would serve a single term of four or five years and a working staff of scientific personnel loaned by schools and research institutions.

Stork May Delay Envoy's Leaving

Washington, June 18 (AP)—The prospective arrival of the stork in the family of Finnish Minister Hjalmar J. Procope, who has been ordered to leave the United States, may delay his return to Finland.

Mme. Procope is expecting her third child within two or three weeks. State Department sources said there should be "plenty of time" for the event before arrangements for the Procopes' trip have been completed. However, they added, that if it is necessary to Mme. Procope's health and care, the trip would be put off.

Procope himself has expressed a desire to leave the country as quickly as possible.

PROFESSOR DISCUSSES PROBLEMS OF CHINESE

NEW HAVEN, June 18—(AP) An adviser of Generalissimo Chang Kai-Shek today expressed the belief that China was strong enough to survive the present crisis—military, political and economic—and to emerge a united nation "if the leaders and people of America as well as China will do their part during the coming months."

Speaking on Yale radio forum, Dr. Frank W. Price, professor in Nanking Theological Seminary, Ghengtu, China said, "China is willing to make further sacrifices for she knows that victory is ahead. The question is whether we can give China adequate encouragement and military aid while there is still an opportunity."

War Prisoners' Reward Is Sight-Seeing Trip

New York, June 18 (AP)—American army officers today conducted 527 Italian prisoners of war from near-by camps on a sight-seeing tour of the city.

The tour was the prisoners' reward for having joined Italian service units to help the United States in any duty short of war. The Italians wore regulation GI fatigue uniforms with green brassards bearing the word "Italy."

Among points visited were the 102-story Empire State Building, St. Patrick's Cathedral and the Radio City Music Hall.

Say British Used Wooden Tanks

New York, June 18 (AP)—The German radio, recorded by the Associated Press, said tonight British troops southwest of Caen in Normandy had used wooden tanks—"a new trick after they had tried to deceive German troops at the beginning of the invasion by dropping parachute dummies."

Nimitz Praises Work Of Church In War

New York, June 18 (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz declared today that "in ministering to the spiritual needs of our fighting forces the church is making a solid contribution and a greatly appreciated contribution to our coming victory."

Speaking from Honolulu on NBC's "church in action" radio program, the commander in chief of the Pacific fleet said 10,000 American chaplains have added a "spiritual armament" to our fighting forces.

Tokyo Says No Incendiaries Were Dropped in Raid

A number of Japanese were injured by anti-aircraft fragments, the Domei news agency disclosed yesterday in a report on last Thursday's American B-29 bombing of Japan. The report, transmitted in Romanized Japanese in a Tokyo broadcast to newspapers of occupied areas, was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

The Domei account, quoting an "eyewitnes.," said:

"The fact has been established that as long as there is no direct hit, a person is safe in a shelter. When entering a roofless shelter, it is necessary that the refugee always bring a straw matting for overhead protection, or wrap his head with a comforter. . . .

"This recent raid, however, differed from that of the 1942 Tokyo raid in that only bombs, and no incendiaries, were used; consequently it seemed as though the neighborhood fire prevention corps members were slightly bewildered."

LONDON, JUNE 18-(AP)-A NUMBER OF PLACES IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND WERE HIT BY GERMAN ROBOT PLANES WHICH WERE SENT OVER IN CONSIDERABLE NUMBERS DURING THE NIGHT AND IN DAYLIGHT TODAY.

"LAST NIGHT THERE WAS ENEMY ACTIVITY OVER SOUTHERN ENGLAND. DAMAGE AND CASUALTIES HAVE BEEN REPORTED," SAID A BRITISH STATEMENT.

A HOSPITAL RECEIVED A DIRECT HIT WHICH CAUSED A SMALL FIRE AND CASUALTIES.

THE GERMAN RADIO SAID FORMATIONS OF ALLIED BOMBERS WDRE OVER MECKLENBURG AND BRUNSWICK, GERMANY, THIS MORNING.

AT 10:15 A.M. (4:15 A.M. EWT) THE NAZI RADIO SAID:

"THE MAIN FORCES OF ENEMY COMBAT FORMATIONS PREVIOUSLY REPORTED OVER NORTHWESTERN GERMANY, SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN, HANNOVER AND BRUNSWICK ARE LEAVING FOR THE WEST.

"MINOR FORCES STILL ARE APPROACHING NORTHWESTERN GERMANY."

LONDON, JUNE 18-(AP)-FIRE-SPOUTING ROCKET BOMBS CRASHED ON SOUTHERN ENGLAND AT INTERVALS THROUGHOUT TODAY AFTER A NIGHT IN WHICH THE GERMAN PROPAGANDA AGENCY, TRANSOCEAN, SAID THE NAZI INFERNAL MACHINES WERE HURLED AGAINST BRITAIN "ON AN INCREASED SCALE."

THE PROGRESS OF THE WINGED, JET-PROPELLED BOMBS ACROSS THE CLEAR BLUE SKY, WAS MARKED BY LANES OF BLACK SMOKE PUFFS FROM BURSTING ANTI-AIRCRAFT PROJECTILES.

JUN 19 1944

ONE OF THE BOMBS CRASHED INTO A CHAPEL WHERE A SUNDAY SERVICE WAS IN PROGRESS. CREWS FROM A PASSING GROUP OF U.S. AMBULANCES AND AMERICAN MILITARY POLICE JOINED THE RESCUE SQUADS.

SUNDAY STROLLERS NEARBY SAW THE BOMB COMING AND DIVED INTO HEDGE ROWS. ANOTHER FELL NEAR WORSHIPPERS ON THEIR WAY TO CHURCH AND MANY PERSONS WERE INJURED.

AT ONE PLACE 12 PERSONS WERE KILLED AND MANY STILL WERE MISSING TODAY AFTER ONE OF THE PILOTLESS AIRCRAFT HIT THERE DURING THE NIGHT.

CROWING OVER WHAT IT DECLARED WAS THE "DEADLY AND DEVASTATING EFFECT" OF THE WEAPON, TRANSOCEAN SAID:

"THE QUOTA OF PAPER FOR GERMAN NEWSPAPERS IS TO BE INCREASED IN VIEW OF THE HUNGER FOR NEWS OF THE DYNAMITE METEOR WHICH HAS GRIPPED THE PEOPLE IN BERLIN.

BY ROGER D. GREENE (460)

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 18-(AP)-CAPTURED GERMAN OFFICERS SAID TODAY THEY STILL EXPECTED GERMANY TO WIN THE WAR AND THEY PINNED THEIR FAITH ON THE ROBOT BOMBER AS "OUR GREAT WEAPON OF THE WAR."

JUN 19 1944

"SOON WE WILL DESTROY LONDON AND OTHER BIG CITIES OF ENGLAND WITH OUR PILOTLESS PLANES," BOASTED A 46-YEAR-OLD COLONEL.

"WE HAVE ENOUGH OF THESE PLANES TO DESTROY THE ISLE OF WIGHT IN FOUR HOURS. YOUR NIGHT FIGHTERS CANNOT STOP THEM. NOTHING CAN STOP THEM. THAT'S WHY WE KNOW WE'RE GOING TO WIN THE WAR."

IN THE NEXT BREATH THE COLONEL ACKNOWLEDGED:

"IT IS WORSE FOR US IN THIS WAR THAN IN THE LAST BECAUSE WE HAVE TOO MANY FRONTS."

LIKE ALL GERMAN OFFICERS TAKEN PRISONER THE COLONEL BEGAN TO SPOUT A MACHINE-GUN STREAM OF WORDS WHEN ASKED IF THE FUEHRER STILL IS POPULAR IN GERMANY DESPITE DEFEATS ON THE RUSSIAN AND ITALIAN FRONTS. WHEN THEY START ON "MEIN FUEHRER" THEY TALK LIKE AUTOMATONS YOU CAN SEE IT HAS BEEN DRILLED INTO THEM. AS OFFICERS THEY SAY THE "CORRECT" THINGS. BUT GERMAN PRIVATES SPAT AT THE NAME "HITLER."

THE COLONEL FREELY ANSWERED THESE QUESTIONS:

WHAT ABOUT THE BIG GERMAN ROCKET GUNS WHICH WERE SUPPOSED TO DESTROY LONDON FROM ACROSS THE CHANNEL?

"PROPAGANDA," HE SAID BRIEFLY.

AND WHAT ABOUT THE NOISELESS, INVISIBLE NAZE PLANES GOEBBELS INVENTED TO REASSURE THE GERMAN TROOPS WHO COMPLAINED THEY NEVER SAW THE LUFTWAFFE PROTECTING THEM?

"IT MAY BE THE PLANES ARE THERE AND WE CANNOT SEE OR HEAR THEM; I DON'T KNOW," THE COLONEL REPLIED WITH A DEAD-PAN POKER FACE.

AND HITLER, HE WAS ASKED, IS HE STILL THE GREAT SHINING IDOL OF GERMANY?

THE COLONEL STARTED SPOUTING. FOR THREE MINUTES ALL HE REALLY SAID WAS YES, THE GERMAN PEOPLE HAVE LIMITLESS FAITH IN HITLER.

NEXT CAME OBERLIEUTENANT KURT BLANK, 25, COMMANDANT OF THE STRONGHOLD, A SNEERING, HARD-JAWED NAZI.

STRAIGHT-FACED HE SAID "THE ONLY REASON WE SURRENDERED WAS THAT YOU WERE USING FLAME THROWERS. WE WOULD HAVE BEEN BURNED TO DEATH."

THE WHOLE ASSAULT WAS OBSERVED AND NOT A FLAME THROWER WAS USED.

"OTHERWISE," HE SAID, "WE WOULD HAVE HELD OUT FOR WEEKS. WE ARE GOING TO WIN THIS WAR. AN ARMY SUCH AS THE GERMAN ARMY WHICH FOUGHT SO BRAVELY JUST CAN'T BE BEATEN."

I ASKED HIM IF HE WAS GLAD TO BE CAPTURED.

"I AM A GERMAN. IT IS MY DUTY TO FIGHT FOR MY COUNTRY," HE SNAPPED.

LATER I LEARNED HE CAME UP WITH A BULGING SUITCASE AND BEAMED WITH JOY AT THE GREEN-BERETED COMMANDOS WHO CAPTURED HIM.

TWO THINGS GERMAN PRISONERS FEAR: FIRST, BEING TURNED OVER TO THE RUSSIAN PRISONERS THEY HAVE FORCED TO FIGHT ON THEIR SIDE; SECOND, BEING SENT TO SIBERIA.

THEY NEITHER UNDERSTAND NOR APPRECIATE HUMAN DECENCY OF THE ALLIES. ONE PRISONER, TOLD TO DIG A SLIT TRENCH AS A PROTECTION AGAINST AIR RAIDS AND SHELLING, WEPT LIKE A BABY. HE THOUGHT HE WAS DIGGING HIS OWN GRAVE.

FRENCH COMMANDOS CARRIED OUT SPECIAL MISSIONS CLEANING OUT ENEMY STRONG POINTS INLAND, WHERE THEY SEIZED DOMINATING RIDGES.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED THAT SENEGALESE, ZOUAVES AND GOUMIERS PARTICIPATED IN THE MAIN ATTACK.

THERE WERE CASUALTIES IN THE LANDINGS AND SOME OF THE WOUNDED WERE TAKEN ABOARD LSTS FOR TREATMENT.

ON ONE LST JAMES FERNAMBURG, 19, PHARMACIST'S MATE THIRD CLASS, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., AND LEE PRESSER, PHARMACIST'S MATE FIRST CLASS, WERE PUMPING PLASMA INTO THE WOUNDED.

JUN 19 1944

ON THE 13TH DAY OF THE INVASION, TOUGH, HARD-FIGHTING AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS CROSSED THE PENINSULA WHICH THE ENEMY FOUGHT BITTERLY TO DEFEND.

LATE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, UNITS OF THE NINTH DIVISION HAD REACHED BESNEVILLE, WHICH IS FOUR MILES FROM A STRATEGIC CROSS ROADS NEAR ST.LO-D'OURVILLE AND SIX MILES FROM THE SEA.

WHILE THE GERMANS WERE COMPLETELY DISORGANIZED, AND WITH HARDLY A PAUSE, THE AMERICAN TROOPS KEPT MOVING DOWN THE SLOPING FIELDS AND ALONG THE HEDGEROWS, SHOOTING UP SMALL KNOTS OF GERMANS MAKING A FRANTIC LAST STAND.

THEY CROSSED THE LAST MAIN HIGHWAY ON THE WEST COAST AND KEPT [illegible] PUSHING ON TO THE SEA.

THE DRAMATIC, SWIFT ADVANCE WAS LIKE A FIST OF IRON SMASHING THROUGH THE NECK OF THE PENINSULA AND THE GERMANS WERE UNABLE TO STOP IT WITH THEIR LAST, GASPING DEFENSE.
